We often hear old people say that life is altogether too short. They never thought that the years could slip by so swiftly until they suddenly noticed that they were old—too old to begin to speculate on how to slow down the ceaseless onrush of the days. They shake their heads sadly and say that were they young once more, they would not let the years pass by as quickly as they had done.

It is hard for we who are young to realize that life is short. The end of life seems so far away that it melts into infinity and we lose complete sight of it. But we do ourselves a great injustice by neglecting to realize how short the years really are. For they are short; and we see how brief they are when we pause a moment and try to recall the years that have passed. We cannot remember many of them. They all seem to have blended together into just a few years, and of these we can remember only a few particular and unusual periods.

To get the most out of life, it is obviously necessary to see more of it; and this can be done only by lengthening time itself. This is not as hard to do as we would imagine it to be. Time, after all, is but the interval between events. To lengthen time, then, it only becomes necessary to bring events closer together; to cut down the intervals between them. A particular hour, to one person, may have been the time in which five events took place. But if ten events had occurred during that specific time, the hour would have been much longer to that person.

There is one thing we must do if we wish to live longer than did our forefathers. We must increase the pace of our lives. We must do more in one hour than they did in one hour. We must traverse distance more quickly; talk faster; do things more quickly; and we must think faster. Time waits for no man; we must make use of every minute. Speed should be our maxim. Speed, speed, and more speed! For speed alone can conquer time.—P. L.

Divorce And The Family

After an extended battle over education the legislature finds itself concerned with another of our fundamental institutions—this time it is the family. Three bills have been introduced concerning divorce. One of them would shorten from five to three years the period of separation required for divorce, while another would allow a divorce after three years only in cases where there are no children. The third would require that all divorce proceedings be started by the "injured party." Upon the introduction of the bills shortening the time of separation immediate protests were voiced. Some of the old gentlemen were amazed at such proposals to destroy the family, as they termed them. Like many people they can not get away from the idea that once two people are married they should so remain until "death do part."

It is the primary purpose of almost every person entering marriage to attain happiness, and if that isn't the purpose it should be. If after being married for some time husband and wife find they are not gaining happiness then obviously there is something wrong. If after repeated attempts they find that they cannot have happiness together, then surely they should be allowed to separate and should not be required to wait five years for a divorce. Advocates of strict divorce laws should consider the fact that divorce is not necessarily destroying the family, but rather is strengthening it by allowing unhappy marriages to be ended, thus giving both parties an opportunity to enter a successful marriage. So why condemn divorce? After all it may be the saviour of the family.—J. C. S.

Another Remedy

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, high priest of innumerable fads, has recruited a number of followers to his latest one: the notion that intercollegiate football, in some occult way, would be vastly benefited if it were to be subsidized by alumni of the school instead of the ignorant and uncouth public.

A number of Columbia's wealthier alumni have gathered together some fifty thousand dollars, which is a lot of money to you and to us but not very much when you consider that the gate receipts of the Big Game alone are just about three times that much. The idea, so press reports go, is that this fifty thousand dollar endowment to support athletics and make them independent of gate receipts, but will in some vague and unexplained manner, let the public understand that they are very uncouth, and that if they do not behave themselves in a more dignified manner, they will not be permitted to pay three dollars to see our football games.

It will take more than fifty thousand dollars per college to impress the American public with their own stupendous vulgarity. Perhaps five million dollars would be a more effective figure.

Professionalism and underhand methods of attracting athletes did not arise from gate receipts, for these practices have been known to exist long before the days of great stadiums and cash customers. The blame can be placed with a great deal more accuracy on the fanatical desire of alumni and their institutions to win.

Dr. Butler, in achieving even a fair amount of success, has shown great influence and capability. However, we feel that his energies would have been far better directed had he established an iron clad board of athletic control for his conference division, that these funds might be used for preventing the encroachment of professionalism, not only upon his own University, but upon those who are directly related to him in the conference.—Daily Californian.

King Football On The Roasting Pan

From back East come collegiate rumblings that are echoed in national periodicals. Yale, Harvard, Dartmouth, Princeton, Army, and other eastern colleges are flinging suggestions and panaceas at each other to remedy the football craze that sweeps the American public off its feet and disrupts collegiate circles.

Meanwhile colleges and universities west of the Mississippi are planning bigger and better football seasons.

Dr. A. Laurence Lowell, president of Harvard University, squints a critical eye on the situation at his institution and naively suggests that the football season start in mid-October with intramural contests between the various campus dormitories, culminating in a final conflict with their traditional rival, Yale. To compensate the students for the loss of festivity surrounding the several football games, Dr. Lowell is willing to grant a five-day holiday for the Harvard-Yale classic. This means, of course, that Yale is to do similarly. Yale takes it all in with an amused grin.

Dr. N. M. Butler of Columbia suggests that the alumni endow the football games thereby eliminating the importance and influence of gate receipts. The Yale Alumni Weekly offers as a solution the abolition of the paid coach.

To both Columbia and Yale, Knute Rockne, famous Notre Dame football mentor, retaliates with the blunt statement that football is not commercialized enough. Rockne points out that the receipts of the football games are used to keep other collegiate sports in existence, and claims that only one out of 40 colleges is making money out of football.

All of which reminds one that this same discussion comes up every year after the football season, and that while college presidents are sitting in their offices writing denunciations of football for magazines, the pleasant thud of pigskins is heard on the athletic field as spring football practice is held.—Junior Collegian.

A Fraternity Problem

In previous years the fraternities at the University of Wisconsin, confronted by hostile legislation, have waged political battles for existence. Today they are face to face with a greater menace, an economic one.

The new curriculum program at the university provides for the elimination, after the sophomore year, of those students who are unable to maintain a C average. Unless the younger "brothers" make the scholastic grade in their first two years they will never survive to take their seats in the councils of the upperclassmen.

This new era will be of particular significance to fraternity life at Wisconsin. The last five or six years have seen the erection of magnificent homes for the Greek letter chapters. A big majority of these represent a debt that is to be paid off by future classes of fraternity men. If these classes are decimated by the scholarship committee, the house debts will accumulate and bankruptcy will be inevitable.

The other side of the picture is a brighter one. The expensive fraternity houses are underwritten by responsible alumni groups. They will exert every effort to maintain the personnel and financial responsibility of the chapter. Scholarship will count for more in the selection of pledges in the future than it has in the past. Some of the delightful froth of pleasant evenings around the chapter hearth must be sacrificed for hours in study hall or grinding over the books. In the long run fraternity life will come to typify a more substantial existence. A few of the weaker units may fall by the wayside, but the others will emerge stronger than ever.

The sororities, it seems, are more fortunate. The "sisters" are in better academic grace than the male of the species. They respond to the urge to study with greater alacrity. In some strange way, which the average boy seems unable to understand, they usually get better grades. Their alumnae usually have a closer contact with the chapters, and are able to wield a greater influence on the members.—Wisconsin State Journal.

OPEN FORUM

Editor, Daily Tar Heel:

In connection with the New Auditorium, which was used for the first time Friday night, I would appreciate your publishing a statement to the effect that the building is now complete with the exception of the painting of the walls and ceilings, which is to be done later in the spring, this work being delayed in order to give the plaster time to dry out thoroughly so as to secure a better and more permanent job when the painting is done.

Also, the acoustics are less perfect at present, on account of the necessity of using the old wooden benches taken from the old Memorial Hall instead of the upholstered seats which the building is designed for, and which will be put in at a later date when funds can be secured for this purpose. The acoustical correction of this auditorium was designed by Professor Sabine, one of the foremost authorities on acoustical matters, and was figured on the basis of upholstered seats. The difference will hardly be noticeable when the hall is filled with people, but with small audiences there may be some slight reverberation, which will disappear when the upholstered seats are put in.

Very truly yours,
T. C. ATWOOD.

Wickersham's Report Cost $6.66 Per Word

Washington, February 5.—The federal government paid at the rate of $6.66 per word for the conclusions and opinions reported to congress by the Wickersham commission, according to conservative estimate.

The volume, submitted after eighteen months of study, contained roughly 75,000 words. Congress appropriated $500,000 to cover the commission's expenses.

Carolina Boxers Defeat Strong Cavaliers

Varsity Scrappers Win By Margin Of One Bout As Warren Beats Bryant

FRESHMEN WIN, 6-1

In the hardest fought matches of the year, the Tar Heel boxers eked out a 4-3 decision over the heretofore undefeated Cavaliers last night in the Tin Can before a capacity crowd of 3,500.

Up to the last fight, the match was squared at 3 all, but John Warren brought home the bacon by a close decision over Bryant in the unlimited class.

Dale Holderness, although he lost, put up a great scrap against Captain Bob Rainey, southern welter champ.

Obie Davis, middleweight, and Martin Levinson, feather, supplied the knockouts for Carolina, while Gentry, light-heavy, scored the only knockout for Virginia.

115 pound class: Paul (Virginia) won by forfeit.

125 pound class: Levinson (Carolina) was awarded a technical knockout over Fishburne (Virginia) after sixty-five seconds in the third round when the seconds threw in the towel.

145 pound class: Captain Rainey (Virginia) won from Holderness (Carolina) by decision in three rounds.

Middleweight: Davis (Carolina) knocked out Oppenheimer (Virginia) after one minute and forty seconds. Oppenheimer, groggy, staggered to his feet after a count of six and the seconds threw in the towel.

Light heavyweight: Gentry (Virginia) won a technical knockout over Wilson (Carolina) after one minute and fifty-fice seconds in the third round.

Heavyweight: Warren (Carolina) defeated Bryant (Virginia) in three rounds.

The Tar Baby boxers took all except the welterweight fight from the Virginia freshmen last night at the Tin Can, winning 6-1. The bouts were preliminaries to the varsity match.

Vernon Guthrie, middleweight, Peyton Brown, lightheavy, and Lacey Pace, unlimited, each won his fight via the knockout route.

Stewart, Cavalier welter, scored his team's only victory by getting the referee's nod over Allsbrook.

Summary:

115 pound class: Glover (C) won a decision over Dandrige (V) in three rounds.

125 pound class: Raymer (C) won a decision over Byers (V) in three rounds.

135 pound class: Langdon (C) took the bout from Fishburne (V) in three rounds by decision.

145 pound class: Stewart (V) won over Allsbrook (C) by decision in three rounds.

Middleweight class: Guthrie (C) knocked out Smith (V) after one minute twenty seconds in the second round.

Light heavyweight: Brown (C) knocked out Williams (V) after twenty seconds in the second round.

Heavyweight: Pace (Carolina) knocked out Marcus (V) after fifty-five seconds in the second round.

Officials: Ed Brockman (Baltimore), referee; Captain R. O. Welch (Army), and Dr. J. A. Wood (Charlotte) judges.

Four Cagers Play Only Basketball

Of the eleven Carolina Basketball players Coach Jim Ashmore has on the Northern tour, Captain Marpet and four others go out for varsity basketball only, three others were reserves with the football team last fall, and the remaining three divided their sports allegiance diversely.

In this latter class, Wilmer Hines, forward, is a tennis champion of national prominence; Sandy Dameron, center, is a discus heaver and letterman in track; and Paul Edwards, forward, is monogram pitcher for the baseball team.

Jimmy Moore, forwards, and Tom Alexander and Stud Henry, guards, are the football reserves. Moore was a quarterback, the other two boys ends.

The other Tar Heels who stick to basketball only include Captain Artie Marpet and Page Choate, letter guards; Tom Cleland, letter forward; Lofton Brooker, forward; and Winslow Smith, center.

Cage Team Carded For Four Games

Duke and Davidson To Come Here; Mat and Mit Teams Idle This Week.

Carolina's boxers and wrestlers face no competition next week, but the Tar Heel quint must contend with a hard schedule of four games, two of which will be Big Five championship encounters to be played on the home court.

The Tar Heels play the last games of their Northern invasion at Washington and Lee Monday and at Maryland Tuesday, then swing back home to meet Davidson here Thursday night and Duke here Saturday night. Both the Thursday and Saturday programs will be double-headers, to be preceded by freshman games.

Carolina has two wins and three losses for its Big Five games and will be meeting Davidson and Duke for the last time this season. The Tar Heels will be out for revenge in both games, they having lost a close one to Davidson 18-17, and having let Duke give them their only bad licking in the Big Five by 30-18.

Carolina will have the advantage of the home court. After this week Carolina will have only three more games, Wake Forest away, and V. M. I. and Sewanee here, before the Southern Tournament.

ELEVEN INDOOR SPORTS EVENTS FOR CAVALIERS

University, Virginia, February 7.—Virginia has nine indoor sport teams that will be in action next week. There are to be five basketball games, two boxing matches, two swimming contests one track meet, and one match by the fencing club.

The basketball team has a game at home Wednesday night with Virginia Military Institute. Then they take their last trip of the season, Friday and Saturday, to play Maryland in College Park and Catholic University in Washington. The first year basketeers have games with the V. M. I. freshmen and the Woodberry Forest.

TAR HEEL QUINT SUCCESSFUL ON NORTHERN TOUR

Win First Two Games Over V. M. I. and V. P. I. By Large Scores.

SANDY DAMERON IS STAR

Scores Fifteen Points in Game With Cadets; Freshmen Win Twice.

Reversing form on their northern trip, the Tar Heel basketball team succeeded in downing both V. P. I. and V. M. I. on their first two nights away. Up until the beginning of this trip, the cagers had failed to win a single one of their games away from home. The jinx, however, now seems to be overcome with their having run up a 30-24 score over the Gobblers and smothered the Cadets by 42-13.

Sandy Dameron, tall blond Tar Heel center chalked up five points against the Gobblers to be among the leading scorers, and ran wild against the Cadets, scoring six field goals and three foul baskets for a total of fifteen points.

The addition of the scoring in the past two games to the present standings gives Dameron a total of ninety-seven points for the season. Artie Marpet trails with eighty-five. Wilmer Hines is next with forty-six.

The freshman cagers have also met with success on their trip running roughshod over the Woodberry Forest outfit Thursday for a 37-19 score, and taking the little Cadets into camp Friday night for a 43-17 victory.

Ten Intramural Basketball Teams Have Perfect Records At Beginning Of Fifth Week

One Hundred and Nineteen Games Have Been Played to Date; Phi Gam's and New Dorms Head Lists in Respective Leagues; Dewey High Scorer.

Rounding out the fourth week of play, with 119 games erased from the winter schedule, the intramural basketball league enters its fifth week of play with ten teams undefeated this season. Two teams, Graham and Aycock lost for the first time during the past week. Aycock dropped its first game in two years to Manly by a 16-7 score, while Graham lost two games in this weeks play. The Best House defeated Graham 32-14 last Tuesday.

In the fraternity league the Phi Gams top the field with seven victories and no defeats for a perfect record. Seven teams have yet to lose a game. The Sigma Zeta's and A.T.O.'s closely follow the Phi Gams with five wins for a perfect record. The Betas, Kappa Alphas, and Sigma Epsilons take third place honors with four wins and no losses. The Phi Delts finish out the undefeated teams with three victories.

New Dorms tops the field in the dormitory league with five games won and no defeats. Closely following New Dorms, with four wins and no losses are the Question Marks and the Best House. Ruffin leads the defeated teams with six games won and one loss. Aycock also is close enough to give the leaders something to think about, having won five games and lost one for a percentage of .833.

Dewey, Phi Gam forward, added fourteen points to his last week's total of fifty-four to take individual scoring for the season thus far with sixty-eight points. Barnwell, Question Mark center and leader for the first three weeks gathered only four points this week to take second place honors with an even sixty points.

The first five individual scorers are as follows:

Player	P
Dewey, Phi Gams	68
Barnwell, Question Marks	60
Smith, Ruffin	52
Dixon, Pi Kaps	51
Blackwood, Sigma Epsilons	46

The Independents have scored a total of 191 points in seven games, one of which they forfeited. The Sigma Zetas scored seventy-four points during the past week to take second place with 166 points. New Dorms gathered fifteen points during

FENCING SEASON TO OPEN MONDAY

Sigma Phi Sigma Meets Aycock In First Intramural Match.

The first intramural fencing match of the season is scheduled to take place in the Tin Can Monday afternoon at four-thirty o'clock when Sigma Phi Sigma fraternity meets Aycock. Seven other teams have entered the fencing league and will see action sometime during the coming week.

The teams already entered are Beta Theta Pi, Zeta Psi, Manly, Carr, Sigma Phi Sigma, Aycock, Everett, Phi Kappa Sigma, and Graham. Other teams or independent individuals may still enter by applying at the Tin Can or to H. H. Hendlin, 210 Everett.

Work during the past week was taken up with four instruction sessions and an exhibition bout between Beta Theta Phi and Zeta Psi. The form shown in this exhibition surpassed that of any intramural bout last winter, and the boys gave indications of mastering the approved French style of fencing. Several of the boys will probably get a chance to show their stuff with the varsity fencers when the regular varsity season gets under way.

Last year the intramural tournament was won by Herbert Browne, Beta Theta Pi. Browne later went up against the Georgia Tech fencers and showed excellent form to win both his matches decisively. Some of the other more promising fencers in the intramural league are Donald Waugh and Dick Fenker, Beta Theta Pi; Arthur Valk and Williams Cooper, Zeta Psi; and George Fieldman, Everett, who is a newcomer with previous experience.

Much interest has been shown in fencing this year, and an effort is being made to have it recognized as a minor sport. Last year 450 boys participated in the intramural league, and indications point to an equally good turn out this winter.

ENRIGHT GOES TO BEGIN NEW WORK

Georgia's New Backfield Coach Recipient of Handsome Gifts From Friends.

The recipient of a handsome watch and traveling bag and numerous tributes from his associates and friends Rex Enright, popular freshman coach at the University of North Carolina for the last three years, has left for Athens, Georgia, where he will assist in winter football practice at the University of Georgia. He recently signed as Georgia's new backfield coach.

Enright's new watch was the present of Chuck Collins, head football coach, while the traveling bag was the gift of the Carolina coaching staff.

Following spring practice at Georgia, Enright will return to Carolina to fill out his contract which expires in September.

FREDDIE SINGTON WILL COACH DUKE FRESHMEN

Durham, February 7.—With the addition of Freddie Sington, Alabama grid star for three years and an all-American and all-Southern for 1930, to the Duke coaching staff, Wallace Wade is rounding out his football coaching staff for 1931.

Sington will coach the freshman line, working with Herschell Caldwell, another Alabama football light, who will coach the backs.

Bobby Goldstein and Fenton Gentry, star University of Virginia boxers, have just made the Dean's List. This is an honor accorded to students who have high scholastic averages.

'ORANGES' TAKE TO AIR WINNING OVER 'BLUES' 20-6

Slusser Scores Three Touchdowns In Third Winter Grid Game.

"BLUE" LINE STAUNCH

Losers Lead In First Downs, But Are Unable To Score.

Sustained running attacks failing, the veteran backs Slusser and Chandler and the freshman backs Snead and Anaucauskas took advantage of all the breaks and passed the "Orange" team to a 26-0 victory over the "Blues" in the third winter practice football game yesterday.

Slusser scored three touchdowns, two on last-quarter passes from Chandler, and Anaucauskas scored one on a pass from Snead, after the latter galloped fifty yards off tackle for the one outstanding run of the game. A fumble recovered by Walker, left end, and a pass intercepted by Davis, substitute center, paved the way for two of the touchdowns. The stout Gilbreath-Fysal-Barclay-Smith-Brown part of the Blue line stopped Slusser and Chandler from unleashing a concerted running attack, but frequent short punts, fumbles and misthrown passes kept the losers with their backs to the wall most of the way.

The losers led in first downs, ten to five. They also made the only concerted drive at the opening of the second half, when a series of short gains by McNeill, Daniels and Phipps, and a ten-yard pass from Phipps to Yerton, substitute quarterback, gave them four first downs in a row. A fumble, recovered by Blackwood, stopped their drive on the 25-yard line.

Slusser dropkicked one extra point for two tries. Walker place-kicked another, and Eanes, substitute guard, missed the other try. Blackwood, Hodges, and Walker played best in the "Orange" line.

The lineups:

"Orange"		"Blues"
Walker	L. E.	Grindstaff
Hodges	L. T.	Smith
Blackwood	L. G.	Barclay
McIver	C.	Gilbreath
Oliverio	R. G.	Fysal
Brown	R. T.	Daniels
Cozart	R. E.	T. Brown
Jones	Q. B.	Beck

LOCAL TROOP IN COURT OF HONOR

Nathan Walker Awarded Eagle Badge at Annual Meeting.

Friday night the local Boy Scout troop held their yearly court of honor in the Baptist church between six and eight o'clock.

Reverend Eugene Olive opened the evening's program with the invocation. H. D. Meyer welcomed the guests on behalf of the troop. Dr. M. S. Breckenridge of the University law school faculty replied to Meyer's welcome for the parents who attended the reception.

Representatives of the American Legion pledged their support to the scout organization in their activities.

Some of the visitors at the affair were N. W. Walker, dean of the University school of education, C. E. McIntosh and Robert House, executive secretary of the University.

The Eagle badge, the highest honor to which a Scout can attain was awarded to Nathan Walker. Star badges were given to Gilbert Wagstaff, Paul Mosher, John Umstead, John Walker, and Donald McKee. Merit badges in particular fields of activity went to John Umstead, Donald and Paul McKee, Arnold Breckenridge, John Munch, Paul Mosher, Edmund Taylor, Gene McIntosh, John Walker, Craig McIntosh, and Billy Hudson.

First class badges were awarded to Tom Mosher, Junior Utley, and Billy Neville. Second class badges were won by Max Weaver, Bruce Trabue, James Van Hecke, and Richmond Sparrow.

OLDEST ALUMNUS RECOVERS FROM SERIOUS ILLNESS

Candler is essentially a gentleman of the old school. Although he is not opposed to modern methods in education and industry, he enjoys living over the old days when there was "less crime, more true Christianity, and a higher regard for the majesty of the law." He considers that a return of the wripping post is the only effective way to deal with the present so-called crime wave that is sweeping over the country. "Good advice, pleading, tolerance, and help from the courts are all right, now and then, but leniency to the majority of lawbreakers is just bad medicine for both them and society," he says.

The blame for the congested dockets and courts of our penal institutions may be found in money and speedy living of today. The more drastic the remedy, the more effective and permanent the cure, he says. If the old whipping post were restored, there would be less need for the sheriffs and the host of other officers for the protection of peace in North Carolina.

When he was twenty-two, he married Miss Lucinda Gudger of Sand Hill and moved to Asheville; but he soon returned to the neighborhood of his birth and "staked out" a homestead at Candler. His eldest living son is E. W. Candler, a merchant of the city of his name. After the death of his first wife he married Miss Lethie Sumney of Candler.

Before his recent illness, Candler was a very active and perferred to spend most of his time out doors. He is still keenly interested in current events and reads the newspapers and "tunes in" his radio when his health permits. Above all he refuses to be considered as being on the "retired" list of his acquaintances, and is always found in a rare good humor.

At The Carolina

"One Heavenly Night," the attraction Monday, represents the first screen play from the pen of Louis Bromfield, gifted American writer and winner in 1925 of the Pulitzer prize for his first novel, The Green Bay Tree. Bromfield went to Hollywood to join the writing staff of Samuel Goldwyn, and now, besides this scenario, has dramatized his latest novel, Twenty-Four Hours. Besides being the debut of Bromfield as a film writer, the picture is the debut for the leading lady as film actress. Evelyn Laye, famous beauty of the stage, takes the leading role.

Tuesday's feature brings a screen drama woven around the theme of the martial complications caused between husband and wife by that frequent source of trouble, the husband's stenographer. This story becomes a tangled foursome, however, with the wife finding another man instead of standing by patiently when she suspects her husband. The picture boasts an excellent cast, headed by Dorothy Mackaill, Lewis Stone, Hobart Bosworth, and Joan Blondell.

Alice White's latest film comes Wednesday, "The Widow From Chicago". This prolific star has been among the foremost in the number of her pictures, and in this latest promises to keep up the work that has made her popularity.

The production to be seen Thursday is a widely heralded attraction which has received the enthusiastic attention of critics. "The Royal Family of Broadway," starring Frederic March, Ina Claire, Mary Brian, and Henrietta Crosman, is a semi-satire based on the lives and careers of the famous Barrymore trio, known to stage and screen. This family of actors come in for some royal kidding at the hands of the producers of this feature, which has been handled in an original, brilliant and highly entertaining fashion. Frederic March especially deserves plaudits for his work, and the other members of the cast have held up their end with complete success.

John Boles returns to the screen Friday in "Resurrection", co-starring with Lupe Velez. Boles has become widely known and celebrated, for his voice and appearance, since the advent of the talkies which gave him his opportunity. The star was once a member of the University of Texas Glee Club, and later took parts in Metropolitan opera before going to Hollywood. He has a string of successes to his credit, of which "Rio Rita" and "The King of Jazz" are especially noteworthy.

The filming of the latest of the Beau Geste series of P. C. Wren's romantic narratives of the French foreign legion comes Saturday, with "Beau Ideal," starring Ralph Forbes, blond Englishman who was seen in Beau Geste as the elder Geste's brother.

The language picture of the week, coming Wednesday at eleven p. m., as usual, is a German feature, "Sarah and Son." Ruth Chatterton acted in the American version of this attraction which was so popular that as many of five foreign features have been made from it, French, Spanish, Russian, German, and Italian.

Gwyn Will Speak Before N. C. Club Tomorrow Night

T. Lenoir Gwyn will speak before the North Carolina Club Monday night at seven-thirty in the library room of the rural social-economics department in the library building. The meeting is open to the public.

Mr. Gwyn's subject will be "Livestock Resources and Opportunities in North Carolina." Mr. Gwyn is said to be the largest livestock grower in the state, and has extensive grazing grounds in Haywood county.

Besides engaging in farming as a profession, he is interested in a number of business enterprises, including banks, lumber, electricity, and supply houses.

Under the instigation of Governor O. Max Gardner, the agricultural bodies of the state are stressing food crops and livestock. Since North Carolina ranks very low as a livestock state, the speaker of the club will bring information about the livestock resources and opportunities.

Mr. Gwyn is a graduate of the University of North Carolina of the class of 1903, and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary fraternity. During his attendance at the University, he was editor of the Yackety Yack and of the Tar Heel.

Local Red Cross Chapter Raises Relief Fund Quota

The Chapel Hill Chapter of the American Red Cross has raised its quota of $600 for the drought relief fund, and is rapidly raising the $200 for the needy of Orange county. Red Cross officials here expect that proceeds from the tickets to the picture to be shown at the Carolina theatre today from one-thirty to five p. m., and from nine-fifteen to eleven o'clock will net the chapter the remaining amount.

At national headquarters about $6,500,000 of the $10,000,000 requested has been raised. A map prepared by the Red Cross to indicate the scope of its operations shows that Red Cross chapters, with the help of the national organization, is giving food, clothing, and other relief in 735 counties in twenty states. Relief has been given in one county in Mexico but help is no longer needed there, the chapter asserts.

The number of counties in each state where drought relief is being given is as follows: North Carolina 9; Alabama, 39; Arkansas, 75; Georgia, 2; Indiana, 23; Illinois, 24; Kentucky, 116; Louisiana, 34; Maryland, 9; Mississippi, 65; Montana, 13; Missouri, 34; Oklahoma, 50; Ohio, 33; Pennsylvania, 3; Tennessee, 37; North Dakota, 3; Texas, 68; Virginia, 61; West Virginia, 37.

No Losses For Fencing Squad In Three Years

To Petition Athletic Council for Recognition as Varsity Minor Sport.

The varsity fencing team which is now beginning its third year of undefeated existence at North Carolina and present holder of the Southern Conference fencing championship, have practically completed arrangements for the most ambitious fencing schedule ever attempted by a southern team.

North Carolina seems to be the leader in southern fencing movement and bids fair to follow Georgia in recognizing fencing as an official varsity sport.

The schedule starts in two weeks with a match with the College of Charleston to be followed with a match with the Virginia Cavaliers who helped William and Mary inaugurate fencing at Williamsburg last week. William and Mary is the third definite home match arranged.

During the spring recess, the varsity plans to take a northern trip, first traveling to Pennsylvania to meet Lehigh and Lafayette Monday and Tuesday, March 16 and 17. Then they will go to New Jersey to meet Rutgers at New Brunswick, ending the trip in New York City with matches against New York University and Columbia. The team will leave Chapel Hill directly after the winter examinations and will return for classes Monday.

A letter has been turned over to Coach Fetzer to be brought up at the February meeting of the athletic council. The council will be asked to decide in favor of the request to recognize fencing as a varsity minor sport, help finance the trip north, and thus follow out the regular policy of introducing sports for participation of as many students as possible who have not yet found recreational adjustment in the regular sport curriculum of the University.

Spanish Club Formed

The formation of a new Spanish club, composed of undergraduates, took place Friday evening at seven-thirty in the Y. M. C. A. The purpose of the club is to stimulate and maintain a keener interest in Spanish culture.

Much enthusiasm was expressed by the members over the possibility of making it into a wide-awake, successful organization. All programs are to be conducted in Spanish, and from time to time various members of the faculty, as well as students from Spanish speaking countries, will address the club.

A program committee was appointed, composed of Clyde H. Cantrell, T. Ben Campen, and Otis T. Slate with Cantrell acting chairman.

Temporarily meetings will be held each Friday evening at seven-thirty in the Y. M. C. A.

Ten Intramural Cage Teams Have Perfect Records in 5th Week

the week to bring their total up to 153 for the season. The Question Marks gathered twenty-nine points to bring their total up to 162 in four games, one less than the third place New Dorms.

The Zeta Psis lost for the second time of the season this week, losing to the undefeated Sigma Eps 28-24. The Sigma Eps jumped away to a lead of 16-2 at the half-time but the Zeta Psi's staged a strong rally in the latter stages of the game to come within four points of victory.

Perhaps the best game of the week was the T. E. P.-K. A. encounter which was finally won by the K. A.'s. The T. E. P.'s had the game sewed up apparently, the score being 25-12 in the middle of the third quarter. With thirteen minutes of play left the K. A.'s went to work and ran up a total of nineteen points while holding their opponents to three, finally winning 31-28.

Another good game was the 15-13 defeat of Carr by New Dorms. The outcome being uncertain all through the game.

The intramural basketball season will end Friday, February 20. Some mighty good basketball is in store for intramural fans as the last week of play will see the leaders pitted against each other. The Phi Deltas meeting the Beta's, and A.T.O.'s, the Sigma Zetas, Phi Gams, K. A.'s and Sigma Ep's all meeting in the last two weeks. In the dormitory league the chief battles will be between Ruffin Aycock, the Question Marks, Best House, and Graham.

Paul Edwards Utility Man Par Excellence

Paul Edwards is utility man par excellence for the Carolina basketball team. Coach Ashmore wanted a big guard to run with Captain Marpet as the season opened, so Edwards played guard. Then the forwards lost their "goal-eyes", and Edwards went to forward to perform creditably. Then there came a night when Sandy Dameron, star center, had an "off-day", so Edwards played center and once more did it well. The big boy reminds one of Bill Dodderer, who played a different post in each Conference meet.

FULL QUOTA OF $600 RAISED BY RED CROSS HERE

Colonel Pratt, Local Chairman, Expresses Gratification at Outcome of Drive.

The full quota of $600 of the Chapel Hill chapter of the Red Cross has been raised and the check has already been mailed to the national headquarters at Washington by Col. Joseph Hyde Pratt, chairman of the local chapter.

In addition to this $250 has been raised for the relief of the needy in Orange county. About 900 people of the community shared in the contributions which have ranged from five cents to fifty dollars. A part of this was raised through the sale of tickets for the benefit picture given at the Carolina Theatre Sunday.

Colonel Pratt made this statement yesterday: /"The people of Chapel Hill have responded most generously to the call of the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Red Cross for funds for relief in the drought stricken areas of this country, and of the needy in Orange county."

Colonel Pratt in behalf of the Chapel Hill chapter has expressed its indebtedness to the Chapel Hill News, the Chapel Hill Weekly, and the Daily Tar Heel for the publicity they gave to the need of the American Red Cross for funds; to E. C. Smith of the Carolina Theatre for the use of the theatre; to Mrs. M. S. Breckenridge, chairman, and to the members of the special committee who solicited contributions and distributed tickets. Gratitude was also expressed to several firms in Chapel Hill for receiving subscriptions to the fund.

'Y' TO ENTERTAIN VOLUNTEER GROUP

Three Hundred Delegates Expected to Attend Student Volunteer Conference.

The University Y. M. C. A. is busy making preparations for the State Student Volunteer Conference which is to meet here February 27 to March 1 and is expected to bring between two and three hundred delegates from the schools of North Carolina.

Announcement of the conference was made in all the churches last Sunday with an appeal for sleeping places in town for the delegates. Places for fifty girls are desired, also dormitory rooms and fraternity rooms for 125 boys.

Other institutions which are assisting as hosts are Duke University and North Carolina College for Negroes. The latter will furnish entertainment for the thirty negro delegates. Duke will entertain one third of the white delegation, leaving only 175 of the possible 300 total attendance for Carolina.

Each cabinet of the Y has a definite part to assist in this enterprise. The sophomore cabinet is responsible for securing homes for the girls; the junior-senior, assisted by the freshman friendship council, will secure homes in town and on the campus for the boys.

The purpose of this movement is to study the needs and opportunities of religious education and welfare service in foreign countries.

Mitchell Society Has Two Speakers Scheduled Tonight

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society will meet tonight at seven-thirty o'clock in room 206 Phillips hall. The meeting will be the 326th to be held.

Professor N. P. Bailey will talk on the following subject: "Response of Thermocouples to Rapidly Oscillating Temperatures." Professor F. K. Cameron will deliver an address on "The Absorption of Sulphur by Calcium Phosphates."

This society meets on the second Tuesday of each month. Membership is open to the faculty, graduates, and advanced undergraduates. The public is cordially invited to attend any or all the meetings of the society.

Medical Students To Be Given Tests

The annual aptitude tests for students proposing to begin the study of medicine next fall will be given in Venable hall Friday afternoon, February 13, at three o'clock. This applies to all students in the college of liberal arts and the school of applied science who are applicants for admission to any medical school next fall.

The examination questions are to be furnished by the Association of American Medical Colleges. The grading of the questions will also be done by this association. A fee of one dollar must be paid by each student at the time of the examinations. These fees will go to the medical association to cover the costs of the tests.

Many medical schools have announced their intention of selecting first-year students on the basis of these tests and of refusing to consider applicants who have not taken the tests. Friday is the only time this year that the examinations will be given.

At a preliminary meeting Wednesday morning at ten-thirty in room 206 Venable hall, Dr. J. M. Bell will make a more complete announcement of the purpose of the association in holding the tests. He will also review the questions of last year's tests at the same time.

HIGH SCHOOL MEN WILL HEAR LOCAL PROFESSORS

Three University professors will address the high school principals of North Carolina who will gather in Greensboro Friday and Saturday in their annual convention. The building to be used is the Central High School there.

Dr. A. M. Jordan of the education department will lecture Friday afternoon on "The Attitude of High School Students to Questions of Conduct." Dr. English Bagby of the psychology department will speak Friday night on "Minor Disorders of Personality." Dr. H. W. Crane of the psychology department will talk Saturday morning on "Character Training of the Feeble-Minded."

Infirmary List Doubles

Over the week-end the infirmary list rose from seven to fourteen. The students confined at present are: Doretta Russell, W. B. Fitzgerald, J. McD. Monaghon, Randolph Reynolds, E. S. Gilbreath, Freemont Shephard, C. A. Shreve, F. E. Culvern, Pane Page, Jack Trotter, John A. McGlinn, R. H. Carmichael, and S. D. Scott, Jr.

DRAMA HAS BEEN BEST MEDIUM OF RACE EXPRESSION

Koch Tells Freshmen in Talk on Campus Dramatic Facilities In Chapel Tuesday.

Professor Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, spoke at freshman chapel yesterday on the facilities which this campus affords for the development of dramatic ability.

He said that education is learning to use the tools that the race has found indispensable. "The race's highest national spirit has always been expressed through the theatre," said Koch. He qualified this statement by making examples of ancient Greece and the Elizabethan era.

"The supreme embodiment of Hellenic spirit and spirit was expressed through the medium of the theatre," he stated. In those days the theatre in Greece was a religious as a well as a patriotic institution. It stood for the ideal of the people, who found their greatest recreation in the theatre itself. The Greeks attempted to formulate their religious thoughts and moralities by means of the theatre.

He also showed that the Elizabethan period, during which Shakespeare flourished, was one of the peaks of the history of English civilization. Shakespeare showed the ability to rise from the obscurity of the middle classes to the heights of fame and prestige. He gave the English people plays, according to Koch, which, besides being a source of amusement and pleasure, have lived to be great monuments to the fame of the author. "So today, more than then," said Koch, "there is every opportunity for a young man to succeed in this field."

Koch urged the freshmen to hear the readings Monday night of the plays presented for choice as the spring productions. These plays have all been written by students. He welcomed all to attend and tryout for parts in the spring productions.

State's Livestock Resources Is Topic Of Gwyn's Speech

T. Lenoir Gwyn spoke before the North Carolina club last night at its meeting in the library room of the department of rural social-economics on the subject "Livestock Resources and Opportunities in North Carolina."

Mr. Gwyn is said to be the largest livestock raiser in the state, and he is also interested in a number of other business enterprises, including banks, lumber, electricity, and supply houses. He was graduated from the University in the class of 1903. While a student here he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and editor of the Yackety Yack and the Tar Heel.

The talk last night was one of a number given as a part of the program of the North Carolina Club in its study this year on the agricultural situation in the state.

Alumnus Honored

SUGGESTIONS FOR NEW SONG FOUND TO BE MEDIOCRE

Committee Will Extend Deadline in Hopes of Receiving More Contributions.

The committee in charge of choosing another alma mater song for the University has announced that it is dissatisfied with the quality of the material submitted and therefore has extended its deadline.

Originally the deadline for the verses of the song was December 1, 1930, and the deadline for the music was January 1, 1931, but due to the small number of contributions and the mediocre quality of both the music and words the committee has decided to postpone their decision until at least the end of the spring quarter.

A. B. Andrews early in the fall offered $100 to be awarded to the student or students writing an alma mater song which a picked committee would choose as the best. The committees, a committee to choose the verses and a committee to pick the music, decided that twenty-five dollars of this sum was to go to the author of the verses and seventy-five dollars to be awarded the person submitting the best music.

The proposed song is not to supplant "Hark the Sound" but rather to supplement it so that the University will have more than one anthem. The new song is to be original.

It is the opinion of many persons that however stirring the strains of "Hark the Sound" may be, it is, nevertheless, one of many songs of the same tune, and as such cannot possess a great deal of significance in the eyes of the world. If the tune were in use only by schools and universities far from here, it would perhaps not be so imperative that a new song be written, but songs to the same tune are in use at Auburn University, Emory College, and numerous preparatory and high schools in the South.

Two Soloists Are Well Received By Hollins Audience

Harry Lee Knox, piano soloist, was well applauded by the audience at the concert given by the University glee club at Hollins College, Saturday night. Arthur H. Fleming, Jr., baritone soloist, vied with him for honors in the singing of two numbers.

The concert, sponsored by the Music Art Club, an organization of upper class women at Hollins, was presented in the Little Theatre building before a large crowd of students, and townspeople from Roanoke which is seven miles away. The program consisted of four groups—Sacred songs, Russian and North European songs, French, and American songs. The second division was the best received.

The thirty members of the club, accompanied by Dr. H. S. Dyer of the music department, made the trip by auto. Saturday evening they were the guests of Hollins College at dinner and at a reception afterwards.

The concerts which have been scheduled for the remainder of the quarter are at Spring Hope, February 27; Guilford College, February 28; Southern Pines, March 1; and Winston-Salem, March 3.

Literary Societies Not To Hold Joint Session As Planned

Through error it was announced in Sunday's Daily Tar Heel that the Phi Assembly and the Dialectic Senate would meet in a joint session tonight, to be presided over by J. M. Little, president of the Di. The meeting of the two societies will be held next Tuesday night, however.

This is a regular part of the year's activities of the Di and Phi. As is the usual plan, each group will present some bill of importance, to be discussed by both senators and representatives. Next Tuesday night the meeting will be held in the Di hall in New West building at the regular meeting time, seven-fifteen o'clock. President Little and Speaker Ransom Whittington, of the Phi, request that all their members attend the special session.

Tonight the Phi and Di will hold their regular debates, each group having two bills on the calendar.

Mid-Winter Dances Set For Week-End

Will Yarborough, treasurer of the German Club, has called attention to the fact that all applications for membership in the club must be in his hands by tonight if the applicants wish to attend the mid-winter dances February 13 and 14. The cards are available and may be secured from the treasurer at the S. A. E. house any afternoon between one-thirty and two and any evening between seven and seven-thirty o'clock.

The mid-winters this week-end will be the second set of German Club dances this year. There will be two dances Friday and three Saturday. The Junior figure Friday night will be led by Bill Bridgers, assisted by Walter Crouch and Steve Lynch. The regular German Club figure on Saturday night will be led by William Dunn, assisted by Lynn Wilder and George Bagby.

FENLEY WILL ORGANIZE GRADUATE FRENCH CLASS

All graduate students in history, economics, education, psychology, and sociology, who are interested in forming a special reading class to prepare for French examination, are asked to report to-day, February 10, at three o'clock in Murphey 314. The class will take a hasty review of grammar and then read specially selected material to fit their needs. Dr. G. Ward Fenley will conduct the class. Convenient hours will be arranged by consent of the class.

Engineers To Plan Dance

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers will hold a business meeting tonight, seven o'clock, in room 206 of Phillips hall. Plans for the engineering dance will be discussed. All members are urgently requested to be there.

Tar Heel Reporters

The conferences of the reporters with the managing-editor which were scheduled for yesterday and today have been postponed until Thursday afternoon. All reporters are requested to bring their note-books to the conference at that time.

NEW COMMITTEE WILL REGULATE HOUSE PARTIES

Student-Faculty Group, Headed by Dean of Women, Formulates Set of Rules.

At a meeting of representatives from several of the fraternities on the campus held before the Christmas holidays a set of rules were drawn up by the group in regard to regulating houseparties on the campus. Mrs. Marvin Stacy, dean of women, met with the representatives.

According to the first rule formulated by the fraternity representatives a committee was to be appointed composed of the dean of women as chairman, dean of students, chairman of the faculty committee on dances, and three student members selected by the executive committee on the German Club from the junior class or above, at least one being a junior and one from the executive committee of the German Club.

On this committee have been appointed, Mrs. Stacy, (chairman); F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students; Dr. W. S. Bernard, chairman of faculty committee on dances; Aubrey Parsley, German Club; Art Sickles, senior class; and Pete Gilchrist, junior class.

The rules as made out by the fraternity group with the advice of Mrs. Stacy are as follows:

1. (Stated above.)
2. The fraternity giving the houseparty shall appoint a com-

DRAMA CRITIC TO SPEAK THURSDAY

Barrett H. Clark, of the Theatre Guild, Will Appear at Playmakers Theatre.

Barrett H. Clark, author, editor, and head of the playreading department of the Theatre Guild of New York will lecture at the Playmakers Theatre, Thursday evening, February 12 at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Clark's subject will be "The Contemporary Theatre on Broadway."

Mr. Clark has done more than any other critic to sponsor the work of contemporary American playwrights. He is literary advisor to Samuel French, the publisher of plays. Some of Mr. Clark's best known publications are Continental Drama of Today, Eugene O'Neill, European Theories of the Drama, and he is also translator and editor of Hervieu's The Labyrinth, Four Plays of Emile Augier Sardou's Patrie, and two Belgian plays by Vanzype, besides the translations in which he has collaborated, both in America and on the continent.

It has been said of him that no American critic has contributed more sound valuation to contemporary drama or has more enthusiastically sponsored the cause of the unknown playwright.

Mr. Clark, according to Playmaker officials, combines the qualities of a sound critic with those of an interesting speaker. His presence for a lecture is considered by them to be an important event in the year's dramatic program. The Playmakers invite everyone who is interested in the contemporary American theatre to hear Mr. Clark.

A Liberal Step

Publication in today's issue of the Daily Tar Heel of ten rules adopted by the representatives of all the fraternities meeting with the dean of students, dean of women and the executive secretary of the University reveal a forward step in giving students more self-government. Houseparties given here are done so by the fraternities entirely. Control of these houseparties in the past has been in the hands of the dean of women and the dean of students. Regulations governing conduct has been rather vague and generally misunderstood by all.

In the future there will be no room for ignorance of the rules or complaint of restrictions. The rules were drawn up and approved by representatives of the fraternities. They represent the desires of youth and not the restrictions of maturity. We commend in particular that rule which states that control of houseparties shall be in the hands of committee composed of Mrs. Marvin Stacy, Dean of Women; Francis Bradshaw, Dean of Students; Dr. W. S. Bernard, Chairman of the Faculty Committee on Dances; and three students. Besides having equal voice with the faculty in control of the houseparties the students are fortunate in having as members three of the faculty who have had wide experience in handling questions of this nature.

We like the general tone of the rules. Throughout them there is an absence of restrictions and a noticeable emphasis of the responsibility of the students. If houseparties which generally have been regulated by a sense of decency existing here are to continue on a high plane then it will depend on the students. Our elders have seen fit to give us a free rein in running our houseparties. A measure of cooperation and a sense of discretion on our part will enable them to feel that their faith has been justified.

Too Poor Not To

They tell us we can't afford to keep spending money on education. If we're as poor as some of them seem to think we are, then we can't afford not to. The greater the jobs that are to confront us, the greater the need for educated men and women to solve the more difficult problems that more difficult conditions present.

In times of peace and prosperity, little thought of the tomorrow can be excused if it can't be justified. It takes no great effort and no great brains to roll down hill. A landlubber can steer the boat when the wind is fair and the water is calm. But a squall soon brings the captain to the wheel.

We can all remember the shot in Europe that was heard around the world. And then, finally, we went in. Overnight everything was changed. Privations became privileges. Even those who stayed at home thought it a sacred duty to do something—and did it. Money saved for luxuries we put into liberty bonds, and we put molasses into our coffee. But that was tangible. That was spectacular. That fired the imagination and kindled the heart.

The financial problems we are now fighting in North Carolina, though not as spectacular, are in a way just as real. There is just as much necessity for a clear distinction to be made between luxuries and necessities, just as much cause for giving up the luxuries rather than the necessities, if we can't have both.

We should therefore, as a people, make up our minds in North Carolina whether education is a luxury of minor importance or a necessary part of our equipment, and act accordingly.

Too poor to spend money on education? We are too poor not to.—V. A. D.

Extremists And Youth

The "reformers" of the older generation and the never-never boys of the present younger generation have had a great deal to say in the past and in the present about youth going to the dogs, bow-wows, or some other appropriate place. Both accusers and defenders of our present age have had to make their views and their proclamations extreme to make them forceful. It seems to us that there could be some very helpful modifications on both sides.

The defenders of our present generation have admired its frankness above everything else. No one could accuse it of being anything else. We believe that there is a limiting factor to frankness, decency, which is not being observed as much as it should be. After seeing a season's production of vaudeville and movie shows, one's sense of decency is usually very much dulled or is entirely done away with. They are pulling jokes and creating scenes in the movie show now which would not have been tolerated eight or ten years ago by even our "war crazy" element. The show producers who are making such stuff for our benefit think that such insertions of filth or "frankness" are necessary for the humor of the plot. Many of the reviewers merely say "It would have been just as funny without the dirt."

We know it is utterly futile to combat such stuff as this through any means except public sentiment. Public sentiment is evidently strongly for such, and anything we say would just produce more extremists which do not help the situation at all. However, we wonder sometimes if we are going to sit by calmly forever and let our sense of decency be entirely done away with.—O. W. D.

We Are Glad We Could Help

To the Editor:

As chairman of the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Red Cross I wish sincerely to thank you for the splendid cooperation that the Tar Heel has given me in raising our quota of $600 for the Drought Relief Fund, and $250 for the needy of this county. The interesting articles you and your associates have had each day in the Tar Heel were a decided influence to our success in raising the desired funds.

I wish you would express to your associates our sincerest appreciation of their cooperation and of their interest in this work of the chapter.

Yours sincerely,

Education By Remote Control

The presentation of two scientific lectures on the campus by means of talking motion pictures is of considerable interest to both students and faculty. The general adoption of this method of college training would revolutionize the educational world.

It seems quite probable that talking pictures will be very successful in a good many cases. Certainly they could well replace the lectures which are given to classes of one, two, three, or five hundred individuals; in these large lecture sections there is very little interaction between student and lecturer, even though the lecturer is present in the flesh and blood. It will be admitted with little difficulty that talking pictures could very well replace lecturers who are now compelled to repeat the same talks quarter after quarter, year after year. There will probably be some reluctance to admit the practicability of the talkies for smaller classes. The recitation method is so deeply rooted in some quarters that a change would be violent. It is argued, and this is the real point, that the interaction present in the small class is essential to successful teaching. This point may, however, very well be questioned. One outstanding example which controverts the argument comes to mind immediately: one of those rare persons with a real genius for teaching, probably the most successful of all the teachers in the Arts college, is deaf, and cut off from nearly all interaction with his classes.

Education by talking pictures would make is possible for the few really great teachers to have a wide sphere of influence. It would cut down tremendously the number of men needed for class work, and would make possible the individual tuition so highly appraised. Moving pictures can reveal to thousands intricate experiments which could not be performed before once started, no one can foresee where the limit will be. For their own sake, it might be well for college professors to organize as the movie musicians have done, and to do it before the demon robot obtains a foothold.—Minnesota Daily.

The Musical University

By Wex Malone

Frederick Stanley Smith, organist and composer, played to a small unusually enthusiastic audience Saturday evening in the auditorium of the new Music building in the first of the guest series of organ recitals under the auspices of the music department. The program was decidedly informal in content, and perhaps lacked classical substance. Nevertheless the entire aggregation of selections was warm and personal, sufficiently varied in emotional appeal, and placed a minimum burden on the audience.

Those of us who heard Smith were impressed by his maturity of approach and ease of execution, his depth of understanding, and his astounding familiarity with the organ. He has acquired a decided individuality of style without resorting to sensationalism. He made full use of the orchestral qualities of the instrument, with frequent recourse to the strings and woodwind.

The opening selection was the Preludio from the Third Sonata of Guilmant. The prelude, short, but brilliant and effective, is introduced by an agile decurrent passage followed by two mezza forte chords. This phrase, forming the theme of the prelude, assumes an increasingly interesting aspect as it is complicated by innumerable developments and modulations.

The two succeeding numbers constituted the more orthodox portion of the recital. The Chorale Prelude by Bach was given an interesting but novel interpretation; it was played decidedly ad lib. There has been considerable criticism of the modern renditions of Bach, and perhaps to those who are more conservative and critical than most of us pretend to be, the modern registration employed by Smith in his interpretation of the old master would serve as an admirable target. Call this barbaric or what you will, Smith's conception of the Prelude was exceedingly human and admirably adapted to the Twentieth Century listener.

The Aria from Handel's Tenth Concerto was executed in the same personal way. Handel's concertos, written in the later years of the composer's life, are uniformly mature and unhesitatingly effective. They were probably written to be inserted between sections of oratorio for the purpose of providing relaxation and in order that lighter atmosphere might pervade the audience. Frequently they echo his other works. The Tenth Concerto, played as it is, slowly, is strangely reminiscent of our old friend, the Largo.

The second group was composed of modern numbers. The first, Marche Russe by Schminke, is a musical what-you-will. The first part of the selection constituted a free interpretation of the Song of the Volga Boatmen, followed by a rather elaborate transition passage, finally and laboriously worming its way into a melee of the folk melody and the National Anthem of Russia. If one listens carefully to this number he is likely to hear all sorts of things, some agreeably surprising and some not so pleasant. It is more interesting as a novelty than as a serious piece of composition. A momentary passage on the flugel horn attracted your reviewer more than the rest of the entire composition.

Caprice by Matthews was an interesting piece, done for the greater part on the strings. The outstanding characteristics of this selection were the rapid passages giving show to an unusually clear cut technique and preciseness of touch. The artist's own arrangement of Londonderry Air was, like all modern versions, overdone. This number appeared totally unnecessary in a program as light in consistency as that of Mr. Smith.

Festival Toccato was unusually interesting. Here is all the levity and exhileration of walnuts and wine, the flash of skirts, the crispness of autumn air. The number is fresh and impetuous and definitely rhythmatic.

When Smith played The French Clock by Bornschein it was to an unusually appreciative audience. The number is light and delicate, and a most admirable example of descriptive music. The selection is execut-

Dameron Lost To White Phantoms

CAROLINA CENTER SUFFERS ATTACK OF POISON OAK

Sandy Dameron Returns to Hill; Tar Heels Minus Services of Star Pivot Man for Week

Sandy Dameron, stellar White Phantom pivot man and mainstay in the triumphant northern cage invasion was forced to return to Chapel Hill yesterday, suffering from severe poison oak infection.

Dameron's condition will keep him off the basketball floor for at least a week, it was learned last night from infirmary attaches.

Physicians at Charlottesville first noticed the infection Saturday afternoon but thought it not too severe to warrant his withdrawal from the Virginia-Carolina game that night.

It is thought that the poison oak was contracted in Lexington, Friday night, Dameron stating last night that he used as a covering, a blanket which a V. M. I. cadet had used this summer on a camping trip.

The ailment became aggravated by his participation in the Virginia game which Carolina won, 28 to 24. His condition became so acute Sunday night that physicians ordered his removal to Chapel Hill where he is now in the infirmary under the surveillance of skin specialists.

Edwards or Smith will hold down the center position during Dameron's absence from the ranks.

Confronted by one of the hardest week's cage grinds met this year, the White Phantoms will be badly crippled by the loss of the stellar center. Finishing with Maryland on the Old Liner's home floor tonight, the Carolinians jaunt down home to meet Davidson here Thursday night and Duke on Saturday.

Toughest of the northern foes will be Maryland, who plays host to the Tar Heels on their narrow, short court tonight. Reputed to be "jinxed" on foreign courts, Carolina has turned the tables and come through V. M. I., V. P. I. and Virginia unscathed, and the effect of such reversals will give Coach Ashmore's boys a little more of the edge in tonight's battle.

Except for a final game with Wake Forest, these will be Carolina's last Big Five battles, and they will undoubtedly figure prominently in settling the title. Duke and Davidson are waging a neck-and-neck race for top honors, and Carolina has a standing of two wins and three losses. Both games, Thursday and Saturday nights, will start at 8:30 o'clock, following freshman games which will start at 7.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Phi Gam Swamps Chi Phi 32-7

Phi Gam, led by Howard and Hubbard with twelve and ten points respectively, defeated Chi Phi yesterday afternoon 32-7, to further their string of victories to eight, three more than their nearest rivals, A. T. O. and Sigma Zeta. Phi Gam held a 14-0 lead at the half-way mark, Skinner countering the first Chi Phi score on a free toss in the middle of the third quarter. Luke Abels led Chi Phi, scoring both their action tosses. Boucher played a good floor game for the winners, getting six points to figure in the scoring. Phi Gam has yet to lose a game.

Scoring substitutes: Phi Gam, Dozier (2).

Pi K. A. Forfeits

The Pika's forfeited to Delta Sigma Phi yesterday afternoon in the intramural basketball league.

Zeta Psi Gets Forfeit

Chi Psi forfeited to Zeta Psi yesterday afternoon.

Phi Delt's Win Fourth Straight

The Phi Delt's won their fourth straight victory yesterday afternoon over the previously undefeated Beta's by a score of 54-25. Peacock set a new individual scoring record for the season with twenty-nine points, beating the previous record held by Crouch, of Best House, by one point. This was the first defeat for the Beta's after winning four straight. Moore and Eubanks, also of the Phi Delt's, took second place honors with ten points each. For the losers Dressler was best with eight points. The Phi Delt's jumped away to a substantial lead in the first half and were never in danger.

Virginia Boxers Came, Saw, And Were Conquered Trying To Upset Proverbial Bucket

Postponed Goldstein - Levinson Bout Will Be Headliner When Two Clash in Tournament

(By Jack Bessen)

The University of Virginia's boxing team came, saw, but was conquered, 4-3, last Saturday night when they tried to upset the dope bucket by turning in a victory over the fast stepping Tar Heels. Other teams have tried it with as much success . . . That long-awaited bout between Bobby Goldstein, Virginia feather, and Marty Levinson, Tar Heel star, failed to materialize when Bobby was forced to undergo an operation, and as a result, couldn't make the trip. It's a cinch that these two battlers will hook up with each other in the Southern Conference tournament . . . There'll be plenty of fireworks too . . .Marty had a tough time reaching Fishburne, the Virginia entry, but when he did, it was all up with the Cavalier fighter . . . Fishburne led Levinson a merry chase around the ring, but couldn't keep up the pace in the third round, and Marty got that right in, and the fight was over . . . Captain Noah Goodridge met a Tartar in LaGiglia, Virginia lightweight. LaGiglia packs murder in his left fist, but couldn't bring it to bear on the Carolina star, while Noah kept pecking away at LaGiglia's face, rolling up enough points to walk off with the verdict . . . Dail Holderness, the redheaded welter, surprised the audience by putting up a wonderful fight against Captain Bob Rainey, southern welterweight champ. Rainey was figured to win in a walk, but Dail was the aggressor throughout the fight, but was unable to put over the finishing touches. With a little more experience, Dail will give the Virginia boxer plenty of trouble in the Conference tourney . . . Obie Davis, veteran middleweight, must have been in an awful hurry, judging from the time it took him to finish Oppenheimer. A left jab followed by a terrific right flush on the jaw did the business in the opening session. The time was one minute and twenty seconds . . . This is the second bout that Davis has won via the K. O. route, doing the trick against V. P. I. . . . Hugh Wilson, sophomore light-heavy, put up a nice fight against the veteran Gentry, before the seconds threw

College Sports

By Don Shoemaker

"It's possibilities are great, especially as a competitive intercollegiate sport . . . Harvard has started playing it . . . I personally see no reason why it cannot in time become as popular a sport as tennis and squash." Thus for several columns in the Brown University Daily Herald did Kenneth Howley of the Providence (R. I.) Y. M. C. A. extoll in the above manner, the Britonic and aged sport of Badminton. Brown authorities believe that the day is not far off when the sport will be firmly established in intercollegiate circles. Its novelty has worn off.

Tennis-like is Badminton. Instead of the regulation tennis ball, a small feather topped rubber semi-sphere is the target of the racquets which are small and loosely strung. The net is higher. Only one serve is allowed, and when serving the server must hit the bird from below his knees (not the bird's knees, you dope), wafting it over the net with a continuous upward movement. Points are reckoned with one point counting one and a game fifteen.

On the American continent the sport enjoys a limited patronage, although thirty clubs formed for the promotion of the game exist in Montreal, boasting a total membership of more than 750 enthusiasts.

Highly amused were South Bend (Ind.) cage fans when local newspapers chronicled "Irish Quintet To Meet Syracuse" and "Notre Dame Team Pointing For Syracuse."

The reason: Much like the Fighting Irish gridders of years past and present, Notre Dame University's basketballers include few sons of Erin. Such un-Irish sounding names as Crowe, Newbold, DeCook, Johnson, and Baldwin wear the colors of the Indiana institution on the hardwood. Only representative of the Emerald Isle on the squad is Forward Gavin, who is pushing Crowe and Newbold for their present posts.

Carolina Relay Team Finishes Second In Millrose Mile Run

Carolina's relay team consisting of Drane, Smith, Weil, and Farmer won second place in the one mile relay event of the Millrose games held at Madison Square Garden last Saturday night. Princeton placed first.

The outstanding feature of the Millrose Games was the spectacular half mile run by Russell Chapman of Bates College in one minute fifty-three and eight-tenths seconds. This is the second fastest indoor mile ever recorded and was run within an hour after Chapman had run anchor man in a two mile relay and finished his half mile in 1:55.

Ray Conger, of the Illinois A. C. and premier miler of the United States, won the Wannamaker mile with a time of 4:13.6. This was his third straight victory in this event and retired the historic Wannamaker cup from competition.

George Spitz, sensational eighteen year old N. Y. U. high jumper set a new world's record of 6 feet 7 inches. Harold Osborn, the veteran high jumper who was the indoor record holder in 1925, jumped 6 feet 6 inches, within one-quarter inch of his record breaking performance in 1925.

Charley Farmer, North Carolina's representative in the sixty yard invitation sprint was unlucky enough to be placed in the qualifying heat with Niles Schoening, the winner this year, Leigh Miller of Canada, last year's winner in the Millrose dash, and Claude Bracey, Texas Flyer. Farmer failed to qualify for the finals in this event.

HEEL PRINTS

SUCCESSFUL WEEK FOR TAR HEEL TEAMS

The Tar Heel athletic teams had a successful week last week with the basketball and boxing teams turning in victories and the delegation to the Millrose Games making an impressive showing.

The basketball team seems to have found itself on foreign courts, having beaten V. P. I., V. M. I., and Virginia in a row. It looked for a time as though they would never get used to the opponents' courts. This, however, can be attributed to the fact that several of them have very small courts. Though they have a poor standing in the Big Five to date, they should elevate their position considerably in the remaining games with Duke, Davidson and Wake Forest. Continued success certainly would mean a high ranking position among the conference teams. They now have five wins and three losses.

During the remainder of their trip north, however, they will be handicapped playing without Sandy Dameron, who was forced to return home with a severe poison oak infection. "Utility" Edwards can be depended upon to handle the assignment well, however, if Smith, substitute center, does not come through.

The way that boxing team handled the strong Cavaliers was excellent. Those fights were some of the best that have ever been staged here. It is a shame, however, that Goldstein could not be in shape to meet Levinson. That would have been really a feature bout.

The relay team's taking second place in the Millrose Games was very good, for the Princeton Tigers, first place winners, are recognized one of the leading track teams in the country. Charlie Farmer's failure to place with the twelve leading dash men in the sixty yard dash was a disappointment to many here. But then Farmer's best race is the 220-yard dash, so it must be remembered that sixty yards is little more than starting room little more than starting room.

THREE VETERANS REJOIN RANKS OF BLUE GRAPPLERS

Tar Heel Matmen Launch Second Week of Light Workouts; Meet Wildcats February 21

The Blue and White wrestlers, who have no meet until the Davidson match February 21, began their second week of light workouts Monday. With the exception of a few men who are not in their best condition, little heavy work has been done since the V. P. I. meet.

During this idle period, three of Coach Quinlan's veterans have returned to form, and will be in the line up against the Wildcats. These men, Mayne Albright, Marion Cowper, and Captain Fred Stallings, have done brilliant work this season, and their presence against Davidson brightens the Tar Heel chances considerably.

Mayne Albright has completely recovered from a back injury suffered three weeks ago and which threatened to keep him out of the line up against the Gobblers. Mayne worked against the Techmen, but was still handicapped by his injury.

Marion Cowper was missing from the lineup in the last meet, but will be ready for the Wildcats. Cowper was out for some time with influenza, but has been working regularly for the past two weeks and is expected to be in good shape in a few more days.

Fred Stallings was put on the injured list for a few days with a bad arm following his scrap with Graves of V. P. I., but the injury turned out to be a minor one and has responded rapidly to treatment.

The return of Cowper, Stallings, and Albright leaves only Bill Liberstein, in the unlimited class on the injured list. Liberstein is out with a bad shoulder and will probably not see action for some time.

Harry Tsumas has just about clinched his place in the 155-pound class. The rest of the squad is in good shape and are preparing a real reception for the Wildcats.

BOND COMPLETES POETRY VOLUME

University Professor's Book to Be Published As Sixth of Harvard Press Series.

Dr. Richmond P. Bond, of the University English department, has recently finished writing a book, English Burlesque Poetry, 1700-1750, which will treat exhaustively with this type of poetry.

It is thought by many eminent scholars that this period of English literature is the most illustrious period of the burlesque poem. In his book Professor Bond will take up a critical study of the burlesque type of poetry, stressing its construction and theory.

Chapters of the work will be devoted to the various types of the burlesque poem, (mock-heroic, parody, travesty, Hudibrastic). In addition to the English poems the work will also deal with translations of the non-English poems of this period.

The relation of the burlesque poem to the period, eighteenth century, will be taken up in detail by the author. A substantial portion of the work will be given over to a chronological register of over two hundred burlesque poems, with complete information on each item.

The book is being published by the Harvard University Press and is the sixth in the series "Harvard Studies in English." The Harvard University Press will probably issue the 400 page work in the early fall.

DI AND PHI HAVE TWO BILLS EACH

At the regular meetings of the two literary societies tonight, two bills will be discussed by each group. At the Phi these two resolutions are on the calendar:

1. Resolved: That the Phi Assembly is of the opinion that the public highway bus service in North Carolina and commercial freight hauling by motor vehicles in the state should be thoroughly and impartially investigated, all the facts found to be submitted to each member of the 1933 General Assembly at least sixty days before that body convenes.

2. Resolved: That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring a full, impartial investigation and study by legally authorized body of the production, distribution and costs of electrical power in North Carolina.

The Di has two equally weighty matters to discuss:

1. Resolved: That the tax on foreign corporations should be increased to help the State's revenue for 1931.

2. Resolved: That the University should own and equip a modern laboratory school for the betterment of school conditions in the state.

Knight in Interior

Edgar W. Knight, of the Education school, who is now on leave in China, has left the Chinese coast and has started his tour of the interior.

Mrs. Knight with her children plan to spend the spring in Peiping.

Mail sent from Chapel Hill by air mail reaches her in about nineteen days if it catches a boat; otherwise it requires twenty-four days.

New O. D. K. Chapter To Tap Members

The newly organized Omicron Delta Kappa, national honorary fraternity, at Tulane University will tap its first set of members tomorrow for the first time in its existence. The Tulane chapter most recently organized is the chapter of the national order which was organized in 1914 at Washington and Lee University.

The Campus Calendar

Monogram Picture

The picture of the monogram club, for the Yackety Yack, will be taken Thursday morning at ten-thirty o'clock on the steps of Murphey hall.

King's Daughters' Meeting

The King's Daughters will meet this afternoon, February 10, at three-thirty o'clock at the home of Mrs. J. E. Lear, 2 Cobb Terrace.

Business Staff

A special meeting of the members of the business staff of the Daily Tar Heel has been called for tonight at seven-fifteen o'clock for the purpose of making drastic changes in the organization of the staff.

University Women

There will be a meeting of the American Association of University Women in the Episcopal parish house tonight at eight o'clock. Mrs. Paul Green will speak on folk superstitions in regard to household matters.

Chapel Notices

Tuesday: Dean D. D. Carroll will address the freshman chapel on the subject, "The School of Commerce and Preparation for Life." This same talk will be repeated before the sophomore chapel on Friday.

There will be no regular freshman chapel to-morrow. The following deans wish to see their freshmen at chapel period: Dean D. D. Carroll—commerce freshmen—103 Bingham; Dean McIntosh—education freshmen—201 Peabody.

Thursday: Dean I. H. Manning of the medical school will speak on "Opportunities in Medicine and the University Medical School."

Reporters Win Theatre Passes

Four free passes, given by E. C. Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre, were awarded the four reporters doing the best work so far this quarter. Beginning Monday the four reporters who do the best work during the week will be given free passes to the Carolina.

The reporters receiving the passes for the quarter's work are: Mary Buie, 387 inches; Jack Riley, 374 inches; T. H. Broughton, 371 inches; and Otto Steinreich, 364 inches. The number of inches credited is the number that each reporter has handed in for the quarter beginning January 5, when the first issue of the Tar Heel for the new year was published.

This policy of giving free passes to the best reporters was carried out last year and proved a success. The purpose in giving the tickets is to stimulate greater efforts and more work by the reporters.

The five outstanding reporters last quarter were: Otto Steinreich, 568 inches; Mary Buie, 431 inches; L. L. Pegram, 358 inches; Jack Riley, 340 inches; and Peter Henderson, 314 inches.

MAY INVITE ASSOCIATION TO MEET IN CHAPEL HILL

The professors who belong to the Association of American Colleges met in the parish house of the Episcopal church last night to discuss the possibilities of having the national meeting of this body to convene here in the spring. This association is composed of some of the most outstanding of the universities in the country.

The Carolina dramatic festival and state tournament will be presented March 26, 27, and 28, and not in February of those dates.

'T' DORM FENCERS MEET ZETA PSI'S

Veteran Fraternity Team Shows Good Form in Match Against Beta's.

The Zeta Psi fencing team will meet Everett this afternoon at five o'clock in the Tin Can in the second intramural fencing bout of the season. Last year Zeta Psi was runner-up in the fencing league, and will put a veteran team on the floor this afternoon.

The Zeta Psi team will be composed of Valk, Bill Cooper, and Bill Pratt, all veterans from last year. The Zeta Psi's lost an exhibition match to the Betas last Thursday, but showed good form and are expected to give the boys from Everett their hands full.

George Fieldman, a freshman, will lead the Everett team in its attempt to upset last year's runners-up. Fieldman, had previous training in New York before coming to Carolina and has shown excellent form in training this winter.

ed for the greater part on the flute with precise staccatto touch, the harp being brought into play with effect.

The concluding group was composed of four original numbers by the organist. Smith is a composer of ability. The first number, Introspection, depends almost entirely on chordal effects. There is a warmth and color of phrasing and a keen insight into tonal structure. The effect is chaotic, but perhaps intentionally so.

Retrospection has more melodic consistency. The theme is mature, but smacks of something strangely familiar. The background is the most interesting feature of Retrospection. The modulations are interesting; the harmonies progress through a series of conservatively conceived but never obvious passing tones.

Spring Morn seemed to your reviewer to be the best of the four compositions. Its freshness and exhileration are breath taking. The number abounds in atmosphere and progresses without effort. As the number draws to a close a very melancholy and thoughtful little passage is introduced as though the composer were suddenly reminded of something that happened long ago. The thought is quickly dispelled, however, and the florid spirit of the introductory movement concludes the number. To hear this selection for the first time is an experience worth remembering.

The Finale is perhaps too variated in mood, and lacks the concrete quality that its name would imply. It is brought to a close on the full organ, but this does not compensate for its lack of solidity.

A more enjoyable recital could hardly be imagined. The artist played with a superb depth of vision, with a clear concise touch and facile manipulation of the organ. A most gratifying sense of familiarity and understanding extended between the player and his listeners.

Concert February 18

The University symphony orchestra, under the direction of Professor T. Smith McCorkle, will give a concert Wednesday, February 18, instead of February 11, as previously announced. The program has not been decided as yet, but it will be announced soon.

Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, in a recent address before the legislature of that state recommended that a $4,940,000 budget be given to the University of Pennsylvania.

VIRGINIA BOXERS CAME, SAW, AND WERE CONQUERED

in the towel in the final stanza. Gentry, the man who defeated John Warren last year, just had too much experience for the Tar Heel . . . Incidently, that was the lone knock-out scored by Virginia in the thirteen bouts, the Tar Heels annexing five bouts by knock-outs . . . John Warren, heavy, supplied the thrills for the evening, taking a hard bout from Bryant, and providing the slim margin of victory . . . It was heart-breaking to watch the referee fumble the slips, clear his throat for a moment and announce, "Winner, North Carolina." . . . Mr. Brockman must have had an eye for the dramatic . . . and did you notice that big sigh of relief, intermingled with a few groans, that surged through the Tin Can at the announcement . . . After four ordinary bouts, the Tar Babies came through with three Kayos in a row, Vernon Guthrie Peyton Brown, and Lacey Pace doing the heavy hitting . . . Speaking of freshmen, the Tar Babies are scheduled to meet the Oak Ridge Cadets in the Tin Can, Wednesday night . . . This meet was scheduled earlier in the season, but it was called off at the request of the Academy officials because of exams. Last year the Cadets upset the Tar Babies 5-2, but the shoe is on the other foot this time . . . The biggest crowd of the season witnessed the bouts Saturday, about 3,500 persons jamming the Tin Can for the fights, and they certainly got their money's worth in action and thrills . . . Another Baltimore product was imported in the person of Referee Ed Brockman . . . The judges were more or less familiar faces, being Dr. J. A. Wood of Charlotte, and Captain R. O. Welch of Army . . . Mr. Brockman made a short talk to the fans between the varsity and freshman bouts, warning them, that as a sign of courtesy to the visitors, the spectators should not yell while the fight is going on . . . Billy Arthur did his customary good job at the mike, though at times he was too excited to talk straight. Well it happens in the best of families. "On to Duke" is now the watch-word along the Tar Heel front. The boxers meet the Blue Devils on February 17 . . . Incidently, the Duke team is not going so hot down south. They have met L. S. U. and Tulane, and have lost both, 4-3, and 5-2, respectively.

St. Olaf college, Northfield (Minn.) soared bird-like to a heighth of 167 feet, landed gracefully at bottom of jump wreathed in smiles. He had won the intercollegiate ski jump by twenty-three feet better than his nearest opponent, George E. DesRosiers, Norwich university, Northfield (Vt.).

Hard hit by Old Man Grades was Ohio State university athletic pride and joy of the middle-west when semester marks were issued recently. Football, swimming, wrestling, and track were a few of the sports which suffered as sixteen stellar athletes were declared ineligible.

Competent will be Nebraska university cheer leaders in the future. A school for yell leaders has been established in which prospective cheer leaders will be given instruction in voice, drama, and in handling crowds.

No waning attraction in the football world in the United State Military Academy's grid team. 437,500 fans saw the Grey battle through its schedule this year.

Girl Preferred

And then there's the second verse to "Mary Had a Little Lamb" but instead of losing the lamb, Mary has now lost her dress—a dancing dress at that.

The following notice was posted on the Minneapolis post office bulletin board two days ago.

LOST: Blue dancing dress between Folwell hall and Tenth avenue and Fifth street S. E. Very much in need of it. Please communicate. P. O. 4187.

That was bad enough, but when the next notice was read—

WANTED: Room-mate, Girl PREFERRED. P. O. 4464, the sleuth fell over in a dead faint.

And that post office box belongs to a man.

mittee responsible for the conduct of the houseparty. Enforcement of all rules and reports of violations of rules shall be made by this committee to the committee on houseparties.

3. Each fraternity before giving a houseparty must make written application to the chairman of the committee on houseparties not later than Monday preceding the commencement of the houseparty.

4. Each fraternity giving a houseparty must secure some lady in the University or in the town of Chapel Hill who shall act as hostess during the houseparty. Editor's note: This does not include fraternities that have house mothers.

5. Applications for permission shall contain the following information: name of fraternity, date of houseparty, name of local chaperone, name and address of visiting chaperones, hour of arrival of chaperones, and hours of arrival of first girls. These applications shall be signed by the fraternity committee responsible.

6. During the time of the houseparties all girls must return to the house within one hour after the dance, and all boys must leave the houses within the same period of time.

7. Suppers may be given in the fraternity houses following the dances provided such affairs shall be over within the hour. Applications for permission to give such suppers must be made in the same way as the applications for permission to give the houseparty.

8. On Monday following the houseparty the fraternity committee shall report to the chairman of the committee on houseparties as to conduct during the houseparty. The local chaperone may also report misconduct.

9. Penalties for violation of any of the above rules shall be imposed at the discretion of the committee.

10. Penalties for violations of any of the above rules by individuals shall be imposed by the committee on houseparties or by the executive committee of the German Club upon recommendation of the committee on houseparties. In the case of violations involving the obligations or responsibilities of the fraternity as a whole or the fraternity houseparty committee, the minimum penalty shall be the forfeiture of the privilege of giving houseparties for fifteen months thereafter.

The boxing team will spend all of this week getting ready for the two tough assignments next week. Duke will be met first, and then the strong Penn State outfit at State College, Pennsylvania. After the last dual meet they will have a week to get ready for the Charlottesville tournament.

The boxers will be favored by many for the conference title but there will be those who will contend that Virginia is the stronger, and that their loss Saturday night was due somewhat to the fact that it was their third engagement in eight days and that Goldstein was out.

The home sports program this week brings two basketball games which should be thrillers. The Tar Heels will be out for revenge over both Davidson and Duke.

Winter football games are getting better each time. Things are looking bright for next year if the new men on the squad continue to improve.

WRIGHT CHOSEN STUDENT UNDER HUNTINGTON FUND

Member of English Department To Work on Renaissance

Dr. Louis B. Wright, member of the University English department, has been chosen one of the visiting scholars who are to engage in research work at the Henry E. Huntington Library and Art Gallery.

The Huntington Library and Art Gallery was founded by the late Henry E. Huntington, one of the richest men in the world, at San Marino, California to furnish a place to store the innumerable volumes and paintings which he had purchased during his lifetime.

It is said of the late Mr. Huntington that no price was too great for him to pay for a book or painting which he really wanted very greatly. Probably the most famous of the paintings at the Library and Art Gallery is Gainsborough's "Blue Boy" for which Huntington paid $800,000.

There are many unique books in the library which are studied by visiting scholars, and if they are of sufficient value, copies are published so that other scholars who do not have access to the library may still get the benefits of the material contained there.

By a unique book is meant one of which there are no other copies in existence. Huntington collected many such works and in his will provided a fund which is to be used for the study of these books by eminent professors from the world's leading universities.

Each year four of five professors are invited to come to the Huntington Library and Art Gallery to study the books and manuscripts there. This year the University has been singularly honored by having one of its professors, Dr. Louis B. Wright, invited to engage in research there for a period of twelve months.

Dr. Wright is at present occupied in writing a work on the history of middle class culture in the Renaissance. During his stay at San Marino, he will study the manuscripts and books there which have a bearing on this subject.

Wright will be absent from the University on leave from about the middle of August 1931 until August 1932. The University authorities have not yet chosen anyone to take Mr. Wright's place.

Odum Preparing For Chicago World Fair

Dr. Howard W. Odum of the sociology department, who is on leave from the University for the winter and spring quarters, 1931, has returned to Chicago after a brief visit here. Dr. Odum is chief of the division of Social Sciences in the Chicago World's Fair, 1933, and is now making preparations for an exhibit to be displayed at that time.

Commerce Professors Guests at Duke Tonight

The economics and commerce professors of the University will go to Duke tonight to attend a dinner given by the commerce faculty of that institution. The State College commerce faculty is also attending the dinner.

Appropriations For Purdue Increased

Purdue has received from the Indiana General Assembly an increase of some hundred thousand dollars over the previous biennial allowance. Although this is only a small increase in proportion to the size of the allowance, nevertheless it does represent an increase, and, as the Purdue Exponent says, "what is more important still it represents an attitude on the part of the budget committee which recognizes the work of that institution."

The reasons given for that action, to again quote the Exponent, were as follows:

"Purdue University is far more than a mere institution of higher education. It is a far-reaching influence that penetrates into the largest industries of the nation and moulds scientific opinion in countless western homes. Its numerous experimental projects are usually considered authoritative when they are released for publication. It was undoubtedly a knowledge of the past work of the University (Purdue) which prompted the committee to increase the biennial allowance when other educational institutions received less than during former years."

CLUB WILL GIVE VALENTINE DANCE

The Chapel Hill Country Club is planning a St. Valentine's Day dance to be given Saturday evening February 14, in the club house. The house will be decorated by the committee on decorations which is headed by Otto Stuhlman. Stringfellow's orchestra will play for the dance.

Chairman of the committees who have charge of the dances and other activities and business of the club are: Entertainment, Mrs. J. F. Kenfield; decorations, Otto Stuhlman; house and grounds, H. R. Totten; membership, George McKie; golf, Dr. R. B. Lawson.

Other officers of the country club are E. L. Mackie, president; John N. Couch, vice-president; and H. C. Nolen, secretary.

STUDENTS READ ORIGINAL PLAYS

Five plays by students of Professor Koch's playwriting class were read Monday night in the Playmakers Theatre from which the spring production was to be decided. Members of the play committee were: Professor Van Hecke, Professor W. F. Prouty, Professor P. C. Farrar, Professor Cameron, Professor E. E. Ericson, and Rev. A. S. Lawrence. Although the committee conducted a lively discussion on the plays until after midnight, and then continued the discussion with Professor Koch, Samuel Selden, and Ralph Westerman until 2:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, a decision was not reached.

The following plays were read: Walnut Boards, a country comedy of eastern Carolina by William Long of Seaboard; Ever Snitch, a comedy of Carolina fisher folk by Irene Fussler of Chapel Hill; Lonely Hearts, a comedy of Alabama country folk by Phillip Milhous of Elk Mount, Alabama; A Very Pink Pale Angel, a fantastic comedy by Ellen Stewart of Camden, South Carolina; Glen Hurst, a tragedy of Maryland folk, by Thomas F. Long of Hagerstown, Maryland.

ALUMNI REVIEW COVER FEATURES STEENE ETCHING

Graham's Address Principal Article in Fifth Number of College Year.

The February number of The Alumni Review has just been released from the press and is being mailed to the alumni.

This month's cover design is a reproduction of the etching of the old Episcopal chapel by William Steene. The Episcopal chapel is one of the oldest and most picturesque church structures in the state. It has been closely associated with University life since it was completed in 1848. Mr. Steene, the etcher, is a famous Chapel Hill artist, and this is the second of six of his etchings of scenes from the University.

"President Frank Graham's protest against the proposed cut," is the lead article of the Review this month. In it are stressed the points that he emphasized in his speech before the appropriations committee in Raleigh.

The second article of note was "The Sun Glass," a review, by the Alumni Secretary, of the varied and widespread interests and activities of the alumni throughout this and surrounding states. "The Roanoke Alumni entertain" and "Two Alumni Meetings in Birmingham and Atlanta" were mentioned and the names of those alumni who were present were ennumerated. Then there were several news items of the doings of some of the graduates.

A review of the recent book, "A History of the Public Schools of North Carolina," by Marcus C. S. Noble, which was published by the University Press, occupied the third place in the magazine. Noble, who was a member of the class of 1881, has been a professor of Education here for thirty-two years.

There is also a report of the Loyalty Fund and the progress that it is making. Allen J. Barwick, of the class of 1900, is the new chairman of the fund, taking the place of Leslie Weil. Barwick has been practicing law in Raleigh for many years, and is well known in the state. Two thousand fifty-four alumni contributed over $40,000 during the year 1930.

An article discussing the fact that a majority of students are participating in winter sports contained the records of the three winter sports, boxing, wrestling, and basketball. A summary of the schedule and standing in the state race was given along with a short discussion of the pre-training being done in football, and a scattering of sport briefs finished the article.

Two pages were devoted to information about various alumni here and there around the world. The press comment on appropriations were discussed and various other problems in the state to do with the University were remarked on.

News items of the University and the department "Keeping Up with the Classes" completed the fifth issue of the Review for this college year.

Co-ed Tea

The Women's Association will have its weekly tea this afternoon in Spencer hall from four-fifteen until five-forty-five o'clock.

Y Cabinets Plan For Student Movement

The cabinets of the Y. M. C. A. met Monday night at seven-fifteen.

At the meeting of the freshman friendship council, the group decided to send flowers to Livingston Curtiss, a Carolina freshman who is ill in Watts Hospital, Durham. Further business of the council was to assist the other cabinets in the State Student Volunteer Movement of the Y, which is to meet here the latter part of February. The friendship council also wants to send a good delegation to the annual Blue Ridge Conference next summer. A committee composed of John Barrow, Carol Spencer, and John Acee volunteered to secure a good delegation to attend this conference.

Bim Ferguson, president of the sophomore cabinet, appointed a committee to approach all the women organizations, such as the Woman's Auxiliary, Missionary Society, and others, so as to find homes for the girl delegates attending the Y Volunteer movement.

The senior cabinet was busy with making plans for the meeting of an Episcopal delegation of young men who are to meet here February 15, 16, and 17. They are responsible for making engagements for four delegates to this meeting: Professor A. C. Zabrieskie, member of the Southern Field Council; Dick Beasley, a graduate of the University of Virginia; Charlie Fishburne, president of the student body of Virginia Seminary, and Llewellyn Heck, headmaster of a boys' school in the Philippines. It was arranged that these men would appear before the Y cabinets.

N. C. State Offers Many Scholarships

The dean of the graduate school of North Carolina State College has issued announcements of the fellowships offered by the State College graduate school of technology and available during the year 1931-32. These fellowships and scholarships are given in agriculture, education, engineering, science and business, and textiles. Applications should be filed with the graduate dean before March 15, 1931.

There are from eight to twelve teaching and research fellowships which carry with them free tuition and a stipend of $750. The holders of these will devote half time service to teaching or research. The other time must be used in pursuing graduate studies.

In addition to these, there are seven college fellowships available which carry free tuition and a $450 stipend. Each fellow may be asked to give a maximum of ten hours to service in the department in which he is majoring.

Seven college scholarships are also offered, the holder of each being expected to give a maximum of six hours service to his major department. These receive free tuition and $225.

Senior Smoker

Pat Patterson, president of the senior class, has called a class smoker tonight at nine o'clock in Swain hall. Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the English department, is scheduled to speak.

President Patterson stated that it was important that all seniors be there.

Work Resumed On Unfinished E. K. Graham Memorial Building

Hobgood Scheduled For Talk Over WPTF

Hamilton Hobgood, headwaiter at Swain hall will be the seventh speaker on the list of outstanding men in campus work to speak from WPTF, Raleigh. The program begins at five p. m. this afternoon and continues for fifteen minutes. Hobgood's topic will be, "The self-help work at the University." The purpose of these talks is to acquaint the people of the state with the various activites on the campus.

FRESHMEN HEAR COMMERCE DEAN

Carroll Gives Purpose and Methods of Commerce School.

Dean Dudley D. Carroll, head of the commerce school in an address to freshmen chapel yesterday stated that preparation for life consisted of two parts: first preparing oneself properly for making a successful living; second, learning how to enjoy the cultural side of life.

He said that success is judged too much by a man's income and that many American business men, although excellent executives, do not possess the faculty for relaxing and enjoying themselves. In fact, the ultimate aim of life is not primarily the accumulation of wealth but rather the development of the capacity to enjoy and appreciate the beauty and culture of the world. In the case of some business men concentration on business has become a veritable obsession.

Dean Carroll told of the founding of the commerce school by a former president of the University, Edward K. Graham, in 1918 when the need for a course of specific training in business methods was realized. At the present time entrance into the commerce school should occur only in prepartion for corporation law, government service, or work in the actual world of business. These are the three main phases of the school.

There are thirty-seven required courses in this school as compared to the thirty-six of the liberal arts school. These are thought necessary in the training of a competent business man. The two parts of the curriculum are the fundamental courses, that is the broad base of a liberal education, and the more specific and technical work.

Carroll said, "What is wrong in the United States now is the surplus of everything, wheat, automobiles, steel, as well as the workers themselves. We have overlooked the subtle distinctions and adjustments in our industrial system."

Carroll showed how the man in the next generation would be confronted with problems much more trying than those of the present day, "Therefore there is the need for more highly-specialized and trained men. The man with better trained mental equipment will naturally have the advantage over the man who has only a little experience. The school of experience is effective but not sufficient."

Y. P. S. L.

The Young People's Service League will give a party at eight-thirty tonight in the Episcopal parish house.

ANONYMOUS GIFT MAKES POSSIBLE STUDENT CENTER

Alumnus Makes Donation With Stipulation That His Name Is Not To Be Revealed.

USED FOR STORAGE ROOM

Gathering Place Will Be Completed by Commencement.

Work on the Graham Memorial building was resumed yesterday. One of the alumni of the University has offered to donate the necessary sum to complete the memorial, but he has done this with the stipulation that his name be in no way attached to the donation.

President Frank Graham when approached on the subject gave the following brief statement: "Through the anonymous gift of an alumnus, the work on the Graham Memorial building has been resumed. No news will be more welcome on this campus which has been in need of a student center building all these years. If this alumnus can be prevailed upon to consent, the complete story will be told later. The general alumni body put over $125,000 into the building. The additional gift will provide for the completion of the present building. Work was resumed Tuesday."

As early as 1919 the need for such a hall was so keenly felt to cause a drive for funds to erect it. The student-body and faculty were greatly in favor of the idea, and in a canvass of the campus, $14,500 from 415 men out of over 800 were pledged the first day. This represents an individual contribution of an average of $35 per man.

The purpose of the building was to provide a student activities center for the use of the student body and at the same time to do honor to the memory of Edward Kidder Graham, president of the University from 1914 through 1918. The idea now is to provide the students with a cheerful place to gather and talk among themselves. This plan is considered by many of the outstanding educationalists, here and abroad, to be the keynote of education. Harvard University, here in America, and Oxford and Cambridge, in England, are the exponents of this type of training.

The hall, which is of the late Georgian style of architecture, brick with limestone trimmings, is located on the old site of the University Inn, at the time the only hostelry in Chapel Hill. It faces west across the campus towards the Battle-Vance-Pettigrew dormitories, and is the building in the extreme northeast corner of the University grounds.

The main entrance from the campus is through a spacious portico, into a large social room on the first floor. There are also

Extension Division Enrollment Is 1380

At a meeting of extension class instructors Friday, the estimated number of students enrolled for the spring term in extension courses was reported as 1380.

In addition to instructors who are giving full time to extension teaching, ten members of the residence faculty are teaching extension classes at ten centers. There are 34 centers in the state.

Minnesota's Gag Law

Before the Supreme Court of the United States this month attorneys argued the constitutionality of Minnesota's gag law. The case arose when Governor Floyd S. Olson, then county attorney, suppressed the Saturday Press for violation of a statute which states that any person publishing "a malicious, scandalous and defamatory newspaper, magazine or other periodical is guilty of a nuisance and all persons guilty of such nuisances shall be enjoined." The violation of this act occurred when the paper charged combinations between authorities and criminals.

The case is an interesting one to the public and of especial significance to the newspaper world. Hope is given to those who defend the freedom of the press by Mr. Justice Brandeis who ignored many of the fringes of the case and went to its core. He said: "We do not know whether there allegations are true or false, but we do know that just such criminal combinations exist to the shame of some of our cities.

"What these men did seems like an effort to expose such a combination (between officials and criminals). Now, is that not a privileged communication, if there ever was one? How else can a community secure protection from that sort of thing if people are not allowed to engage in free discussion in such matters?

"Of course there was defamation. You cannot disclose evil without naming the doers of evil. It is difficult to see how one can have a free press and the protection it affords in the democratic community without the privilege this act seeks to limit."

This privilege of which Mr. Justice Brandeis speaks has enabled the newspapers to remain as the safeguard of democratic government. Exposures by newspapers have in many instances resulted in general clean ups. We may rock along content that governmental affairs are administered honestly only to awake someday to discover that graft and corruption exists. It is fear of this privilege that prevents more corruption in government. Gag this privilege and combinations between criminals and officials could continue unmolested indefinitely. Suppression is undemocratic and dangerous to democratic government.

A Chase Or A Slaughter

We often hear it said that the human intellect rules the world. Not a bit of it. The human intellect can know the world, weigh the world, analyze it and subdivide it; but rule it, never. It is the human will and the human will only that rules the world.

All around us, and constantly, we see people whose intellect is all that an intellect should be; whose education, so far as a store of knowledge is concerned, is almost encyclopedic; but who somehow never advance beyond the stage of living on the reputation of the reputation they might have made—but didn't.

It's the man who goes after things who gets them. Given an iron will on one side and a golden intellect on the other, and the contest isn't a contest at all. It's either a chase or a slaughter.

Nor is this true only of the more sordid side of life. In the spheres of scientific investigation and literary poduction it's not what we're capable of doing, but what we actually do that counts. Here intellect is the servant who does the work, but will is the master who drives him on.

And when we come to the question of the leadership of others, the difference is all the more apparent. Who ever heard of men following an intellect? It simply isn't done, never has been and never will be. In a world of moving matter the human intellect, undriven by the human will, is the only thing that stands still.

We may spend our lives pouring the water of knowledge into the placid lake of our intellect and we have only the still water of a placid lake. If we want to turn the wheels of the world, we must hurl that water through the channel of the will. —V. A. D.

Egg-Throwing Criminals

Out in Turlock, California, a group of Rotary and Exchange club members—fine, stalwart, hundred per cent Americans—are going to stage a novel contest this Friday. It seems that there is a large surplus of eggs out there, so these men are going to clad themselves in armor, form teams, and then hurl eggs at each other. The winning team will then challenge teams from nearby towns. In this way, they will reduce the surplus number of eggs, stabilize the poultry industry, and bring prosperity back to America. These contests, moreover, will be sponsored by that noble institution, the Chamber of Commerce.

While these men will be merrily engaging themselves in this sport, several million American mothers will be sitting forlornly over their hungry children, staring wide-eyed at their cherished faces, and wondering, hopelessly wondering, how they are going to be fed the following day. Millions of children will be crying for something to appease the strange, empty feeling in their little bodies, while their mothers will look on, helpless to aid them.

But the gay Rotarians will not be thinking of this. There are too many eggs in Turlock, California. Therefore, the supply must be reduced. Of course, they couldn't give them away to the poor; that is unethical from the business point of view. Why, that would be charity And charity is a dreadful thing—from the business point of view. No, the eggs must be destroyed. And they are going to have a good time doing that.

We spend a great deal of time and money catching and imprisoning petty thieves. If a man robs a person, society pounces upon him, and punishes him harshly. But these egg-throwers in Turlock will not be molested, although they are criminals of the highest rank; for there can be no greater crime than robbing the helpless poor by wantonly destroying food. On the other hand, the Turlock egg-throwers will be feted by the Chamber of Commerce, applauded by the Amalgamated Poultry Association, and honored by the Rotary Club. —P. L.

With Contemporaries

Gifts For The University

In his biennial report, President Lotus D. Coffman announces that the university has received over five million dollars in donations from about a thousand sources in the last ten years. Outstanding is the $2,244,892 gift from William Henry Eustis for the erection of a children's hospital, and the alumni, faculty and student contribution of $1,229,000 for the construction of the Stadium and Auditorium.

Minnesota's total endowment is now slightly under ten million dollars. When compared to Harvard's $108,000,000 fund our wealth does not assume very princely proportions. But when it is considered that only twenty-two of the world's colleges have sums of ten million dollars or over, Minnesota seems to have accumulated quite a sizeable fund after all.

It probably is too much to hope that sometime Minnesota will have the finest campus in the country. But the nearer the building program approaches completion, the nearer this university will approximate that Utopian state.

As the endowments increase, operations for the construction work are made more possible and in shorter time than that allotted by undersized appropriations. The five million dollars gathered in the last ten years should go far to extend the building program, and perhaps if that amount is received in the coming decade we can even start hoping for a new business building and a swimming pool. —Minnesota Daily.

The Right Sort of Coaxing and $100,000 Would Change Some Women's Minds

The modern feminist movement, which has caused so many women to desert the home, has begun to "impair the family as the basis of civilization." This is the belief of Mr. Albert E. Pillsbury, a New England attorney, who has recently bequeathed $25,000 to four eastern universities for the purpose of enticing women back to their hearth fires.

Yale, Harvard, Princeton and Columbia are the four schools selected by Mr. Pillsbury to make prodigals of the American women. At the same time he requested of the receivers that they employ the money toward "creating and developing public opinion and action on this subject." It has been suggested that rather than alter public opinion, it would be more practical to improve the home economics departments and attract the home-loving and maternal instincts of the women in a psychological manner.

Mr. Pillsbury has given these schools a nice sum of money; he has also given the man a nice task, a task that will soon outstride the sum. Princeton has already refused the bequest which proves that either Princeton opposes such a reaction or that she shuns a responsibility of the magnitude.—Daily Californian.

Frustrated!

Once in awhile, the modern youth who seeks an education in one of our western co-educational institutions has the mind of a student and goes to college with intentions to pursue knowledge. He is interested in books. He wants to learn about philosophy. He would be interested in knowing the psychological theories that govern man. Sociology and anthropology appeal to him.

We have the tale of the experiences of one of these youths to tell to you. He went to college with a definite plan: he would study eugenics so that he could get the story of the physical growth and development as the controlling factor in man; he would study sociology and anthropology so he might learn to what degree culture and civilization and the mores of his race had made him the man he is; then he would study psychology in order to learn how habit controlled him.

To this well-rounded study of the hereditary, environmental and habitual explanations of why man acts as he does, he would add the story of science, the thoughts of philosophy and the culture of the arts. And master of this background, he would go out in the world prepared to face it understandingly, appreciatively and conqueringly.

He went to his eugenics course. He learned that Mendel crossed white peas and yellow peas, tall peas and short peas, "round-round wrinkled-wrinkled" peas with "round-flat wrinkled-smooth" peas, so his professor said. And he also learned that one inherited six toes, feeble-mindedness, that curly hair was a dominant characteristic.

And then he went to his philosophy course and learned that Descartes believed that there was nothing but mind in the world, so that a red book on the professor's desk was only a figment of imagination and that the table on which he had put his coat was not there and he learned that men once believed the world was created out of a void when straight-falling matter for some unexplained reason fell crookedly enough to hit and start cosmos.

And in anthropology he learned that man as a type in the dim past is now called Cro-Magnon, and that archaeologists dig for stone tools in France.

In sociology he was told that criminals are not a type who have the same sized skull, and there are "cultural lags."

And for three weeks he studied the nervous system in psychology and then was told that synapses govern all of man's action and are the source of his ability to think.

He learned nothing of man's heredity or environment, or philosophy, or civilization that satisfied him. And he protested, only to be told that what he was getting was a foundation on which he would someday be able to build a structure.

And so he occupied his time in running for an office, in playing football, in conducting "hell-week" at his house, in taking girls to formals.

One day he graduated: Phi Beta Kappa, Fir Tree, Oval club, fraternity, honorary and professional societies—according to the student mind, with every attainable phase of college life gained. But somehow college had done nothing to give him the background of knowledge he sought as a freshman. And somehow he too had forgotten about it, and was satisfied with his place in a large law firm as under secretary who once daily filed pleas at the court house.

Oh yes, they are men and women with adult ideas and a superficial knowledge of literature, philosophy, political science, and sociology. But they talk in slang about poly sci l, Greek lit and whether ethics is easier than logic. Culture is a part of their everyday life and reverenced not at all. For they have the disrespect bred by familiarity.

And then—and then—they still practice rough weeks or hell weeks, and spend valuable morning hours counting all the windows on fraternity houses, or entering their houses not by the front door but by ladders to the second floor.

Indeed, indeed the collegiate atmosphere is a strange anamoly when thousands of students stand on the threshold of life and laugh at culture—Washington Daily.

Our Changing Education

Marked revision of curricula at Yale university last week accurately mirrors the changing trends in our collegiate educational systems. Conservative to the core, Yale has not gone as far as the Universities of Chicago or Washington, but has nevertheless tended toward a liberal interpretation of undergraduate educational procedure.

Of the greatest interest to the student is the almost complete abolition of "group" requirements similar to those now in effect here. Formerly, the Yale student might spend many hours—as does the present Penn State undergraduate—in working off required credits during the final two years. Under the new regulation, he need not take as many required courses and may complete them all by the end of the sophomore year

Another interesting revision was the abolition of mid-semester examinations. Instead, courses will occupy the entire year with a comprehensive final examination as the climax. Reading periods may be substituted at intervals for class attendance. In commenting upon the change, Dean Clarence W. Mendell declared that it would "operate "to place the responsibility and initiative for result more squarely on the student."—Penn State Collegian.

FOURTH WINTER FOOTBALL GAME SET FOR TODAY

Fans Wonder What Collins Will Offer at Kenan Stadium This Afternoon.

LINEMEN ARE IMPROVING

Barclay, Smith and McKinney, Reserve Tackles, Look Good; Backs Developing.

With every game producing new combinations and new possibilities, the winter football fans are wondering what Coach Collins is going to offer when Carolina's winter gridders stage their fourth practice game in Kenan Stadium here this afternoon at four o'clock.

The veteran backs were given the assignment of running against the veteran linemen in an interesting clash last Saturday. The backs got stopped consistently at the line, but Slusser and Chandler, monograms, and Snead and Anaucauskas, freshmen, took the breaks and passed their way to a 26-0 victory. Maybe Coach Collins will shift the order and see what the veteran backs can do behind the veteran line.

Slusser and Chandler have been among the most consistent ground-gainers to date, but several newcomers, inexperienced as they may be at blocking, have been showing their wares to good advantage in a ball carrying way.

Bill Croom and Kay Thompson, reserve half and full, have been running hard. Alex Weisker, green but speedy freshman, slated to perform again today, featured one game. Phipps, another freshman, has been showing an unusual coolness and headiness in passing. Alex Snead, another freshman, got off a good run or so last Saturday.

A number of good line prospects have also been developing, including Barclay, freshman guard; Smith and McKinney, reserve tackles; Hodges, varsity tackle who is taking on some polish; Brandt, freshman end; and a group of hefty freshmen tackles, including Strickland and Crane.

Several shifts have been tried and will be continued in an effort to develop material to fill gaps next fall. In this line, Davis, reserve end; and McIver, freshman guard; Mulligan, freshman tackle; and Harrington, freshman end, have all been shifted to center, in an effort to develop a reserve behind Red Gilbreath, who will likely inherit the varsity center post left vacant by Ned Lipscomb.

The three games played to date have shown anything but polished teams and precise and driving attacks, but they have been encouraging to Coach Collins in that the boys have been hitting hard and working with a will. Heavy work has caused the squad to drop from over a hundred to around 60, and it is out of the few veterans and the many "diamonds in the rough" of these 60 that Coach Collins hopes to build and polish a squad for next fall.

Postponed Fencing Bout To Be Today

The intramural fencing bout scheduled Monday between the teams of Aycock and Sigma Phi Sigma was postponed and the match will be run off at five o'clock this afternoon in the Tin Can.

A total of nine teams has entered the intramural league which is now beginning its schedule. Of these teams, Beta Theta Pi, defending intramural champions, and Zeta Psi looms favorites to cop the title. However, several other organizations have been showing a lot of promise.

Sandy Dameron Resting Better

DAMERON—CENTER.

Sandy Dameron, star basketball center, who is confined to the infirmary with a severe poison ivy infection, was resting much better yesterday. Authorities at the infirmary did not make a statement as to whether or not he will be able to play against Davidson tomorrow night, but judging from his present condition, it is not likely that he will be in shape.

TAR BABIES WILL MEET OAK RIDGE MITMEN TONIGHT

Undefeated Carolina Freshman Pugilists Boast Four Victories.

The Carolina freshman mitmen will engage the Oak Ridge Cadets tonight in the Tin Can at eight o'clock. The "Terrible Tar Babies" have one of the strongest mit teams in years and barring injuries should easily defeat Oak Ridge.

The frosh boast victories over V. M. I., Virginia, and V. P. I. The freshmen won over the Virginia freshmen last Saturday night by a score of 6-1. The only bout lost by the freshmen was the welterweight, which was won by Stewart of the Cavaliers over Allsbrook.

The only injury in the Tar Baby camp is Hudson, welter, who sustained a hand injury and was unable to compete against Virginia. Hudson's hand should be in shape by tonight and the Tar Babies will be able to muster full strength against the Cadets.

Moore is reputed to be the best of the Cadet mitmen and should give Brown a good fight in the light-heavy class. Brown has yet to suffer a defeat, while winning two bouts via the knockout route and getting a technical knockout over Spaulding of V. M. I. in the second match of the year.

Local Highs Divide Doubleheader Friday

The Chapel Hill High School basketeers split a double bill with Pittsboro and Greensboro last Friday night here at the high school Tin Can.

The boys from Pittsboro took the locals for a ride to the tune of 31-17, while the fairer sex upheld their side of the bargain by smothering the girls from the Gate City by the score of 22-7.

Tom Lawrence was outstanding for the Chapel Hill boys, while Ray Poe stood out for the Pittsboro squad. The game was very close at the half, and the Hillians played a superb floor game. The Chatham County boys settled down in the second half and put the game on ice.

L. Andrews and Nancy Durham played consistenetly throughout the game to garner the honors for the local girls' team.

TAR HEELS AND WILDCATS WILL CLASH THURSDAY

Game Will Have Bearing on State Title Race Due to Present Muddled Condition.

DUKE HERE SATURDAY

Carolina Quintet Will Be Seeking Revenge in Both Big Five Tilts.

The Big Five basketball race is slated to reach its climax this week, and the Carolina quint, meeting Davidson here Thursday night and Duke here Saturday night, is expected to figure prominently in the final disposition of the championship.

The Davidson game at 8:30 o'clock Thursday night, to be preceded by a Wildkitten-Tar Baby contest at 7 o'colck, will start the fireworks popping.

Davidson took a previous game from the Tar Heels at Charlotte by the very narrow margin of 18-17.

The Carolina-Duke game of Saturday night promises to be just as interesting. In a previous meeting Carolina appeared to be off form and Duke administered a 30-18 licking. That was a surprise to many fans who considered the two teams more evenly matched.

That loss likewise was on a foreign court. This time Carolina will have the Devils on the home floor. Both teams will have just returned from long trips.

The Big Five race is the more interesting because even at this late stage it is possible that any of four teams may win or tie for first place. If Davidson should take State's measure in Raleigh Friday night, for instance, the Red Terrors would wind up their season with three losses, and Carolina, fourth-placers now could tie for first place by winning the rest of its games. That is, if Davidson, who has five games yet to play, dropped one game besides the Tar Heel tilt.

High School Wrestling And Boxing Tournaments To Get Underway Here On Thursday

Fifty-Five Individuals Enter First Annual Meet—Raleigh High Favored Among Pugilists—Salisbury and Greensboro Have Most Likely Wrestlers.

The initial boxing and wrestling tournaments for North Carolina high schools will get under way at the University Thursday afternoon.

Greensboro, Durham, Gastonia, and Raleigh high schools have boxing teams entered. Greensboro, Durham, Bragtown and Salisbury will compete for the wrestling title.

First preliminaries will get under way at three o'clock Thursday. The second rounds will probably be run off Friday morning at ten o'clock, with the finals in both boxing and wrestling to come Friday night at eight.

The two tournaments will be run off simultaneously, and both will be held in the Tin Can, under the direction of the University's boxing and wrestling coaches, Crayton Rowe and Chuck Quinlan.

The total entries for the boxing tournament are twenty-seven, for the wrestling tournament twenty-eight. There will be matches in eight different classes in each tournament.

The Raleigh high school looks like the strongest contender for boxing honors. Four members of its squad, Jack Dunaway, 108; Frank Jolly, 125; Al Dunaway, 135; and Bill Dunaway, 145, have won all their bouts this season.

The high school wrestlers whose individual records have been most impressive include Hiram Bell, 135, Greensboro, and Carl Barnhardt, 155 pounds, Salisbury, both undefeated.

CAROLINA LOSES TO WASHINGTON AND LEE BY 39-31

Washington and Lee University's basketball team handed the Tar Heel quintet its first loss on the northern trip Monday night by a 39-31 score. The Generals were ahead of the Carolina five throughout the game.

Cox, star General forward, was largely responsible for the victory for W. and L., scoring twenty-three points in the game. Williams, stalwart center, scored twelve.

Carolina was greatly handicapped by the absence of Sandy Dameron, who has returned home on account of a severe poison ivy infection.

Pennsylvania Plans New Sports System

President Thomas S. Gates, of the University of Pennsylvania, has announced that a new sports system, similar in effect to that in effect at Penn State, will soon be installed at Pennsylvania. Athletics will be taken away from the student organizations and placed in the hands of the physical education department. Future coaches will be professors who will have no authority other than as ordinary professors and who will draw no greater salary.

The purpose of this new move is to remove athletics from the limelight and to make gate receipts a matter of secondary importance. In the new plan, intramural sports will be stressed.

The stock market, these indifferent days, seems to waver between boredom and beardom.—Virginian-Pilot.

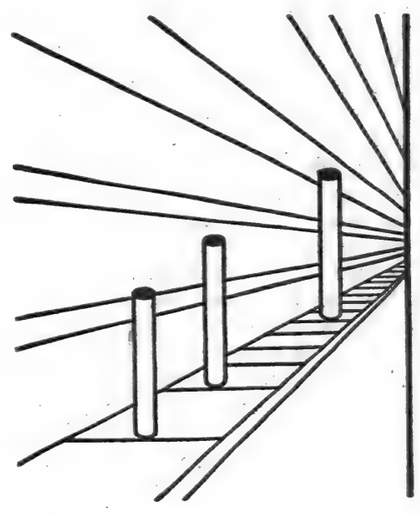
FRESHMEN WIN ALL GAMES ON NORTHERN TRIP

To Meet Both Davidson and Duke First Year Teams This Week.

115 POINTS ARE SCORED

Virgil Weathers Leads for Virginia Trip With Total of Thirty-Eight Points.

The Carolina freshmen, boasting a perfect record on their invasion of Virginia, returned home Sunday afternoon to prepare for two Big Five games during the week. Thursday night the Tar Babies will engage the Davidson Wildkittens in the Tin Can as a preliminary to the varsity encounter. Saturday night the Tar Babies will seek to avenge their 43-24 defeat at the hands of the Blue Imps in the Duke Gymnasium Saturday night a week ago.



The Blue Imps boast one of the strongest teams in the state although the West Raleigh quint defeated them in their first encounter by the narrow margin of one point. Roy Alpert, stellar center, has proved to be the individual star of the Imps thus far this season. Alpert was the big gun of the Blue Imp attack against North Carolina countering eleven points for individual honors.

The Tar Babies now have a record of four straight victories, boasting wins over State, Woodberry Forest, V. M. I. freshmen, and Augusta Military Academy in order.

On the Virginia trip the Tar Babies scored a grand total of 115 points in three games. The high spot of the trip was the 43-17 defeat of the V. M. I. freshmen last Friday night.

Virgil Weathers, stellar forward, continued to show the way to the frosh, scoring thirty-eight points, countering ten against Woodberry Forest, twenty against the V. M. I. freshmen,

Columbia Alumni Vote $50,000 To Support Athletics

Fund Set Up as a Guarantee That Profits Need Not Be Sought From Athletic Events.

The Columbia University alumni fund committee voted a $50,000 endowment to be given to the university for current expenses for the support of athletics, as a result of a recommendation of President Nichlas Murray Butler in his annual university report made public recently.

The action of the committee came after a speech made by Dr. Butler last week, in which he expanded his original suggestion and answered criticisms made against it.

While no definite use of the money has been outlined, Dr. Butler declared that it would remain as a guarantee that profits need not be sought by the committee in charge of athletics. The attitude of the committee will be that athletic events are for the students, and the general public, while not excluded, will not be given consideration.

This plan is along the same line as that adopted by the University of Pennsylvania recently. The plan adopted by Pennsylvania was designed to do away with the over-emphasis of football and make athletics a minor part of the undergraduate life. This plan calls for the following changes: members of the coaching staff to become members of the faculty, drawing the same pay as other members of the faculty; all athletic events in which a Pennsylvania team participates will be played at home; absolutely no subsidizing of athletes will be permitted; members of the various teams will be selected from among the ranks of intramural teams. This is designed to do away with the subsidizing of athletes and all other evils which were discovered by the Carnegie Foundation in its recent study of college athletics.

and eight against Augusta Military Academy. Fisher, Weathers' running mate, took second honors with twenty-four points, gathering eight, seven, and nine points against Woodberry Forest, V. M. I., and Augusta, respectively.

McCachren, star guard, continued to play a brilliant and spectacular defensive game for the Tar Babies. McCachren also found time to help out in the scoring with thirteen points.

The Tar Babies have a .500 standing in big five play and should they win over Duke and Davidson they would have a good claim to the Big Five title as they have split with State, won one from Wake Forest, and lost one to Duke.

The box score of the Virginia trip is as follows:

Levinson vs. Martin, Davis vs. Bolich, U. N. C. vs. Duke

The Carolina-Duke boxing meet is just a week off, being slated for Durham, February 17, and fans are anticipating two all-star bouts already. Captain Martin, 125 pounds, and Bolich, 160 pounds, of Duke, have been putting their opponents to sleep all season, and Carolina likewise has two stars in these weights. Martin Levinson, sophomore 125-pounder, and Obie Davis, 160-pounder, have won all their bouts, four apiece, and gotten two knockouts each.

SURVEY REVEALS CO-ED ATTITUDE ON SEX MATTERS

A survey recently conducted among the first-year women in Syracuse University revealed the fact that a large percentage of the girls think that they should know about sex. Sixty-two per cent of the females stated that their mothers agree with them in their attitude towards petting and necking.

Some of the other figures show that twenty-eight per cent admitted being in love many times, while only ten per cent stated that they had only been in love once. Thirty-one per cent claimed that they had not been in love at all.

One of the co-eds wrote: "A girl should know how to take care of herself under all conditions. She should know how to dress, how to smoke, how to drink a little, how to pet—so she won't be surprised into anything—how to keep her heart and not to fall easily, and how to get along with other girls. I believe that a girl who has not been on her own to some extent in her high school years should not be allowed to go away to college."

Columbia Professors Fail Student Tests

After twenty five college students had flunked a list of forty questions, prepared by an engineer and a lawyer, Thomas Beer, author of an article in Scribner's on the subject, took the occasion to comment on the ignorance of our modern young people.

Fifty-three faculty members of Columbia University were given the same quiz under the auspices of The Spectator, student paper of Columbia. Of this number only ten would consent to take the exam, while forty three refused outright to have anything to do with the questions. Only four of the ten were able to hand in complete answers, and the highest grade was only 55.1 per cent, made by Professor C. A. Manning, teacher of Russian literature. Two English professors followed Manning with grades of 54.3 and 54.2 per cent.

A number of Columbia students took the quiz along with the professors. Although the highest grade of the students was 46 per cent, several of their grades were higher than that of some of the faculty members.

The quiz also brought out the fact that the professors tend to bluff, just as their students do. When asked to name three compositions of Brahams, one answer was "The first, second, and third sonatas."

Some of the questions which were answered by none were: "Who were the Piccolimini?"; "Who was Tillman Riemenschneider?"; and "For what is Abu Simbel noted?".

The questionaire was a part of the Spectator's campaign against examinations.

CANADIAN PROFESSOR LAUDS WOMAN'S MIND

Dr. Irlma Kennedy, in an address before a scientific group at the University of British Columbia, made the startling statement that the professor must remember that the student's mind is often ten times better than his own.

Dr. Kennedy was of the opinion that women and men think differently. He said that a woman sometimes makes a remark which is quite original, but which is four or five realms ahead of the professor's limit of thought.

The speaker stated that technical learning is often detrimental to a woman's nature, because it adds a fourth side to her intellect, namely inquisitiveness.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Deke Star Pulls Roy Riegals

Bill Parson, Deke star, pulled a "Roy Riegals" yesterday afternoon in the Pi Kap-Deke tilt. Parson received the ball and in some manner became mixed up and shot the ball into the Pi Kap basket, giving the Pi Kap's a four-point lead. The game was close throughout the early stages and at the time of Parson's mix-up was 8-6. The Pi Kap's easily won the game in the final stages. The final score being 22-11 in the Pi Kap's favor. For the winners, Dixon was best with ten points while Bill Parson led the losers with four points, not counting his shot for the Pi Kap's. Hockaday played a good game for the Pi Kap's gathering six points for second place honors.

Ruffin Rallies To Win Seventh

Ruffin staged a rally in the last quarter to win over Lewis 23-18 yesterday afternoon. Going into the final stages of the game Lewis held a four point lead but Ruffin rallied to take a one point when Royster, elongated center, leaped high into the air to tap the ball through the basket. Royster and Smith were best for Ruffin with nine and eight points respectively. For the losers Francis, Crutchfield, Poole, and Westall each scored four points. Edgerton finished out the scoring with one action toss.

Umstead Ties Scoring Record

New Dorms easily defeated the law school yesterday afternoon by a score of 43-22. Umstead, of New Dorms, tied the individual scoring record of twenty-nine points set yesterday afternoon by Tom Peacock of the Phi Delt's. Sherrill played a good game for New Dorms gathering six points. For the losers Parker was best with nine points. New Dorms has yet to lose a game while the law school has yet to win a game.

Best House Wins 54-7

The Best House continued its string of victories by defeating Manly 54-7 yesterday afternoon. The Best House presented an evenly balanced team, the scoring being nearly evenly divided among three men. Crouch gathered seventeen points, three more than Dunlap, who in turn led French by three points. For the losers Ginsberg and Goldston were best with three points each. Sprinkle finished out the scoring with a free toss.

RALEIGH AND CHARLOTTE LEAD IN CLASS "A" HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL RACE

Charlotte and Raleigh Highs, who fought it out for the state football title last fall, are leading in the Class A Western and Eastern Basketball Conferences and may tangle up for another title soon. Charlotte has six wins and no losses, Raleigh has three wins and no losses, and each is the only undefeated team in its conference. Official standings to date, announced by E. R. Rankin, secretary of the state high school athletic association, were:

Western	W.	L.	Pct.
Charlotte	6	0	1.000
Gastonia	6	1	.856
Winston-Salem	3	3	.500
Salisbury	2	3	.400

TAR HEELS GET REVENGE CHANCE ON HOME COURT

Carolina's quint, losers at Davidson and at Duke, get a chance for revenge when Davidson comes to Chapel Hill Thursday night and Duke to Chapel Hill Saturday night, for the Tar Heels have the advantage of the home court. And if the Tar Heels can continue the fast pace set on their successful Northern invasion, just ended, the Big Five race may be expected to be more tangled than ever.

Work Resumed On Unfinished Graham Memorial Building

stairways leading from this hall up to the second floor, and down to the basement.

At present only the main room downstairs has been finished. No functions have been held in the hall and it has been used as a general storeroom for old Playmaker scenery, old theatre seats, blackboards, and other miscellaneous articles.

Workmen were busy yesterday hauling this collection of odds and ends away in preparation of beginning work in earnest. This work is expected to be completed before next week, but due to the necessity of erecting a tower to lift supplies to the roof and second floor of the building, the delay in getting the required materials together, the actual work will begin about the twenty-third of this month. The building will be completed by commencement.

CONTRACTS MADE FOR ERECTION OF MEMORIAL TOWER

Construction of Morehead-Patterson Tower Scheduled to Begin Friday Morning.

Contracts were awarded last week to the firm of T. C. Thompson Brothers to erect the Morehead-Patterson Memorial bell tower on the grounds of the University. The work is scheduled to begin on Friday morning, with a possibility of its being delayed until Monday.

The location of this building is on the center line of the campus, 100 feet south of the Raleigh road facing the library.

The tower, built of brick of the same quality as other University buildings, will have a height of 167 feet, and, above the ground floor, dimensions of 18 feet square. The building is to have limestone trimmings in accordance with the limestone arcade which will surround the base.

Above the eighth level, in the tower proper will be a set of twelve chimes, made by the manufacturers of the West Point chimes. These chimes will be rung by hand from the second level. Provisions have been made so that the electrical apparatus for ringing them may be installed later if wanted.

Below the chimes is to be a clock of very fine workmanship, with faces on four sides, each of the faces having a diameter of nine feet. These will be illuminated at night. The tower will be surmounted by a beacon light.

The interior of the tower on the ground floor will be plastered, but above this the finish will be rough brick. Overhead the interior of the arcade will have a finish of Guastavino tile vaulting.

A memorial tablet of polished Levanto marble with cast bronze lettering will be placed inside the arcade in memory of the Patterson and Morehead families whose descendants, John Motley Morehead and Rufus Patterson, are donors of this gift.

The plans of this tower were made in New York by McKim, Mead, and White in collaboration with Atwood and Weeks, University architects, who are handling the local part of the work. Mr. Kendall, head of the New York firm, is visiting Chapel Hill today to look over the site of the building.

The local contractors are scheduled to finish their part of the work on September 1, 1931. Immediately following this the chimes will be installed.

Publication Dates Arranged By Board

In a special called meeting yesterday morning, the members of the Publications Union Board formulated a schedule for the subsequent issues of the Carolina Magazine, literary supplement to the Daily Tar Heel. It was decided that under no conditions should the magazine be allowed to publish more than eight pages. The dates on which the remainder of the numbers for the year are to be printed are: February 22; March 8; April 5 and 19; and May 3 and 17.

The board also voted to secure two new typewriters for the office of the Daily Tar Heel.

HOUSE TO MAKE THREE SPEECHES DURING WEEK

Robert B. House, executive secretary of the University, plans to make three speeches in various cities in the state during the next week. On Tuesday, the seventeenth, he will speak before the Parent-Teachers Association in Greensboro.

Thursday, the nineteenth, he will address the Kiwanis club of Durham at a meeting in celebration of the birthday of George Washington, and he will have a theme for discussion appropriate to that occasion.

The day following this, Friday, he will speak before the Colonial Dames in Kinston. He has not yet decided on his subject for this address in Kinston.

ENGINEERS PLAN FOR ANNUAL BALL

Leftwitch's Orchestra to Play For Dance, February 20, In Bynum.

Tuesday night at the meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers the plans for the dance to be given by the engineering societies were discussed. The date has been officially set for Friday, February 20, from nine o'clock to one. The ball will be given in Bynum gymnasium with music by Jelly Leftwitch's orchestra.

The invitations have already been printed and are now in the hands of the committee in charge of the invitations. Engineers may obtain their invitations from the senior room of their respective branch of engineering. The president of each of the societies will be allotted a certain number of invitations to be given to the engineers calling for them.

This will be the fifth of the annual balls given by the engineering school. As the dance is practically the only social activity of the engineers, they are planning to make it an imposing affair this year. Last year, it was held in the Carolina Inn. This year, however, the scene of the dance will be the gymnasium. Novel decorations have been planned, and the engineers expect to give the best dance that has been given by them since their dance was made an annual affair.

There will be a meeting of all engineers at chapel period, Friday, February 13, in room 206 Phillips hall.

Paul Graham Will Play for Dances Beginning Friday

The mid-winter dances given under the auspices of the University German Club will begin with dances tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock in Bynum gymnasium and will end with the regular German Club figure St. Valentine's night. Paul Graham's orchestra will play for all the dances.

Bill Bridgers will lead the junior figure Friday night, assisted by Walter Crouch and Steve Lynch. This will be followed by dances Saturday morning and afternoon. William Dunn will lead the concluding dance Saturday night, and will be assisted by Lynn Wilder and George Bagby.

SELF-HELP WORK DISCUSSED OVER RALEIGH STATION

Hamilton Hobgood Outlines Possibilities of Earning Way Through the University.

Hamilton Hobgood, who has attained the highest student position on the Swain hall staff and who is also outstanding in other campus activities, made the seventh of the series of speeches by Carolina campus notables yesterday afternoon. These programs are broadcast every Wednesday from WPTF, Raleigh's radio station, from five to five-fifteen, and are fostered by the student union of the University. The purpose of all of the talks are to acquaint the people of the state with the activities here.

Hobgood spoke yesterday on "The Self-help Situation at Carolina." The object of this speech was to inform the high school students in the state of the possibilities of earning their way through college, and to advise them to save as much as they could now towards their education.

The development of self-help at Carolina was traced from its very beginnings.

During the war when money was scarce and students were forced to leave the University on this account, the government was prevailed upon to pay students to drill here at the University in the afternoons after classes. The drill was usually referred to as "the afternoon pink tea party." This enabled needy students to make sufficient money to remain in school," Hamilton explained in his talk.

"After the war, money was more plentiful, and the majority of the students no longer had to do chores in order to help their families pay their schooling expenses. Outsiders were then employed in the capacities that the boys had previously filled. Once again, however, the necessity for self-help work is making itself evident, and at present seventy per cent of the student body are self-help workers. This large percentage accounts for the nationally recognized democratic spirit that prevails at Carolina."

Hobgood then listed several of the many ways in which the

COFFMAN TELLS OF UNIVERSITY'S WIDE REPUTATION

Promises Utmost Endeavor on Part of English Department To Render Service.

In his talk last night before the members of the senior class at their smoker in Swain hall, Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the University English department, stated that his department would extend itself to the utmost in attempting to make the courses of the greatest value and interest to the students despite the great loss which that department of the University has sustained.

The head of the English department told the seniors that the University rated very highly among educational institutions. Dr. Coffman has taught from coast to coast in the North and he says that in all parts of the country leading educators agree that the University of North Carolina is probably the greatest university below Washington, D. C. To quote Coffman, "The University occupies that position among state universities in the United States that Harvard does among the private universities of the country."

Dr. Coffman further went on to say that the University is fortunate in being the oldest of the state universities and therefore rich in tradition. Many of the state universities are comparatively new and are forced to make their own precedents and traditions.

The head of the English department expressed the wish that he could have more creative writing classes formed, and have both these classes and the professors teaching them cooperate with the campus publications.

In speaking to the seniors Dr. Coffman told them that he would like to raise the standard of the undergraduate composition courses to the enviable position which they held when they were taught by E. K. Graham, once president of the University. In his day Graham was one of the most famous teachers of undergraduate English composition in the country. During his professorship, the courses in English composition were the most popular on the campus.

The changing attitude of the alumni of state universities also

Oklahoma Playwright Emphasizes Distinction Of Barrett H. Clark

Lynn Riggs, an Oklahoma playwright who read one of his plays here a short while ago, said of Barrett H. Clark, a theatre critic, at the Carolina Inn, February 9:

"Barrett Clark, who comes to Chapel Hill for a lecture at the Playmakers Theatre Thursday night, on the subject "Broadway Today," occupies a very unique position in the American theatre.

"His connections with the theatre—and they are powerful and authoritative—are not his real distinction. He has livelier merits. He is a responsive critic and an open-minded man. But at the same time he is fearlessly iconoclastic, shieing brick after brick at the popular parade and the frenzied huzzaing which break out on Broadway for every slick play and every glittering performance. Cheapness and insecurity he has nothing but contempt for. But he goes out of his way to befriend and to beat drums for whatever seems to him in the theatre to be genuinely a respectable talent, especially a beginning one.

"As head of the play department of the Theatre Guild, as literary advisor to Samuel French, as critic for the Drama Magazine; as translator of foreign plays, as lecturer at Columbia University and elsewhere, as biographer, as comentator, as enthusiast—he spends himself with more force and result than nearly anybody else for the thing in which he believes.

"His friends can never figure out how it is that he seems to be in all places at once. He is a dramatic phenomenon, with grace and taste; he is a gentleman in boxing gloves. American drama couldn't get along without him."

LEAR TO CONDUCT CLASS FOR INSURANCE WORKERS

In cooperation with the Greensboro Life Underwriters Association, Professor J. M. Lear, of the school of commerce faculty, will teach an extension class in Greensboro beginning Friday evening. Twenty men representing several life insurance companies in Greensboro have enrolled for the course, which is one treating the subject of "Life Insurance."

Upon the satisfactory completion of this course, the extension division will offer other courses for men and women in the life insurance business, for the purpose of preparing them for the certified life underwriters' examination.

HOUSE DISCUSSES BUDGET HISTORY

Shows Inconsistency of Decrease In Appropriations When Increase is Needed.

Robert B. House, executive secretary of the University, spoke Tuesday night before the local branch of the Kiwanis club. In his address he restated most of the points made by President Graham in regard to the proposed appropriation cut and emphasized them.

An altogether new and unthought of reason for the continuation of the present budget was advanced, House compared the ten year period of growth that the University experienced from 1850 to 1860 to the more recent ten year period of expansion from 1920 to 1930.

"In 1850 the University of North Carolina commenced a period of expansion that was stopped by the Civil War," said Mr. House. "This growth was due to the increase in funds which was caused by the gift of many of the old alumni of lands in Tennessee that they had received for their services in the Revolutionary War. This land, when it was given to the University, was sold and the money used to improve the equipment and faculty here. The last year of this growth, 1860, the University was second only to Yale in the number of students in the graduating class, which numbered about a hundred.

"The Civil War brought on its depression and the doors of the institution finally had to be closed because of the lack of

FREE TRADE NEXT DEBATE SUBJECT

The varsity debate squad will hold its regular session in Murphey 201 tonight at seven-thirty. The meeting will be a general discussion of the "Free Trade" question.

In its regular meetings for the past weeks the squad has been discussing the question of compulsory unemployment insurance. The idea of these discussions is to arrive at the really basic considerations and issues involved in the questions and to keep discussion in the public contests from revolving about details. In the weekly meetings which last about an hour and a half, the debaters not only learn all possible slants on the question, but also get practice in presenting their opinions and information from the rostrum.

The debate schedule for the next two quarters includes meets here with teams from as far away as Porto Rico, and at least nine contests away from here.

NON-FRAT PARTY UNDER FIRE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Di Defeats One Bill and Hears Woodhouse as Critic.

In fiery tones Representative Lanier called upon the Phi Assembly in its meeting Tuesday night to forbid the use of the assembly hall to any political unit whatsoever which had not obtained permission from the president of the group with the knowledge and assent of the assembly.

Lanier, a non-fraternity man, said that he had information from perfectly reliable sources that an organization calling itself a "Non-fraternity" party had made use of the hall, and asked permission of the assembly to present an amendment to the constitution by which the assembly would be protected from appearing to give support to organizations with which it was not in sympathy. The proposal received the unanimous support of the members.

Lanier further reviewed the issue on which the party under fire hopes to gain the support of the student-body severely indicting the group for its unthoughtful attempt to create civil-war and unfriendly relations on the campus.

Two bills were passed by members after limited discussion. The first reading, Resolved: That there should be a thorough and impartial investigation of the production, distribution and costs of electrical power in North Carolina. The second proposition presented for debate recommended that there be an investigation of public highway bus service and freight hauling in North Carolina.

Di Defeats One Bill

At the last meeting of the Di Senate the following bill was brought up and defeated by a vote of twenty-one to fourteen: Resolved: That the tax on securities in foreign corporations should be increased to help meet the state's revenue requirement for 1931. Senator Whitaker favored the bill, while Senators Ramsay and Brown opposed it.

Following the report from a special committee, it was voted to accept the committee's recommendation as to the purchase of a society pin. The new one will largely resemble the one formerly used. Some discussion was had regarding changing the name of the organization from Senate to Society, but no action was taken.

Following the regular discussion, Professor E. J. Woodhouse, of the Government department, made a few informal criticisms and suggestions.

Taylor Society To Hear Schwenning

The Taylor Society will meet Friday night at seven o'clock in room 103 Bingham hall.

After the business is finished Dr. Schwenning will make an address on "Dismissal Wages." He has devoted six months to collecting data on some forty industries of the United States and in countries of Europe. With the information he has thus gained he will discuss the problems of industry in the present day.

The society has arranged to have Morris L. Cook, prominent consulting management engineer of Philadelphia, speak at a meeting February 25.

No Need To Revive Dead Issues

Circulars reading as follows appeared on the campus night before last: Non-Fraternity Men, Attention. Are You Tired of Minority Rule? (Fraternity 31 percent—Non-Fraternity 69 per cent) Do you want to see your group in power? United effort will turn the trick. Join the Complete Non-Fraternity Political Organization."

Without taking issue with those responsible for the circulars we think the publication of such material ill advised. It is designed to revive prejudices which have not existed here for more than ten years and which are as dead as those which existed once against public education. The history of campus politics at the University will reveal many interesting facts, but standing out strongly in that history will be the untiring and unwavering efforts of those men who were primarily University men to bring about better feeling between the two groups here. We have no need to erect again that barrier which split the University into two bitter, warring camps.

It was to break down this barrier that the Grail came into being. And for twenty years now the University has witnessed disintegration of that feeling. During the past ten years no signs of it have appeared either in the social or political relationship between students. We no longer are classed as either fraternity or non fraternity men, but all are grouped as University men.

We find it regrettable that such an issue has been infused into the political situation. We believe that those who sincerely wish well for the University will do all within their power to prevent a return to the former bitterness which divided the University's students into two separate and distinct groups.

If one's fraternal affiliation is to be made an issue here this year the work of the Grail will go for naught and the efforts of those who have striven through years first as students and later as members of the University's administration will have been wasted. Fraternities are no longer an issue. Bitterness has no place in the life of the University now.

Always The West

The Senate and the House have agreed on a $20,000,000 fund for drought relief in the West. Furthermore Senator Robinson has received assurance that loans will be made to the farmers "for any use they may require including the purchase of food." There can be no denial of the fact that conditions are extremely bad in the drought stricken area and far be it from us to begrudge the western farmers any aid they receive from the government. However we can not refrain from the thought that the West comes in for a lot of attention. Whenever there is a bill before Congress for farm relief it is always a proposal primarily for the benefit of the western farmer.

In recent years there have been both flood and drought relief measures for the West, but we don't recall any relief for the farmers of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, etc. It is always the wheat farmers that get all the attention. The government must be aware of the fact that we farm a little in this section and that conditions are not always so rosy in the farming sections of the South. In fact in spite of the numerous periods of hard times for the farmers in the South since the Civil War, we don't recall any federal relief. We aren't kicking, but it kind of gets on your nerves to see relief going in all directions but your own, especially when you aren't getting along so well yourself.—J. C. S.

Back To Intellectual Oblivion

The papers now inform us that the legislature of South Carolina, being bitten by the economy bug along with numerous sister states, plans callously and heedlessly to take it out on education, that particular phase of civilization which seems to suffer first every time a financial cut for a state as a whole looms over the horizon. But the cause of education in the state, owing to the brilliant brains of certain ingenious solons at Columbia, is now to receive the most unkindest cut of all, economically speaking, presumably so more material and important worries, in the nature of roads and the like, can have their appropriations unimpaired.

The plan is simply to establish a three year curriculum for all state schools: the state university, the Citadel, Clemson, and Winthrop. There will be no freshmen; as soon as a man arrives on the campus he is officially designated a sophomore, and can look forward to graduation in three years instead of dreading a four year grind. Very simple—and delightful for all those undergraduates who are in college for an A. B. instead of an education. The only trouble is that such a step is distinctly a retrogressive one, and if carried through will do more harm to the cause of intellectuality in South Carolina than all the good that will come from a few more miles of paved roads or some similar depository of the peoples' money. Any speculation of course is purely individual reflection, but it is not unsound to suppose that the good state of South Carolina will follow in the path of Mississippi in having her state institutions of higher education dropped from the roster of the American Association of American Colleges and Universities.

If this idea is carried through the South as a section will suffer, and suffer to a noticeable extent. The region has been long in building up to its present level of scholastic achievement, and whatever recognition of this sort it can lay claim to is now, during this period of economic depression, definitely at stake. Apparently the first thing state legislatures can think of doing when appropriations must be lessened is to cut the amount of money going each year to the cause of education. South Carolina is not the only offender; this state seems headed for somethming of the same nature in the threatened cut of twenty per cent in the salaries of faculty members, a movement which will react to the decline of state education with the probable withdrawal of numbers of faculty members, to a much greater extent than the wholesale exodus of last year.

Unless the southern states come to their senses with the realization of their folly in the reduction of appropriations for education, then the South appears doomed to intellectual and scholastic stagnation followed closely by decline. Little good does it do a state to have good roads and a satisfactory budget if it can point to a state university that once had a splendid reputation.—R. H.

With Contemporaries

President Gates Is Stepping on Thin Ice in His Campaign Against "Over-Emphasis"

The University of Pennsylvania, having gone through a few disastrous athletic seasons, and being at present without a football coach, has seized the opportunity to take athletics away from the student organization and placed them in the hands of the Physical Education department. Future coaches are to be professors, having no authority other than that of the average academician and drawing no greater salary.

This reorganization, as planned by President Gates, is aimed to remove athletics from the limelight and make gate receipts of secondary importance. President Gates seems to feel that gate receipts are a source of great evil, that football is taking the interests of students away from the classroom, and that taking athletics away from the students and placing them in the hands of a physical education department will destroy over-emphasis and make athletic training available to everyone.

By taking gate receipts away from the student organization, President Gates, whether knowingly or not, is in the opinion of many, committing an academic crime, for in endeavoring to reform the athletic part of student functions, he has precipitated the destruction of student activities.

Without gate receipts there can be no student buildings or athletic developments. Publications will be left without subsidy, and the scores of minor activities and sports, which are contributing to the welfare and health of the great mass of students, will be thrown so in the discard through lack of funds, that their abolition will be a certainty. If universities and students are being subjected to evils through participation in athletics, only then can gate receipts be branded as a "source of evil."

Furthermore, by destroying these activities, President Gates thwarts his major aim. Students, separated from other interests, will turn their attention to the only thing that is left to them, athletics. We fail to see how President Gates can in this way rid universities of sporting over-emphasis.

If it is true that football is taking interest away from the classroom, can that be blamed entirely on football? If indications at California can be applied to Pennsylvania, we doubt the veracity of that assumption. In all activities, a certain scholastic average must be maintained, campus organizations require scholastic endeavor, and attendance at the library is far greater over the period of a year than is attendance at rooting sections.

This may not be true at Pennsylvania, but it seems that steps to create such a spirit would be far more enduring and constructive than the removal of gate receipts.

Professors may lament the fact that students are more interested in sport than study, but it seems to us that if such a condition exists, it is a fair warning to universities to do a little thoughtful introspection. Athletics are enlivening, fresh and wholesome. They instill in the students the desire for healthy exercise of the body. Let professors instill in their students the same keen and wholesome desire to exercise the mind, and then and only then will academic pursuits receive that emphasis they begrudge athletics.

Universities have planted the seeds of education. If they fail to sprout, let their first attention be to the proper cultivation of the soil that nurtures them. Then will be the proper time to dispose of the weeds.—Daily Californian.

Going The Same Way

A pronounced feeling of satisfaction was felt here when President Thomas S. Gates of the University of Pennsylvania announced that a new sports system—very similar to that in effect at Penn State—will soon be installed at Penn. While column after column in the Philadelphia press, extolled Penn for "a move unique in collegiate athletic history" College alumni and students forcibly realized for the first time that Penn State was truly the trail blazer when its athletic code was revised last spring.

The most rapid survey of Penn's new plan reveals that Penn State has already put many of these principles into practice. Both systems call for a department or school of physical education. Both make the coach a member of the faculty. Both emphasize the importance of intramural sports. Other striking similarities are equally evident. While a large portion of the credit for this advance in college athletics will go to Penn because of its prestige and location, Penn State can feel that its efforts have not been wasted.

Together these two Pennsylvania institutions have set a pace far in advance of other Eastern colleges in the progress toward the inevitable new athletic era.—Penn State Collegian.

Sport For Itself

The University of Pennsylvania Tuesday jumped right into the "over-emphasis" of sports pond head first and came up holding to the slippery fin of a drastically reorganized athletic program.

Control and management of athletics are now completely and thoroughly in the hands of Thomas S. Gates, president of the university, and his board of trustees.

"Professionalization" in the form of training tables, football camps, dorms for sportsters, and so-called athletic "scholarships" went into the wastebasket along with professional coaches. The coaches got jobs on the faculty—at faculty wages. The whole athletic program went under the control of the P. E. department, with a dean in charge.

Intramural athletics will be stressed, according to the president, who plans to develop "star" athletes through that source as well as institute a "revival of the old loyalty and interest of the student body."

Somehow the plan harkens back to the days of 1889 at Washington when a band of students decided that they wanted to play football. They raised some money and sent to Philadelphia for a football and a copy of the intercollegiate rules. That was before the days of gate receipts, professional coaches and live public interest in the sport. That was before the great mass of young men and women flocked to university campi. That was in the days when anyone and everyone could and did turn out for varsity teams—band together to form teams—play for the sake of playing.

And right at that point is where scores of associated student officials all over the country are pointing their fingers and shouting, "See, that weakness will kill it. See, see, seeee."

But despite the howls of "If you don't win games, you don't have gate receipts, and without gate receipts you don't have money, and without money you can't foster an athletic program," the University of Pennsylvania is going right ahead.

Educators all over the country are watching with interest the experiment at Pennsylvania. If it succeeds, it may mean and possibly will mean a complete revision of athletic policy at most institutions—Washington Daily.

Athletics At Iowa

By E. H. LAUER
(Iowa University Director of Athletics)

Perhaps no phase of university organization is held to be so full of "problems" as athletics. A scrutiny of all of these knotty questions known shows that they are all variations of the one fundamental issue, which is: How shall physical education and athletics, as at present organized, be carried on, so as to make such activities a constructive, contributing factor in the general education of college men and women?

There are three basic reasons for the inclusion of physical education and athletics in the college program:

1. These activities contribute to the health of the students participating.

2. These activities afford recreation facilities and opportunities.

3. These activities have a social significance in that they afford opportunity for competitive sport.

Intercollegiate sport is justified mainly on the third of these basic reasons, and unless the whole program is kept in mind, it threatens to interfere with the other two. The only safeguard can be in such administration of athletics as will continually keep in mind the interrelation of the three factors mentioned, and which will dare to make decisions in the light of the whole program and not in favor of one isolated unit in it.

At Iowa we have been fortunate in that external relations have forced us into an inventory of a situation perhaps sooner than would have been the case if no such difficulties had developed. Iowa has not solved problems by any means, but is facing them. The way out seems to be along the following lines:

1. A firm insistence on scholastic standing as the most important of elegibility requirements.

2. A development of intramural programs with a probability that intercollegiate competition will be gradually diminished.

3. A main emphasis on the training of teachers of physical education for school, community, etc.

4. A gradual movement towards having students more nearly control their own athletics.

5. A recognition that football is a "public relation" activity, and as such not so susceptible of control as other sports. Universities have allowed football to become what it is and now must face the music.—Daily Iowan.

A Pleasant Blow

To those old grads who make well-wishing criticism of the present an occasion for glorification of turtleneck days, and to all friendly critics of Princeton athletics, the events of one glorious day, last Saturday, must come as a pleasant blow. In hockey, basketball, wrestling, swimming, fencing, gymnastics, polo, and track,—in 12 out of 14 encounters,—Yale, Williams, Brown, Army, and N. Y. U. bowed. One of the two defeats,—when the 1934 swimming team, going in against odds and deprived of four of its best performers, lost to the Columbia freshmen by a close score,—may be fondly considered rather spice, than imperfection, in the pie.

Princeton, as a leading university, has clearly a duty: to show that a high scholastic standing is consistent with athletic reputation, that impartiality in awarding scholarships does not prejudice athletic success. The victories of Saturday both help to wipe the slate of the past, and hold a promise for the future. That this promise may not prove an empty one rests to a great extent on the support which the undergraduate body gives to its teams. And that the University may continue to vindicate, and extend its policy of "unemphasized" sport, rests on increasing interest and participation.—Daily Princetonian.

Probably the reason there are 8,000,000 autos on the highways and byways which aren't worth a cent more than $25 apiece, as the National Automobile association solemnly assures us there are, is that the owners don't like to let go of them until the last instalment is met.—Ohio State Journal.

Carolinians Bow to Maryland In Overtime Contest, 31-33.

BIG FIVE STANDINGS

Davidson	2	1	.667
Duke	3	2	.600
State	4	3	.570
Carolina	2	3	.400
Wake Forest	1	4	.200

Tonight's game between the North Carolina and Davidson basketball teams in the Tin Can at eight-thirty o'clock should be a real drawing card, because of the muddled condition of the Big Five basketball race. The game will follow a seven o'clock encounter between the Tar Baby and Wildkitten teams.

With Wake Forest having driven State College from the top position in the basketball race Tuesday night, it is possible for Carolina to finish near the top in the Big Five standings. Carolina has three Big Five games to play, meeting Davidson tonight, Duke Saturday and Wake Forest next Thursday. Should the Tar Heels cop all of these, they would have a standing of seven wins and three losses, and would stand very close to the top.

Davidson at present is holding the leadership undisputed, but they are on a trip this weekend which will pit them against Carolina and State, and it is not improbable that they will be defeated at least once on the tour.

Both the Wildcats and the Tar Heels will be fighting tonight to return to the win column, Davidson having lost to the little Guilford College Quakers Monday afternoon, after losing to Duke and Charlotte "Y" previously, and Carolina having been nosed out by both Washington and Lee and Maryland on Monday and Tuesday nights.

Though Sandy Dameron was considerably better yesterday it is not likely that his poison ivy infection will be sufficiently healed for him to play tonight. However, he should be ready for Duke Saturday. Coach Ashmore probably will start against Davidson tonight: Moore and Hines or Smith, forwards; Edwards, center; Captain Marpet and Alexander, guards.

Davidson, February 11.—Smarting under the humiliating defeat administered to them Monday afternoon by the Guilford College Quakers, and having two days of intensive practice to get back their bearings, the Davidson College Wildcats tomorrow morning start out on a tour of redemption. But the path is going to be hard, and the way difficult, for their opponents on successive nights will be Carolina and State, in the respective lairs of these Big Five opponents.

Captain Bill Goodson, who was in civilian clothes Monday with an injured leg and who watched the massacre of the Wildcats, consulting and groaning intermittently with Monk Younger, their tutor, will be back in trim for the cross-state journey. He will not only add

K. A.'s Give Sigma Ep's First Defeat

Led by Oliver with twelve points, the K. A.'s defeated the Sigma Epsilon's yesterday afternoon, 35-29. The Sigma Ep's were previously undefeated, having won four straight. For the Sigma Epsilon's, Blackwood and Whitley were best with ten and fifteen points, respectively. House and Wells also played good games for the K. A.'s, getting nine and eight points respectively. The K. A.'s now have won five games and today won the right to enter the semi-finals with the Phi Gam's, Phi Delt's, and Sigma Zeta's.

Kappa Sig's Win Exhibition Game

Led by Joe Eagles, with twenty-four points, the Kappa Sig's defeated the Sigma Zeta's, 45-38. It was the first loss of the season for the Sigma Zeta's who have won five games. The game does not count in the standings as it was merely an exhibition affair, since the Sigma Zeta's have previously defeated the Kappa Sig's during the regular season. Hoffman, Kappa Sig guard took second place honors with fifteen points. For the Sigma Zeta's Purser and Feit were best with fourteen and twelve points respectively.

Sigma Zeta (38)	K. A.'s (45)

'ORANGES' DROP CLOSE GAME TO 'BLUE' GRIDDERS

Phipps Circles End for 30 Yard Run and Only Score of Game.

After two futile attempts to score from the one-yard stripe, an almost perfectly executed off tackle play from the thirty yard line netted the "Blues" a 6 to 0 win over the "Oranges" in Carolina's fourth winter grid game yesterday afternoon.

John Phipps, substitute freshman halfback, led the charge, picking his way excellently behind good interference until he cleared the right end, then cutting back for 30 yards and the only score.

Just previously the "Blues" had staged a march from midfield, featured by a hard 27-yard run by Kahn, freshman sub at fullback, which petered out when Rankin, sub end, took Phipps' pass for nine yards but was thrown on the one yard line. Hackney kicked out for the "Oranges," and Phipps came back to score on the second play after.

The "Blues" made ten first downs, the "Oranges" nine, both teams having to resort frequently to passes, and gaining much better in midfield than when near to scoring. Chandler, veteran halfback, got away once or twice, but Slusser was held. Lassiter, "Blue" fullback, intercepted a pass and ran forty-seven yards to the three-yard line, but the game ended with a line buck to the one-yard line.

Walker and Rankin, ends, and Hodges and Strickland, tackles, stood out in the "Blue" line. Rankin and Strickland are freshmen. Philpott, guard, and Davis, converted center, were best in the "Orange" line. The starting lineups:

BLUES	Pos.	ORANGES
Frankel	Left End	Grindstaff
Strickland	Left Tackle	Tatum
Gilbreath	Center	McIver
Newcomb	Right Guard	Fysal
Sherrill	Right Tackle	Crane
Brandt	Right End	Cozart
Jones	Quarterback	Peacock
Slusser	Right Halfback	Daniel
Lassiter	Fullback	Houston

Tar Heel Boxing Stock Soars After Virginia Win

Carolina's boxing stock took a notable rise when the Tar Heels beat Virginia 4-3 last Saturday, for Virginia had previously won a 5-2 verdict over Florida, Southern champions of last year. If Carolina can win at Duke February 17, the Tar Heels will take an undefeated Southern Conference record to the Southern tournament at Charlottesville, Va., February 28, and will rate with Tulane and Virginia as the favorites.

State High School Ring And Mat Tourney To Begin Today

Durham Entry Favored To Cop Grappling Championship; Raleigh Boxers Highly Touted.

The preliminary bouts of the first state high school boxing and wrestling tournaments will begin at three o'clock this afternoon when the representatives from ten or more teams make their initial bids for championship titles. The finals of each tournament will take place Friday night, while the semi-finals are scheduled to begin at ten o'clock Friday morning.

All men will weigh in at Emerson field between eleven and two o'clock and the drawings will take place at twelve o'clock at the same place. Both tournaments will be run off at the same time under the supervision of the Tar Heel varsity wrestling and boxing squads.

Durham high school is favored to cop the title in the wrestling tournament although Bragtown is expected to offer a serious challenge. The Bulldogs from Durham are the claimants of last years's wrestling crown and are undefeated this year. Coach Uzzell's men have two victories over the State College freshmen by scores of 21-8 and 28-3 in addition to a pair of wins over Greensboro high. The Bulldogs have rolled up a total of 107 points during the season against thirty-four for their opponents. No other team in the state can equal this record although Bragtown has shown decided strength in its dual matches.

A number of undefeated men will see action in every weight. Vic Vickers of Durham is the leading contender in the 108 pound class and is undefeated. The 115 pound class will see a hot scrap between Miller of Durham and Champion of Bragtown.

Erwin of Durham in the 125 pound class lost his first bout in two years last week when White, star State freshman grappler, pinned his shoulders to the mat. However, Erwin is undefeated in high school circles and is doped to take the championship in his weight without much trouble.

Hiram Bell, Star Greensboro high school grappler, has won all four of his bouts this year, and is the outstanding contender for the 135 pound title.

Salisbury has its hopes pinned on Eller in the 155 pound class. Eller has been in only two bouts this year, but has come out the winner in each of them. However, Eller will meet some of the stiffest competition of the tournament when he runs up against Captain Jim Fortune of Durham. Fortune is also undefeated, and the weight championship will probably fall to one of these two men.

Durham and Salisbury will again present the leading contenders among the 155 pounders. Both teams will be represented by undefeated men, and unless some dark horse kicks over the dope bucket one of these two teams should be able to claim a champion. Woody Wilson, Durham, has five wins to his credit while Barnhardt has yet to meet

May Be Ineligible

BURGES WHITEHEAD

Burgess Whitehead, Tar Heel star shortstop and captain elect of the 1931 nine has signed a contract with the Rochester club of the International League, advices from Rochester stated yesterday. Owing to a S. I. C. eligibility ruling, Whitehead, along with two other Big Five baseball stars, may be declared ineligible for the coming season.

Four Tar Heel Boxers Yet To Taste Defeat

Four of Carolina's star boxers weathered the Virginia meet and successfully protected their undefeated season records. The unbeaten are Martin Levinson, 125-pounder; Captain Noah Goodridge, 135; Obie Davis, 160; and John Warren, unlimited. Levinson is a sophomore, the others seniors. Carolina's next meet will be at Duke February 17, and if the Tar Heels can win that clash, they will have completed their Southern Conference schedule without a defeat.

KIWANIS CLUB SPONSORS SUNDAY BENEFIT MOVIE

The Kiwanis Club, through arrangement with the Movie Guild, will sponsor a movie on Sunday, February 22, the proceeds of which will be used for Orange County Relief Work. The title of the picture will be announced later. Tickets will be on sale early next week.

ZETA PSI'S WIN FENCING MATCH FROM 'T' TEAM

Beta's Meet Phi Gam's In Defense of 1930 Title Today.

Zeta Psi opened the intramural fencing schedule in the Tin Can Tuesday afternoon by scoring a 7-2 win over Everett dormitory. Three points went to Zeta Psi by forfeit when only two men of the Everett team showed up for the bouts.

Valk led the attack for Zeta Psi while Fieldman showed the best form for Everett. Although he lost three matches, Phil Liskin also showed good form. Liskin lost all his bouts by a score of 3-2.

This afternoon Beta Theta Pi will make its first defense of the championship title won last year, meeting Phi Gamma Delta. The Beta team will be composed of Lynch Waugh, and Fenker, while the Phi Gams will be led by Kent Creuser.

Box score of the Zeta Psi-Everett bouts follow:

Zeta Psi (7)	W.	L.
Cooper	2	0
Pratt	1	1
Everett (2)	W.	L.

NELSON KENNEDY ANNOUNCES NEXT ORGAN PROGRAM

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, of the music department, will render another Vesper concert next Sunday at four-forty-five o'clock. This concert will be played on the magnificent new organ which is in the recital room of the music building. His first number, Meditation Serieuse, by Bartlett, is interesting because of its beautiful theme which occurs sometimes in an upper and lower voice. The impressive and massive chords at the end of this number seem to represent the entire force of the piece, while the movement progresses.

Variations de Concert, by Bonnet, the brilliant composer organist, is in the Doric mode, and progresses after the intrancing introduction through four variations the stress being laid on the last part.

Ave Maria, composed by one of the foremost representatives of the modern Italian school, Bossi, is the third selection by Professor Kennedy.

Following the number of the famous Italian composer, the audience will hear Fugue in G Minor, by Bach, a German artist; and The Squirrel, by Weaver, a Kansas City organist, who plays up to nature in a delightful and ingenuous manner.

The next number is Traumerei, by Schumann, who has left many popular and attractive contributions to the realm of music. As the last piece on the program Professor Kennedy will offer Hosannah by Dubois. This offering is a virile, striking chorus by the former director of the Paris Conservatoire, and has been enthusiastically received by noted critics and connoisseurs of the musical world.

University Women Hear Two Speakers

At the meeting of the local chapter of the American Association of University Women Tuesday night in the Episcopal parish house, Mrs. E. R. Mosher, chairman of the education committee for the League of Women Voters, reported on the state senate's passage of the compulsory attendance bill. She explained that the bill raises the age for compulsory school attendance from fourteen to sixteen years, and the amount of educational training required from the fourth to the sixth grade. Exemptions are possible only when the children or their families are in need of their possible earnings, or when the children are not capable of further education because of physical or mental defects.

Mrs. Paul Green talked on "Folk Superstitions in Regard to Household Matters." The talk was based chiefly on superstitions gathered by herself and Mr. Green from eastern North Carolina. Those cited dealt with the preparation of food, the moving of household goods, childbirth, and the rearing of children. Others concerned animals and the planting of crops.

Mrs. Green explained that superstitions date back to the earliest times and are fundamentally the same in all countries. She stated that almost all of the superstitions attributed to the negro are really Anglo-Saxon in origin. While there are many which are contradictory, certain ones such as some connected with planting, are based on common sense.

Tau Beta Pi, honorary engineering fraternity, initiated last night the following men, who were tapped at the winter tapping: D. J. Thurson, John Andrews, Robert Hubbard, Giles Horney, R. J. White, H. F. Crisco, and Raymond Ruble.

King's Daughters Have Spent $95 In Poor Relief Work

The King's Daughters met with Mrs. J. E. Lear at 2 Cobb Terrace Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. J. A. Page presiding.

A full report was made of all the work that has been done by the organization during the last month. They have been able to meet all calls for help, and have expended a total of ninety-five dollars. They have furnished fourteen families with groceries, seven with wood, have given three pairs of shoes, and provided six people with clothing. The members were able to make only seven visits during the month because of the illness of many of them.

Last month also, two people were questioned and sent out of town for begging. The King's Daughters have called attention to the fact that there is a town ordinance against begging or selling from door to door, and that they would like for the people to cooperate with them and with the town officials by not giving or buying at the door.

During the past month flowers were sent to six members of the King's Daughters who were sick.

funds. It was not until the year 1921 that the University again graduated as many as a hundred students.

"In 1881, the first state appropriation was given to the school. The first grant had been made in the form of a loan, and although it was later changed into a gift it was not originally one. This first budget amounted to the sum of $5,000, and since that time it has been continually increased until this year. In 1919 the budget had reached a total of $217,000, and in 1928 it was at its highest peak of 880,000. For the years 1929 and 1930 it was reduced a little and kept stationary although the number of students continued to increase.

"This year the University has the largest freshman class in its history; yet the general assembly advances a bill for the reduction of the budget to the sum of $573,600. For the past few years there has been no addition to the teaching staff of the University other than to replace men who have left because of the prospect of having their work hampered by the curtailment of their equipment and research expenses.

"During the time that there has been no increase in the number of professors and teaching fellows, there has been an amazing growth in the size of the student body. To run the University, the same budget that we have had for the past two years should be renewed. If there is to be any change made in the appropriations, it should be increased and not decreased.

students employ their spare time to monetary advantage. Several humorous incidents of some of the most amusing ways were recounted and the importance of the service rooms in the dormitories was brought out.

He then emphasized the importance of beginning to save while in high school, and pointed out that a student who was now entering the first year in high school might earn enough in his spare time to pay his expenses through two years of college.

"A student," Hobgood continued, "who comes here intending to earn all of his expenses while at the institution, finds that he has quite a job on his hands. The average number of courses taken by students at the University is 3 1-4. This means that about seventeen hours a week are spent in the class room and that the same number of hours should be spent in preparing the lessons, making a total of thirty-four hours a week spent in actual school work. Then with the necessary self-help work the total number of hours of labor easily reaches seventy-five."

In conclusion, Hobgood listed the three men whom he thought had done the most work for the self-help boys. President Frank Graham was the first of these; C. T. Woollen, business manager of the University, and J. O. Harmon, superintendent of Swain hall, were the other two.

came in for a good share of the Doctor's talk. He said that the alumni of state universities were coming more and more to realize their responsibilities to their alma maters and to act accordingly when asked to contribute to funds which are being used for the improvement of the institutions from which they graduated.

As instances of this changing attitude Dr. Coffman cited instances from the University of Michigan where the alumni built a beautiful student union and contributed to a fund which enabled that university to purchase one of the greatest and most famous law libraries in the world. As a further illustration he used our own University where the beautiful Kenan stadium, Emerson field, the music building, Graham Memorial hall, and the proposed Patterson-Morehead bell tower were contributed by alumni who had the means and the desire to aid their alma mater.

Alabama Offers Four Fellowships

The school of mines of the University of Alabama is offering four fellowships in mining and metallurgical research in cooperation with the United States Bureau of Mines, for the school year 1931-1932.

The fellowships are open to graduates of the universities and engineering schools who have had proper training in mining, metallurgy or chemistry, and who have proper qualifications to undertake research investigation. The value of each fellowship is $75.00 per month for nine months beginning September first.

Holders of these stipends will be required to register as graduate students and to become candidates for the degree of master of science unless an equivalent degree has previously been received.

Plans Made For Student Meeting

Harry F. Comer and Sam Gorham of the local Y spent Tuesday afternoon at the North Carolina College for Negroes in Durham with a student volunteer committee to arrange for the negro delegates who are expected to attend the State Student Volunteer Conference, slated to meet here February 27 to March 1.

It was agreed that the negro institution should furnish room and transportation for the prospective thirty colored delegates. Arrangements for boarding this group are being made in Chapel Hill.

The three cabinets of the local Y have a special duty to perform in regard to this conference. The junior-senior cabinet, assisted by the freshman friendship council, are getting men to entertain the 125 men students from North Carolina colleges. To get homes in town to entertain the seventy-five or more girls from colleges in the state is the aim of the sophomore cabinet.

All delegates to this conference are to provide their own meals. A special arrangement has been made with Swain Hall to board the group at a reasonable rate.

This year's conference is expected to double that of last year in number of delegates.

his leadership to the Davidson crew, but will materially strengthen the Davidson five, which has been turned back three times in succession, once each by Duke, Charlotte "Y," and Guilford.

Carolina and State will also be playing revengeful and redemptive roles. Both of these institutions met Davidson earlier in the season when the Wildcats were apparently at their prime, and were conquered, neither by an ignominious score, however.

With Captain Goodson back in togs, the lineup will probably include Goodson and Proctor, guards; Martin, center; and Rusk and Mathis, forwards. This is the combination that has done most of the playing for Davidson this season.

J. B. Cook of Durham, also undefeated, is the favorite in the 165 pound class, but will meet strong opposition in Ketner of Salisbury and Herbert Browning of Bragtown.

Coach Peele Johnson's fast stepping pugs from the Capital city are favored to take the boxing crown. The Purple and Gold is sending a strong, well balanced team of sluggers that claims a victory over the strong State freshman battlers. This team will be led by the three Dunnaway brothers who have been doing some of the best work in high school circles this year. Jack will handle the 108 pound class, Al the lightweight division, and Bill, star of last fall's football squad, will be seen in the welterweight class. Turner Bilisoly will handle the bantamweight class for Raleigh and will find his stiffest competition in Hal Justice of Greensboro.

Raleigh and Durham are the only schools to enter full teams in the boxing tournament, although Gastonia is entering a six man team and Greensboro has entered three. Gastonia will enter the battling as the dark horse of the tournament since they have not participated in any dual meets this year. They are said to have a strong team, however, and may upset the dope by pulling out ahead of their more experienced rivals.

The entrance lists are still open for both tournaments and will not be closed until noon today.

Led by Eubank, stellar center with sixteen points, the Phi Delt's defeated the A. T. O.'s 36-30. The A. T. O.'s were previously undefeated, having won five games in a row. The game was close and hard fought in the latter stages. The Phi Delt's jumped away to a 14-4 lead but the A. T. O.'s rallied to come within six points of victory. For the losers Menge was best with ten points. Smith played a good game for the A. T. O.'s until being removed from the game on personal fouls. Moore, Phi Delt forward tied for second place honors with ten points. It was the fifth win of the season for the Phi Delt's who earlier in the week eliminated the Beta's.

SPANISH LECTURE BROADCAST TODAY

Today at five-fifteen Professor N. B. Adams, of the University Spanish department, will broadcast the weekly lecture on the study of Spanish over station WPTF in Raleigh.

This is the third of a series of twelve lectures to be broadcast by members of the University Spanish department each Thursday afternoon from five-fifteen to five-forty-five. The other three lecturers are Professor R. S. Boggs, S. A. Stoudemire, and Mr. Francis Hayes.

In his lecture Dr. Adams will give a review of the pronunciation of the Spanish language and will go on to explain how to conjugate verbs, how adjectives agree with their nouns, and how plurals of nouns are formed.

After he has outlined these basic essentials of the grammar the University professor will read a list of useful sentences which are to be studied by the persons interested in this course of lectures.

The University Extension division, which is sponsoring the program, has received many requests from people out in the state for the leaflets which contain an outline of the ground to be covered by the professors in their lectures. The radio station has also received many calls for the lecture material.

SENIORS CHOOSE SUPERLATIVES AT CLASS MEETING

Patterson Elected to Lead Senior Ball in April.

At their smoker in Swain Hall Wednesday night, the members of the Senior Class elected their dance leaders, class day officers, and superlatives.

Following the refreshments, Pat Patterson, president of the class, opened the session by introducing Dr. George Coffman, head of the English department, who delivered the principal address.

Elections of dance leaders followed the talk, and 'Pat' Patterson was unanimously chosen to lead the figure. He will be assisted by Chuck Erickson and Beverly Moore. The date of the dance has been tentatively set for either April 18 or 25, and both the Junior Prom and Senior Ball will be given on the same week end.

The class day officers elected were: lawyer, J. M. Little; poet, Joe Jones; prophet, Alan Marshall; statistician, K. C. Ramsay; and historian, Beverly Moore. The following are the superlatives representing the graduating class: best natured, Noah Goodridge; best all around, Mayne Albright; most popular, Ed Hamer; best student, Joe Eagles; most intellectual, Clyde Dunn; best executive, Will Yarborough; best business man, Pat Patterson; best looking, George Thompson; most social, Marion Cowper; best athlete, Henry House; most influential, Ed Hamer; most original, Paul Gilbert; best writer, Joe Jones; best speaker, Mayne Albright; most dramatic, Frank Jacocks; prettiest co-ed, Virginia Turner; and most popular co-ed, Clyde Duncan.

The committee in charge of Senior Week will be headed by Charles DeWolfe, with Kermit Wheary, Billy Lindsay, Clyde Dunn, Bert Haywood, and Fred Ferguson assisting. The gift committee is composed of Noah Goodridge, chairman, Joe Eagles, Wallace Shelton, Buddy Hubbard, Beverly Moore, Adam Fisher, Brody Arnold, Paul Gilbert, and Mayne Albright. Those serving on the dance committee are: John Idol, chairman, Sam Silverstein, Cliff Baucom, Williams Cooper, Ike Manning, and Art Sickles. Patterson, president, and K. C. Ramsay, chairman of the executive committee, of the class will serve as members ex-officio on the above committees.

Vesper Services

Sponsored by the three cabinets of the Y. M. C. A., vesper services are held in Gerrard hall each evening at 6:30 o'clock under the leadership of Bob Barnett.

This idea of a daily vesper service first originated four or five years ago, did not flourish at its first beginning. It was tried again the years following, only succeeding in the winter quarter. From several years of experience it has been found that a vesper service will not succeed during the fall quarter, due to the predominance of fraternity rushing; consequently, this year the idea was carried out for the first time the second week of the winter quarter and will continue through the spring. The vespers last twelve minutes and are open to the public.

Barwick Chosen New Chairman of Fund

Alan J. Barwick, a prominent Raleigh lawyer and attorney is the newly selected chairman of the Loyalty Fund. He graduated in the class of 1900 and succeeds Leslie Weil, '95, in the office.

At present he has a daughter, Eloise, in the junior class at the University. His son, Killian, graduated from here with the class of '28 and then studied law.

MANNING TELLS FRESHMEN ABOUT MEDICAL SCHOOL

"Students Must Have Ability to Work To Be in Medical School," Says Dean.

Dean Isaac H. Manning of the University school of medicine gave the freshmen some interesting facts about the department of which he is head in chapel Thursday. He first gave the requirements necessary for the right type of student to undertake the study of medicine. He stated that it is not necessary to be a genius, but merely to possess a good average brain combined with ability for hard work.

The three learned professions according to Dean Manning are law, the ministry, and medicine. In each of these professions learning and ability are required, but in the study of medicine especially there is no room for the lazy student.

A large number of factors play a part in the preparation for the pursuit of medicine. In the pre-med course the department believes in the need for the cultural and basic studies. These, however, should be subordinated to the courses giving a knowledge of the fundamental sciences such as biology, zoology, physics, and chemistry. In these courses the experience in laboratory methods so indispensable to medicines is gained.

Dean Manning gave the entrance requirements demanded by most of the larger and more prominent medical schools for graduate work. The minimum requirement is a total of sixty semester hours. That is equivalent to the two year course given here. Many schools, however, require three years, and some demand the A. B. degree. Six full courses in chemistry are necessary.

The medical school dean, who has been a member of the faculty for thirty-one years, said that from long observation he had found that a student's average grades are a very good indication of the character of work he will do in the medical school. Moreover, he asserted that the presentation of subject hours alone will not suffice for admission to the school but that high grade work must have been done. This is a prime requisite as the work in this department is comparable only to that in the engineering school as to its difficulty.

Dr. Manning told of the aptitude test to be given Friday at three o'clock and urged all contemplating medicine to take it. It is used as a gauge of a student's qualifications for this work.

"The cost of a degree in medicine is perhaps the most expensive of degrees," said the speaker. "The tuition is higher and

QUERIES CHOSEN TO BE DISCUSSED BY DI AND PHI

The joint ways and means committee of the Di and Phi societies announce the following bills to be discussed at the joint session of the two societies Tuesday night in the Di hall. President Little and Speaker Whittenton urge all members of both bodies to become familiar with the problems involved in these questions. The bills are:

Resolved: That the management of the University, State College, and N. C. C. W. should be consolidated into one large University of North Carolina.

Resolved: That the student body has too little control over extra-curricular activities on the campus.

Material on the first question may be obtained from the Brookings Institute Report, from which the following is an abstract:

"It is extremely unfortunate that the State College and the University are located in different cities and also that North Carolina College for Women is developing its own individual program. If there were some integrating agency, it is probable that much of the duplication now existing could be eliminat-

EPISCOPAL BISHOP WILL SPEAK HERE

Rev. Thomas C. Darst Will Be Sunday Guest of Chapel Of the Cross.

Rev. A. S. Lawrence, rector of the Episcopal church, announces that the Right Reverend Thomas C. Darst, Bishop of east Carolina will preach at the Chapel of the Cross Sunday morning at eleven o'clock.

In addition to Bishop Darst, Reverend A. C. Zabriskie, professor of history at Virginia Seminary; Reverend Thomas Wright, provincial secretary for college work, and three Seminary students will be in Chapel Hill over the week-end to take part in the church program.

Dick Beasley, one of the Seminary students, is a member of the D. K. E. fraternity, a track man of repute from the Virginia Episcopal School, and a graduate of the University of Virginia.

Charlie Fishburne, another of the Seminary students, is a member of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, a graduate of the University of South Carolina where he received his M. A. degree and later was an instructor of sociology. Fishburne is a Phi Beta Kappa man, and at present is president of the student body of Virginia Seminary.

The third Seminary student who is to participate in the church program here is Lou Heck, a Phi Beta Kappa man from Hobart College and former headmaster of a boys' school in the Philippines.

Mr. Zabriskie will preach at the Chapel of the Cross at eight o'clock Sunday evening. Dick Beasley will address the Young Peoples Service League at seven o'clock. Fishburne will speak in chapel Monday at ten-thirty, and Heck will talk before the freshmen in chapel on Tuesday.

Le Cercle Francais

Dr. J. C. Lyons of the French department will speak tonight at the meeting of Le Cercle Francais in the Episcopal parish house at seven-thirty.

FIRST OF GERMAN DANCE SET BEGINS THIS AFTERNOON

Today's program of dances begins at four o'clock with a tea dansant in Bynum gymnasium. The room will be decorated in red and white carrying out a Valentine theme. Paul Graham's orchestra which will play for this and all the dances, has played for a number of college dances recently in this part of the South.

A part of the week-end of dances, but not under the auspices of the German Club, is the Gimghoul dinner dance which is to take place in the Hippol castle this evening.

Tonight at nine-thirty the junior figure will be led by Bill Bridgers of Wilson, assisted by Walter Crouch of High Point and Steve Lynch of Asheville. The regular German Club rules will be in effect and no couples will be admitted to the floor after ten-thirty.

The mid-winters continue tomorrow morning with a dance at eleven o'clock, and with a tea dance at four in the afternoon. The regular German Club dance will begin tomorrow night at nine o'clock with William Dunn of New Bern leading, assisted by Lynn Wilder of Raleigh and George Bagby of Charlotte.

NEW PLAY SERIES ARE INTRODUCED

Student Playwrights Will Present Guest Performance of "The Blue Remembered Hills."

The Playmakers are instituting a series of experimental plays to be produced in connection with the playwriting class conducted by Professor F. H. Koch. Any play that shows promise, regardless of the theme's uniqueness, will be considered material for these productions.

A play by Theodore Herman, a graduate student, will be the first of these series. It will be presented this evening in the Playmakers Theatre, as a strictly invitational performance.

Herman's play The Blue Remembered Hills, was probably inspired by one of Housman's poems. It suggests the splendid ecstacy of youth and the joy of living. Technically speaking The Blue Remembered Hills is a one act play in two scenes. The first scene is in a room of a dormitory in a boys' college. The second scene is the living room of a fraternity house. Ten minutes is supposed to elapse between the scenes.

The play deals with the boy's consciousness of the value of adolescence and the conviction that to compromise with life is the deepest of all tragedies. Five boys are caught in the swirl of One boy is willing to compromise; another wavers upon the edge of a definite action; a third unconsciously influences an older boy who, in turn, exerts a most subtle influence upon every one he meets.

There are now two other experimental plays in rehearsal: Margaret Howe's The House of Grief, and Anthony Buttita's Playthings, which are to be given in the near future.

Taylor Society

Dr. G. T. Schwenning of the commerce school will address the Taylor Society tonight at seven o'oclck in room 103 Bingham hall.

KOCH WILL READ CONNELLY'S PLAY SUNDAY EVENING

"The Green Pastures" Was First Produced in New York February 26th.

The reading of the Carolina Playmakers for February is to be given by Professor Frederick Koch, Sunday night in the Playmakers Theatre.

The title of the reading is The Green Pastures by Marc Connelly. It was first produced in New York February 26, 1930, and is still running. The author used as a substantial basis, Roark Bradford's Ol' Man Adam an' His Chillun.

The play is an attempt to present concretely the religious ideas held by thousands of Negroes in the deep South. Their idea of heaven, that it is a place where all will have everything that makes for innocent pleasure, is one held by many. Their idea of the inhabitants of heaven is of themselves clothed with power and glory. One of the features of the play as produced is the singing of spirituals that serve as a sort of emotional connective tissue between the scenes. Professor Bruce Carpenter says of this singing that it "adds a unity and an emotional emphasis that is invaluable."

The critics have been most enthusiastic. Theatre Arts Monthly attributes to the play "the glow of a quiet beauty and a self-sustaining form." Brooks Atkinson, as quoted by Professor Carpenter, says that "as comedy, fantasy, folklore, religion, poetry, and theatre, it is of surpassing beauty." Professor Carpenter points out "the striking resemblance to the miracle plays of England. Just as the shepherds in the Secunda Pastorum bring to the Christchild mittens and other gifts that the shepherds of Jerusalem would never have heard of, so the characters in The Green Pastures place modern clothes on many of their Bible figures and make them do strictly modern things."

Of special interest to North Carolina is the fact that Richard Harrison, who play The Lord, was a teacher in the A. and T. College in Greensboro.

Tar Heel Reporters

The following reporters are to meet the managing editor in the Daily Tar Heel office this afternoon at one-thirty o'clock: Andrews, Alston, Betts, Kelly, Rose, Bessen, and Shoemaker.

C. FELIX HARVEY DIES WEDNESDAY OF HEART ATTACK

Alumni Association President Passes Away After Short Illness.

Charles Felix Harvey, president of the alumni association, died at his office in Kinston late Wednesday afternoon with angina pectoris. He had been suffering from a heart attack a short time before his death, but for the past few days he had returned to his work. Mr. Harvey was a native of Kinston, where he became associated in business with his father shortly after graduating from this institution in 1892.

Prior to his graduation here he was the winner of the essayists medal of the Phi society and also of the Hume essay medal in his senior year. A few days after receiving his diploma he went in partnership with his father, the late Lemuel Harvey, which firm became L. Harvey and Son.

At the time of his death he was a trustee of the University as well as of the Kinston public schools. During his lifetime he was president of the Seven Springs Supply Company, Kinston Insurance and Realty Company and the Carolina Brick Company, besides being connected with numerous other enterprises, including a bank and several cotton mills.

When he died, Mr. Harvey was seated at his office desk discussing matters with a business associate. The office was in the heart of the business district, and the news of his passing spread rapidly.

Mr. Harvey is survived by his wife, two sons, C. Felix Harvey, Jr., and Leo H. Harvey, and one daughter, Mrs. Arthur P. Wilson of New York. Mr. Harvey's mother, Mrs. L. Harvey, and a sister Miss May Harvey, also survive.

Funeral services are to be conducted from the Queen Street Methodist church at 11:30 this morning. President Frank P. Graham, and a number of faculty members and trustees will attend the funeral.

President Graham today sent Mrs. Harvey a telegram in which he said: "On behalf of the University and personally I wish to express my deepest sympathy to you and your family. The State has lost a noble and useful life. The University has lost a devoted and distinguished son. I feel deeply the loss of a dear and loyal friend. The spiritual consolation of a beautiful spirit will always be yours."

J. Maryon Saunders, Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association, said: "Mr. Harvey had begun his year as alumni president with sincerity and understanding. Thoroughly loyal always to the University, he had brought to his new position as president of the alumni clear thinking combined with long experience in dealing with University and alumni affairs."

Kemp P. Lewis, of Durham, first vice-president of the Alumni Association, will succeed to the presidency.

Sophomore Committee

Our Great Tradition

Almost a century and a half old, the University of North Carolina has built up a tradition which is the institution's pride and joy. Other institutions, less aged, are now developing traditions; but ours is with us, and it is our task to perpetuate it. And what is our great tradition which we glibly talk about and which most of us think of as something indescribable? Perhaps it is an indescribable something; yet when we think of Old East, Old South, and Person Hall, buildings which have been standing for more than a hundred years, we do not think of them in terms of their longevity, but rather in terms of what they symbolize. These old buildings signify that for more than a century this institution has functioned as an institution of higher learning and as a center of culture, a leader in the training of scholars, men of business, and public leaders.

Dr. George R. Coffman, the distinguished new head of the University's English department, in his talk to the seniors at their recent smoker, made a statement which we think goes far in interpreting the relationship between students, faculty, and alumni and the University itself. He said that we must carry on our great tradition. Students can carry on by striving for higher levels in their activities and by bearing the relationship to the University which a foster son bears to a foster mother. The faculty must perpetuate our tradition by maintaining higher standards in curriculum. Alumni may carry on the tradition by being loyal sons of the University.

When the unknown donor made possible the first unit of a school of fine arts by providing adequate facilities for the music department, our praise of him was unstinted. We wish at this time to express our gratification to another unknown donor, the gentleman who is making possible the completion of Graham Memorial. It is needless to say that completion of this recreation center will fill a long-needed requirement in our life here. To the donor of the Graham Memorial completion fund, as to the donor of the music building, we can truthfully say, "You are carrying on our great tradition."—B. M.

Our Near-Future Building Additions

It was with a great deal of pleasure that everyone saw in the recent papers that the new year is going to witness the completion of the Graham Memorial and the building of the Morehead-Patterson Memorial tower. For many years the University has needed a building like the Graham Memorial for the use of its unorganized student body. It will surely add a great deal to the daily life of the non-fraternity men here on the campus. From all descriptions and visions which have been pictured by various writers, the bell tower will be one of the most beautiful and distinctive structures on the campus. We, as students of the newer generation, should be deeply grateful to the donors of these two memorial structures. Both will add distinctly to our enjoyment of days spent here at Chapel Hill.

As Oliver Twist was wont to say—"What about some more?"—buildings which are needed very badly. This sounds like a spoiled child's cry for something which he doesn't need. In this case, however, we need what we are wanting very much—a gymnasium adaptable to both winter and basketball, with a swimming pool attached or included somewhere. As I remember, only one other university in the South is at present without a swimming team. A pool and an adequate gymnasium are needed very badly, and housing facilities for Carolina's fast-increasing co-ed numbers are probably even more of a need and problem.

Carolina is a poor state, though. It is racing New York and Pennsylvania to see which can pay the most federal taxes.—O. W. D.

The poor column writer at Carolina will have a hard time of it after this year—the announcement has been definitely made that Graham Memorial is actually to be completed. The story goes on to say that it will be used as a social center for the campus. Personally, I think that what this campus needs is a social center with a little more intimate air about it than a memorial building could possibly have. Why not have a building with fifty fire-places, each with a divan in front of it, where the boys and girls could get together for a quiet evening? Now there is an idea for some kind alumnus.

This proposition of where to date is really a serious one at Chapel Hill. Admittedly, there are a number of eligible girls and boys on the campus who would like to go places and do things, but there is a most alarming shortage of places.

A few who were in the know were fortunate enough to use the Parish House for extra-liturgical purposes, but within the past week a sign has appeared—"All Lights Must Be Left On Until After Ten-Thirty." "What difference will this make?" ask the members of that noble organization, The Smile Club? None, my friends, none at all to you, but there are still left those who prefer some solitude and privacy when having a date to sitting in Spencer Hall or the Y. M. C. A.

It was though that the cloister might be a poor substitute for the brilliantly lighted Parish House, but, from reports it too has lost its charm, due to the progress of that amazing invention of the modern day, electricity. Which reminds me, there are several who would like to know the identity of the couple seen coming from said cloister one night this week. Should you know, tell us their names and I think a story will be forthcoming.

"But, why," The Smile Club again asks, "should church property ever be used by would be Romeos and Juliets?" Well, for one thing it is convenient, and then too it would seem from a recent announcement received by many students that such use is not strenuously opposed by the ecclesiastics, for—Whoops, my dear, we are to have a Nite Club. A genuine, honest-to-goodness Nite Club, with soft lights, and a hot orchestra; and light wines and beer on the menu. Where? Why, at the Parish House."

That will, of course, solve the question of a place to date for one night at least, but what will happen if the club is not a success or is raided? We are right back where we started and the lights are still on in the Parish House.

Now, that warm spring nights are not so far distant, some of the chapel seats which were not used in the Auditorium might be placed at appropriate spots in the arboretum. That is a mere suggestion, which I realize will not be favorably received by Mr. Coker and his followers.

All this might lead one to think that I personally have been inconvenienced by the lack of a place to date. May I assure you that such is not the case. I would feel very humiliated if after six years I had to depend on Spencer Hall, the Parish House, or other rendezvouses of The Smile Club. So, you see, this appeal is prompted purely by a philanthropic desire to help my fellow man.

Teaching The Teacher

Harvard University has announced a plan which promises to be a great benefit to education. Beginning the next term the graduate school of education offers twenty-eight courses in education which are open to teachers in service and by which a degree of Master of Education may be obtained. The classes are scheduled at times which will not interfere with the work of those taking the courses.

Many will doubtless say that a person cannot be taught to teach but must learn for himself through experience. It is true that the science of education even if mastered does not necessarily make one an able teacher. But there are certainly a large number who have the germ of ability in this line and only need some able instruction by a professor with a sound

By Wex Malone

The University Maennerchor, composed of members of the Glee Club and recruits, sang in concert Monday evening in the Music building auditorium. Harry L. Knox accompanied the group, and was also soloist in several piano numbers. The performance of the choir was very creditable as a whole. They evidenced careful and skillful training, and most of the time sang well together. Especially were they effective in mezza voco. The second basses were by far the best division of the choir. The voices were well blended and of rich tonal quality. The first basses and second tenors wavered. At times the two groups evidenced good unity, at others they became lost. The greatest defect of the first bass and second tenor divisions was a lack of consistency. The listener was never sure just how their attack would result. There was a conspicious lack of vocal quality among the first tenors which was further impaired by straining. A few over ambitious tenors insisted on making their voices conspicious. This group of the choir was far from satisfactory.

The program was unusually well selected, and divided into four divisions; sacred songs, songs of North Europe, French songs, and American songs. The group of sacred songs consisted of Now Let Every Tongue Adore Thee (Bach), Ave Maria (Arcadelt), and O God of God (Wagner). The Ave Maria was executed a capella. In this Dyer had the choir under his finger every minute. As a technical performance of a capella it was superb, as a conception of the shading desirable for Ave Maria it was over-done and approached sensationalism. Your reviewer holds the director responsible for this.

The second group consisted of Autumn (Gretchaninov), With Heart Uplifted (Schedov), Finnish Lullaby (Palmgren arrangement), Fireflies (Russian, arr. Davidson), Land Sighting (Scandinavian, arr Grieg). The most difficult number, With Heart Uplifted, was by far the most effective of this group. As Dyer explained, the selection is typically Russian with several striking dissonances. Seeing an obvious difficulty, the Maennerchor was prepared for it, and the execution was thoroughly commendable. O Allah that they had seen some of the less obvious difficulties of the program with the same foresight. In singing Autumn the club was in the slough over its head. The close harmony of this number demanded more precision of ear, more tone accuracy than the choir possessed. Some of the nerve-breaking effects might be attributed to the style in which the selection was written, but the amateurish rendition must be blamed for most. Finnish Lullaby employed the second basses on pedal point on the dominant and tonic to give the effect of string bass. This went over with a bang. There was a depth of perception of the spirit of this number that was most gratifying. The Grieg arrangement, apart from the lack of unity in the first tenors, was very effectively done, although less bombast in the finale would have helped. The baritone soloist, although none too sure of his words, gave a very warm and intelligent rendition of the Olaf passage.

Dreamworld by Duparc, was evidently prematurely given. Again the choir was hopelessly lost. This time the baritones slipped. Oh well, perhaps modernism calls for trial and error. But seriously, this number should never have been attempted. Chorus of the Camel Drivers by Franck was the high spot of the third portion of the program. The entire group sang as a unit, even to the first tenors. The spirit of the number is vivid, human, and the song moves along with ease.

The last part of the program was introduced with Hymn of the Pilgrims by MacDowell. The best forte passages of the program were heard in this number. The last three numbers, Dance of the Gnomes (McDowell), Bugle Song (Foote), and A Sea Song (Gaines) were thoroughly enjoyable. Dance of the Gnomes moves agilely, and has several unusually effectively chromatic passages. It was in these lighter numbers that the Maennerchor was at its best.

It is evident that the Maennerchor is not as yet a polished aggregation. Closer familiarity with many of the numbers is desperately needed. The grossest fault of the choir is, however, the utter inadequacy of the first tenors. There would be nothing gained by damning this group with faint praise.

Harry L. Knox, as piano soloist, furnished some of the very brightest moments of the entire program. His playing was characterized by facility of execution and an unusually keen sense of dynamics. The Schumann Novellettte was especially effective. Your reviewer suggests that a piano recital by this artist would add much to the music schedule for this winter.

Rackley Addresses Alpha Psi Delta

The Alpha Psi Delta psychological fraternity met for their regular monthly program in New West Wednesday evening at seven-thirty o'clock with H. N. DeWick presiding and Mrs. Brooks acting as secretary in the place of Miss Bacon.

Dr. English Bagby presented a review of Adler's book, "The Problem of Neuroses."

L. E. Rackley, instructor in the department, talked on "The Relative Effect of Certain Distractions on Simple and Complex Habits When Both Are Equally Practiced." The distractions used in the experiment on which the discussion was based were hunger, auditory distractions, and insomnia.

The Wickersham commission, in the opinion of its critics, merely brought forth a mouse. But, wow! What a squeak!—Chicago Daily News.

INITIAL ANNUAL BOXING AND MAT TOURNEYS START

Durham Wrestlers, and Raleigh and Wilson Pugilists Lead at End of Preliminary Rounds.

FINALS TO BE HELD TODAY

Tin Can Scene of Event Which Formally Is Added to State High Athletic Association.

The first annual state high school boxing and wrestling tournament got under way yesterday afternoon in the Tin Can at three o'clock.

As was expected, Durham high school presented a strong delegation of wrestlers. Out of five matches participated in, Durham won all but the bout in the 155 pound class in which Barnhardt of Salisbury, undefeated thus far this season, took over Wilson of Durham, also undefeated, by a time advantage of four minutes, forty seconds.

The Capital City boxers were in only two of the preliminaries yesterday, but they proved the dopesters right in picking them to win the tournament by winning both bouts on technical kayoes. In the 125 pound class Jolly of Raleigh in the second round put his opponent, Dees of Greensboro, in such a condition that Dees' seconds threw in the towel. Bill, the only one of the three Dunaway brothers to fight yesterday, messed his opponent up so badly in one minute that the referee stopped the fight.

Two Falls in Wrestling

In ten wrestling matches only two falls were registered. Bell of Goldsboro in the 135 pound division ran true to form and pinned Lindsey of Bragtown to the mat in five minutes and twenty-seven seconds.

The other fall came in thirty seconds of the second overtime period when Cooke of Durham, the favorite, after a hard tussle during which neither boy held a time advantage, managed to pin Browning of Bragtown.

Wilson May Push Raleigh

Wilson high boys should hand the Raleigh crew some stiff competition for the boxing trophy. Fighting in four bouts, Wilson took all of them, two being won by the knockout route. Gafford in the 115 pound weight and Farris in the 125 pound division both took their fights by technical knockouts. Brown in the 108 pound class and Bass in the lightweight outpointed their opponents.

Durham, Greensboro, and Leaksville each won one of the preliminary bouts. Holder of Durham had Wingfield of Reidsville at his mercy during the whole fight. May of Goldsboro won handily from Raper of Reidsville, and Gillie of Leaksville finished strong to take the decision from Orrell of Greensboro.

Leaksville and Goldsboro each annexed two of the wrestling bouts. Bell and Gerringer of Goldsboro won from Lindsey and Williams of Bragtown without much trouble, and Roberts and Boyles of Leaksville easily took over Wilkins and Browning of Bragtown.

Bragtown and Salisbury each took one bout when Shaw of Bragtown took a time decision from Lindsey of Leaksville, and Barnhardt of Salisbury won by a time decision from Wilson of Durham.

The officials of the boxing bouts were: Noah Goodridge, captain of the Tar Heel leather pushers, referee; Archie Allen, captain of last year's team, and Marty Levinson, sensational featherweight of this year's edition of the squad, judges; and Herman Schnell, timekeeper.

Peyton Abbott, freshman wrestling coach, officiated as referee for the wrestling matches, and Harry Tsumas, varsity grappler was timekeeper.

The semi-finals of the boxing and wrestling tournaments will take place in the Tin Can this morning beginning at ten o'clock. The finals will begin at eight o'clock this evening and the admission price will be fifty cents.

Summary of boxing bouts:

115 pound class: Gafford (Wilson) defeated McCoy (Durham), technical knockout.

Basketball Team Captain

The above is a new picture of Captain Artie Marpet, who is playing his last season at guard on the Carolina basketball team. Artie has made quite a record for himself both in his defensive work and in his ability to so often be high scorer.

Intramural Results

Only two games were played in the intramural basketball league yesterday afternoon. The games originally scheduled for today on court no. 3 were postponed as the high school wrestling and boxing tournament took up about one half the entire court. These games will be played at a date to be named later. Two other games, the Everett-Graham tilt and the Sigma Chi-Chi Psi, were forfeited, Everett and the Sigma Chi's each receiving a forfeit.

Council Breaks Record as Beta's Win 82-14

The Beta's went on a scoring spree yesterday afternoon and when the smoke had cleared away the Beta's had broken the team scoring record, held by the Independents, scoring eighty-two points. The previous record of seventy-five points was made by the Independents on January 22, during the second week of play. Council, star forward, was the big gun of the Beta's attack, setting a new scoring record with thirty-nine points, ten points better than the high score held jointly by Peacock, of the Phi Delt's, and Umstead, of New Dorms. The Beta's scored fourteen points, the exact total gathered by the Pika's, in the last three minutes. Cocke played a good game at guard for the winners, gathering fourteen points for second place honors. For the Pika's, Shoemaker and Woerner, with four points each ,were best.

Beta's (82)	Pika's (14)
Council (39)	Cassada (2)
Moody (5)	Weeks (1)
Anderson (6)	McMillan (3)
Cocke (14)	Stamps
Heath (2)	Bisanar

Scoring Substitutes: Beta's: Black (4), Barnett (10), Reed (2); Pika's: Shoemaker (4), Woerner (4).

Phi Delt-Delta Sig Tilt Called At Half

The game scheduled between the Phi Delt's and the Delta Sigma Phi's was forfeited to the Phi Delt's at the half time due to the fact several of the Delta Sig players were forced to leave.

At the time of the calling of the game the score was 23-4 in favor of the Phi Delt's. Peacock led the Phi Delt's in the first half with eleven points, while Eubank took second place honors with six.

Whitehead Denies Signing Contract

Burgess Whitehead, baseball captain-elect at Carolina, has made a general denial of a story in the News and Observer to the effect that Whitehead signed a professional contract with Rochester on October 10, 1930, and so was ineligible for further play under Southern Conference rules.

"I haven't signed anything," Whitehead declared.

Here And There

By Jack Bessen

Tuesday night, the Athletic Association, at their meeting, decided not to add fencing to the list of varsity sports, saying that it will be continued as an intramural activity instead. One reason, probably the reason, for this action was the deplorable financial state of athletics at the University. It seems to the writer that the association has made a mistake in not adding fencing as a regular sport. There is a great deal of student interest in fencing, as shown by the great turnout for intramural competition and for coaching, so why not have it as a minor sport?

Princeton and Harvard may resume athletic relations within a few days. The heads of both schools will be in conference next week, and a five year break may be patched up . . . . You can't keep a good man down.

That's old John Picus Quinn's motto. The veteran spitball hurler, who was recently released by the Athletics, has signed to play for the Brooklyn Robins. Jack still has enough ability and brains to be a winning pitcher in any league . . . The Canucks are still kings of the ice. An amateur hockey team, composed of the University of Manitoba grads, won the world's amateur title at Krynica, Poland, yesterday, by defeating a Boston sextet, 2-0.

The University of Pennsylvania has announced a twenty-nine game schedule, including two games at Chapel Hill on April 1 and 2. . . The Lions also play Wake Forest and Duke . . . Wisconsin has decided to drop the dual captains for the basketball team. The Badgers started off with two captains and proceeded to drop down to fifth place in the Big Ten standing. Dr. Walter Meanwell, Badger coach, thinks that the captains aren't so much of a help after all . . . George Simpson, former Ohio State sprinter, broke one New Zealand record and tied another. George ran the 220 in 21 1-5 seconds and the century in 9 4-5 seconds . . . Harlow Rothert, former Stanford weight man established a new record in the shot put with a heave of forty-nine feet five inches . . . It seems as if the foreign stars are not so successful when stacked up against American runners. In the Millrose and Newark games, not a foreigner carried off an event. Somewhat different than when the Flying Finn, Nurmi, was running here . . .

AYCOCK FENCERS WIN DECISIVELY

Red Herman Leads Attack for Aycock; Farris Lone Winner For Sigma Phi Sigma.

Aycock dormitory scored a smashing victory over Sigma Phi Sigma Wednesday afternoon in the second intramural fencing match of the year by a score of 8-1. Jack Farris, varsity cross country runner, scored the lone point by scoring a win over Wasserman of Aycock.

Red Herman led the attack for Aycock by turning in three wins for a perfect record. Bill Liberstein won his only bout of the day. Urband turned in a pair of victories while Wasserman won two more bouts to complete the scoring for Aycock.

The box score follows:

Aycock (8)	W.	L.
Wasserman	2	1
Liberstein	1	0
Urband	2	0
Farris	1	2

AVERAGE GRADES OF FRATERNITIES HAVE IMPROVED

Pi Beta Phi's Lead List of Orders in Fall Quarter Grade Reports.

From the report of the registrar on the grades of the fall quarter of the fraternities on the Hill the Pi Beta Phi sorority took first place. Last year this sorority led the campus societies for the entire year and bids fair to repeat this accomplishment. The Theta Phi's with an average of 2.73 trailed the girl leaders by eleven points.

The next three highest fraternities were, in order, Phi Alpha, Delta Sigma Phi and Sigma Delta. All of the first five in the list made an improvement over their last year's scores. One of the greatest improvements made on the whole report was that made by the Phi Alpha's who came up from 4.20 to 2.80, an increase of 1.40 points.

The total fraternity average for this past quarter was 3.22 an improvement of five points over last year's average. The academic average, or the average for the entire student body was 3.41, or seven points worse than it was for the preceding three quarters.

Fifteen fraternities were above the fraternity average, and twenty were below it. Twenty-two of the fraternities were above the academic average giving them a fair showing in comparison with the rest of the school.

Last year the Chi Omega's rated fourth, but this quarter they had a big drop to stand twenty-fourth in the rating. The two girl's sororities last year were both among the first four of the social orders.

Several fraternities here will be unable to initiate their freshmen at the end of the winter quarter because of their failure to come up to the standard that the fraternities must make to keep in good standing.

The list of the fraternities in the order of their rating, and with their average grades, follows: Pi Beta Phi, 2.62; Theta Phi, 2.73; Phi Alpha, 2.80; Delta Sigma Phi, 2.80; Sigma Delta, 2.81; Alpha Lambda Tau, 2.81; Sigma Alpha Epsilon, 2.85; Tau Epsilon Phi 2.90; Beta Theta Pi, 2.90; Delta Psi, 3.01; Lambda Chi Alpha, 3.04; Sigma Phi Epsilon, 3.10; Kappa Alpha, 3.16; Kappa Sigma, 3.16; Sigma Nu, 3.21. All these fraternities were above the fraternity average.

The following fraternities were between the fraternity average and the academic average: Zeta Psi, 3.24; Alpha Tau Omega, 3.25; Delta Tau Delta, 3.27; Phi Gamma Delta, 3.27; Delta Kappa Epsilon, 3.30; Phi Sigma Kappa, 3.35; Phi Delta Theta, 3.39.

All the fraternities below the academic average are as follows: Theta Chi 3.43; Chi Omega, 3.44; Sigma Zeta, 3.56; Zeta Beta Tau, 3.62; Pi Kappa Phi, 3.63; and Pi Kappa Alpha, 3.65; Chi Psi, 3.71; Sigma Chi, 3.75; Chi Phi, 3.76; Theta Kappa Nu, 3.78; and Phi Kappa Sigma, 3.88.

Furthermore, education has become a profession. The days of the little Red Schoolhouse with its primary, grammar, and high schools rolled into one are past. In the interest of greater efficiency, division of labor has entered the field of education and divided it up into separate units. Accordingly, there must be some general rule under which the teaching is done in each division in order that coordinated system may be formed and the student's education advanced smoothly from one step to the next. These general theories must be learned by the teacher just as the lawyer must know his law or the doctor his medical technique.

But education is less definite and more subject to change than other professions. Research in the field is continually bringing to light improved methods. A good teacher cannot afford to allow himself to get into a rut but must keep abreast of the times. This is best done by taking courses in a university where the professors in the department have been able through careful research to obtain a knowledge of the best methods.—Harvard Crimson.

SECOND WELDING CONTEST OPENED

Electric Company of Cleveland Offers Rewards for Skill in Welding Design.

The Lincoln Electric Company, of Cleveland, has opened its second arc welding contest. This contest offers substantial rewards to engineers and designers for their skill and ingenuity in utilizing the advantages of arc welding in the redesign of any present product, or in the design of any proposed product or structure. For the forty-one best papers describing this work, $17,500 will be awarded by the Lincoln Electric Co.

For first prize paper, $7,500; for second prize paper, $3,500; for third prize paper, $1,500; for fourth prize paper, $750; for fifth prize paper, $500; for sixth prize paper, $250; for seventh to forty-first prize papers, $100 each.

The jury of awards, who will judge the papers entered in this competition, will be composed of the faculty members of the electrical engineering department of Ohio State University under the chairmanship of Professor Erwin E. Dreese, head of the department, and such other faculty members as he may select.

The purpose of the second Lincoln arc welding prize, as announced by the sponsors, is to stimulate designers and engineers in every line of industry to think of the manufacture of their own products, utilizing the advantages of arc welding, and to increase the feasibility of its application.

This contest is open to any person in the world except the employees of the sponsors. The closing date for competition is October 31, 1931. Requests for complete details governing the contest may be obtained from the Lincoln Electric Company, box 683, Cleveland, Ohio.

QUERIES CHOSEN TO BE DISCUSSED BY DI AND PHI

ed . . . A number of advantages could be cited in favor of such a consolidation, the chief one being that it would make possible the carrying forward of a unified state educational program. In addition, the greater prestige and the more powerful influence that would be wielded by a large institution constitutes a strong reason for consolidation . . . The subject of engineering education should be thoroughly gone into and also the necessity of either expanding or abolishing the medical school at the University . . . A number of schools have been losing many of their faculty members because of salary differences. Some few of the institutions charge non-residents of the state higher tuition fees. A definite policy should be worked out in this regard . . . Unless a definite program is evolved it is impossible to predict the place which each institution will occupy in the picture of higher education."

Science Fellowships Open to Graduates

A number of fellowships in the biological sciences are granted by the National Research Council through a board which this year met the first week in February and will meet again in the spring.

These National Research Fellowships are given in zoology, botany, anthropology, psychology, agriculture, and forestry, and are for study and research in America or abroad. They are open to citizens of both sexes of the United States and Canada who possess a Ph.D. degree or its equivalent, and are intended primarily for relatively recent graduates and not for those already professionally established. The purpose of these research fellowships in the biological sciences is the promotion of fundamental research in these subjects through the development of an increasing number of thoroughly trained investigators.

The basic annual stipends awarded are: $1,800 for unmarried fellows and $2,300 for married fellows in America, or $1,800 and $2,400 respectively with additional travel allowance for fellows appointed to study in Europe. All the awards are made for one year, but the fellowship may be renewed.

The fellowships are not granted to any institution or university, but the choice of a place to work is left to the fellow, subject to the approval of the Board. Appointments are for full time and no other renumerative or full time work is allowed.

Students who wish consideration by the Board, should file their application with the chairman before March 15 in order to insure such consideration at the last meeting in the spring.

Georgetown Offers Graduate Fellowships

Georgetown University and the American University, both situated in Washington, D. C. have issued announcements of fellowships granted in their respective graduate schools.

Georgetown offers fifteen fellowships in the graduate school of art and sciences for the year 1931-32, six in philosophy, three in history, three in English, and three in economics. These are valued at $800 to $1,000 a year, the holders being expected to give a portion of time as assistants in the under-graduate department or as proctors in the under-graduate residence halls. Applications for these should be made before March 1, and awards will be made by April 1.

The American University announces through Chancellor Lucius C. Clark the offering of one fellowship of $1,500 in each of the departments of history, government, and economics, applications to be made before March 15.

From the stipend allowed, the fellow will be required to pay tuition of $300 for the year and the registration and library fees which amount to eight dollars a year. They will be expected to utilize the facilities available for research in Washington.

FORMER BOXING COACH WATCHES TEAM WORK OUT

Ed Butler Spent Wednesday in Chapel Hill; Was Captain Tar Heel Team in 1928.

Ed Butler, who captained and coached the Carolina boxers a few years ago was in Chapel Hill Wednesday to look over the 1931 edition of Coach Rowe's leather pushers.

Butler was Southern Conference welterweight champion in 1927. He was elected captain the following year and led his team to the Southern Championship. In 1929, his first year out of college, Butler took over the coaching assignment and turned out another championship team. Since the 1929 season Butler has been practicing law in Morganton, N. C.

While here Butler had the chance to see four men who fought under him three years ago. Archie Allen, who won the lightweight crown that year is now acting as freshman coach while Noah Goodridge, Obie Davis, and John Warren, sophomore stars under Butler, are serving their last year in collegiate competition this winter.

ORCHESTRA PLANS TO GIVE CONCERT FEBRUARY 18TH

Symphony Orchestra to Make More Frequent Appearances In the Future.

The University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Professor T. Smith McCorkle, will play a concert in the Music Auditorium on Wednesday evening, February 18 at eight-fifteen o'clock.

The University orchestra has now reached the place where it is entitled to the name symphony because of its size, its instrumentation, and the type of music played. The organization is made up of fifty persons, which number comprises an instrumentation consisting of first and second violins, violas, cellos, basses, first and second flutes, oboes, clarinets and bassoons; first and second trumpets and cornets; first, second, and third French horns; trombones, tuba and timpani.

Plans have been formulated that call for more frequent appearances of the orchestra in the future. At least one other program besides accompaniments for several concerts will be played this year

The program Wednesday evening is made up of three divisions. The first group of three numbers: Ballet music from "Rosamunde," Schubert; "Gavotte," Gluck; "Contra Danse," Beethoven.

The second division of the concert is a Bach Suite in five parts, consisting of an overture, a rondeau, a badiniere, the air, and two gavottes played as one movement. In this suite Bach combines with his quality of formality a marked lightness and grace and represents both polyphonic and homophonic music

COMMERCE DEAN TALKS TO SOPHS

Carroll Points Out Aim of Commerce Department in Chapel Talk Friday.

In his talk at sophomore chapel yesterday morning, Dean Dudley DeWitt Carroll discussed some of the purposes, and management of the Commerce School.

According to Carroll the department's primary aim is to develop students planning to enter any one of the three professions that require specific business training. These are corporation law, government service, and actual business work itself. It is a necessity to be trained sufficiently in business and commercial methods to have the greatest success in these lines.

Mr. Carroll emphasized the modern tendency toward specialization in the professional fields. He showed how specialization necessitated specific and intensive training in one's chosen line of business. This aids in greater efficiency and concentration of energy. The commerce school, therefore, has cared for this need by including in the curriculum the theoretical commercial studies as well as the actual business methods.

"The basic cultural courses cannot be stressed too much," said Carroll. He pointed out that a man's whole outlook upon life and the breadth of his entire

Odum Returns To Hill Via Airway

Dr. Howard W. Odum made most of his trip home from Washington by airplane. He left Washington, Saturday at 11:30 in the morning and arrived at Greensboro at 2:30 in the afternoon. Dr. Odum left Chapel Hill, Tuesday, February 3, by train for Chicago where he is chief of the social science division of the Century of Progress International Exposition.

The plane he flew to Greensboro in was of the enclosed cabin type for six passengers. He commented on the smoothness of the travel, which enabled him to write in his notebook and take a nap as well and seemed impressed by the good accommodations of the landing fields.

Mrs. Odum has been telling her friends that she is afraid that Dr. Odum will make all of his trips by plane whenever possible, because he has become so fascinated with air travel.

INDEPENDENCE OF PHILIPPINES NEW DEBATE SUBJECT

High School Triangular Contests To Be Held from April 3 to April 16 and 17.

The query for the annual state-wide triangular high school debating contests this year will be "Resolved: That the United States should grant immediate independence to the Philippines", it was announced today by E. R. Rankin, secretary of the state high school debating union.

The preliminary triangular debates are to take place April 3. Schools winning both sides will send their teams to Chapel Hill April 16 and 17 to compete in the finals for the state championship and the Aycock Memorial Cup. The high school track and tennis tournaments are also scheduled at this time.

Secretary Rankin stated that much interest is being shown in the contest, approximately 200 high schools having already announced their intentions of entering.

Material on the subject has been issued in the form of an extension bulletin entitled "Independence for the Philippines," compiled by Mr. Rankin and published by the University Press. This booklet also contains the rules of the contest with affirmative and negative references and a review of past contests.

These debating contests were inaugurated eighteen years ago by the Dialectic and Philanthropic literary societies and the extension division of the University for the purpose of encouraging debating in a systematic fashion in the high schools of North Carolina. Since that time they have grown to be one of the important factors in high school work.

The Goldsboro High School, represented by Eleanor Bizzell and Ezra Griffin, won the Aycock Cup last year.

The infirmary list for yesterday included the following men: Wilbur Hutchens, W. B. Fitzgerald, R. T. Rollins, J. R. Poole, E. A. Neely, Ned Wheeler, H. G. Conner, Jr., A. H. Powell, E. P. Dameron, Peter Hairston, N. W. Dockery, J. S. Holland, and E. N. Shaffner.

Day Of Great Play-writing Is At Hand, Says New York Critic

The day of great acting may be gone, but the day of great play-writing is at hand, is the conviction of Barrett Clark, prominent New York author and dramatic critic and head of the play department of the New York Theatre Guild, who lectured here last night on "Broadway Today." He was introduced by Frederick H. Koch, professor of dramatic literature and director of the Carolina Playmakers.

That the playwright today is allowed to be himself and to say what he wants to say is the most convincing sign that the modern theatre is growing up, Mr. Clark declared. "Not so many years ago," he said "the author of a play was of no more consequence around a theatre than one of the stage hands, and that was before stage hands were unionized; but now the playwright is not only welcomed but expected to be present during the production of his play. This has added dignity to the theatre, the playwright and the audience."

Mr. Clark admitted that the play business in New York has become somewhat of a racket, with its immense financial ramifications. "I get disgusted with Broadway sometimes," he said, "but I am encouraged when I go out and see the work which is being done in the provincial theatres, such as you are doing here. The folk play is beginning to succeed in New York, and I believe that this is the potential solution to one of the greatest problems in the theatre business."

Mr. Clark expressed delight with the recent great success of Lynn Riggs' " Green Grow the Lilacs." He said that such plays as this are entering wedges, and that such playwrights as Riggs, who is now visiting in Chapel Hill, and Paul Green are doing much to broaden Broadway.

In looking at other types of plays, Mr. Clark sees little of interest in the current mystery plays, or in the reviewed works of dead authors, even Ibsen or Shakespeare; but his praise for Eugene O'Neill was unbounded.

In his consideration of the current season, Clark declared that he found it neither better nor worse than any in the past ten years.

Of the current English plays, Clark favored Miss Moonlight as being "very pretty." He referred to Grand Hotel as the outstanding hit of the season, and an exciting piece of theatrical work.

MID-WINTERS GET UNDER WAY WITH FIRST TEA DANCE

The mid-winters got under way yesterday afternoon at five o'clock with a tea dance in Bynum gymnasium the music being furnished by Paul Graham's orchestra. The Junior dance in the evening began at nine-thirty o'clock and was led by Bill Bridgers, of Wilson, Walter Crouch, of High Point, and Steve Lynch, of Asheville. About one hundred girls from all parts of the country were in attendance. The members of the German Club numbered about three hundred.

The set will continue this morning at eleven with another dance in the gymnasium, and a tea dance will take place this afternoon at four. The concluding and regular German club figure will begin at nine tonight with William Dunn, of New Bern, Lynn Wilder, of Raleigh and George Bagby, of Charlotte leading. Officials of the German Club stated that no couples would be admitted to the floor after ten o'clock.

GROVES WILL ADDRESS GEORGIA SOCIOLOGISTS

Dr. Ernest R. Groves, professor of sociology at the University, will be one of the principal speakers at the Georgia Conference on Social Work to take place in Athens beginning March 4. Dr. Groves is authority on social work and has recently completed a tour of lectures on the subject.

Another prominent speaker at the conference will be Dr. Miriam Van Waters, a national authority on problems of juvenile delinquency, who was recently a director of a nation-wide study made under the joint auspices of the President's National Commission on Law Enforcement and Observance and the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection.

INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL HEAD TO GIVE RADIO TALK

Jack Ward, president of the Interfraternity Council, is scheduled to deliver an address over radio station WPTF, Raleigh, next Wednesday afternoon at five o'clock. This talk will be in connection with the series of student activity talks given by Carolina students, the purpose of which is to acquaint residents of the state with various campus activities. The topic of Wednesday's address will be "Fraternities and Their Place in University Life."

The following Wednesday, Jack Dungan, managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel, will speak in this same series on the subject of changes in college education and liberal issues such as optional attendance.

Southern Education Heads Plan Survey

A dispatch from Atlanta, Georgia, reports that plans for a survey of education in the southern states were announced after a prolonged conference of officials of state education associations in Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Virginia, and North and South Carolina. The call for the conference says the "public school systems of the South face a major crisis."

Dr. H. O. Strohecker, president of the South Carolina Education Association, said: "The discussion of the conference developed the fact that in spite of rapid progress, the South Atlantic states are twenty years behind the national average in the number of days the schools are open, and nine years behind in the average salaries paid teachers." Government reports were quoted, he said, to show that the average expenditure per child enrolled for current expenses in the nation was $71. "Typical expenditures in southern states on the same basis are —Alabama $25, Georgia $23, Virginia $35, Mississippi $26, South Carolina $30, and North Carolina $32."

Sunday Meeting of Tar Heel Is Called

The entire reportorial staff of the Daily Tar Heel will meet tomorrow afternoon at five o'clock for the first time since the old form of regular Sunday night meetings was abolished. Since this is a call meeting, it is urgent that all members of the staff attend.

Last fall the staff assembled every Sunday night, a system which has been found impractical, and the staff decided to meet only at the special call of the editor or managing-editor.

At tomorrow night's meeting, the work done by the staff this quarter will be reviewed, and several changes will probably be made in the personnel of the reportorial staff.

NEXT PLAYMAKER READING WILL BE GREEN PASTURES

Professor McKie to Present Next of Readings Series Sunday Evening in Theatre.

Last year's Pulitzer prize-winning drama, Green Pastures, will be read by Professor George McKie of the English department at 8:30 o'clock Sunday night in the Playmakers Theatre, as the regular February play reading.

George Lawrence, a member of the Presbyterian Church choir, will sing the negro spirituals that come in at intervals during the play.

Included in Best Play of 1929-30, a review by Burns Mantle, the Green Pastures was mentioned first. The following is taken from that edition: "The memory of the play was immeasurably strengthened with a majority of its devotees as time passed.

"Probably no other people could accept this retelling of the story of the Old Testament, as a colored preacher in Louisiana might relate it to his Sunday school class, as the American people have accepted and will accept it."

"It demands, first, something of a background of a majority of the American people experienced in living with their puritan and essentially religious forebears. It demands, second; a knowledge of, and a lively sympathy for the southern negro and his trusting and child-like religious faith, to give its best values as a recital in dramatic form.

"By his arrangement of scenes, by his use of a negro choir for the singing of related spirituals, by his sympathetic selection and re-arrangement of the dialogue, and finally, because of his fine feeling for the theatre and the best uses to which the stage can be put, Marc Connelly has created a beautifully effected stage play from a series of splendidly written but detached sketches."

State College Students Will Aid Raleigh's Needy

The sophomore class of North Carolina State College recently voted unanimously to give their Sunday night lunches for the rest of the year to relieve the suffering in the mill sections of Raleigh and to provide milk for the undernourished children in city schools. The junior and senior classes had previously taken like action at their regular monthly meeting last Wednesday night.

DEAN ANNOUNCES SCHOLARSHIPS IN GRADUATE SCHOOL

Positions Available as Fellowships Amount to Over $18,000.

Fellowships valued at more than $18,000 and a number of scholarships and other appointments for the academic year 1931-32 were announced yesterday by Dr. W. W. Pierson, dean of the University Graduate School.

Applications must be filed with the dean not later than March 15, it was stated.

Twenty-six teaching fellowships, carrying free tuition and $500, making them worth approximately $600 each, are to be awarded to graduate students. The recipients will be expected to devote a part of their time to instruction or other prescribed work.

A limited number of appointments with a stipend of from $500 to $800 and free tuition will also be available to graduate students, who may be required to give half of their time to instruction in the department to which they are assigned.

Scholarships with free tuition are to be awarded fifteen men or women in the Graduate School.

The Ledoux fellowship of $300 and free tuition for research in chemistry, and the two Graham Kenan fellowships in philosophy, with a stipend of $700 and free tuition, are likewise available to both men and women in the Graduate School.

Through the Institute of Research in Social Science, there will be from eight to twelve appointments available, carrying an allowance of $1,000 annually for the expenses of students who will devote full time to research.

ENGINEERS MEET TO DISCUSS BALL

Each Student to Have Two Bids, Including One for Himself And Friend.

At the mass meeting of students in the engineering school yesterday the plans for the ball to be given by the engineers were discussed and explained.

According to the plans, each engineer may get two invitations, one of which will be for his own use, and the other to be given to his guest. In any event, at least one girl must go to every invitation used.

The ball will be conducted under strict regulations, will be well chaperoned and will be formal in nature. The chaperones will be Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Lear, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Hoefer, Mr. and Mrs. R. F Stainback, and Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Baity.

Electrical engineers may obtain their invitations from Pat Hayes or Frank Jaycocks in the senior room. Rankin White, Tom Riddick, and John Brown will give out invitations in the senior room to the civil engineers. Invitations for the chemical engineers will be distributed by Raymond Ruble, Adam Fisher, and George McCormick in the senior room. Bob Plummer and Aubrey Parsley will have charge of the invitations for the mechanical engineers and will distribute them from their senior room.

Engineers are advised to obtain their invitations at an early date, as the supply is limited.

A Loyal Son Of the University

The unexpected death of C. Felix Harvey, of Kinston, president of the General Alumni Association means the loss to the University and to the state of one of the best friends of education. Since his graduation from this institution in 1892 he has been one of Carolina's most loyal sons, ever realizing the growing importance of education and befriending his alma mater at every opportunity. While at the University he was an outstanding student, but after going out into the world of business he showed even more his qualities of leadership. Becoming his father's partner in business, he soon rose to a commanding position in the business affairs of his section, always furnishing an intelligent and progressive leadership. He was never content to see his town and section in a state of stagnation, but always urged progress.

Unlike many alumni, he never became so emerged in business as to forget the University. He understood the part of education in the development and progress of his state and encouraged the constant expansion and growth of the University. He served this institution as a trustee for many years and none were more interested in its future than he. A few weeks ago he was elected president of the Alumni Association thus showing the confidence and respect his associates held for him. His death takes from the University one of its most loyal sons.—J. C. S.

Sidelights

By J. H. Smith

Upon the first appearance of a new column it seems to me that the ethical thing to do is to state the aims of the new brain-child, however under-developed it (refering to the child, not the brain) may be. Sidelights was conceived with but one purpose, and that arises from a friendship with "Block" Bryson. The other day we heard it clearly and emphatically stated that Mr. Bryson wrote the world's worst newspaper column. Now "Block" is a friend of ours so it makes us very sad to hear his work referred to in such a manner. But there is only one way to suppress such remarks, and that is to write a worse column than he does. Consequently the purpose of Sidelights is to displace Chips off the Old Block at the cellar. To some this may seem impossible, but let us hope for the best (or worst).

Someone certainly pulled a fast one when this house-party rule was made. We have heard that it is to be enforced by switching off the lights in fraternity houses one hour after the dance is over. While admitting that, like prohibition, it is a noble experiment, we contend that it will be just as unpopular and just as big a failure. And is it hard on the campus cowboys? Flash light sales will probably increase enough to end the business depression, so it might have its good points. Well, gentlemen. I'll meet you in the dark.

Tonight the Dukes (usually spelled with a small "d") invade Carolina, bringing with them evil designs to lower U. N. C. in the big five standings. A good part of the Duke student body will be here—if there is such a thing as a good part of said gathering. We figure that the White Phantoms will have a surprise party ready for Crossen and Company, and that someone is going to get his feelings hurt. Anyhow it's going to be a great game.

In Wednesday's Tar Heel there was a news item stating that Pennsylvania is to follow Penn State's example and place all athletics in the hands of the physical education department. The salaries of the coaches will be the same as those of the professors, and the coaches are to have the same authority. It looks as though these widely known schools are due for a fade out athletically. Both have made impressive records in the past, but from now on the great Penn teams will be just a memory. Athletic teams, especially football, are universities' greatest means of advertising. Let's hope that this result of the overemphasis hoey spreads no further than the boundaries of the State of Pennsylvania.

The little taste of spring we have just survived pretty nearly ruiner everything. Just as we discarded the red flannels and got out the tennis racquet and golf clubs, along comes some more winter before we have time to get anything except spring fever out of the warm days. Which only goes to prove that you can't fool the groundhog.

It won't be long now. The mud-slinging season draws nigh. The campus politicians are already starting their pre-season workouts, and the big frame-ups are under way. Secret meetings, desperate plots, and throat cutting are now in order. But in spite of all the mystery it is the most delightful time of the year for the average Carolina man. Rides are plentiful, free smokes are to be had in abundance, every man is greeted like an old and honored friend by the "big boys". The lowly freshman is treated with the same respect as the dignified senior. We are all equals. Who says that the vote is not all powerful? Everyone has a big time except the street cleaner.

So if you'll tolerate one more about the absent-minded professor we'll promise to sign off. No, this one is not about the guy that slammed his wife and kissed the door good-bye. This gent merely spent the night trying to get his pants off over his head.

With Contemporaries

Educational Milk

A course carrying regular college credit has recently been announced by Barnard College which provides for several hours' supervised rest each day. The students in this course will be required to recline leisurely in deck chairs, and at specified times will be served milk and crackers.

The purpose of this course is superficially commendable: students are worn out by activities, athletics, late studying, this, that, and the other; they won't of their own accord take care of themselves; therefore, it is the colleges' duty to take care of them whether they want to be healthy or not.

This is not a purely local situation at Barnard; it is a frank admission of a tendency which pervades the entire American college system. "I am convinced," the Dean of Columbia College once remarked, "that the youth of college age at the present time are as immature morally and as crude socially as they are undeveloped mentally."

All right, granted! Also granted, that the agencies of a university official and unofficial which undertake this minute regulation of student conduct are wiser, more experienced, and better able than the students to do it themselves! Then, what is to be done about it?

First, it might be well to see what has caused the condition. The students were babied along in high school—their play was supervised, their rest given in doses, their reading spoon-fed, etc, etc. Similarly they have been coddled along through college—as freshmen, as sophomores, as juniors, and even as seniors. When they haven't made their grades they have been wept over by the university; when they haven't made good in activities they have been stormed at by the university; when they haven't acted as many people in authority would—again, who are no doubt wiser and more experienced — they have been jumped on. The fault has been expediently glossed over; and the underlying condition has been made worse.

And here is the last straw: When the students haven't rested, the college has enticed them by dangling credits before their eyes into reclining in deck chairs and drinking their milk without squalling. Thank heavens, they haven't forgotten the milk for these Barnard babes—we can all rest easily now that we are assured that they will get their regular feedings.—Student Life.

College Atmosphere

Preparatory schools and colleges have been the subjects of books and consequently of movies ever since they came into existence. The fact that, until recent years, a college student was a rare individual in most parts of the country made people curious about his life habits. College students are not rare today, but the interest in

With The Politicians

The editor-in-chief of The Daily Tar Heel has agreed to publish statements and propaganda issued by the political parties and candidates appealing to the student body for election in the forthcoming balloting on the part of the student body. In so far as there is no slander or libel included in the articles they will be printed verbatim. Naturally they are not the editorial opinion of the editor-in-chief.

New Group Stands For Non-Frat Men Who Are Qualified

The present month has witnessed the appearance of a new political organization on the campus, called by its leaders "The Complete Non-Fraternity Political Organization." The party grew out of the feeling on the part of its organizers that non-fraternity men are not sufficiently represented in campus offices, "fraternity men being in the decided majority of the campus elective positions."

Officials of the new non-fraternity group, which includes J. C. Williams, Bill Speight and F. C. Joyner, have made the following statements for publication in the Daily Tar Heel: "The purposes of the non-fraternity party are emphatically not to rupture civil friendship existing between fraternity and non-fraternity men, as has been alleged. Our ranks embrace a complete roster of non-fraternity men who are worthy candidates. The organization which we have unapologetically formed is aimed at improvement of the present system of representation through election of these men. Our action has been taken on the premise that the privilege of grouping individual efforts to achieve a common end prevails wherever democracy is in operation.

The new group stands unalterably for non-fraternity men and lists as the chief planks of its platform: Enlargement of the scope of the local student federation; the prosecution of any and all measures designed to prevent the proposed ten per cent cut's being realized, and all like measures involving curtailment of the University's program.

New All-Campus Party Campaigning On Efficient Men

With the announcement of the formation of a "Non-Fraternity Political Organization" for the express purpose of putting into office none but non-fraternity men, comes an organization of larger scope and called the "All-Campus Party" which is seeking sincerely to see that the all factions are fairly represented, and that their party offers for campus honors only those persons best fitted to occupy them because of their unusual ability and efficiency.

The All-Campus Party headed by John Lang, non-fraternity man, has already settled upon what they believe to be the very best qualified non-fraternity men to run for offices. In a meeting Thursday night the non-fraternity men of the organization met to fight any attempt to divide the University into warring non-fraternity and fraternity camps. The non-fraternity men of the All-Campus Party are being led by Beatty Rector, Hamilton Hobgood, F. M. James, Bill Jarman, Lee Greer, Slim Medford, Jack Dungan, and others.

Hobgood speaking for the group issued the following statement for the Tar Heel yesterday, A party calling itself "The Complete Non-Fraternity Political Organization" has claimed that their organization speaks for the entire non-fraternity group. There is an increasingly large number of non-fraternity men who have assured us that they view with alarm a political campaign based upon a dead and insidious issue which strikes at the roots of our amity, and while we firmly believe that there should always be two or more candidates for every office, we deplore any effort to split the student body for political purposes by a dangerous issue and unfair slander, and sincerely hope that the party calling itself a non-fraternity organization will see fit to run on the basis of the fitness and efficiency of its candidates. We believe that the majority of the non-fraternity men are behind us in our program."

mental horizon depend largely upon this side of his education. He demonstrated the absolute demand for a knowledge of at least one foreign language by every prospective business man which he said is caused by the imperative need for communication due to the lessening to a great degree of international barriers and distances.

"The first three years in the commerce school," the speaker pointed out, "are designed to give the mind the ability to range freely and easily in intellectual fields." The last year proceeds in training that is concentrated on the individual's own life work so he is acquainted with the problems in that particular line that will confront him later.

In closing his talk Mr. Carroll discussed the importance of self-discipline and said that this point was especially poignant to the future man of business.

Charles Fishburne and Lou Heck, of the Virginia Seminary, are scheduled to speak to the freshman chapel on Monday and Tuesday, Henry Johnston, Jr. announced. These students are accompanying the Reverend Thomas C. Darst, Bishop of the eastern Carolinas, on a visit to Chapel Hill.

as these two forms were treated in Bach's time.

The last part of the program is Haydn's "Symphonie Militaire" in four movements. Haydn has been affectionately called the "Father of the Symphony" for, more than any other composer, he established a set of certain definite rules for its composition of a symphony.

This program as a whole maintains a balance that is representative of the orchestral music of the classic period. At the next program the orchestra will offer more modern compositions.

Yale Association Is Forty Years Old

In the annual report of the Yale Alumni University Fund Association, made public January 9, by Lansing P. Reed, chairman of the Association, the assistance offered to Yale by its alumni during the past forty years is described. This year, the Association is giving special support to Yale in order that it may maintain its retiring allowances and group insurance for faculty members, and provide more scholarship funds for self-supporting students.

"Forty years ago this spring," Mr. Reed said, "the infant Yale Alumni Fund Association celebrated its first birthday with the announcement that during its first year, 385 Yale men had contributed $11,015. Last year a total of $375,000 was contributed by 7,689 alumni, including payments to the Endowment Fund through our Fund."

Encounter With Duke Tonight Slated As Epic In State Cage History

Carolina Given Edge Over Blue Devils Historically and On Paper.

LOSE TO DAVIDSON

Dameron Expected To Be Back On Court; Goodson Stars For Wildcats.

The sport fans who know their history are doing some extensive prognosticating about the Carolina-Duke basketball game here tonight. The varsity game will start at eight-thirty, following a freshman game at seven.

They think it's going to be a basketball epic for North Carolina, and they go back to campaigns of 1929 and 1930 for their reasons. Like this:

Croson, playing his final year, Councillor and Werber, and Duke's other speed demons, on February 1, 1929, in Duke's gym, beat Carolina rather badly 36-20.

Coach Jim Ashmore picked the flaws in Carolina's game, trained his charges extensively for two weeks, and February 16, 1929, Carolina was host to Duke here in the Tin Can.

Few people ever understood how Coach Ashmore could train that team to beat Duke's "lightnin' express," but they did. They grabbed an early lead, and Hackney, Satterfield, and Harper showed the way to a 27-24 victory that netted Carolina a state title.

The year 1930 came very near to being an exact duplication. On February 1, Duke's cyclonic five blew up and down the home court for a landslide of a 36-14 victory.

Two weeks later, February 15, to be exact, Carolina went to Durham, and Coach Ashmore had the Tar Heel defense so much improved that Carolina just lost 37-36 and had a one-point lead with seconds to go, when a Tar Heel guard lost his head and threw the ball away.

The current season netted Duke a 30-18 win for the first Carolina game, and it was Carolina's only bad licking in the Big Five. That was January 31. Saturday night, exactly two weeks later, the Tar Heels engage the Blue Devils again, and if history runs true, Carolina is going to be at its top play for this second Duke game.

Dameron, star center, is slated to be over his poison ivy and back in top form, and for this important Big Five tilt, the Tar Heels will probably start Dameron, with Edwards and Hines, forwards; and Alexander and Captain Marpet, guards.

Duke is expected to start with Rogers and Capelli, forwards; Croson, center; and Shaw and Robertshaw, guards.

Captain Goodson "got hot" in the second half Thursday night and sunk five difficult field goals to score all but one of his team's tallies in that period and feature Davidson College's 30-28 victory over Carolina's Tar Heels in a Big Five game.

Davidson held a 19-16 lead for first half play, which was featured by the work of Mathis, Davidson forward, who dropped in four field goals during that period.

It was "Too Much Mathis" in the first half, and "Too Much Goodson" in the second, to put one picture on the doings of the game.

First half play saw the score tied five times and the lead changing as many times. In the second half Davidson stayed in front at all times, although Carolina came within a point at 24-23 and later at 26-25.

In the first half the teams tied at every even number, ex-

College Grid Is Best Foundation For Pro Players

Professional Game No Longer "Haven for Thugs," Noted Official Avers.

College football is the foundation and the great developing factor of professional football, avers Ed Thorpe, famous eastern football official and assistant to the president of A. G. Spaulding Company, who is here on business.

Professional football was once looked upon as a "haven for bowery thugs, a game in which shady tactics rather than a thorough knowledge was the deciding factor," Mr. Thorpe said.

It's different now, he thought. Coaching has reached the acme of perfection. The colleges are turning out smart football players, keen but clean competitors. The professional teams are taking more and more collegians, and the lessons learned in rigorous college training stick when the boys turn pro.

The pros give everything, smartly but cleanly, for their profession, just as they gave all to win their coveted monogram. As a result the pro's conduct has changed, the game is becoming more and more similar to the college game, and it is increasing greatly in popularity as a result, thinks Mr. Thorpe.

TWO FRATS TIED IN BOWLING RACE

Chi Phi and Sigma Nu Teams Lead Race in Pin Tournament.

There has been organized recently an inter-fraternity bowling league, composed of six fraternities on the Hill: Sigma Nu, Chi Phi, Pi Kappa Phi, Kappa Alpha, Delta Sigma Phi, and Sigma Chi. The league bowls a set of three games every Tuesday night. This past Tuesday, the initial games were played at the Durham Bowling center. Chi Phis and the Sigma Nus won all three of the games in their matches to go into the lead in the race.

J. A. Hudson, a Chi Phi, carried away the individual honors with a 116 pin game and a set of 302. The Pi Kappa Phi team had high team game of 471 and the K. A.s had high team set with a score of 1375.

ONLY FOUR GAMES LEFT BEFORE S. I. C. TOURNEY

Carolina's quintet has but four games left to play before the Southern Tourney, and all four promise thrills galore. The Duke game here tonight will just about settle both teams' chances for the Big Five title. The Wake Forest game there February 19 will end Carolina's Big Five campaign, and pit the Tar Heels against the team that pulled the surprise upset of the year by beating State 20-19 on State's own floor. The V. M. I. and Sewanee games here February 21 and 24 will be Southern Conference tilts, the results of which will probably determine whether Carolina's Phantoms will get to go to the Southern Tourney this year.

One of the newer economists seems to believe we are suffering from overproduction of everything except potential buyers. This looks to us like skilful propaganda to boom the market in triangular gaments.—Boston Herald.

MISSED FIRST CHANCE AT REVENGE

The Tar Heel basketball team missed its first chance to get revenge over Big Five teams which had previously defeated it by losing to Davidson Thursday night. But tonight Coach Ashmore's men will have their second opportunity to get even with the Duke Blue Devils, who have been licking them regularly since the 1929 season.

The licking handed to them by the Blue Devils earlier in the season was the worst defeat that they have met this year and they will be making an especial effort tonight to turn in a win. They will have to play an entirely different brand of basketball, however, if they expect to win. For they were sadly off in following up shots and shooting fouls against Davidson. Sandy Dameron has not yet fully recovered from his poison ivy infection, but he is very anxious to get with Croson of Duke to even an old feud between them, and it is not improbable that he will get into action tonight. His return to the lineup would help Carolina's chances considerably. Smith played a nice game Thursday, however.

Only two more weeks of basketball, and then the Tar Heels will be off for Atlanta to make their bid in the conference tourney. The remainder of their games will be on the home court, with the exception of a game with Wake Forest next week.

BOXERS SET FOR BOUTS AT DUKE

Captain Noah Goodridge and his men will be off for Durham Tuesday night to meet the Blue Devil pugilists. They have enjoyed their ten day rest and should be in top form to encounter the Duke outfit. Carolina will be heavy favorites since they are undefeated, and Duke has dropped bouts to Louisiana State.

MORE TALK ABOUT OVER-EMPHASIS

Well, Knute Rockne has had his say about the over-emphasis situation. He gave them all a chance to make their comments, and now he comes forth with an attack on the eastern boys and their ability to stand the gaff. Here's what he says about it:

"It's only in the over-populated areas along the Atlantic seaboard where the boys like to go out the night before the game and tear down the town, that there has been any cry of 'over-emphasis.' You don't hear anybody in the south, middle west or west raising the question, do you.

"These eastern boys just can't take it. Blocking is what wins or loses football contests and they can't stand the punishment it administers. Either they haven't the hardihood or else they don't keep in condition so imperative to a successful gridiron team.

"You can't name a college or a university," says Rockne, "that requires spring football practice. If the men were not interested you could not make them turn out."

We haven't asked Chuck Collins what he thinks about this over-emphasis and spring practice talk, but we venture to say that he agrees wholeheartedly with his teacher. He has some sixty boys working down at the stadium daily learning more about the game, so that they will know more about it next fall, but it is not compulsory that they go out.

FAST BLUE IMPS FACE TAR BABIES IN PRELIMINARY

Carolina Yearlings Flash to Win Over Davidson Frosh by 25-14 Count.

HAVE WON FIVE GAMES

Victory Over Duke Tonight Will Give Blue and White Youngsters Claim To Title.

The Carolina Tar Babies, boasting four straight wins, will engage the Duke Blue Imps tonight in a preliminary to the varsity encounter at seven o'clock in the Tin Can. The Tar Babies have recorded successive wins over State Freshmen, Woodberry Forest, V. M. I. Rats, Augusta Military Academy, and Davidson Freshmen. A win over Duke tonight will give the yearlings a good claim to the state title, having won over Wake Forest, Davidson, and split with State.

The Blue Imps lost to State earlier in the season by the narrow margin of one point for their only defeat of the season, while the Tar Babies have two defeats in the big five standings.

In a fast preliminary to the varsity encounter Thursday night the Carolina frosh won over the Davidson Wildkittens 25-14. The score at halftime was 15-10. The game was close and hard fought throughout the first half but the Tar Babies opened up in the final period to score ten points to the visitors four. The lead see-sawed back and forth during the first half with first one team and then the other holding the advantage. In the latter stages of the first half the Carolina basketeers took the lead and were never topped.

Virgil Weathers, star forward, led the individual scoring with three field goals and a trio of free tosses for nine points, while Fisher, his running mate, got six. McCachren, guard, outstanding in his floor work, also getting six points.

Evans, forward, scoring seven points, and Lafferty, center, played best for Davidson.

MARPET PULLS UP ON DAMERON IN SCORING

Sandy Dameron, center, and Captain Artie Marpet, guard, were tied with 101 points apiece for high scoring honors for the Carolina Basketball team, according to statistics up to February 12, just released by Manager Chauncey Royster. Marpet pulled up on Dameron when the latter missed two games of the Northern trip due to a case of poison ivy he contracted. Tom Alexander, guard, and Paul Edwards, utility star, also pulled past Wilmer Hines, forward, who formerly had third place. The other Tar Heel leaders are Alexander 63, Edwards 58, Hines 57, and Moore 44.

PHI GAM'S UPSET BETA FENCERS IN INTRAMURAL TILT

Startling Victory Over Campus Champs Gives Winners Edge On 1931 Title.

The first upset of the intramural fencing league occurred Thursday afternoon when the Phi Gam's kicked the dope bucket all over the Tin Can to take a 5-4 decision over Beta Theta Pi, defending intramural champions. Phi Gamma Delta entered the fencing league this year with a new and unknown team, while the veterans Beta squad has been favored to cop the title again.

Kent Creuser led the Phi Gams to victory by taking all three of his bouts in great style. Jim Hubbard and Pitkin scored wins over Waugh to round out the scoring for the winners. Fenker and Lynch both defeated Hubbard and Pitkins to account for the Beta points.

Thursday's win makes the Phi Gams look like potential winners since the Betas won an exhibition match over Zeta Psi last week.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Best House Gets Forfeit

The Best House received a forfeit yesterday afternoon in the intramural basketball league when the Law School team failed to put in an appearance.

Carr Protests Grimes' Win

Led by Watson, star forward, with fourteen points, Grimes defeated Carr yesterday afternoon 36-14. Colyer and DeRose played good games for the winners, gathering eight points.

Carr protested the game on the grounds that DeRose, Grimes guard, was ineligible to participate in intramural basketball due to the fact that he has played in several freshmen games.

Double Forfeit

The Zeta Psi and Sigma Chi game was declared a double forfeit as both teams failed to appear.

The Deke-S. A. E. game was declared a double forfeit as neither team appeared.

Phi Delt-Delta Sig Tilt Postponed

The game scheduled for yesterday afternoon between the undefeated Phi Delts and the Delta Sigma Phi's was postponed until a later date.

Aycock Wins Over Independents

Aycock won its sixth victory of the season this afternoon, defeating the Independents 30-9. Aycock jumped away to an early lead and were never in danger. Efland led the attack for the winners with twelve points.

The chief objection to these swell gangster funerals is their infrequency.

Raleigh Boxers Practically Clinch State Hi Ring Title

Durham Sends Six Men to Finals Of Wrestling Championship; Leaksville Offers Only Formidable Competition.

DUNAWAY BROTHERS WIN

Wilson Only Rivals of Capital City Pugs; Sends Three To Finals of Boxing Tourney.

The Raleigh high school pugilists sent six men through the semi-finals in the Tin Can here yesterday morning to practically clinch the state high school championship. Wilson, Raleigh's closest rival for the title, lost two bouts during the morning and was able to send only three men on to the finals.

There were only two matches held in the semi-finals of the wrestling tournament. Shaw of Bragtown, defeated Steve Douglas of Greensboro in the 145 pound class while Fortune of Durham gained a verdict over Eller of Salisbury in the same weight after an overtime match.

With six men in the finals of the wrestling tournament, Durham seems to have the title sewed up although Leaksville has three strong men in the finals, all of whom will meet Durham men. Salisbury and Greensboro each have two wrestlers left, and Bragtown has one.

The three Dunaway brothers kept their records clear for the season by turning in two decisions and a technical knockout. Bill supplied the knockout punch when he caught Brown of Wilson with a right after one minute and forty seconds of the second round. Brown bothered Dunaway a little in the first round with a beautiful left, but Dunaway came back in the second round to punish his opponent severely. A right to the jaw

California School Announces Awards For Women Students

Twenty-one fellowships and four scholarships at Mills College, California, are open for the year 1931-32 to women who hold college or university degrees. Applications should be in the hands of the dean by March 15, and awards will be made by April 1.

Two of these fellowships are for study in any department and have a stipend of $500. There is a fellowship in music which pays the same, but which is open only to a graduate of Mills College.

Eighteen other Mills College Trustee fellowships and graduate scholarships give to the holder an amount calculated to cover expenses and tuition. Out of this amount the holder will pay laboratory and other fees. They will act as readers, or serve as laboratory supervisors, or in other limited types of instruction. Fields in which these are available are: art, astronomy, botany, and bacteriology, biology and hygiene, chemistry, child study, classics, economics and sociology, education, English, French, geography and geology, German, history and government, home economics, Italian, mathematics, music, philosophy, psychology, Spanish, speech and dramatic art, zoology, and physiology.

Mills College offers four other graduate scholarships which cover the cost of graduate tuition only, two of these for study in any department and two for study in the department of child study.

At Claremont College, Claremont, California, there are available five fellowships valued at $300 each. These allow full time work towards the degree of Master of Arts without requiring any work as assistants or readers. Those desiring these places should make application before March 1, 1931, in order to secure the followship or scholarship for the year 1931-32.

Lighthouse Service Chooses Engineers For Maritime Service

The United States Lighthouse Service of the Department of Commerce selects junior lighthouse engineers from the eligible register held by the Civil Service Commission. Requirement for this position is a college degree in civil or mechanical engineering, although a degree in marine or electrical engineering will be considered.

The activities of the lighthouse service covers nearly all branches of engineering and science, including construction, maintenance repair and improvement of lighthouse construction and equipment both on land and submarine bases. The floating equipment of the service includes lighthouse vessels, bouys, and lightships and their machinery. Many developments in electricity, light, sound, and radio are covered by the illuminating and fog signal apparatus.

The service extends through nineteen districts with offices in cities of maritime importance such as New York, New Orleans, San Francisco, and Honolulu. Junior engineers enter at a salary of $2,000 per year and are eligible for increases in that grade up to $2,600. They are then eligible for further promotion into the grade of Assistant Engineer and Associate Engineer with salaries ranging up to $3,800, which lead to higher engineering and administrative positions in the service.

The Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity will be the guests of the Carolina theatre at a free show tonight. The members of the fraternity are requested to be at the door of the theatre at seven o'clock with their president.

Teacher At Chicago Predicts New Utopia

A future in which man will live in urbanized communities surrounded by forests, speaking one common language and many specialized languages; where poverty is abolished, and perhaps "plumbers will discuss Aristotle," and where morals have lost their force and the home its supremacy, is pictured by Dr. William F. Ogburn, professor of sociology at the University of Chicago.

"The future society of man," says Dr. Ogburn, "will be one where the number of inventions per year will be larger and larger and where the accumulation of civilization and material culture will be greater and greater. A person could once get pretty well acquainted with his culture at sixteen or seventeen years of age, but in the future it will require forty or forty-five years.

"Most persons will not try to learn it all, but will become specialists and speak, in addition to their specialist's language, a common language popularized by the great agencies of communication, the talkies, the radio, newspapers and literature.

"There is no period of quiet and peace ahead, but rather one of continual change. This condition of change will change our code of morals, for the past cannot offer guidance for an ever-changing society. Right and wrong will give way before social expediency. Also the majesty of the law will lose its prestige, for laws are difficult to build up in a changing society."

Indians in Oklahoma Suffer from Drought

Hugo, Oklahoma, February 13—Many of the 80,000 members of the five civilized Indian tribes in this state are receiving rations from the Red Cross in their first encounter in many years with the dread spirits of famine and fever so aptly described in "Hiawatha".

No class has suffered more keenly from the effects of the drought in Oklahoma than the Indian. Reluctantly, he has come to the Red Cross relief headquarters, with his white friends, to get his weekly allotment of food. Indians have been placed upon the Red Cross committees, to make it easier for the men of this proud race.

Their white brethren in other states believe that the Indian is cared for by the government. But the government is unable to take care of a large portion of the Red Man population of this state.

While there are some Indians in comfortable financial circumstances today they are the exception and not the rule. The great majority are poor, and in many instances face grave need because of crop failures and inability to get work or relief.

Describing the trials of Hiawatha's tribe, Longfellow wrote:

"All the long and dreary winter—Oh, the cold and cruel winter . . . .

"Oh, the famine and the fever—Ah, the wasting of the famine—Oh, the blasting of the fever!"

Typical of their race and traditions they bear their sufferings with the stoicism and fortitude of "Hiawatha", appealing to the white men for relief only in the direst extremities. They are reticent and proud and secretive as to their own affairs. The only agency they seem to recognize is the Indian Bureau but the bureau is restricted in its operations and now is without funds to provide relief even if it were authorized to do so.

cept 10, up to an including 12, and then Mathis' foul and his action score gave Davidson a 15-12 margin. Smith, Carolina center, batted in a goal in a scramble under the basket, and Marpet caged a two-pointer to put the Heels ahead at 16-15. However, Mathis' field goal and one by Rusk closed scoring for the half with Davidson in front, 19-16.

Two field goals by Goodson started the 'Cats off in the second half on continuation of their victory march. With eight minutes to go the score was 28-26 for Davidson. Five minutes from the end Goodson sunk his last field goal and two minutes later Hines bagged one for Carolina. The rest of the way there was no scoring.

Indian Illiteracy Clinic Is Started

Chief Bird-Rattler, Fish-Wolf-Robe, Mary-Wades-in-the-Water and several other Blackfeet Indians will soon begin school for the first time, when the National Advisory Committee on illiteracy conducts an Indian Illiteracy Clinic on the Blackfeet Reservation beginning March 8th. This is the first Indian illiteracy clinic which has ever been held, and it is the present plan of the committee that it last two weeks, ending on March 22.

The purpose of the clinic will be to find just how much an adult illiterate Indian is capable of learning in an intensive course of that length of time. The committee plans to publish a daily newspaper especially for the Indians, in which they will see their names in print, as well as learn the news of their activities and achievements. Although the paper is to be in simple terms, it is expected that the news will stimulate their curiosity and will add to their vocabulary.

them which the public would never stoop to confess is still shown by the drawing power of any college movie.

Collegians are expected to razz freshmen, to collect conspicuous signs for their rooms, to "crash" gates, and to do anything else which calls for front page headlines. And students generally do all these things because they feel that it is expected of them, rather than because they derive a great amount of actual pleasure from the stunts.

Most of this "typical college atmosphere" has come down from times when colleges were small, and alumni old enough to know better generally sponsor the traditions which they created on some special occasion. They hint that, if traditions disappear, the university will become a dull diploma factory. But organizations on the Purdue campus which have tried recently to secure an open date for a banquet or dance have found that practically every week night on the campus calendar for the next three months is already taken by debates, concerts, convocations, dances, and dramatics. Apparently, their life is not so dull!

Traditions with a purpose merit support, and need no crutches to lean upon; but unnatural pranks which only stamp perfectly sensible young men and women as fools should be allowed to suffocate, as they are bound to do sooner or later anyhow.—E. K. R.—Purdue Exponent.

sent the Wilson boy down for the count of nine and he was still groggy when he came to his feet. Dunaway met him as he left the floor and sunk rights and lefts to the body before scoring another knockdown with a right to the jaw. Referee Archie Allen stopped the fight at this point to save Brown from further punishment.

J. Brown, flashy little Wilson 108 pounder won his second close fight of the tournament by taking a close decision over Llewellyn of Durham. In the other 108 pound bout, Jack Dunaway took the decision over G. Brunnemer of Gastonia after four rounds of fast scrapping. By this victory, Dunaway earned the right to meet Brown in the championship bout.

Gafford of Wilson took a four round decision over L. Brunnemer of Gastonia. Bilisoly of Raleigh took a three round decision over Justes of Greensboro after a close battle. This put Bilisoly against Gafford in the 115 pound class finals.

Farris of Wilson won over Satterfield of Durham in the first fight of the day in the 125 pound class. Farris scored body punches with his right consistently and had the best of the infighting. Both boys were tired, but opened up in the third round.

Frank Jolly of Raleigh slugged out a win over Moore of Gastonia to make it three in a row for Raleigh. Raleigh and Wilson each advanced their men to the finals in the 108, 115, and 125 pound classes. In the Jolly-Moore bout both boys did their share of hard hitting, although Jolly had the edge throughout. Jolly drew blood in the second round and scored a knockdown in the third round. Both boys were on their feet and slugging hard at the bell.

In the 135 pound bouts Shepherd of Gastonia won the decision in three rounds over May of Greensboro, by using a left hook to the body to good advantage, and Al Dunaway of Raleigh got the verdict over Bass of Wilson. This bout was close throughout and went four rounds before the decision was rendered.

Gillie of Leaksville won over Hurst of Gastonia in the 145 pound class after going four rounds. Both boys seemed inclined to wrestle, both were on the floor at the same time on several occasions although neither battler was able to land any damaging blows. Bill Dunaway won the other bout in the 145 pound class by knocking out Brown of Wilson in the second round.

Coach Peele Johnson saw his first man lose when Holder of Durham took the decision over Grady Ferrell in three rounds. The first round was about even but Holder began to pile up the points at the beginning of the second. Holder scored a clean knockdown in the second round but Ferrell came back to put up a determined fight before bowing to superior experience.

In the last fight of the morning Windham of Gastonia met Barham of Leaksville in the 155 pound class. Both boys started off fast with Barham, a southpaw, scoring heavily with his left. After forty-five seconds of the third round had elapsed, Barham slammed his left against Windham's jaw to put the Gastonia boy out of commission. Allen awarded the decision to Barham by a technical knockout.

Archie Allen refereed the bouts with Goodridge and R. S. Matthews acting as judges. Herman Schnell acted as timekeeper for the boxing bouts.

For the wrestling bouts, Peyton Abbott acted as referee with Wallace Case acting as time keeper.

BOOK CLUB GIVES LEAD POSITION TO LIVES OF PIRATES

Alumni Literary Organization Chooses Story of Lafitte Brothers for February.

Lyle Saxon's Lafitte The Pirate is given the honor position by the University of North Carolina Book Club in its selections for February, which were announced yesterday. Other titles on the club's February list are Mr. Courier and Mr. Ives, by Russell Crouse, and Grand Duchess Marie's Education of a Princess.

Professor Fletcher M. Green of the history department has written the commentary for Lafitte The Pirate. It is the life story of Jean Lafitte, a blacksmith of New Orleans, who turned pirate with his brother Pierre. Leaders of a gang of smugglers and pirates, they gave such valuable aid to the government during the War of 1812 that they were pardoned for their nefarious activities. The book tells a vivid story of the Louisiana delta region in the early 19th century.

Once a grand duchess of Russia, now fashion designer in a Fifth Avenue shop is what the Education of a Princess describes as a woman's progress from one of these extremes to the other. Grand-daughter, niece, and cousin of Russia's Czars, Grand Duchess Marie tells of her early life, her political marriage and the disintegration of her country during the World War years. The commentary is by E. E. Ericson of the University English department.

The revival of interest in the Currier and Ives lithographs, quite popular two generations ago, has given Mr. Crouse an opportunity to describe the manners and customs of the nineteenth century. These prints, originally costing about $3, are now worth a thousand times that much. Professor George McKie of the department of English has written the commentary for the book.

EPISCOPAL YOUNG PEOPLE SPONSOR BENEFIT PICTURE

The Young People's Service League of the Episcopal church is sponsoring a benefit movie to be shown at the Carolina theatre today at two-thirty.

The picture which will be shown is "Fighting for the Fatherland," an English version of a German picture filmed during the World War. Many of the scenes were actually taken at the front. This show is similar to "All Quiet on the Western Front," in that it brings out the sordid and horrible side of war.

Next Sunday a show will be given at the Carolina theatre under the auspices of the Kiwanis club. The picture to be shown has not yet been selected.

Holt Awards Made

The committee of deans of the University in charge of awarding the Holt Scholarships announced as winners yesterday, E. C. Funderburk, freshman; W. O. Jones, sophomore; J. W. Long, junior; and D. C. McClure, senior.

Each of these men is to receive $150, but only $100 of the money is available at present for each student.

Visitors to Address Y Cabinets Monday

The programs for the different Y cabinet meetings Monday night will include speeches by a visiting deputation team from the Episcopal Seminary at Alexandria, Virginia, in addition to considerations of plans for the State Student Volunteer Conference, which is to meet here the latter part of this month.

The speakers, four graduate students of the Seminary, will deliver to each cabinet a brief address on the topic, "Opportunities for Life in the Field of Religion."

PLAYMAKERS TO PRESENT PUPPET SHOW THURSDAY

Sue Hastings' Marionettes To Make Appearance at Theatre.

Sue Hastings' famous marionettes will be presented by the Playmakers at the theatre Thursday, February 19, in an afternoon and night production at three o'clock and eight-thirty.

Mrs. Hastings has won a national reputation as a designer of dainty marionettes and as a producer of marionette plays. Five companies from her theatre are playing in various parts of the country and each season she presents a series of performances under the auspices of the New York Theatre Guild and also at Columbia University. Her productions have been popular not only in schools, clubs and at a wide variety of social occasions, but have been especially in vogue at colleges. Among the institutions at which she has played are Columbia University, Drexel Institute, Smith College, Mount Holyoke College, Barnard College, Temple University, University of Virginia, and many others.

Over 500 puppets have been made by Mrs. Hastings and her staff in her New York studio. "Marionettes are almost human," said Mrs. Hastings. "They are as different as real children in a family, and some of them much more temperamental. The worst fault of all is that they will get their strings tangled and it doesn't do any good to spank them."

Marionette plays are the oldest form of dramatic art: Cleopatra is said to have enjoyed them. They have for a long time been popular in Europe, but not until recently have they been generally produced in the United States where now every indication that the country is in the midst of a revival of interest in marionettes. This may be attributed to the great improvement in artistic standards, in choice of plays, in mechanical perfection of the puppets, and the fact that many educational institutions as well as clubs and discriminating individuals are realizing their artistic and entertaining possibilities.

Playmaker Reading

The February reading of the Carolina Playmakers The Green Pastures, will be given by Professor George M. McKie of the English department this evening at 8:30 o'clock in the Playmakers Theatre. George Lawrence will sing the negro spirituals which weave in the play at different intervals.

Committee On Attendance Awaits President's Approval Of Decision

At a meeting of the undergraduate faculty from four until six o'clock Friday, a decision was reached concerning the changes in undergraduate attendance regulations. Due to President Graham's absence from the meeting the change did not receive his approval, and therefore the faculty refused to release the result of the action.

Rumors from reliable sources indicate that the committee has moved to have the number of cuts per quarter divided into two, the maximum number of cuts permitted under the new ruling would be five each quarter where before ten unexcused absences were permitted.

This step considered by many to be retrogressive and not at all compatible with the modern trend in education is said to have been arrived at by the committee in the face of the fact that this year there were more students on the honor roll than ever before, and that leading universities in the country have granted to their students privileges of optional attendance.

UNIVERSITY GRADUATE SCHOOL IS BENEFICIAL LABORATORY FOR STATE

"Research in Progress" Lists Summary of Experimental Work Now Being Done for North Carolina as a Public Enterprise And for the Advancement of Economic Organizations.

By R. W. Madry

That there is a new type of graduate school here at the University, a claim first made by Dr. Edwin Greenlaw eight years ago, seems to be convincingly illustrated by the list of research projects that have been completed or that are now under way.

A summary of the list for the past year has just been announced in a 115-page booklet, entitled "Research in Progress," issued by the University Press.

The chief impression gained from the various projects listed and summarized is that the graduate school has really become "a great laboratory in which experimental work is being done for the state as a public enterprise and for the benefit of private economic and business organizations."

Such was the ideal of what a graduate school ought to be, as enunciated by Dr. Greenlaw, now of Johns Hopkins; and evidence that this ideal is still being held aloft by Dean W. W. Pierson and his associates is supported by what one finds in this little book.

The idea is that the University, through its graduate school, is doing for the state just what the consulting experts in any great business organization do for private business. And the impression is that this idea is being carried out with notable success in Chapel Hill.

Answers Familiar Query

The booklet also answers a familiar query: What do University professors do besides prepare their assignments and teach? The answer is that they continue to study and learn—a process that goes under the name of research when it is carried on by trained and skilled workers.

In the laboratories and lecture rooms, it is shown, graduate students and members of the graduate faculty in more than twenty departments are devoting a large portion of their time to digging up information and data which has a direct bearing on everyday life in North Carolina—information that has immediate application to the solution of everyday problems. The results of these research projects are printed regularly in bulletins which are placed in the University Library and thus made available through the package library service for distribution to anyone desiring them.

Apparently there is no end to the variety of topics on which the research workers at Chapel Hill are collecting facts.

May Revolutionize Cotton

One of the most extensive and important experiments is that being conducted by Dr. Frank K. Cameron, of the chemistry department, and one of his students, Nicholas W. Dockery, of Rockingham, N. C. For some time these two men have been working on the development of a process for utilizing the whole cotton plant, stalk and all, in the manufacture of rayon. Results so far give every indication of success, and since the cotton could be produced for this purpose at only one-twentieth the cost of producing the same amount of lint, the possibilities of the venture are amazing.

Another member of the chemistry department, Richard A. Lineberry, has made an extensive study of ceramic properties of certain North Carolina clays.

In the civil engineering department, Professor T. F. Hickerson has worked out valuable formulae for columns and beams in construction work. The results are now being published in book form. It is believed that they will be of even more practical value than his successful experiments relating to highway curves and earth pressure on pipe culverts.

In the same department, Professor Thorndike Saville has directed studies on beach erosion and inlet closure on the North Carolina coast.

In the economics and commerce department, studies are listed on such timely topics as "The Idleness of Equipment in Industry," and "Some Economic Advantages of High Frequency Radio Transmission Methods.'

Studies on Timely Topics

Higher education in North Carolina, the development of the junior college, and educational development by counties are some of the topics treated by the school of education.

Heading a long list of topics in the department of English is a collection of short stories illustrative of the different geograpical divisions, different attitudes of mind, and different regional dialects of the South from 1840 to the present. The collection was made by Addison Hibbard and turned over to the University Press for publication.

Mid-Term Grades Posted Yesterday

The mid-term grades for the winter quarter were posted yesterday in the registrar's office. Names of students who check all courses do not appear on the list.

A "W" on a course means that the student is weak in that particular subject but that he still has a chance to pass the course. An "X" signifies that the student is exceptionally weak on the subject.

DISMISSAL WAGE BROUGHT BEFORE TAYLOR SOCIETY

Dr. Schwenning Discloses Study On New and Successful Business Innovation.

An address by Dr. G. T. Schwenning and election of officers for two vacant positions were the leading items on the program of the student branch of the Taylor Society meeting Friday night.

Dr. Schwenning discussed as his topic "The Dismissal Wage." He brought out in his talk the fact that at present there is little collected information on this subject. He has obtained his information on this subject from extended correspondence with fifty industrial organizations, ten of which were in foreign countries. The speaker stated that those organizations which had used the dismissal wage had found it very successful and that the general trend of business was towards such an idea. He will continue his studies on this subject and hopes to publish, eventually, his findings.

Immediately following Dr. Schwenning's address, the society elected Adam Fisher vice-president, and William McPherson secretary, to fill two vacant positions. These men were elected in accordance with the society's custom of dividing the official positions equally between men in the schools of engineering and of commerce.

SPANISH SOCIETY ELECTS OFFICERS

At the meeting of the Spanish club Friday evening at eight-thirty o'clock A. K. Shields, of the Romance language department was elected president, V. L. Brown was voted secretary and C. Saylor was made treasurer.

An invitation committee appointed by the president is composed of H. F. Auman, D. M. Lacey, and R. T. Martin. C. H. Cantrell, T. B. Campen, and O. T. Slate are on the program committee.

The whole program was conducted in Spanish, and the following persons gave talks: A. K. Shields, "Ofuscado en Convento"; Edwin Jaffe, "Articulos Periodisticos Elegides"; C. Saylor, "Leyenda de Poema—Cabeza y Corazon"; A. K. Shields, La Musica; and O. T. Slate, "Unas Notas Corticas del Programma."

High School Club Prints Second Issue of Paper

The second issue of the newly-established Proconian, semi-monthly publication of Chapel Hill high school students was issued Thursday. This issue includes articles concerning sports, high school academic contests, and others of interest to the public in general.

BILL ADVOCATING UNIFIED SCHOOLS IS BEFORE HOUSE

State Representatives Are Now Considering Proposal to Combine State Institutions.

A bill advocating the consolidation of the three largest state institutions of higher learning was introduced into the General Assembly Friday morning by Representatives Jeffres, of Guilford, Harris, of Person, Spence, of Moore, Gill, of Scotland, and Mebane, of Rockingham.

According to the provisions of the proposed bill the present trustees of the three schools, the University, State College, and N. C. C. W., will remain in office until January 1, 1933, "and until their successors shall have been elected and qualified." The 1933 general assembly will then elect a hundred trustees of the University to succeed the consolidated board. The executive committee of the consolidated board of trustees of the University shall consist of the executive committee of the boards of the three institutions until August 1, 1932.

A committee composed of the presidents of the three institutions, or whosoever each shall appoint in his place, and six other members selected at large by the Governor, shall be chosen within sixty days after the ratification of the bill. It will be the duty of this committee to work out plans for the bringing about of the unification of the executive control of the three institutions, co-ordinate the general educational program of the new University of North Carolina, and to work out a scheme by which all the problems arising out of the consolidation may be best solved.

The work of consolidation, coordination and unification must be completed by the committee by July 1, 1932. Ten days after the completion of the report, the governor shall submit it to the trustees of the University who may approve or reject it as they see fit. If the report is rejected, it shall be modified by the tustees in accordance with their views.

With in one year after the passage of the act the newly-formed University may award diplomas to living graduates of the three institutions, and also such post mortem diplomas as the faculty members and the board of trustees see fit.

E. P. Dameron, N. W. Dockery, J. S. Holland, E. N. Shaffner, A. H. Powell, Ned Wheeler, J. R. Poole, R. T. Rollins, Wilmer Hutchins, and C. G. Poole were confined to the infirmary yesterday.

Staffs to Meet

A special called meeting of the reportorial staff of the Daily Tar Heel has been called for this afternoon at five o'clock. The city editors, editorial board, and sports editors, are also requested to meet at this time.

It is urgent that all reporters attend this meeting because this is the first combined meeting to take place in some time. There will probably be several changes made in the personnel of the reportorial staff. All persons absent from the meeting must have been previously excused by either the editor or managing-editor.

Long Awaited Completion

The announcement that the Graham Memorial building will be completed shortly comes as the most welcome news to us in years. For four years the present seniors have watched that unfinished building standing on the corner of the campus and have sought some means of completing it. Many plans have been proposed and all of them have been discarded. Editorial writers have written annually of the need of the building until the subject has become triesome. Now we have an alumnus of the University providing the necessary funds for this much needed structure.

Other institutions are providing union buildings for the students and the need of a union for Carolina has been apparent since the Y. M. C. A. building became inadequate for the student population. The Y served for years as the one place where all students could gather frequently but its size has prohibited any large gatherings recently. However, with the completion of Graham Memorial next fall the Carolina students will possess a student union which will enable all to meet on equal footing.

Then there is the sentimental value of the building. President Edward Kidder Graham in the brief four years he served as president distinguished himself as the great educational leader of the state. And we think a student union building provides a memorial appropriate to his name and to his services.

Image-Breakers

When the friends of the late Charles I of England issued their little book, Eikon Basilike, or the Kingly Image, in praise of their sovereign's virtues, John Milton, the young secretary to the council of state during the period of the Commonwealth, attempted to counteract any sentiment in the public mind which might result from the pamphlet by writing Eikonoklastes, or the Image-Breaker. Ever since Milton turned iconoclast—and indeed since the time of all the iconoclasts before him—the public has seen all its heroes attacked and made objects of the invectives of writers and public men.

George Washington, father of our country, has been abused many times. When Rupert Hughes brought forth his biography of him, the author found himself in the midst of a storm of protest. Whether Hughes' material (the controversial matter) was factual nobody seemed to care. Washington was, and still is, a popular hero, and his admirers did not care to have him pulled off the pedestal. After all, Washington did have many admirable traits, and he did many great things. People admire him for his outstanding virtues and for his great deeds, rather than hate him and ridicule him for any personal vices or short-comings which may have been his. Consequently, Washington did not fall from his pedestal in the minds of the people.

As Washington was exposed, so Lincoln at the present time is being examined by the poet Edgar Lee Masters whose book, Lincoln the Man, has caused such protest that a bill has been introduced in the House which would prevent its circulation in the mails. It is not necessary to prevent the inculcation of Masters' ideas by means of legislative enactment. The poet's biography will harm Lincoln not a bit more than the novelist's biography hurt Washington. Lincoln's place in the hearts of his countrymen is a permanent one, and no matter how prodigious a volley of adverse criticism is hurled at his memory, he will always be a great American hero. Let writers make pretty phrases and let poets pen their verses, for they cannot tear down the images of men who have endeared themselves to their people and whose reputations have stood the test of time.—B. An Aid For The Silver Market

The dawn of each new day marks a gloomier business situation. Silver has hit a new record low at 27½ cents an ounce. The market is flooded with the commodity and there seems to be no immediate manner of disposal; therefore, every new suggestion should receive serious consideration.

There is a method which the government might adopt that undoubtedly would assist materially in restoring silver to a more sound basis. The United States could stamp out of their millions of dollars of idle bullion sets of knives, forks and spoons which might sell at cost. In order to do this it would be necessary for the United States to take over, temporarily, household silver manufacturing plants. The precedent already has been established in this respect since the country has entered into the wheat and railroad business in times of crisis. At present a set of six knives, six forks and six spoons retails, moderately priced, at $48. Silver bullion is worth 27½ cents per ounce. A set, such is would retail at the quoted price, would contain bullion worth approximately $9.90. The process of stamping out the ware would cost the United States slightly more than the manufacture of silver dollars, which at present is a total loss. A dollar not only must be stamped, but also must be milled. The government bears this expense burden entirely. A silver dollar is approximately 90 per cent fine. Silverware might be manufactured 95 per cent fine, with five per cent alloy in order to insure durability. The amount of silver saved on this mixture of alloy would insure for the government of about a 50-cent profit on every set sold at $9.90. Every family cherishes genuine silverware. Most families find that its retail price is prohibitive. Selling flat silver at this low price would practically place it within the reach of everyone's pocketbook. Furthermore, with "E. Pluribus Unum" stamped on every piece, the purchaser could be certain that the ware was genuine. The government might distribute the articles through the mails, or through the medium of retail houses, which undoubtedly would be grateful to handle the goods at no profit. This would encourage business, as it would serve as a drawing card.

The industry engaged in manufacturing this article would not necessarily be crippled, for through placing the goods within a more extensive market for a limited time, the demand of the public would be heightened. When the price of silver in the market had reached a more substantial level, the United States would cease manufacturing and return the factories to the owners who once again might sell their commodity at a price more near the original one.

It is easily seen that this venture would assist in returning silver to a normal basis, in nurturing crippled China, and in bringing business generally up to a more healthy status. It would distribute hordes of bullion where it would not be likely to return and would place ore mining once again on its feet. It might be practical for England, Germany and France to some extent to duplicate the plan of this country. This would plug the consequent flow of silver to the United States shortly after its inauguration here.—Minnesota Daily.

Agreement To Cut State Employees Salaries Reached

Members of the state joint appropriations committee of the state legislature have virtually agreed to institute the ten per cent cut in salaries for state employees as recommended by the advisory budget commission. This cut, however, has nothing at all to do with salaries here at the University.

The committee has done nothing as yet about the appropriations for the University or other state institutions of learning.

At The Carolina

"The Easiest Way," Monday's attraction, sees the transposition from the stage to the screen of the David Belasco hit of recent stage history, a play by the same name, written by Eugene Walters. The cast has been particularly well chosen, and most of the figures are well known: Constance Bennett takes the leading role, that of Laura Murdoch. Opposite her is Robert Montgomery, and others are Anita Page, Marjorie Rambeau, and J. Farrell MacDonald. Adolph Menjou supplies his characteristically suave performance. The play is a discussion of a woman's emotional problem and revolves around the question, should a man forgive a woman's missteps?

Tuesday sees another stage production, and this also is one of the most famous books of its type that contemporary writing has produced, brought to the talkies with none of its original elements impaired. "Dracula," from Bram Stoker's celebrated novel of the gruesome blood-sucking vampire Count Dracula, is the feature. The Italian Bela Lugosi takes the role of the sinister figure in the chief characterization, while others in the cast are Helen Chandler and David Manners. The action of the story has become synonymous with the terrible and horrible, and the melodramatic thrills and mystery have made it the leading attraction of this nature.

This week apparently furnishes an uninterrupted series of former stage plays that have been made over into vitaphone productions. Wednesday's picture, "Charley's Aunt," has also a long stage history back of it, and one that attests to its popularity with every type of audience. Charles Ruggles is seen as the Oxford undergraduate who is forced into the role of Charley's aunt, "from Brazil, where the nuts come from," and gives an extremely ludicrous performance. One phase of the picture that should interest college students is that the action takes place against the background of Oxford university, which naturally provides an interesting contrast to the American campus.

The foreign language feature for the week, coming as usual at 11:00 on Wednesday night, is the French production, in French with an all-French cast, "Monsieur, le Fox," starring Leonard Luguet. An additional attraction is added to the program of this night, as will be the custom in succeeding productions of this sort, in a French comedy, "Une Nuit Extravagante."

An original story dealing principally with the underworld and newspaper life in Chicago is the vehicle for Joan Crawford's latest appearance on the screen, "Dance Fools, Dance," which comes Thursday. The scenes attempting a portrayal of social gaity among the elite are done with lavishness, but the other phases of the picture, the exposure of racketeering and criminal methods, are executed with realism. There is a large supporting cast, outstanding favorites of which include Cliff Edwards, Natilie Moorhead, and Joan Marsh.

Nancy Carroll appears Friday in her new picture, "Stolen Heaven." The action is based on a plot which can boast of a good deal of originality, and which is supposed to have been taken from life. It concerns a small-town girl, (Nancy Carroll) without money and at the point of starvation in a big city who forms a compact with a criminal (Phillip Holmes), to spend the last few weeks of life riotously to the end of their combined resources, and then to commit suicide. Of course a love element enters to complicate matters: the couple decide to live on, adopting a new mode of life after quitting their old habits.

One of the outstanding gangster pictures that has appeared recently comes as the attraction Saturday, with Edward G. Robinson in the role of "Little Caesar." This picture does not treat the gangster theme with the hokum commonly associated with Hollywood's version of the careers of modern criminals, but shows this species up as they really are, and reveals that they come to a bad end finally.

Busy Week Confronts Tar Heel Teams

Six Events Comprise Formidable Schedule

White Phantoms Meet Deacons Abroad Thursday and V. M. I. Here Saturday.

BOXERS ENGAGE DUKE

Tar Babies Also To See Action; Two Winter Grid Games Are Carded.

Carolina's athletic teams will have their hands full next week. There will be basketball games with Wake Forest and V. M. I., boxing meets with Duke and Penn State, and wrestling meets with State and Davidson.

Wake Forest will be met in the Deacons' gym Thursday night in Carolina's last Big Five game. V. M. I. will be played in the Tin Can here Saturday night. Carolina won first games from both teams, but that seems to mean little as to these return matches, especially since Wake Forest upset State 20-19.

Duke's boxers will be engaged at Durham Tuesday night. A victory would let the Tar Heels take a clean Southern slate to the Conference tourney, but Duke is strong and has undefeated stars in two weights. Captain Martin and Bolick, to match unbeaten Tar Heels in the same classes, Levinson and Davis. Penn State, to be met at State College, Pennsylvania, regularly has one of the strongest mit teams in the country, and this meet, coming close on the Duke meet, will be Carolina's test supreme.

N. C. State's wrestlers will be met here Tuesday night and Davidson's matmen will be engaged here Saturday afternoon in two of three meets that will settle the state championship. The Tar Heels have one of the strongest teams in several seasons, and have beaten Princeton and V. P. I. and held Navy, unbeaten since 1926, to a close score.

Several freshman events are carded also. The Tar Baby quint will play Wake Forest's frosh a preliminary to the varsity game Thursday night. The strong freshman boxing team, led by heavyweight Peyton Brown, who has had four knockouts for four bouts, will meet Duke's frosh at Durham in a preliminary to the varsity meet Tuesday night and will engage State's freshmen in Raleigh Saturday night. The Tar Baby wrestlers will meet Oak Ridge in a preliminary to the Carolina-State varsity meet here Tuesday night.

There will also be the customary Wednesday and Saturday afternoon winter practice grid games, so that the home fans will have several interesting programs. Tuesday night at seven and eight-thirty o'clock there will be mat meets with Oak Ridge and N. C. State. Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock there will be the "Blue"-"Orange" grid clash. Saturday afternoon there will be a wrestling meet with Davidson and another football game, and Saturday night there will be the V. M. I. basketball game, scheduled for eight-thirty o'clock.

Protest Allowed

The protest of Carr over the use of DeRose, in their 36-14 loss to Everett was allowed on the grounds that DeRose is a member of the freshman squad and has participated in several freshman games this season. The game was declared forfeited to Carr.

DOPING 'EM OUT

By

BOB BETTS

With the Southern Conference Boxing Tournament at Charlottesville, Virginia, a little over a fortnight off, speculation is rife as to who will be the new champions in the different divisions. The tournament this year will have more teams in it than ever before. Tulane and Louisiana State University will represent the far South in the Conference meet. Florida, last year's champions, and Sewanee will also have teams at the Charlottesville gathering. North Carolina will send Duke and Carolina, while Virginia will have the biggest number of teams at the meet of any state. In addition to the University of Virginia, there will be teams from V. M. I., V. P. I. and Washington and Lee. There will be other teams there also.

At the present time North Carolina is favored to regain the boxing crown which she lost at last year's meet. The Tar Heels have an unbeaten and well balanced team composed of sophomores and seniors. Virginia is the second favorite in the pre-tournament dope. With such stars as Captain Bob Rainey, Goldstein, and Gentry, the Cavaliers should make a strong bid for the championship. Florida and Tulane have strong mit teams and either one may win the tournament.

In the bantamweight class Captain Minardi of Florida is the leading candidate for honors in this field. Incidentally he was champion last year and is undefeated so far this season. Fishbourne, Virginia, and Perine, V. P. I., are the leading contenders for Minardi's crown.

The featherweight division offers some real fireworks with Marty Levinson, N. C. U., Goldstein, Virginia, Towler, V. P. I., and Captain Martin, Duke, all scrambling after the championship. Russell of Georgia was last year's winner. He is not back this season. Neither Levinson or Goldstein have lost a bout this year. When Virginia and Carolina met last week Goldstein was ailing and unable to meet Levinson. It will be recalled that Goldstein handed Marty his only defeat during his freshman year, and the Waterbury, Conn., boy will be out to even things up at Charlottesville. Martin, Duke's fighting ministerial student and former champion, is going to try to recapture the title he won during his sophomore year. Towler, although defeated, is a fine, fast fighter and will push the other fellows a lot before it's all over.

And now, Ladies and Gentlemen, Coach Rowe presents Captain Noah Goodridge in the lightweight division. The Carolina captain looks like the class of the South and is a big favorite to come through in his weight; he has yet to taste defeat this year. LaGiglia of Virginia should give Goodridge a close run for the title, although Goodridge has already won one decision over him this year. Ralph Starnes, Duke, and Jones, V. P. I., are other good pugilists in this class. Phil O'Conell, Florida, was champion last year. Oddly enough, he is now coach of the team.

In the welterweight class Captain Bob Rainey of Virginia is favored to win the welter title for the second time in two years.

Only Seven Undefeated Teams Remains In Race As Intramural Cage Tilts Reach Final Week

New Dorms, Best House, and Question Marks Top Dorm League Standing; Peacock Leads High Scorers With Seventy-Eight Points.

The end of the fifth week's play in the intramural basketball league finds seven teams, three dormitories and four fraternities, undefeated in league play this season.

In the dormitory league three teams remain undefeated, with New Dorms and the Best House topping the field with six victories and no defeats. The Question Marks finish out the undefeated teams with four wins and no defeats. Ruffin and Aycock have each lost one game but remain close enough to be a constant threat to the leaders.

In the fraternity league four teams tie for top honors with a perfect percentage, although the Phi Gam's have won two more games than their nearest rivals the Phi Delt's, with six wins. The Sigma Zeta's and K. A.'s finish out the undefeated teams with five wins each. The Beta's, A. T. O.'s, and Sigma Ep's have each lost one game, and are still close enough to the top to give the leaders plenty of trouble.

Three teams, the Beta's, Sigma Epsilon's, and A. T. O.'s were eliminated during the past week. The Phi Delt's proved to be the league "dark horse," eliminating the Beta's on Monday by a score of 54-25, and taking the highly touted A. T. O.'s to the tune of 36-30, finishing up the week with a forfeit from the Delta Sigma Phi's. The three victories of the Phi Delt's brought their list of victories up to six and second place in the league standings.

Peacock, Phi Delt forward, scored forty-six points during the past week to bring his season's total to seventy-eight points and high score for the season up to date. Dunlap, Best House center, brought his total for the season up to seventy-four points to take second place honors. The players scoring over fifty points are as follows:

Player and Team	Pts.
Peacock, Phi Delt.'s	78
Dunlap, Best House	74
Dewey, Phi Gam's	70
Crouch, Best House	66
Umstead, New Dorms	65
Dixon, Pi Kappa Phi	61
Barnwell, Question M.'s	60
Smith, Ruffin	58
Ginsberg, Manly	57
N. Parsley, S. A. E.'s	57
Purser, Sigma Zeta	56
Blackwood, Sigma Ep's	56

In team scoring, eight teams have gathered a total of 175 points or better. The A. T. O.'s added thirty points to their season record to bring their total for the season up to 213 and high score. The Phi Gam's took second place in team scoring with 211 points. New Dorms, with 206 points, and the Independents with an even 200

Tar Heel Mitmen Meet Penn State Lions In Lair Saturday Night

Blue and White Boxers Slated to Win; Victory Will Mean Undefeated Season Record.

MEET DUKE FEBRUARY 17

Carolinians Have Had at Least Two Knockouts In Last Three Meets.

The University boxers go North next week to try to stalk Nittany's nationally famous Lions in their native Penn State lair, and if the dope runs true, the Tar Heels will carry with them an undefeated season record that marks them as one of the outstanding contenders for Southern Conference championship honors for 1931.

The Tar Heels and the Lions will cross gloves at State College, Pennsylvania, February 21. Reports indicate that Penn State has another strong contender for national college honors, and Carolina's season record indicates that the Tar Heels will be out to give the Lions a tough fight.

In the line of records Carolina has beaten South Carolina 5-2, V. M. I. 6-1, V. P. I. 6-1, and Virginia 4-3, while the latter team had previously beaten Florida, Southern champs of 1930, by 5-2. The Tar Heels have one more meet with Duke, scheduled for Durham February 17, but the Dukemen's checkered record for the year makes the Tar Heels favorites to carry a clean slate to Penn State.

The Tar Heels have had at least two knockouts and as many as three in each of their last three meets, and will present to Penn State an outstanding boxer in every class but the bantamweight. George Biggs, only outstanding 115-pounder, has suffered a broken nose, and a cap-

Raleigh High Captures State Ring Title As Durham Team Cops Grappling Championship

"Blues" Triumph Over "Orangemen" By 14 - 7 Margin

Though Victorious, "Blues" Take Short End of First Down Count.

Winter football yesterday netted the "Blues" a 14-7 win over the "Oranges" in a game in which the first down score was the just the opposite—Oranges 14, Blues 7.

A forty-yard off tackle gallop by Hackney, freshman halfback, and a sixty-yard sprint with an intercepted pass by Thompson, substitute fullback, both in the second half, did the damage.

The rest of the game was all-"Orange." Passing had to be resorted to at times, but Johnny Daniel, driving little reserve, was digging away in fine style, and with Snead and Lassiter aiding, the "Oranges" made fourteen first downs and three good concerted marches.

The first was a forty-five yarder which netted a touchdown at the opening of the second quarter, Daniels taking it over. The last march saw the Oranges make five straight downs to make it first down on the five-yard line. There the Blues held, Snead and Daniel hit the line three times for zero yards, and the game was over.

The Blues, on the other hand, never got more than two first downs in a row off the stout Oranges line, in which Smith, Gilbreath, Philpott and Grindstaff featured.

Running was hard on the muddy field, and blocking was bad, so that much of the contest was listless, with both teams getting as far in the hole as fourth down and thirty yards to go.

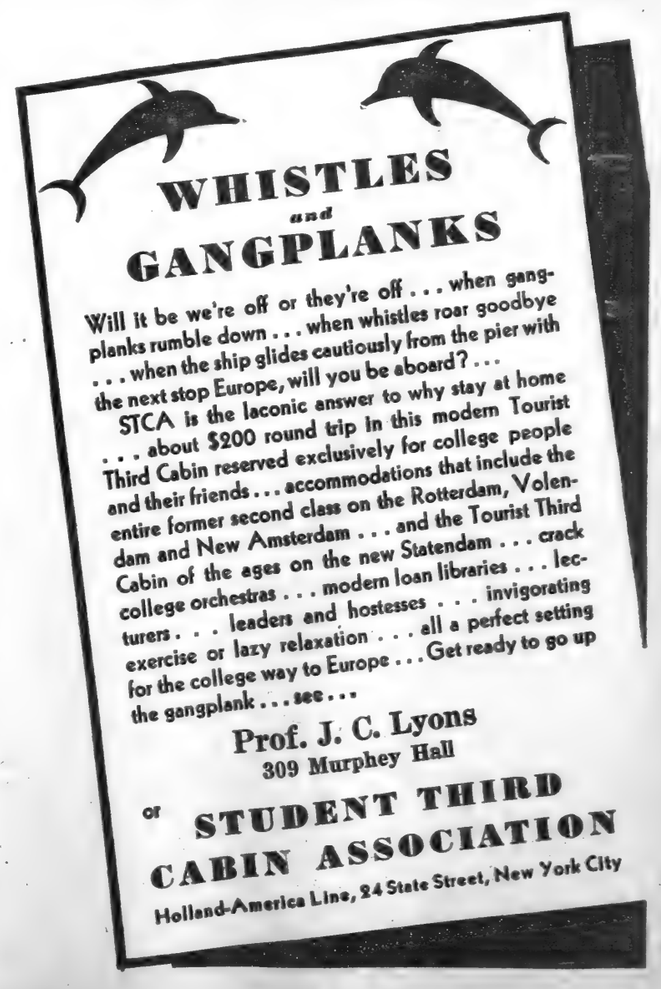
Capital City Boys Hold Final Margin of Thirty Points Over Nearest Rival.

BULLDOGS SCORE 22

Dunaways Make Boxing Event A Veritable Family Affair Taking All Bouts.

Raleigh and Durham high schools ran roughshod over all opposition in the high school tournaments in the Tin Can Friday night to cop the state titles in boxing and wrestling respectively. The Capital City boys piled up a total of fifty points to outscore their nearest rivals by thirty points while the Bulldogs from Durham amassed twenty-two points against five for Greensboro, runner-up.

The team scores of the wrestling tournament were: Durham 22, Greensboro 5, Bragtown 8, and Salisbury 3. Five teams and twenty-six men participated in this meet. The individual champions were: 108 pound class, Erwin of Durham, 115 pound class, Miller of Durham, 125 pound class, Erwin of Durham, 135 pound class, Bell of Greensboro, 145 pound class, Fortune of Durham, 155 pound class, Barnhardt of Salisbury, 165 pound class, Cook of Durham.



Durham jumped off to an early lead in the wrestling tournament when Vickers and Miller, the first two Bulldogs to perform gained falls over their opponents. Erwin of Durham then won a time decision over Roberts of Leaksville. Captain Jim Fortune and Cook accounted for the rest of the Bulldog points by taking time decisions over Shaw of Bragtown and Boyles of Leakesville respectively.

Hiram Bell, Greensboro, kept his undefeated record intact when he won by a fall over Mann of Durham. Bell counted for all

Phi Delt's	6	184

The high spot of the week's play was the defeat of the A. T. O.'s and Beta's by the Phi Delt's. The A. T. O.'s, considered in the pre-season dope as potential champions, loss to the Phi Delt's was one of the biggest upsets of the season. The Phi Delt's, previously to this week, had done little and were not regarded as of championship calibre, but the past week's play has brought the Phi Delt's to the fore and now they are regarded as having a fifty-fifty chance for the fraternity championship, with the Phi Gam's as their strongest rivals. The Sigman Ep's also lost their first game of the week, losing to the K. A.'s 35-29.

The individual scoring record was broken twice and tied once during the past week. Peacock, of the Phi Delt's, setting a new record of twenty-nine points Monday in the 54-25 defeat of the Beta's by the Phi Delt's. Umstead, of New Dorms, tied the record on the following day in the 43-22 defeat of the Law School by New Dorms. It was left to Council, Beta star, to out do them all, scoring thirty-nine points, to lead the Beta's in their 82-14 win over the Pika's.

The Beta's, in their 82-14 defeat of the Pika's last Thursday, set a new scoring record for the last four years, according to Wallace Shelton, assistant director of the intramural department, and possibly for all time. The Beta's in the last three minutes scored fourteen points, the exact total gathered by the Pika's throughout the entire game.

The Sigma Zeta's lost their first game of the season last Wednesday afternoon to the Kappa Sig's. The game does not count in the official standings as the Sigma Zeta's has previously defeated the Kappa Sig's, the game counting only as an exhibition game.

Next week will have an important bearing on the championship as the Sigma Zeta's meet the S. A. E.'s, K. A.'s meet the Pi Kappa Phi's, Phi Delt's play the Zeta Psi's, New Dorms meets the Question Marks, and Ruffin meets the Best House. The last two games listed will be by far the most important as New Dorms and the Question Marks are both undefeated, and the Best House has yet to meet defeat while Ruffin has lost only one.

Rainey is one of the cleverest and smoothest leatherpushers in Dixie. Another Virginian, Captain Mehaffey, V. P. I., and Dale Holderness, North Carolina, will offer Rainey very stiff opposition, and either one of these boys may come through with the title.

Obie "Gus" Davis, North Carolina, Phil Bollich, Duke, and Slavin, Florida, are the chief contenders after the middleweight championship. The veteran Davis, a glutton for punishment, has been putting his opponents to sleep very frequently this year with both right and lefts. He has won every fight so far this season, two of them by technical knockouts. Phil Bollich is another fighter who has not been beaten this time. Phil has a terrific punch and has been stretching out his opponents on the canvas for little naps. Slavin of Florida is another unbeaten pugilist in this division. It looks like a close race. Chapman of V. M. I. was the title-holder last season.

Gentry, Virginia, and Gill, V. M. I., are the two leading contenders in the light heavyweight class. Gentry is a fast man with a powerful punch. He can also absorb plenty of punishment himself. Gill is a good scrapper with dynamite packed in his punches. Then there is Hugh Wilson. The big boy has looked mighty good at times this year, and there is no doubt of his ability to take punishment. Jack Holland of Tulane was the title winner last year. He was captain-elect for this year, but, due to his participation in a post season charity football game, he was ineligible to box this year.

In the heavyweight division John Warren, North Carolina, "Pug" Bryant, Virginia, Stark, V. P. I., and Khory, L. S. U., are the cream of the heavies. Warren has not lost a fight this year and is doing the best fighting of his career as a college boxer. Philosophical John has a powerful right that may land him the heavyweight crown. Bryant is a fine fighter, and he may come through. Stark and Kory are both dangerous men and will bear watching. Pinozza, Tulane, was heavyweight champion last year.

RALEIGH HI WINS STATE RING TITLE

the Greensboro points by this victory.

Captain Jim Fortune of Durham had to go into overtime to gain each of his victories. After drawing a bye in the first round of the tournament, he hooked up in an overtime affair with Eller of Salisbury and won with a time advantage of two minutes and twenty seconds. Again in the finals Fortune was forced to go into overtime periods before winning over Shaw of Bragtown with an advantage of only nineteen seconds. Shaw put up a great scrap, but found the sturdy Durham captain a little too tough for him.

In the boxing tournament, Raleigh sent six men to the finals and produced State champions in four of them. All three of the Dunaway boys came through without a defeat and showed good form in all of their bouts. Bill Dunaway, 145 pounder, was forced to go less than four rounds to win his three fights. He topped off an undefeated season Friday night by putting Gillie of Leakesville away after one minute and thirty-five seconds of the first round. Jack Dunaway, in the 108 pound class and Al Dunaway, in the 135 pound class, both won three round decisions to make the boxing championships something of a family affair .

Wilson, Leakesville, and Gastonia produced the three champions that Raleigh failed to get. The score by teams was: Raleigh 50, Wilson 20, Gastonia 15, Leakesville 15, and Durham 5. Reidsville was the only team entered in the boxing tournament that failed to score.

In the 108 pound class Jack Dunaway of Raleigh and Brown of Wilson, two nifty little scrappers, put up a fast battle with the Raleigh boy taking the decision in three rounds.

Wilson retaliated in the 115 pound class battle when Gafford took the decision over Bilisoly of Raleigh in three rounds after a close fight.

Raleigh took the 125 pound title when Frank Jolly battered out a three round decision over Farris of Wilson. Both boys looked good and put up a nice fight, but Jolly had the edge all the way and won by a good margin.

Al Dunaway of Raleigh, 135 pounder, put up his best fight of the tournament in winning over Shepherd of Gastonia. Dunaway took all three rounds easily, using a right to the head and body with good results.

Raleigh took the 145 pound title when Bill Dunaway, the class of the tournament, knocked out Gillie of Leakesville after one minute and thirty-five seconds of the first round. Gillie went down without a count after about one minute of battling. Dunaway met him as he reached his feet and landed a heavy right to the jaw, dropping his man in the center of the ring.

The only class in which Raleigh had no man in the finals was the 155 pound division. Barham of Leakesville met Holder of Durham in a wild scrap which saw Holder fall out of the ring twice and Barham once, the latter taking the bout.

In the 165 pound class, Ellisberg of Raleigh hooked up with Nolan of Gastonia in the closest fight of the tournament. Nolan had a slight advantage in the first round through aggressiveness and got the referee's hand at the end of the third round.

Summary of the wrestling bouts:

108 pound class—Vickers (Durham) won over Whitt (Leakesville) by fall in 3:26.

115 pound class—Miller (Durham) threw Lyerly (Salisbury) in 2:40.

125 pound class—Erwin (Durham) time decision over Roberts (Leakesville) 1:22.

135 pound class—Bell (Greensboro) threw Mann (Durham) in 4:14.

145 pound class—Fortune (Durham) defeated Shaw (Bragtown) in overtime with advantage of 0:19.

Summary of boxing bouts:

108 pound class—J. Dunaway (Raleigh) defeated J. Brown (Wilson) three round decision.

115 pound class—Gafford (Wilson) won three round decision over Bilisoly (Raleigh).

125 pound class—Jolly (Raleigh) won three round decision over Farris (Wilson).

145 pound class—B. Dunaway (Raleigh) knocked out Gillie (Leakesville) in 1:35 of first round.

165 pound class—Nolan (Gastonia) won three round decision over Ellisberg (Raleigh).

Officials of the wrestling matches:

Peyton Abbott, referee, Wallace Case and Dick Moore timers. Coach Quinlan, announcer.

Officials of the boxing bouts:

Noah Goodridge, referee, Mr. R. S. Matthews and Obie Davis, judges, and Coach Ranson timer.

able substitute may not develop.

Four of the probable entries at Penn State are undefeated to date—Martin Levinson, hard-hitting sophomore 125-pounder; Captain Noah Goodridge, senior 135-pounder; Obie Davis, senior 160-pounder; and John Warren, senior unlimited star. Goodridge has had every opponent at his mercy this year, except LaGiglia, Virginia's star, whom he beat rather decisively on decision. Levinson and Davis have had two knockouts and a decision apiece for their last three bouts.

In the 145-pound class the Tar Heels will present Dail Holderness, a red-headed senior but new to varsity ranks, who has won two bouts for three and who in his only loss fought Captain Rainey, Virginia's Conference champ, a close, hard bout. In the 175-pound class Carolina will have either Hugh Wilson, a tall rangy sophomore, who has won two knockouts while losing two other bouts, or Platt Landis, a hard-hitting, more rugged sophomore, who has been kept out of competition by a broken hand which is now healed.

Of these men Captain Goodridge, Davis and Warren fought Penn State last year. Goodridge won a decision over Casoni, and Davis and Warren lost extra round affairs, Warren after leading Penn State's lightheavy for two rounds. The Tar Heels lost that first meet to Penn State 6-1, but all the bouts were close, and at least three might have gone the other way but for the great last-round fighting spurts of the Lions. The Tar Heels will know what to expect in the way of competition this time, and they are set to give everything to make the score as far removed as possible from 6-1.

The English and French departments are cooperating in the publication of an edition of the works of du Bartas.

In the department of geology, Dr. Collier Cobb presents the results of a complete investigation of the so-called "Oil Domes" of the North Carolina coastal plain.

The evolution of the constitution and government of North Carolina and the historical and legal basis of county government are among numerous topics being studied by the history department.

An excellent sample of research in the law school is found in a volume on "North Carolina Practice and Procedure in Civil Cases," in which Dr. A. C. McIntosh covers the whole field of civil practice in this state.

Institute for Research

In the department of rural social-economics and sociology, investigations have been made in such timely topics as county government in North Carolina; rural church conditions; "North Carolina: Economic and Social," a 400-page book by Professor S. H. Hobbs, Jr.; mill villages in North Carolina; taxation; racial problems, and others.

In the department of pharmacology, Dr. W. deB. MacNider has continued his studies on diseases of the kidney.

Were there space the list might go on and on, to show equally important samples of the work of the other departments.

Among the groups at the University which have done much to give the institution a national reputation in research is the institute for research in social science, established in 1924. Its work has been made possible by substantial grants from the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial and the Rockefeller Foundation. Composed of more than twenty members, the institute is engaged in a specific program of regional social research, study, and interpretation. It now has on the press, or ready for publication, more than two score volumes. North Carolina's social history, railroad development, county and municipal government, methods of handling criminals, welfare work in mill villages, cotton culture, and labor unions are some of the many timely and important topics being studied by the institute under the direction of Dr. Howard W. Odum.

Prizes Are Listed

In a second section of the booklet are listed fourteen books and fifty-three articles by faculty members, "these being of a less scholarly than those mentioned in the first section but, nevertheless, worthy of record."

Prizes listed include the Guggenheim Fellowship for study abroad, awarded to Dr. Louis B. Wright, and the Gibbs Prize for research in pharmacology, awarded by the New York Academy of Medicine to Dr. W. deB. MacNider. Mention is also made of the fact that Dr. Odum was selected as assistant director of President Hoover's Committee on Social Trends.

Thus the graduate school has played a mighty role toward building up the national reputation that has come to the University. There is a common agreement that it was largely through the fine reputation of its graduate school that the University, back in 1922, was taken into the exclusive Association of American Universities, a group of twenty-nine institutions regarded as the foremost in America.

The same sort of testimony is offered in a survey recently made by the American Council of Learned Societies, a survey which concluded that "the leadership of the new research movement in the South is traceable to one institution, and to certain men and women in it, namely the University of North Carolina."

NEW ATTENDANCE REGULATIONS ARE FINALLY ADOPTED

Undergraduate Faculty Ruling Allows Only a Maximum of Five Cuts Per Quarter.

The optional attendance regulations for juniors and seniors which had been effect for several years were abolished last March by the undergraduate faculty presided over by Dean Addison Hibbard. It was dean Hibbard's plan to have optional attendance, but finding that the department heads and most of the deans did not approve of this, he did not press the issue.

The general faculty, which has the final say in such matters, in December appointed a special committee to study problems of absences, and made absences a matter of regulation for the heads of departments and the deans. Interpreting the spirit of the faculty, President Graham suspended the operation of this regulation until the committee appointed by the faculty could make its study and recommendation. The committee made its report and the faculty took action last Friday.

President Graham reports: "These regulations do not go into effect until next fall. They will be printed in the catalogue for next year so that the students may have a copy of the complete regulations as approved by the faculty. For the rest of this year, the absence regulations will be in accordance with those that were in effect in December until they were temporarily suspended awaiting the report of the commission."

The provision for absences next year provides for optional attendance for those who have made the honor roll for two successive quarters.

Quoting from the resolution adopted by the committee to accompany the submission of the report, we find: "All regulations and recommendations of the special committee are conditioned upon the fundamental assumption that the administrative officers and the instructors can and will effectively perform the duties assigned respectively to them therein. In case this effectiveness cannot be assured, the committee think that the report should not be adopted and that the committee should be discharged."

It now becomes the duty of all the professors to check up and report absences from class attendance more carefully and completely than has been done in the past. It is the duty of the administrative department of the University to collect and put on file the reports made by the professors. These reports are to be made available for use as they have been recorded in the office of the registrar.

Article One reads: "Regular class attendance is a student obligation. The unexcused absence is not recognized as a student privilege." Then follows the clause in regard to the optional attendance in the advent of a student making the honor roll for two successive quarters.

"The maximum number of unexcused absences shall not exceed, during any quarter, the number of weekly meetings of the class, provided that any department may impose penalties for a less number of absences. Absences before or after University holidays shall count as

Seminary Student Addresses Freshmen

Charles C. Fishburne, president of the student body of Virginia Seminary, spoke to the freshmen at the regular Monday morning chapel period. Fishburne graduated from the University of South Carolina in 1925, was a member of the faculty of the same institution for a year, and is now at the Virginia Seminary. In his talk he advised the freshmen to set their standards and bend every effort to keep up to them at all times.

MARIONETTE SHOW COMING TO TOWN

Sue Hasting's Production To Be Given Thursday Afternoon And Night.

Episodes from the stories of Winnie-the-Pooh and The House at Pooh Corners are depicted by the Sue Hasting's Marionettes in a special program which they will present for the Carolina Playmakers, at a three o'clock matinee, Thursday, February 19.

In discussing this new program which she is offering this season Sue Hastings was most enthusiastic about the new production and said, "In my search for something new and close to the heart of the modern child it occurred to me that 'Winnie the Pooh' was a delightful character, just the one we had been looking for; but to make sure that he was a popular favorite I got in touch with the children's room of the public library and the librarian there informed me that the Winnie the Pooh books were in great demand. I also went to several stores and asked for the most popular children's stories and again Pooh was among the first mentioned. In producing our program we have faithfully followed the Milne stories and given careful study and much thought to the characterizations of Christopher Robin, the small boy and his toys from the tiny Piglet and Roo to the slow moving Eeyore, Tigger, and Kanga, the lovable Pooh and the Rabbit. And so Winnie-the-Pooh, so dear to the heart of American children is being presented for the first time in marionette form."

Mrs. Hastings has won a national reputation as a designer of dainty marionettes and as a producer of marionette plays. Several of her companies are playing in all parts of the country. This season she is presenting her third annual series at Columbia University and recently she gave a series at the New York Town Hall. Her productions have been popular not only in schools, clubs and at a wide variety of civic and social functions, but have been especially in vogue at colleges.

Thursday night at eight-thirty Miss Hastings will present her Puppet Review. Seats for the performance may be reserved at the Students' Supply Store.

High School Latin Contest

Many enrollments for the state high school Latin contest have been received by E. R. Rankin, secretary of the contest. Any accredited high school can enter the contest, which is to be conducted February 27. A trophy cup will be presented to the school whose student submits the best paper. Durham won the trophy last year.

President Urges Clean Campaign

To the Members of the Student Body:

The Student Council views with pleasure the fact that there will be two or more active candidates for every office in the political field this year. Open and clean-cut competition is the most desired thing for our student government. Only the best men can be selected by such a process.

However, the offices which we hold and the loyalty to the University which we feel prompt us to hereby issue warning to all candidates and members of all parties that in order to maintain the friendly harmony and decency which student government obligates itself to perpetuate, the student council will vigorously prosecute all persons circulating rumors derogatory to the persons or character of any candidate on either and all sides. The fine Carolina tradition must be maintained, and it is our most honest belief that political campaigns must not be waged upon questions of alleged moral turpitude or dishonesty but upon the qualifications of the various candidates.

In the case of candidates, they will be brought before the student council and disqualified from running if they circulate rumors or posters of this nature and in the case of other members of the student body, they will be brought before the student council.

We wish to appeal to the members of all factions of the student body to support us in causing this forthcoming campaign to be the fairest, cleanest-cut, and most honestly conducted of any which the University has ever enjoyed. The Honor System, the Campus Code, and the tradition of Carolina gentlemen must be preserved.

Sincerely,
RALPH C. GREENE,
President of Student Body.

MID-WINTER SET OF DANCES PROVE VERY SUCCESSFUL

Paul Graham and His Orchestra Supply Music for the Five Dances.

A full week-end of dances ended Saturday night with the German Club ball, the concluding figure of the annual University mid-winter dances.

The set began with a tea dance Friday afternoon at four o'clock, and continued with the Junior dance Friday evening at nine-thirty, a dance Saturday morning at eleven o'clock, another tea dance in the afternoon, and concluded with the regular German Club figure Saturday evening.

The dances were held in Bynum gymnasium which was decorated in the Valentine colors of red and white. Music was furnished by Paul Graham's orchestra which has played for a number of college dances in the South.

The Junior dance was led by William Bridgers of Wilson with Miss Molly Allen of Raleigh, assisted by Steve Lynch of Atlanta with Miss Dorothy Battle of Rocky Mount and Walter Crouch of High Point with Miss Frances Fletcher of Winston-Salem.

William Dunn of New Bern with Miss Betty Clapp of Wichita, Kansas led the German Club ball, and were assisted by Lynn Wilder of Raleigh with Miss Mary Fenner of Henderson and George Bagby of Charlotte with Miss Hortense Hostetter of Sweet Briar, Virginia.

Among the out-of-town girls attending the dances were: Misses Em West Green, Cotten Skinner, Therese Lamfrom and Hortense Hostetter of Sweet Briar, Va.; Julia Orr, Alice Alexander, Frances Webster, Isabelle Neer, Frances Craig, Janet Mather, and Angelia Morrison of Charlotte.

Betsy Warren, Molly Allen, Mary Andrews and Elizabeth Bryan of Raleigh; Betty Bahnson, Claire Hanes, and Frances Fletcher of Winston-Salem; Electra Waggoner and Janet Secrist of Greensboro; Hattie Buck, New York City; Birdie West, Hendersonville; Pat Holderness, Tarboro; Katherine Ar-

CITY ALDERMEN DISCUSS CHANGES IN TOWN CHARTER

Board Discusses in Wednesday Meeting Whether to Abolish City-Manager Office.

Changes in the old Chapel Hill charter caused much discussion among the city aldermen when they met last Wednesday night.

The amendment under discussion gave the board power to elect the mayor as town manager. This seemed to some like a step toward abolishing the office of city manager while to others it seemed a useless change since the board had the power to select whom they consider fitted for the position. B. D. Sawyer, town attorney, supported the amendment since he said it made clear the powers of the aldermen.

June Harris thought the office of city manager should be abolished, since the town was spending too much for administration. Accordingly he stated that the duties of the position could be transferred to clerks and chief of police.

The new charter was submitted to the legislature last week and has not yet been passed upon.

The new municipal charter fixes the date for penalty for late payment of taxes on February 10, and makes the same one percent per month after this date.

Professor Baity of the engineering school stated at the meeting that he was working on plans for improvement of the city sewer. He stated that the capacity of the present plant is much too small to meet the needs. His plans will be put into effect during the coming spring and summer.

Benson's Awning Burns Sunday Night

The Chapel Hill fire department was called Sunday night when the awning across the front of R. R. Benson's plumbing shop, next to Strowd's garage, caught fire and burned completely.

Before the firemen reached the shop to extinguish the blaze, the awning had been destroyed, but the fire was overcome without any damage to other fixtures of the building.

Di and Phi Will Convene Jointly

Tonight at seven o'clock the members of the Di and Phi Societies will meet jointly in the Di hall on the third floor of New West building. The principal bill to be discussed is: Resolved: That the management of the University, State College and N. C. C. W. should be consolidated.

This bill is to be taken up at the suggestion of President Graham, who will be present, but will take no part in the discussion.

All members of both societies are urged to be present. Visitors will also be welcome.

ZIMMERMAN WILL MEET WITH NEW RELATIONS CLUB

Commerce Professor Will Address Students Interested in Foreign Affairs.

Dr. E. W. Zimmerman, of the commerce department, speaks to the members of the International Relations club tonight in 213 Saunders at seven-thirty on the subject of "Pan-Europe." This topic is an outgrowth of former French Premier Briand's plan for a United States of Europe.

The speaker has made a full study of this subject in connection with the international trade courses in the school of commerce, and is an authority on the economic and political situation on the continent.

J. I. Morgan, president of the Duke Inter-relations club, is scheduled to speak on the work of the organization on the Durham campus, which group has been in existence for the past three years. He will also discuss the plans for the Southern conference on International Relations, which is scheduled to take place at Duke on the 26, 27, and 28 of this month. It is the plan of the president of the local relations group that the University's group take part in this conference.

The local club was first organized last year, and has already become affiliated with the Carnegie Endowment for World Peace, which sponsors international relations clubs throughout the country.

Membership in the organization is primarily for students who are interested in international affairs as a career. Faculty members interested in this type of work are expected to attend meetings.

The program tonight is the first formal one that the club has held since its organization last year. At the first meeting, which was entirely for the purpose of organizing the group, Clyde Dunn was selected president; Herman Schnell, vice-president; Buck Snow, secretary-treasurer; and Frank Manheim, corresponding secretary.

Yackety Yack Makeup

The Yackety Yack editor has set Friday as a deadline for all campus social organization makeups to be in. The exact appearance of each social page must be in by that date. Prices of colors used in makeup may be obtained from the editor.

International Relations Club

The International Relations club holds its first formal meeting tonight in 213 Saunders at seven-thirty.

DEAN E. V. HOWELL DIES OF ATTACK FROM PNEUMONIA

Was Head of Pharmacy School And a Leading Figure in University Life.

Edward Vernon Howell, founder of the school of pharmacy of the University, and its dean for thirty-three years, died at his home here early Saturday evening of pneumonia.

He had been severely ill for two weeks, and his life had been despaired of several days ago, but unexpected rallies had led his relatives and friends to hope that he would recover.

No man was better known or better loved in Chapel Hill than Dr. Howell. He came here when Chapel Hill was a tiny remote village, and when the University had a student body of only about 400 and a faculty of about twenty-five.

He saw the institution through all the stages of its growth, and carried his own school of pharmacy with it. He took an active part in the business and social life of the community.

Mr. Howell's fame as a student and investigator in the science of pharmacy was nationwide, and last year he received one of the highest honors that can be accorded to a pharmacist—the appointment to the revision committee of the United States Pharmacopoeia.

His interest extended beyond his own science. He was devoted to folk lore, and his home was a storehouse of antiques and relics as well as of rare old books, newspapers, diaries, and letters.

Dr. Howell was a renowned athlete, both at Wake Forest and here. He was awarded a medal for the best all-round athlete at Wake Forest, and while here the touchdown he made in 1898 against the University of Virginia elevated him to the pinnacle of football fame.

He was born in Raleigh, March 30, 1872, and twenty years afterward, 1892, received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from Wake Forest college. Two years later the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy awarded him the degree of Ph.G. He did post-graduate work in chemistry at the University of North Carolina in 1897-98, and since September, 1897, has been professor of pharmacy and dean of the department.

Some of the honors held by Dr. Howell are: member of the American Pharmaceutical Association (chairman historical section 1918-19, vice-chairman scientific section); member of American Chemical Society, North Carolina Pharmaceutical Society, American Historical Association, American Folk-Lore Society, Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society (president 1913-14), and the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. He was vice-president of the Conference of American Pharmaceutical Faculties in 1923-24, member of the executive committee of American Colleges of Pharmacy in 1926-27, and a contributor to various pharmaceutical journals.

The funeral services for Dr. Howell were conducted at his home here at two-thirty o'clock yesterday afternoon, and interment took place in Raleigh at four o'clock. Reverend W. D. Moss held the services.

The active pallbearers were Professor Grover Beard, Profes-

Edward Vernon Howell, Dean

To the modern generation, geared to the speed of this age of efficiency, the significance of Edward Vernon Howell's death is not immediately apparent. We knew him for his accomplishments; few of us knew him as Edward Vernon Howell.

As founder and dean of the University's pharmacy school he brought that department of the University to the forefront of American schools. He labored tirelessly for the school and his 33 years of work with his students give him a name which stands above all others in the ranks of North Carolina pharmacists. And for his ability he was recognized as a leader in the American Pharmaceutical Association.

But it was for those who knew him as a man that the full significance of his death appeared. As president of the Peoples Bank Dean Howell revealed those human qualities which are unknown to our generation. To his friends he was more than dean of the pharmacy school, more than a man of rare ability and prestige in his field. To them he was a sportsman, a friend, and a possessor of that rare spirit which makes for congeniality and good fellowship.

We, his friends and his admirers, regret his passing. Those who knew him only as teacher will remember him for his accomplishments; those who knew him as Vernon Howell will remember him for those qualities of friendship found rarely nowadays.

Why Higher Education?

We often think that students do not know or care very much exactly why they are in the Universities and colleges of the country. They are more or less herded there by some mass or group instinct of theirs which tells them to follow others. Follow others to do what? This question is coming to be asked more and more frequently by the serious, practical-minded business and professional men who are contemplating hiring or employing college men. From the materialistic point of view they have far too often gotten but little for the four years which they have spent at their college. From the cultural point of view, unless they happen to be morons, they could not have helped absorbing some culture if they came out with a degree. This may all be very true, and yet we wonder if the average university man of today is not sadly lacking in one of the main abilities which is to be needed in later years—the ability to enjoy life to the fullest extent. As we see it, education's highest aim is to teach men to be able to do this. Are our schools doing this? We don't think so—if they are taken as scholastic units.

Proper emphasis upon values of the various activities which we engage in is not being taught except indirectly through judgment. We think that not enough of the old "prep school" type of character training is coming into our higher education. It may sound perfectly foolish to be talking about such training or advice for college men, but we still think that a great many of them might profit from prep school advice.

When friends of yours literally ruin themselves by having a "big time" every week-end and getting gloriously drunk about nothing in particular, and are always looking for a hot time, we wonder where their emphasis on values in life is being placed. In most cases of this type it is absolutely impossible for them to have a good time in a quiet way. Nature, Art, and the best music have no appeal whatsoever. Is this training for the enjoyment of life, or the opposite? We believe that the true joy of living comes from hard work and its accomplishments and the appreciation of leisure hours for what they should mean. We wonder if all this education is being taken on or is being wasted through other channels which tend to sidetrack our energies in various and sundry directions.—O.W.D.

The Price Of Publicity

Because he referred to Benito Mussolini in a manner "Il Duce" considered uncomplimentary to himself General Smedley Butler is now awaiting court martial. International etiquette demands retribution for affronts on national escutcheons, so probably the unfortunate General will be court-martialed to atone for his statements.

General Butler has probably enjoyed more publicity than anyone else in the army in the last few years. What he says usually finds its way into a prominent place in the press; so, naturally, when he expressed his views on Mussolini the whole world became aware of it. There are countless people who disagree with the substance of what Mr. Butler thinks of Italy's premier. Many of these individuals have been so bold as to publish their attitude on the chief of the fascists, just as Butler did. The views of Butler and his adherents are the same; but because of his prestige, General Butler has far more power to spread these attacks on Mus-

It Seems To Me, Too

Well, the great Smedley D. Butler farce is all over now. The U. S. government has kow-towed before the feet of the mighty Duce and General Butler has been politely slapped in public and told that he was a naughty boy. Butler has apologized for his horrible crime of calling Mussolini a hit-and-run driver, and papa Stimson, papa Adams, and the other big papas are happy and contented once more.

As we are on the subject of Mussolini, I notice that there is one great similiarity between Dr. Abernathy and him. They both claim there is a universal remedy for all troubles. They disagree, however, on what that remedy is. Dr. Abernathy holds out for c. c. pills while Mussolini strongly recommends castor oil. Personally, I'll side with Dr. Abernathy on that issue.

North Carolina is not going to be left out of the international frog-jumping contests in California this year if Felix Harvey, Jr., well known business man and clubman of this state, can help it. The contests will be held in Calaveras county where Mark Twain's famous jumping frog met his Waterloo a long time ago. Last year several nations sent their entries to the contests, and this year North Carolna will send its five best frogs to compete with the world's finest.

Mr. Harvey has issued a call for frogs. Carolina students, here is your chance to cover yourselves with everlasting fame and glory.

If you happen to know of a loyal Tar Heel frog who can do a hundred yards under fifteen jumps, send him to Mr. Harvey. He may win the world's championship, and any world's title is worth a lot of money these days.

By the way, the contest will be a frog-jumping contest, and not a frog-pumping contest, as last week's Greensboro Daily News, would have you to believe.

"Tex" may be only a night club hostess, but she is a wise girl. She is going after the higher type of trade now. And is seems that English professors are going to be her first lead. More power to her. We need jollier English profs.

I have some news which may interest those of you who have had dealings in the past with the Durham police department. If you remember, you had to pay fifty cents whenever the patrol wagon picked you up and brought you to the station.

But no more. They have eliminated this taxi fee, and you ride free now.

I can't help but admire the Durham police. At least one organization recognizes the terrible depression we are in now.

I had always thought that life was a pretty tough proposition. But after hearing Professor McKie's reading of Green Pastures last Sunday night, I see that even being God is no bed of roses.

The American Institute of Chemical Engineers will meet tonight at seven-thirty in 201 Venable hall. The program should be of interest because Frank Thomas, senior in engineering, will talk on his co-op work with the DuPont Rayon Corporation in Tennessee during the past summer.

McKie's Reading Of 'Green Pastures' Inspires Audience

By Tom Loy

A large number of people flocked to the Playmakers Theatre Sunday night to hear Professor George M. McKie, of the English department, read The Green Pastures, the February reading of the Playmakers.

Professor McKie read the play with the delightfully informality of a fireside evening, and with contageous appreciation of the American negro that was as touching and moving as it was humorous. He threw the audience into a more or less continuous uproar from the first as he brought out all the earthly details of the celestial fish-fry and other little things that made God subjectively a very ordinary and dark human being.

As full of laughs, too, but nevertheless accomplished by an inevitable bit of inspiration was the choral music that George Lawrence sang and projected between the scenes.

As the story advanced about halfway to its completion, as time and again the Lord gave up man as a bad job and then went always back to him with one more idea for reformation, Professor McKie warned his listeners that they were getting a serious play.

Taken in a spirit of irony, his caution soon afterward proved sincere. The tone shifted away very imperceptibly, and gradually those who came to scoff went away with a little prayer forming in their minds, or at least with that rippling sensatory conscious that they had undoubtedly had more than just a good time.

Sigma Xi To Give Dinner Tonight

The North Carolina chapter of the Sigma Xi, honorary engineering fraternity, convenes tonight at eight o'clock. This is the regular monthly meeting, and will be preceded by a supper at six-thirty p. m.

The program is in charge of the divisions of organic chemistry and chemical engineering. There is to be a discussion of research work and election of new members. The members usually graduate students and faculty members, although two seniors are slated for membership this year, which is unusual. Dr. Otto Stuhlman, head of the physics department, president of the organization while Dr. E. T. Brown is secretary and treasurer, and Dr. J. A. Crockford, of the chemistry department.

Nothing small about this work

Reaching out to the far corners of the earth for raw materials of telephone apparatus, is a Western Electric function in the Bell System.

To assure adequate sources of supply, men engaged in this work of mass purchasing continually search the entire globe. To buy wisely, they study all factors affecting prices—economic and labor conditions, transportation facilities, freight rates—on a world-wide scale. Each year their purchases, worth many millions of dollars, include such diverse products as platinum from Russia, mica from India, asphalt from Venezuela, flax from Belgium and France.

All in all, a vast and fascinating task. For men of keen business judgment, the opportunity is there!

BATTLING tonight for the state boxing title, the Tar Heel boxers journey over to Durham tonight to meet the Duke Blue Devils. The Tar Babies will meet the Blue Imps in the preliminary bouts, starting at seven o'clock.

The Devils and the Tar Heels are as evenly balanced teams as one could hope to find, and Carolina is anticipating no easy time tonight.

Duke's stand was still further enhanced by a 4-3 win over Virginia, the score being the same as the Carolina-Virginia meet. The Cavaliers won the first three scraps, but Duke rallied to take the remaining four and the meet. However, Virginia has some alibi. Captain Bob Rainey, southern welter champ, was given a rest and did not meet Duke. It is probable that if Rainey was in the ring, the score would have been reversed. Gentry, who knocked out Hugh Wilson in the third round, was knocked out by Rankin in the opening session, and Bryant, who gave John Warren such a scrap, was "kayoed" in the third round by Don Hyatt, Devil grid star.

There is a possibility that Platt Landis will see action tonight against either Hyatt or Brewer. Platt has apparently recovered from his broken right hand, and while he is still a bit shy with it, it still has the same old devastating power.

A great battle is expected in the Levinson-Martin bout. Captain Southgate Martin suffered his first defeat of the season at the hands of Bobbie Goldstein, Virginia's flashy feather. Martin Levinson has yet to taste defeat, numbering Towler of V. P. I. among his victims. Towler was runner-up in the tournament last year. Marty got his first kayo this year against Fishbourne of Virginia, chasing the Cavalier all around the ring, before putting the sleeper on him.

The meeting between Captain Noah Goodridge and Starnes also looks like a thriller, although most persons expect Goodridge to take the Devil easily.

There is possibility that the bantamweight situation will be solved. Frank Errico, a 119 pounder with plenty of experience around New York, has reported to Coach Crayton Rowe last week, but Errico may not be in shape for tonight. However, Errico has been training very hard to get into condition, and there is a fifty-fifty chance that he will open the varsity program.

DUKE-CAROLINA BOUTS TONIGHT

The attention of all Carolina fans will be centered on the promises to be a stiff bout Duke University gymnasium tonight when the Tar Heel boxing team meets the Duke Blue Devils. For a time it looked as though Carolina would be in for an almost set-up.

But the turn of events during the past week places the teams on an even footing for the bouts, both the Tar Heels and Blue Devils having defeated Virginia's leather pushers by 4-3 margins.

Marty Levinson will be up against stiff opposition again in Captain Martin of Duke. Goldstein of Virginia recently barely eked out a three round decision over Martin, and Goldstein and Levinson are rated as the Conference's best.

The heavyweight fight when John Warren meets Don Hyatt. Hyatt knocked out Bryant of Virginia who gave Warren so much trouble a few weeks ago.

Everything should shape up for one of the best boxing engagements of the season. Carolina has failed to lick Duke in basketball twice. The pugilists will be out to make up for the two reverses handed Tar Heel teams.

CAROLINA'S TENNIS PROWESS RECOGNIZED

The American Lawn Tennis Association has recognized that the University of North Carolina ranks with the best in national tennis circles by ranking Bryant Grant as number ten and Wilmer Hines number thirty-two on the national tennis ladder.

These two youthful performers on Carolina's team have made real names for themselves during the past few years, winning tournament after tournament, and giving such tennis stars as Van Ryn and Allison interesting matches.

Tennis here this year should be a real drawing card. With a team such as the Tar Heels now have, tennis enthusiasts from all over this section probably will journey here to see Grant, Hines, Yoemans, Wright, Liskin, Hendlin, and Captain Graham in action.

DAVIDSON ONLY TEAM TO HALT DUKE

The Davidson Wildcats are the only team that now will be able to halt the Duke Blue Devils in their march toward their third successive state title, and to do this they must defeat both Duke and Wake Forest this week. Carolina and Wake Forest have a hold on the cellar position, and their meeting Thursday will have no bearing on the outcome of the Big Five race.

GEORGIA AGAIN TOPS CONFERENCE

Georgia's Bulldogs regained the leadership of the Conference basketball race last week by downing Kentucky 25-16. None of the conference teams now are undefeated. The oth-

TO CARRY CAROLINA'S COLORS TONIGHT

Boxing fans of this section who journey over to the Duke gymnasium Tuesday night may see the 1931 Southern Conference collegiate champions in action. Pitted against one another will be Carolina and Duke boxing teams. Both recently beat Virginia by the same score, four to three, and Virginia previously had defeated Florida, 1930 Southern champions, five to two. The Tar Heels have not lost this season but they must lick Duke if they are to carry a clean slate to the Conference tourney at Charlottesville.

Matmen Meet State Tonight

MATCHES CARDED TO BREAK LONG INACTIVITY PERIOD

Frosh To Meet Oak Ridge In Preliminary at Six-Forty-Five.

After more than two weeks absence from competition, the Carolina varsity and freshmen wrestlers will go into action tonight in the Tin Can. The freshmen will start things off by meeting Oak Ridge at 6:45 while the varsity will appear against State College at eight-thirty in the main attraction. These matches were scheduled during the last week to give a break to the three weeks inactivity faced by the Tar Heels.

The Blue and White lineup will probably be that used in past meets with the possibility that Ken Hampton may handle the unlimited division. Hampton, who fought against Virginia tech and may get another chance to show his stuff against the wolfpack matmen. Marion Cowper, who was absent from the lineup against V. P. I., is again in condition, however, and Coach Quinlan may decide to give the veteran his regular position again. The Carolina grapplers have four meets within the next eleven days, and with this prospect in view, several changes in the personnel may be seen in some of the meets.

State will be out to raise its standing in the race for the Big Five title, having lost already to Duke and Davidson. In Captain Eason, 118 pounder, the Wolfpack has one of the best men in the Southern Conference. He is undefeated this year and has a victory by time decision over Gamble of Duke who was also undefeated until he hooked up with the brilliant State leader. Oakley, in the 145 pound class, is another of the Wolfpack's

Will 'Chuck, Jr.,' Be A Tar Heel Tackle, Matman?

Chuck Quinlan, popular Carolina wrestling coach, is wearing a broad smile these days, and it's not all because the Quinlan-coached wrestling team, to meet N. C. State here tonight, is having a fine year and is unbeaten in the South.

There's something else. "Quinny" is the proud father of a bouncing baby boy. Six pounds he weighed. He's the first child and is to be "P. I. Jr." Quinny doesn't know whether he'll be a wrestler or a tackle, not yet, but anyway he and Mrs. Quinlan are just about the proudest parents imaginable.

Charlotte And Raleigh Lead Race

Raleigh and Charlotte still manage to walk off the court with the big end of the score in their games in the Class A state high school basketball contest. Raleigh's spotless record shows four victories, while the Charlotte sharpshooters have captured all of their seven games. Gastonia is snapping at Charlotte's heels, and Wilson and Durham both may upset the dope and pass Raleigh in the Eastern scramble. The standings of the leading teams are:

STATE TITLE IN SIGHT FOR FAST TAR BABY QUINT

Carolina Youngsters Boast Six Straight Wins; Three Are In Big Five.

TO MEET WAKE FOREST

Victory Over Baby Deacons Thursday Would Give Yearlings State Frosh Title.

The fast stepping Tar Babies, boasting six straight wins, three in Big Five play, will meet the Wake Forest first year men in a preliminary to the varsity encounter Thursday night at Wake Forest. The yearlings have recorded successive wins over State, Woodbury Forest, V. M. I., Augusta Military Academy, Davidson, and Duke. A win over Wake Forest Thursday night would clinch the Big Five title for the Tar Babies with a record of five wins and two losses for a percentage of .714. The Tar Babies defeated Wake Forest earlier in the season 23-17.

The Blue Imps, with a win over Wake Forest, will have a record of four victories and two defeats for a .667 percentage. State and Carolina both defeated the Imps by the narrow margin of one point.

The Carolina first year men defeated the Duke first year men Saturday night in a preliminary to the varsity encounter 19-18. The game was one of the closest and hardest fought games ever witnessed in the Tin Can. A foul shot by Weathers, Tar Baby forward, was the deciding point.

The Blue Imps scored first on a foul by Collett, Weaver getting two points. Jones, Carolina guard, scored first for the Tar Babies, counting on an overhead shot from the edge of the court. The Imps held a slight edge in the first half, the halfway mark finding the two battling 10-8.

most outstanding men and is doped to give Don Conklin, brilliant Tar Heel sophomore, quite a battle.

The remainder of the Wolfpack lineup will probably be made up of: Bazemore, 126; Evans, 135; Jones, 155; Sutton, 165; Laney, 175; and Sam Gurneau, unlimited.

Carolina will probably offer Pete Usher in the 118, Captain Fred Stallings in the 126, Mayne Albright in the 135, Don Conklin, undefeated, in the 145, Harry Tsumas in the 155, Percy Idol, 165, Marion Cowper or Fred Ferguson in the 175, and Fred Ferguson or Ken Hampton in the unlimited class.

Coach Peyton Abbott's freshmen are due to have their hands full when they tackle the Oak Ridge Cadets. The Ridgemen have victories over Greensboro High School, Draper Y, and the Davidson freshmen already on their string and are expected to present a strong and experienced team.

Against the Cadets, Coach Abbott will probably make his choice from the following men: 118 pound class, Thad Hussey, or Joe Jones, 126 pound class, Howard Beebe, Tom Bennett, Clarke Matthewson, or Ausley Cope, 135 pound class, Mort Hiller or Mark Best, 145 pound class, Carroll Cahoon or Tom Webb, 155 pound class, Marshall Thompson or Frank Blythe. Sim Efland will handle the 165 pound class with Bob Wells in the 175 and Sam Walens in the unlimited division.

Bennett, Efland, and Wells made their first appearance of the year against the V. P. I. freshmen and turned in decisive victories. Thad Hussey, 118 pounder, has appeared in two bouts and has won time decisions in both of them. Walens, Cope, and Blythe have each been in action one time and have lost, while Best, Cahoon, and Thompson have been defeated in both of their matches this year.

Tar Heels Practically Assured Place in 1931 Cage Meet.

The basketball committee of the Southern Conference will convene Saturday in Atlanta, Georgia, to pick the sixteen teams to participate in the annual tournament, this year being staged in Atlanta from February twenty-seventh to March second.

Although the Tar Heels have had little more than fair success along the Southern front, it is practically assured that Carolina will be one of the lucky sixteen.

COMMUNITY CLUB TO DISCUSS WHAT MAKES A PLAY

The literature department of the Community club will conduct an open forum meeting in the Episcopal parish house this evening at eight o'clock to discuss "What Are the Essentials of a Fine Play?" A cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested, especially to the members of the University English department, and all special students in dramatic literature.

Ralph Westerman, a new member of the dramatic department, will talk briefly on "The Salient Differences Between the Old and New Drama." Personal opinions as to "What Are the Essentials of a Fine Play" will be offered in the minute speeches by a representative group of men and women. Those who have been requested to express opinions are: Mesdames Paul Green, Oscar Coffin, Valentine, Nolen, J. O. Bailey, K. H. Fussler, H. G. Rees, George Howe, Miss Josephine Sharkey, and Messrs. After these minute opinions have been given, the meeting will be open to general discussion and all are urged to participate.

The literature chairman of the club, Mrs. P. C. Farrar and Mrs. George Howe, chairman for the evening will have charge of the discussion.

Phi Sig's Win in Final Seconds

The Phi Sig's defeated the Phi Kap's in one of the closest games ever witnessed on the intramural courts. The Phi Kap's led 13-11, and with only thirteen seconds to go the game appeared to be sewed up, but Merritt, Phi Sig guard, dropped in a free toss to make the score 13-12, and on the next play countered with a long shot from mid-center to win the old ball game, 14-13.

For the winners Peetz and Teachey, with four points each were best. Merritt played a good game at guard, his three points in the last thirteen seconds winning the game for the Phi Sig's. For the Phi Kap's Barnhill with five points and Odum, with four, were best.

Pi Kappa Phi's Get Forfeit

The Pi Kappa Phi's received a forfeit yesterday afternoon in the intramural basketball league when the Lambda Chi Alpha's failed to put in an appearance.

Delta Psi Wins Over Deke's

Led by Dillard, star center with eleven points, the Delta Psi's defeated the Deke's 27-15. The Delta Psi's jumped away to an early lead and were never headed. For the losers Parsons was best with seven points. Blunt and Burroughs, for the Delta Psi's scored eight points each.

Phi Delt's Defeat T. E. P.'s 26-20

The Phi Delt's defeated the T. E. P.'s 26-20 yesterday afternoon in the intramural basketball league. The game was close and hard fought although the T. E. P.'s at no time seriously threatened. Peacock, star forward of the Phi Delt's, led the individual scoring with fifteen points. Moore and Eubanks, with five and four points respectively, took second and third honors for the Phi Delt's. For the T. E. P.'s, Cohen, forward, was best with eight points. Felshin and Peres tied for second place honors with four points each. It was the seventh straight victory for the Phi Delt's against no defeats.

Sigma Phi Sigma Forfeits

Zeta Psi received a forfeit yesterday afternoon when the Sigma Phi Sigma's failed to appear.

A. T. O.'s Defeat Beta's

Led by Alan Smith, with nineteen points, the A. T. O.'s defeated the Beta's 33-15. The A. T. O.'s have a record of six wins with only one loss, a 36-30 loss to the Phi Delt's. The A. T. O.'s jumped away to an early lead and were never headed, while the famed Beta attack which scored eighty-two points against the Pika's last Thursday seemed unable to get started. For the winners, Menge, forward took second place honors with eight points. Black, with five points, and Moody, with four points, led the Beta's.

VOLUME XXXIX — CHAPEL HILL, N. C., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1931 — NUMBER 109

SACRED CONCERT TO BE GIVEN BY GUILFORD CHOIR

Religious Songs, Negro Spirituals, and Selections in Latin Will Be Offered.

The Sacred Concert by the Guilford College choir, under the direction of Max Noah, will be given in the music building Sunday night.

The first group of songs will be of religious themes. They are: Jesus, Friend of Sinners by Edward Grieg; O Lord Most Holy by Anton Bruckner; The Song of Mary from the Spanish Vega, arranged by Albert Kranz. This number is the prayer of a young mother, full of calm and peace, and is sung by a soprano against the soft humming of the choir, closing with an effect that is celestial-like in its beauty. The last number of this group, The Three Kings by Healy Willan, is an English choral portraying the visit of the Three Kings to the Christ-Child.

The second group comprises selections composed by masters in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, and are sung in Latin. There are three numbers in this part: Ave Verum Corpus by William Byrd (written in about 1550), Adoramus te by G. P. daPalestrina; and Ave Maria by T. L. da Vittiria (composed in 1608).

Following this group, the Guilford College Choir will render four numbers: God is a Spirit, by David Jones, Beautiful Saviour, by Christiansen; The Lord's Prayer, by Samuel Gaines; and Alleluia! Christ Is Risen, by Andre Kopolyoff. The first number of this group is exceptional because of the manner in which the composer, Mr. Jones, has made so much out of words plus music. Mr. Jones is now with the Westminster Choir School, Ithaca, N. Y. The second number of this group is a melody of the 12th century arranged into a delightfully pleasing eight-part anthem. And the last number of this section surpasses all expectations with its superb deliverance, and the way in which the tone and "inner spring of joy" gradually rises to a shout of exultation.

As the closing group on the program, the choir will sing four spirituals. The first spiritual, Won't You Set Us Free? by Anton Dvorak is a number which is interpreted very cleverly by Paul Bliss, who has taken new words and a new arrangement of the melody in contrast to the Largo from the "New World Symphony"; Steal Away by Fred Hall, who is the Director of Jackson College Conservatory for Negroes in Atlanta, is the second selection of the final group. Were You There by H. T. Burleigh, and Praise To The Lord, by F. Melius Christiansen are the final numbers. They are of the "old school" of spirituals, and are enthusiastically rendered by a group of eight voices.

Chapel Notices

Jack Ward, president of the Inter-fraternity council, is to be the eighth speaker in the series of speeches by prominent members of the University student body. These talks are broadcast from WPTF, Raleigh, every Wednesday evening from five to five-fifteen under the auspices of the student union at the University.

Ward's topic is "A Discussion of Fraternities."

ENGINEERS' BALL WILL BE GIVEN FRIDAY EVENING

Dance Will Start at Nine O'clock In Gymnasium and Continue Till One.

Plans for the engineer's ball, which will take place Friday, are going forward smoothly. The dance, to be given in the gymnasium, will be the fifth annual ball given by the engineering school; it will start at nine o'clock and continue till one. Jelly Leftwich's orchestra will furnish the music.

Each engineer will receive two invitations to the dance. One may be used for himself, and one may be given to a guest. In any event, at least one girl must accompany every two invitations used.

The ball will be conducted under strict regulations and will be well chaperoned. It will be formal in nature. The chaperones will be Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Lear, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Hoefer, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Stainback, and Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Baity.

Invitations may be obtained from a committee of seniors in the senior room of their respective branches of engineering. Electrical engineers may obtain their invitations from Pat Hayes or Frank Jacocks. Rankin White, Tom Riddick, and John Brown will give out invitations to the civil engineers. Invitations for the chemical engineers will be distributed by Raymond Ruble, Adam Fisher, and George McCormick. Bob Plummer and Aubrey Parsley will have charge of invitations for mechanical engineers.

Library Prepares Index to Magazines

An index to current magazines in the east end of the main reading room in the general library has been prepared by the periodicals department. It is now available for consultation to the right of the east door leading into the main reading room. This index enables readers to locate the current issues of all periodicals which have been placed on the open shelves.

The index is of the visible type, which makes consultation very easy, since the list of periodicals is arranged in alphabetical form on panels. The first part of this index is a simple list of periodicals, with the name of the section in which the magazine is shelved placed opposite the title. The other part of the index is the same list of periodicals arranged alphabetically under subjects. In this part, for instance, all magazines related to classical languages can be found listed under the subject heading of "Classics." The same holds true for magazines on the fine arts, literature, English literature, and other subjects.

"University As Important Seat Of Learning Faces Extinction"

"The fine University of North Carolina is facing the possibility of extinction as a really important seat of learning," stated Gerald Johnson, in the Baltimore Sun after visiting the legislature in Raleigh last week. Mr. Johnson, former professor of journalism at the University, is at present a member of the editorial board of the Sun.

Mr. Johnson, in making the above statement, drew his conclusion from the fact that the counties seem to be unloading their burdens on the state. His opinion was that if this rush to unload on the state continues it will mean the end of the program of public improvement as well as the extinction of the University. He further stated that "President Graham is making a grim and determined fight for the life of the institution, but as the proposed budget now stands he is to be subject to a cut of thirty-four per cent below the appropriation of two years ago. The salary schedule is already absurdly low for a university of respectable rank and a cut of thirty-four per cent would unquestionably sink it. Carolina would probably drop into the class of the one-building 'universities' that are the scandal of American education.

Mr. Johnson was of the opinion, however, that in the present legislature anything can happen: "even the University of North Carolina may be saved."

The writer made this statement: "A mustard plaster has this virtue: While it may or may not cure your stiff neck, if it be hot enough, you will not be able to worry about your neck for thinking about the plaster." Mr. Johnson seemed to think that Governor Gardner has applied a plaster to the legislature so hot that they have forgotten to think about hard times while considering the revolutionary measures the governor has proposed.

He contends, that the legislature is still to some extent a distress session, because one serious move has been made in that the counties have unloaded on the state a part of the burden of public education. He stated that in the past the state has been able to keep itself in good shape, but that if it must care for the county schools, it will be a different matter.

BAIRNSFATHER ON WEEK'S PROGRAM

Humorist Booked By Student Entertainment Committee For Friday.

Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, artist, journalist, and cartoonist, will be the performer on the second program offered by the entertainment committee for this quarter. Bairnsfather will give an illustrated lecture entitled "Old Bill and Me" in the new Memorial hall, Friday night at 8:30 p. m.

Bairnsfather was born in Murree, India of English parentage. He was educated at the United Service College, and after graduating served in the Warwickshire Militia prior to the war, from the year 1911 until 1914.

At this time he became a civil engineer working abroad. At the outbreak of the war, he returned from abroad and rejoined the Royal Warwickshire Regiment, going to France in November, 1914, and serving with the first battalion of the Royal Warwicks with distinction, being made captain in July, 1915.

He served in France until December 1916 when he was recalled to England and attached to the War Office for work abroad.

Among the more popular of the numerous books that he has written are: Fragments from France, in six volumns; The Better Ole; Bullets and Billets; and From Mud to Mufti.

He is a member of the Garrick club of London; this is an organization of literary men named after David Garrick, famous English playwright and author.

CAMPBELL TO BE AT Y CONFERENCE

Paul Harrison, Rev. McNeall Poteat and Dean Russell Are Also to Speak.

The State Student Volunteer Conference of the Y. M. C. A. will convene this year at the University of North Carolina Y February 27 to March 1.

This is the twentieth annual conference sponsored by the North Carolina Student Volunteer Union for Foreign Missions, and is to be an interpretation of world conditions and how Christianity can meet these conditions.

Representatives from the North Carolina College for Negroes, at Durham, will be included among the delegation. The Negro students are invited as a result of a policy of the Union adopted four years ago and which has been continued successfully since. The conference this year is expected to exceed all previous ones in number of delegates. This number, however, will be limited to 300. Of these 225 will be white students, thirty Negro students, and some fifteen or twenty especially invited guests such as pastors and college professors.

The topics for discussion at this conference will be: "Economic Disorders in the World," "Disease in the World," "Inadequacies of Non-Christian Religions to Meet Human Needs," and "Ignorance and Superstition in the World."

Speakers at the conference will include Fay Campbell, head of the Y. M. C. A. at Yale University; Paul Harrison, M.D., who was recently awarded an honorary degree from Yale University for his achievements as a missionary in Arabia; Rev. McNeall Poteat, pastor of Pullen Memorial Baptist Church in Raleigh; Elbert Russell, dean of the school of religion at Duke University; Lee Phillip, a young Negro student and poet from Howard University at Washington and Mrs. Rose D. Aggery, wife of the "Aggery of Africa."

Playmakers Sponsor Puppet Presentation

Sue Hasting's Marionettes will be presented Thursday of this week by the Carolina Playmakers in an afternoon performance of Winnie the Pooh, and an evening production of The Puppet Review.

The afternoon performance will take place at 3:00 o'clock, and the evening performance at 8:30 o'clock, both in the Playmakers theatre.

ORCHESTRA WILL APPEAR IN PUBLIC CONCERT TONIGHT

Symphony Organization's Program Will Consist of Pieces by Famous Composers.

The University symphony orchestra will appear in concert at the Music building at eight-fifteen tonight. The orchestra is under the direction of T. Smith McCorkle, with Dr. H. S. Dyer acting as conductor for one number when Mr. McCorkle will take the concertmeister's chair.

The program will consist of works from Bach, Gluck, Haydn, Beethoven, and Schubert, and will include a classic suite, a symphony, excerpts from operatic ballets, and smaller pieces of romantic music. For the Bach suite the orchestra will be assisted by Mrs. T. Smith McCorkle, pianist, and Nelson O. Kennedy, organist.

The orchestra has a membership of forty-one persons, of whom twenty-seven are students, eight are faculty members, and six are residents of the community.

The student officers of the orchestra are Frank Jacocks, president; Orlando Cates, vice president; James Pfohl, secretary.

Seminary Students Address Y Cabinets

Each cabinet of the Y.M.C.A. heard one of the men from the Episcopal seminary at Alexandria, Virginia, speak at its regular meeting Monday night. Preparations for providing rooms and hosts for the delegates to the State Student Y Conference was included in the program.

The friendship council was addressed by Dick Beasley, a graduate of the University of Virginia, who spoke on the opportunities open to freshmen in the field of religion, science, and teaching. He urged the freshmen to choose their vocation early.

Charles Fishburne, a graduate of the University of South Carolina, a member of Phi Beta Kappa, and, at present, president of the student body of Virginia Seminary spoke to the sophomore group. He chose as his subject, "The Life of Frederick Von Hugel," German philosopher.

Thomas Wright, provincial secretary for college work at the Seminary addressed the junior-senior cabinet on "The Place of Christianity on the College Campus."

Comer Will Speak

H. F. Comer, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., will address the members of the St. Paul A. M. E. church Sunday evening, February 22 at seven forty-five.

The Silvertone Quartet of Apex will furnish the music. The service is open to the public.

STUDENTS DRAW UP PETITION FOR ADEQUATE FUNDS

Signers Ask General Assembly To Appropriate Graham's Figure.

A petition to be signed by members of the student body and to be sent to the state General Assembly was drawn up at a meeting of prominent campus leaders in Murphey hall, Monday night.

The meeting had been called hastily and a hundred letters were sent out to those who were desired to be present. In spite of this the gathering was attended by some seventy-five men.

The petition which was drawn up follows:

To the General Assembly
State of North Carolina
Raleigh, North Carolina

"We, the undersigned, as students of the University of North Carolina, petition you to give careful consideration to the appropriations for the ensuing biennium of the institution which we attend.

We believe that even the economic depression which hangs over North Carolina at this time does not warrant the crippling of our educational institutions. And we know something of this economic depression. We come from all parts of North Carolina; every county in the State is represented in our studen body. Many of us are here at great family or personal sacrifice. Many of us have borrowed the money to stay in Chapel Hill, feeling that in doing so we are making an investment which will be essentially worthwhile in the long run.

In a similar way, we believe that North Carolina will find it good business not to lower the quality of its work at its University. It is important to us in our efforts to secure an education that the quality of the work offered to use be not impaired.

Therefore, upon our own responsibility, we petition you to give full consideration to the University's request for the life-giving figures of $875,0000 for the ensuing year. The expenditure of that much money by the state, added to the tuition and other fees which we pay and the small endowment funds of the institution, can only constitute as President Graham so ably has said the minimum basis for the maximum life of the University of North Carolina!

Last night the dormitories and fraternities were canvassed by a group of some seventy-five volunteer students. The canvassing began at nine-thirty and by midnight all the dormitories had been covered. It is to be understood that this movement to influence the assembly is entirely a student endeavor which has sprung up spontaneously among the student body because they are vitally involved in the matter.

BENEFIT SHOW TO BE GIVEN SUNDAY

An Orange county welfare benefit show will be given at the Carolina Theatre Sunday, February 22, at two-thirty o'clock under the auspices of the Chapel Hill Kiwanis Club. The picture will be a comedy, "Skinner Steps Out." Tickets may be obtained from the Students' Supply Store.

"Even The University May Be Saved."

Gerald Johnson, former professor of journalism here and now editorial writer for the Baltimore Sun, sums up his view of the North Carolina legislature with the statement, "even the University of North Carolina may be saved."

And in the same comment he places the responsibility of saving the University squarely up to those who are its friends. As he says, above all, the fine University of North Carolina is facing the possibility of extinction as a really important seat of learning. President Graham is making a grim and determined fight for the life of the institution, but as the proposed budget now stands he is to be subject to a cut of 34 per cent below the appropriations of two years ago. The salary schedule is already absurdly low for a university of respectable rank and a cut of 34 per cent unquestionably would sink it. Carolina would promptly drop into the class of the one-building "universities' that are the scandal of American education."

Perhaps some of us underestimated the immediate danger to the University of late, relying too much on the great appeal of President Graham to pull us through. But the danger is present and the time for action is now. President Graham's appeal is the greatest brief for the University and for education in North Carolina presented to any legislature since the early days of the century. And that appeal will save the University, we believe, if its force and strength could be presented to every legislator and every constituent in this state.

President Graham has sounded the warning; Mr. Johnson has given the cue; now it is for us to go into action. "Even the University of North Carolina may be saved."

Prohibition And The Democrats

From the statements of several southern Democratic leaders, among whom is Cordell Hull of Tennessee, candidate for the Democratic nomination in 1928, it appears that Southern Democracy wishes to avoid Prohibition as an issue in the 1932 presidential campaign. Prohibition is to remain under cover, an unmentionable subject, while the party leaders generalize on the tariff and farm relief.

Such an attitude is deplorable. There is no one issue which has been in the mind of the American people so constantly in the last ten years as the Prohibition problem. To shunt such a vital issue into the background, as far as the political parties are concerned, would be political cowardice. The Southern Democrats fear that this question will split the Democratic party and bring about its ultimate collapse. Well, let it. If, after facing this issue squarely, the antagonistic elements in the Democratic party, the wet, industrial, East, and the dry, agricultural West, cannot come to an agreement on Prohibition without resorting to hypocrisy and pretense, they should separate.

It is becoming increasingly apparent that a battle to the finish on prohibition, ending definitely one way or the other, is imminent. The Democratic party should not resort to political cowardice and hypocritical evasion to carry it through the storm.—H. B.

We Will Conquer The World!

Josef Stalin, in a recent address to the Russian people, made a statement to the following effect: "If we wish to climb out of our backward position among the nations of the world, we must gain knowledge. Knowledge is power; and only by knowledge can we advance." He is only one of the world's leaders who has said this. For it is the opinion of almost all the great men in history that knowledge is the greatest power man can have.

Here in the University we stand before a mine of knowledge. Ambition, courage, the will to win, are the tools that can clear our way into the mine. If we have them, we have gotten off to a good start. But only a start. For the knowledge is hidden within the far recesses of the mind. Before us lie great, thick walls of stone to bar our way. We must hew them down before we can find anything. A year of the most heartbreaking effort will yield us only a shred of the mine's store. Four years of effort, and we have only a handful of knowledge to reward our work. And we wonder if it is worth it.

It is. For this mere handful of knowledge is the most valuable ore we can ever find. In the years it has taken us to get this handful, we have learned the method of working the mine. When we leave the University we are no longer greenhorns at the work. We have learned how to dig for knowledge. We have found some—not much; for we delude ourselves if we think we have found all there is to be found. And with the bit we have found, and the knowledge we have gained, we can leave the University and conquer the world. For the world is not so hard to conquer, and many men and women have done it, each in their own way.

People will say we are foolish and vain to think we can conquer all. But it is those who have failed who say this. They have failed to make the grade, and they have grown sour. But we have only to say that with knowledge we shal conquer the world, and we will conquer the world!—P. L.

With Contemporaries

In Defense Of Fraternities

In the last few years there has been much criticism of the fraternity system. Last week a Federal report was issued after an investigation of fifty-two of the country's largest colleges. This survey of undergraduate life recommended and approved of the existence of Greek letter societies.

At Minnesota the presence of fraternities is a a decided aid to the school. These organizations have been most valuable in solving the housing problem. In the past there have been no men's dormitories. Men have been forced to live in rooming houses or fraternities. Perhaps chapter houses at Minnesota are not the finest in the country. But they offer much more desirable places to live than local rooming houses do. And the expense of boarding at one of these societies is no greater than the cost of living in a rooming house or dormitory.

Although some women can be accommodated at Sanford hall, this building could not begin to house all the out-of-town co-eds. Sorority houses are necessary to take part of the surplus of women coming from outside the Twin Cities.

Raisons d'etre of fraternities at other universities are various. But at Minnesota the service performed in rooming students alone would justify their existence. If the seventy-five Greek societies were removed would the thirteen hundred men and women in these houses find as satisfactory places to live as they now occupy.—Minnesota Daily.

Honor System

For the past year and more college newspapers in the United States have been full of dissertations on the honor system. Being student organizations, they have been uniformly in favor of the scheme, devoting columns to expositions of the finer points and editorials to the castigation of violators of the code.

However, the idea seems to have fallen on deaf ears north of forty-nine. No Canadian university has adopted the honor system nor is there any widespread agitation for its introduction. The old regime of vigilators seems to be good enough for us. We feel no burning pangs of outraged honesty as we look at the sleepy gentleman who sits before us while we write.

The whole thing began when some college editor was hard pressed one night, desperately looking for something with which to fill his column. He cast about for ideas, failed to find any, remembered a recent examination, thought that it might have been a good idea if the vigilator had remained outside, worked the thought up and wrote an editorial about it, just nicely filling the column with the three hundredth word.

He was taken seriously and before he realized the value of his effort it had been reprinted and commented upon all over America. The next step was to put the scheme into action and in a very short time a great number of universities were conducting their examinations without official supervision, leaving the matter of honesty to the students themselves.

With the honor system in action an elaborate schedule of rules and regulations grew up around it. In many cases students' councils constituted themselves courts to try cases of violation of the code. Sometimes they recommended expulsion to the governing bodies, sometimes they extorted fines, but more often they contented themselves with cancellation of whatever privileges the delinquent may have enjoyed in virtue of his membership in organizations or his official positions.

At McGill the honor system is not in force. A vigilator sits in every examination room. But as yet there have been no protests and no one imagines himself insulted. Everyone knows that there is a certain amount of cheating although in four years we have never seen any personally. The claim that there would be less dishonesty if supervision were relaxed is absurd; and the little good which might ensue would be more than counterbalanced by the greater evils brought into being. On the whole, then, the honor system seems to be more or less a farce, as a professor is reported to have brought out in speaking to his class:— "Gentelmen," he said, "I will give this examination under the honor system. Please take seats in alternate aisles, three desks apart."—McGill Daily.

By Wex Malone

The third of the Vesper Series of organ recitals was given by Professor Kennedy Sunday afternoon in the Music Building Auditorium. There were seven selections in the program: Meditation Serieuse (Bartlett), Variations de Concert (Bonnet), Ave Maria (Bossi), Fugue in G Minor (Bach), The Squirrel (Weaver), Traumerei (Schumann), and Hosannah (Dubois).

The Ave Maria had probably the most striking and immediate appeal. The melody is simple but firm, and in its initial statement stands in effective relief against a background of arpeggios. To use the phrase of a friend who heard the Ave Maria Sunday, there is a maximum of effect from a minimum of material. The florid effect of the old Italian lyricism is attained apparently through suggestion rather than display.

Variations de Concert demands great versatility from the player. It is introduced by a glittering sforzando movement, followed by the theme which the program aptly describes as being in the Doric mode. There is, in turn, a brilliant pedal study which is skillfully manipulated in chords using the feet alone, this followed by the finale on the full organ. This awe inspiring selection, although it is sure to demand the listener's attention and admiration, is likely to have the effect of a three-ring circus, with its segregated themes, each more impressive than the last.

The Squirrel represents more descriptive modernism. The musical Sciuridae hops around and picks up nuts all over the keyboard. The number was very clever, and was nicely executed. The registration was exceptionally interesting. Hosannah made an excellent concluding number. It abounds in surprising resolutions of impressive texture, and is substantial in effect.

Kennedy played well. He differentiated well the spirits of the numbers, constituting the rather diversified program. The pedal work in Variations was perhaps the most ostentatious display, but the entire execution was concise and nicely effected.

Scientists have achieved some wonderful results, and maybe in time one of them will succeed in producing a cigarette the ashes of which will match the color of the rug.—Louisville Times.

Midget golf, suggests a doctor, will not help people who play games in order to keep slim. But in that game, as it happens, the whole object is to get round as quickly as possible.—The Humorist.

Plans Shaping Up For Spring Sports Carnival

SOUTHERN INDOOR TRACK MEET IS FEATURE EVENT

Annual Monogram-Rookie Football Game Will Rival Conference Meet.

MARCH 7 DATE FOR MEET

Stars Will Have New Set of Records to Shoot at When They Gather Here.

The South's outstanding stars of the cinderpath will have a new set of records at which to shoot when they converge here March 7 for the second annual Southern Conference Indoor Games.

The track meet will be the principal feature of the spring Athletic Carnival, but in the matter of attracting interest the indoor games will have a rival in the annual Monogram-Rookie football game, which will mark the end of the winter gridiron practice session at the University.

The football game will start at 2 o'clock, and the indoor games at 4 o'clock. There will be a banquet at 5:45 o'clock, and the indoor games will be resumed at 6:45.

Such Southern track peers as Hamm, Young, Speer, Finkelstein, Farmer, Arnold, and Bagby, were outstanding performers in last year's indoor meet. The marks they set stood as official Southern Conference Indoor records, and they will probably inspire some great competition this year. Many of the record-setters will be back, and extensive plans already under way indicate that this year's meet will be even better.

The meet will be run off in the Tin Can as a sort of four-ring circus in which the spectators will be treated to a continuous panorama of action, what with events carded for Conference and Non-Conference colleges, and for freshman and scholastic teams from all over the South.

Varsity records set last year, at which the flying collegians of the Conference will be shooting in the March 7 meet here, are: 60-yard dash: Farmer, North Carolina, 6.4 seconds. 440-yard run: Shepard, Washington and Lee, 55.8 seconds. 880-yard run: Linzey, Maryland, 2 minutes 2 seconds. Two mile run: Young, Georgia, 9 minutes 57 2-3 seconds. High Jump: Bagby, N. C., and Bostick, S. C., 5 feet 11 1-8. 60 yard high hurdles: Speer, Wash. and Lee, 7.8 seconds. One mile run: Wells, Tulane, 4 minutes 37.4 seconds. One mile relay: Washington and Lee, 3 minutes 47.4 seconds. Shot put: McDonald, Maryland, 42 feet 10 1-2 inches. Broad jump: Hamm, Georgia Tech, 22 feet 7 inches. Pole Vault: Arnold, North Carolina, 12 feet 7 1-4 inches.

N. S. F. A. Sponsors Editorial Contest

The National Student Federation of America announces two fifty dollar prizes to be awarded for the best editorials pro and con for the United States' entering the World Court.

Three prominent judges who are to decide as to which of the editorials submitted merits the prizes are: Professor Phillip Jessup, secretary to the National World Court Committee; Mr. Frederick J. Libby of the National Council for Prevention of War; and Mr. James G. McDonald, chairman of the Foreign Policy Association.

A copy of the paper in which the editorial was printed must be sent to the central office of the N. S. F. A. before March 1.

Football Game Stadium Today

'Oranges' and 'Blues' Will Battle This Afternoon at Four O'clock.

The "Oranges" and the "Blues," with variations in lineup, will stage another of their practice clashes on Carolina's winter grid program in Kenan Stadium this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Johnny Daniel, driving little reserve halfback, led the ball carriers last Saturday. Wednesday's game is due to show new performers including Rip Slusser and Stuart Chandler, only letter halfbacks in togs this spring, who rested last Saturday.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Best House Wins Over Mangum

The Best House defeated Mangum 26-19 in one of the best games of the year according to Wallace Shelton, assistant director of intramural athletics, who refereed the game. The game was close and hard fought all the way with Mangum holding a slight edge during the first three quarters. It was the first time this year that the Best House has been on the small end of the score, Mangum holding a 12-10 lead immediately after the beginning of the third quarter. Blake, with nine, and French, with seven points, were best for the Best House. Dunlap played a good game at center for the winners, gathering six points. Gatty, center, led the scoring for the losers, with six points. The Blythe brothers, both forwards, played good games for Mangum.

Best House (26)	Mangum (19)
Crouch (4)	Blythe (2)
French (7)	Blythe (4)
Dunlap (6)	Gatty (6)
Blake (9)	McCray (3)

Theta Chi's Win 16-12

The Theta Chi's defeated the Pika's yesterday afternoon 16-12. The game was close throughout. Woerner, Pika guard, countered in the last five seconds to bring the Pika's total up to twelve, the ball leaving his hand as the whistle blew. Stone and Goodwin, with six points, led the scoring for the Theta Chi's. For the Pika's Shoemaker was best with four points.

Theta Chi (16)	Pika's (12)
Sherrill (2)	Cassada (2)
Stone (6)	Weeks
Goodwin (6)	Stamps (2)
Napier	Clark (1)
Hussey (2)	Shoemaker (4)

Scoring substitutes: Pika's: Woerner (3).

Delta Sigma Phi Bests Chi Phi

The Delta Sig's defeated the Chi Phi's 22-3 yesterday afternoon. The Chi Phi's used only three men in the game. Perry, Delta Sig forward, led the individual scoring with eight points. Battley took second place honors with six points. Thompson and Haywood, with one action toss and one free toss respectively led the scoring for the Chi Phi's.

EDWARDS - FORWARD

Coach Jim Ashmore has come to depend upon Paul Edwards to fill in whenever trouble hits the Tar Heel team and one of his regulars is out. Edwards regularly plays forward, but has pinch-hit for Sandy Dameron at center at times, and during his career here has seen action at guard.

AYCOCK FENCERS BEST ZETA PSI'S

The Aycock fencers annexed their second victory of the year Monday afternoon by taking a 5-4 decision over Zeta Psi. Both teams were undefeated previous to this match and the win places Aycock at the top of the fencing league standings.

Bill Liberstein led the dormitory boys to victory with a fast and aggressive exhibition of sword play. Both Liberstein and Wasserman won two bouts out of three, while Red Herman accounted for the last and deciding point by winning one out of his three bouts of the afternoon.

Bill Cooper led the Zeta Psi's by winning both of the matches in which he participated. Cooper's two victories give him a total of five wins and no defeats for the season and place him at the top among the individual scorers. Arthur Valk and Billy Bean scored the other points for Zeta Psi. Bean lost one match while Valk and Glenn lost two bouts each.

The defeat of Zeta Psi leaves only Aycock and Phi Gamma Delta among the undefeated teams and gives these two organizations a decided edge in the intramural race.

The box score follows:

Aycock	W	L
Liberstein	2	1
Wasserman	2	1
Herman	1	2
Bean	1	1

MOVIE STAR SUBSTITUTES SATINS FOR MOUSTACHE

Charles Ruggles, who achieved universal recognition by his performance as the tipsy reporter in the picture, "Gentlemen of the Press," has lost his moustache. For a brief interval, he has substituted silks and satins when he appears in the title role of "Charley's Aunt," a talking picture, which dramatizes student life at Oxford University. Supporting Ruggles in the picture are June Collyer, Doris Lloyd, Rodney McLennon, Hugh Williams, and Halliwell Hobbes. Al Cristie directed the production.

Grant And Hines Ranked High Among Tennis Stars

Grant Number Ten in Men's Singles—Hines Number Thirty-Two—Records of Both Tar Heel Stars Cited.

Bryant Grant and Wilmer Hines, University of North Carolina sophomores, received high rankings from the United States Lawn Tennis Association at its annual convention, held in New York City Saturday.

Bryant Grant received a No. 10 ranking in the United States Lawn Tennis Association rankings Saturday, while Wilmer Hines was ranked as No. 32 Hines also received two No. 1 rankings at the same time, receiving the No. 1 position in the national junior singles rankings and pairing with "Judge" Beaver, of Gainesville, Georgia, to get a No. 1 place in the national junior doubles also.

Grant, who is from Atlanta, Georgia, won the national clay courts singles championship last summer, besting Junior Coen, a Tilden protege, in the finals 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4. Grant also holds the southern singles title, defeating "Cliff" Sutter, Tulane University star and holder of the national intercollegiate championship, 6-2, 1-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

Grant won his first tennis title, the southern singles title, at the age of seventeen. He comes from a tennis family, his father, R. M. Grant, having held the southern singles title several years in succession and reached the runner-up position in the doubles finals in 1907.

Hines, a Columbia, South Carolina youth, won the national junior singles title last July, defeating Billy Reese, Atlanta, Georgia, in the finals and pairing with "Judge" Beaver to win the national junior doubles title. Incidentally Hines possesses several other major tennis titles, all of which were won during the past summer. Among his titles are: middle atlantic intercollegiate singles and doubles champion, Carolina singles champion, and the southern junior singles championship won earlier in the summer.

Dameron Leading Tar Heel Cagers With 110 Points

Outscores Croson in Duke Game After Recovery from Poison Ivy To Regain Lead.

Sandy Dameron, center, was back in the van of the scorers as the Carolina quint got down to heavy drilling in preparation for its final Big Five game with Wake Forest in the State College gymnasium in Raleigh Thursday night.

Dameron outscored Croson, Duke center, 9 to 7, Saturday night, despite the fact that the Tar Heel was just recovering from a very severe attack of poison ivy, and so pulled past Captain Artie Marpet for high score honors. Dameron leads with 110 and Marpet has 105. Following are Alexander 81, Hines 66, Edwards 58 and Moore 51.

Week-End Program Is Full For Devils

Durham, February 18.—Following the wrestling meet with V. M. I. at Lexington, Va., tonight, all Duke teams will be at home during the next few days closing the winter sports schedule.

Freshman boxers and wrestlers start a full program which extends into next week by meeting the Oak Ridge pug and mat teams at the Duke gym Friday night.

Saturday afternoon Duke's wrestlers will entertain the Washington and Lee team, and that night the boxers will meet the Generals in a feature match.

Going over into next week, the basketball team will finish their regular schedule by meeting Sewanee's Tigers at the Duke gym Monday night.

By meeting Carolina's varsity and freshman teams, the Duke grapplers will close the winter sports season at Duke on the following night.

After that all teams will prepare for the conference tournaments to be held late this month. The cagers go to Atlanta, the wrestlers to Lexington, Va., and the boxers to Charlottesville, Va.

TAR HEELS MUST HALT NEW WAKE STAR TOMORROW

Deacons Have Developed Capable Forward Since First Meeting of Teams.

GAME TO BE AT RALEIGH

Both Teams Will Be Fighting to Keep Out of Cellar Position In Big Five.

A newcoming forward who has been averaging 12 points a game against such strong opposition as State and Duke is promising to make a lot of trouble for Carolina as the Tar Heels wind up their Big Five basketball season with Wake Forest Thursday night.

Barnes is his name. He didn't even get in the game when Carolina pasted Wake Forest 30-13 in an early season tilt. But he got 13 points as Wake Forest upset State 20-19, and he got 11 more as Wake Forest held Duke's Big Five leaders to 25-22 on Monday night.

Barnes' fine work and the way the new Deacon quint has snapped out of a long bad luck streak gives every indication that there is going to be a basketball battle royal Thursday night, even if Wake Forest and Carolina are the official cellarites of the Big Five.

The Tar Heels and the Deacons will meet in the State College Gym in Raleigh at 8:30 o'clock. The main varsity attraction will be preceded by a

SIX TEAMS SEE ACTION IN FIRST FENCING PERIOD

Aycock Piles Up Largest Score In 8 to 1 Victory Over Sigma Phi Sigma.

The first week of play in the intramural fencing league saw six teams in action with Zeta Psi, Aycock, and Phi Gamma Delta winning over Everett, Sigma Phi Sigma, and Beta Theta Pi respectively.

In winning over the Betas, Phi Gamma Delta scored the first upset of the season. The veteran Beta organization was ranked as the outstanding favorite to cop the campus title in pre-season doping, and its loss to the Phi Gams came as a big surprise. The Phi Gams entered the fencing league with an entirely new team this year, and were rated as "dark horses" until their one point victory over the Betas. Kent Creuser led the way for the victors Thursday by winning all three of his matches.

Aycock piled up the largest margin of victory Wednesday when the Sigma Phi Sigmas went down by a score of 8 to 1. Red Herman was the leading scorer in this match with three wins, although Urband won both of his bouts and Liberstein won the only bout in which he participated. Farris accounted for Sigma Phi Sigma's lone point when he defeated Wasserman of Aycock.

The Zeta Psis, who took second place in the league last year, jumped off to a good start Tuesday when they opened the intramural schedule with a seven to two victory over Everett. Only two men appeared for Everett and, as a result, three points were forfeited to Zeta Psi.

Five went through their first matches of the season without a defeat. All three of last week's winners are represented in this group, although Aycock leads the pack with three men. Kent Creuser, in turning in a clean sheet against the strong Beta team, gave the outstanding performance of the week and was almost wholly responsible for his team's unexpected victory.

The undefeated fencers for the first week of play are:

Herman, Aycock	3	0
Urban, Aycock	2	0
Liberstein, Aycock	1	0
Cooper, Zeta Psi	2	0
Creuser, Phi Gam's	3	0

Brown University Offers Fellowships

Brown University at Providence, Dhode Island, offers thirty-one fellowships which are open to graduates of any college. Twelve of these pay a stipend of $1,000, nine pay $750, one $700, eight $550 and one $500. In the department of biology, five are available, in chemistry, ten; in economics, one; and in English, physics and romance languages, three each. The fellowships are occasionally available in the departments of biblical literature, philosophy, and psychology.

There are also twelve scholarships which pay tuition only, and which are for study in any department. Others are for study in chemistry and English.

There are forty-five half-time assistants in biology, botany, chemistry, economics, engineering, English, geology, history, mathematics, philosophy, physics, psychology, romance languages, and social and political science. They pay from $600 to $750 and tuition.

Tuition unless otherwise stated must be paid by the student ordinarily fellowships may be awarded only to those who have completed a year or more of graduate study.

The junior smoker will take place at nine o'clock tomorrow in Swain hall. Ty Sawyer and his orchestra will furnish music. Dr. Collier Cobb will speak to the class.

Idaho Offers Two Mining Fellowships

Cooperating with the United States Bureau of Mines and the Idaho Bureau of Mines and Geology, the University of Idaho offers in the school of mines, two fellowships which are open to college graduates who have had good training in mining and metallurgy or chemistry.

These fellowships pay above the University fees and deposits an income of seventy-five dollars a month for ten months. The holders will become candidates for the degree of master of science in mining or metallurgy unless that degree has already been obtained.

The class work will be directed by the heads of the departments of instruction, but the fellows will spend most of their time in research under the direction of the United States Bureau of Mines staff resident at the University.

The work has as its purpose the solution of definite problems confronting the mining and metallurgical industries in Idaho. The subjects for study in 1931 will be the flotation theory, practice, and Idaho problems; gravity concentration; fundamentals; intermediate and fine grinding, theory and fundamentals; sedimentation of pure powdered minerals.

Also in the school of mines there is offered a teaching fellowship which pays $750 in ten monthly installments, and which has a tenure of two years. The holder of the fellowship will be expected to give one half time to instruction and one half to graduate study and research. In this way it will be possible for the fellow to obtain the degree of M. S. in geology in two years. Research will be possible in mineral deposits — either metallic or non-metallic, petrology, physiography, sedimentation, and structural geology.

Applications for these fellowships should be mailed to John W. Finch, dean of the School of Mines, University of Idaho, Moscow, Idaho.

year in shape as end coach. From the start the Forsyth county lad demonstrated to Head Coach Collins that he had the makings of a good coach, and last season Sapp made himself solid with Coach Collins by the excellent schooling he gave the Tar Heel wingmen.

Collins himself made the statement that he turned the Tar Heel wingmen over to Sapp with instructions to look after the wing positions while he looked after the other phases of line play. The head football coach stated the case of Sapp in this manner: "There is a boy who will make a name for himself as a football coach; he has done well for us, and I consider his future as a coach assured."

PALMETTO STATE TRACK TEAM TO MEET TAR HEELS

Officials Announce Entry of Six Teams In Indoor Games.

Presbyterian College of South Carolina, the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association track and field champions of last year will meet the Tar Heel cinder artists March 28 in the initial track meet of the outdoor season. This meet will take place at Chapel Hill within a week after the spring holidays, and will mark the beginning of North Carolina's ambitious nine meet outdoor season.

Officials of the track coaching staff announced recently that there will be six colleges competing in the meet for the first time this year. Alabama, Clemson, and V. P. I. have informed R. A. Fetzer, chairman of the indoor conference committee, of their intention of sending representative teams. Alabama and V. P. I. will probably send full teams while Clemson will enter a few men. The non-conference teams which will be seen here for the first time this year will be representing Richmond University, Guilford College, and Presbyterian College.

The coaching staff wishes to point out the fact that the indoor meet is only three weeks distant and that the varsity and freshman track men should report for practice promptly at 4:00 o'clock daily.

ORIGINAL PLAYS ARE SELECTED

In the twenty-eighth bill of original plays for the Carolina Playmakers' spring production, three new student playwrights are featured.

These are: Ellen Stewart of Camden, South Carolina, who has written a fantasy, A Very Pink Pale Angel; Irene Fussler of Chapel Hill, who wrote Ever Snitch, a comedy of the Carolina fisher folk, and Theodore Herman of Lancaster, Pennsylvania, whose Blue Remembered Hills was presented last Friday night.

At the author's meeting last week, Glenhurst, a play of Maryland folk by Tom Loy of Hagerstown, Maryland; Lonely Hearts, a comedy of northern Alabama folk, by Phillip Milhous of Fayetteville, Tennessee; and Walnut Boards, a comedy of Carolina folk superstitions by Bill Long of Seaboard, North Carolina, were read. These plays have been retained for future production.

Tryouts for the spring production will take place in the Playmakers Theatre this afternoon at four-thirty and again tonight at seven-thirty.

Fund Proves Great Aid For Teachers

The Jeanes Fund has been cooperating during the years between 1908 and 1931 with public school boards and superintendents of fourteen states in the employment of supervising teachers for Negro rural schools. Each year the Jeanes Teachers make visits to more than ten thousand country schools and raise over half a million dollars for school improvement.

The business of these traveling teachers, working under the direction of the county superintendents, is to encourage and aid in any possible way the teachers in the small schools scattered through the country. They introduce simple home industries, thus helping to make the school become a real part of the life of the neighborhood. They promote the improvement of school houses and grounds, and give lessons, as opportunity is offered, on sanitation and cleanliness. As need arises, they frequently organize clubs for the betterment of school and neighborhood.

J. H. Dillard, of Charlottesville, Virginia, is president of this fund.

Library Planning For Future Growth

Although money is lacking for the proper support of the University of North Carolina, plans for the future development of it are being made constantly.

The library, at present adequate in demands for service, will be enlarged, possibly to twice its present size, when necessity demands it, and funds are provided. From each side wing will be extended southward toward the Raleigh highway. Connecting these wings at the south side will be an annex, whose face will somewhat resemble that of the present building. Either in this annex, or in the space between it and the present building, a high tower containing stacks will be constructed.

Limestone facing will cover the entire building so that no brick whatsoever will be showing. Within this structure will be courts in order to give sufficient light to the rooms.

When the highway department was surveying for the new Raleigh road, plans were made for the highway to run close behind the library. These were changed, however, and a bend put in the road when it was made known that this plot of land would be needed for future enlargement of the present library building.

be given for this meeting. An informal tea will be given Friday afternoon, February 27, to all delegates and speakers. Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, of the local department of music will give an organ recital. After each of the four main addresses the conference will be divided into ten separate groups for the purpose of discussing informally questions raised by those addresses. Saturday there will be a series of word pictures illustrating conditions throughout the world. These will be given mostly by foreign students.

The University of North Carolina, Duke University, and North Carolina College for Negroes are acting as hosts to the conference. Carolina will accommodate most of the men, Duke most of the girls, and North Carolina College for Negroes the Negro delegates.

WEATHER BUREAU INSTRUMENTS ARE STOLEN FRIDAY

The Engineering office of the state department of conservation and development in Phillips hall, which cooperates with the state weather bureau in Raleigh and the national bureau in Washington, has notified authorities that several valuable instruments have been stolen.

The loss of the equipment from the weather station behind Peabody building was noticed Saturday morning by L. C. Surprenant, a student in charge of making the observations.

The missing instruments include maximum and minimum thermometers, a psychrometer, and a special scale for measuring rainfall. Loss of this equipment has made it impossible for observations to be made for Saturday, Sunday, Monday, and possibly today. Instruments to replace those stolen are being rushed from Raleigh and Washington.

Maximum and minimum thermometers are used for ascertaining the maximum and minimum temperatures reached each day. The psychrometer is of the type known as the sling psychrometer, and is used for the purpose of making humidity observations. The psychrometer consisted of a pair of thermometers mounted on a base of aluminum and so provided with a handle that it could be whirled rapidly through the air.

Two weeks ago someone removed the aniemometer, used for measuring wind passage, but this instrument was returned two days later without having been damaged. The authorities do not know whether this "borrowing" of the aniemometer has any relationship to the recent theft or not.

The local weather bureau has been in continuous service since 1880 and never before has any incident such as this theft happened. In addition to the value of the lost records, which are irreplaceable, the instruments themselves will mean a loss of quite a good deal of money.

The officials in charge of the department invite the cooperation of the public in ascertaining the facts concerning the case.

game between the Tar Babies and Baby Deacons at seven o'clock that may go far toward settling the 1931 Big Five freshman championship.

Carolina beat the Deacons badly in early season, but that doesn't mean much as to this game. Wake Forest has an absolutely new team except for Webb, who has remained a fixture at center. Moreover, the Deacons' 25-22 showing against Duke, which beat Carolina 34-23 last Saturday night, seems to indicate the Deacons will be the favorites if anything.

Both teams will be fighting to avoid winding up their seasons in the Big Five cellar, and the scrap promises to be hot. Carolina will probably be able to use Dameron at center again, and should be stronger as a result. Tom Alexander and Captain Marpet will be at guard again, and the forwards will be picked from Edwards, Hines and Moore.

Wake Forest will start the same team that made such fine showings against State and Duke, with Joyner and Barnes, forwards; Webb, center; and Owens and Edwards, guards.

DI AND PHI BOTH DISAPPROVE PLAN OF CONSOLIDATION

Societies Meeting in Joint Session Defeat Resolution by Large Majority.

The Di Senate and the Phi Assembly convened jointly in the Di hall Tuesday night. A bill presented favoring consolidated management of the University, State College and N. C. C. W. into one university was voted down thirty-one to eight. The proposal was upheld by Representatives Lanier, Wilkinson, Simons and Senator Rector. It was opposed by Representatives Douglas, Lang, Haywood, Jacobs, and Senator Ramsay.

President Frank Graham who was a special guest of the joint session spoke briefly commending the speakers for their well prepared speeches. He gave suggestions for the restoration of the pictures which hang on the walls of the two society halls and asked that they be preserved to help maintain the tradition of the two bodies.

Senator Medford gave a report for the committee that was appointed to investigate the best methods to preserve the pictures in the two halls. As a result of the committee's investigation, Medford made a motion that the two presidents of the societies head a committee to obtain the necessary artists and funds for the restoration of these pictures. The motion was passed unanimously.

A resolution submitted by Representative Lang proposing that the heads of the two societies send a letter to the chairman of the appropriations committee of the General Assembly to the effect that entire membership of both societies meeting jointly are opposed to the proposed reduction in the appropriations for the University was passed by a unanimous vote.

Sign the Petition!

Red Greene, president of the student body of the University, requests that all those students who have not signed the petition, which is to be sent to the state legislature, and who wish to do so, come to the desk at the Y. M. C. A. and place their signature on the petition.

Cosmopolitan Club

The Epsilon Phi Delta Cosmopolitan Club will meet this evening at nine o'clock on the second floor of the Y. M. C. A.

A. S. C. E. Will Hear S. S. Henry Tonight

S. S. Henry will address the William Cain chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers tonight at seven-thirty o'clock in room 319 of Phillips hall. He will discuss some of the engineering projects with which he has been connected in South American countries. His talk will largely be regarding port work, highways, and mining problems in Peru, Chile, Brazil, and Argentina.

Mr. Henry will illustrate his talk with 35 slides of projects done in these countries. He also has several slides of scenery and general views to furnish a background for his lecture.

BAIRNSFATHER IS FINE CARTOONIST

Creator of "Old Bill" To Appear On Student Entertainment Program Friday.

Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, English humorist de-luxe, will be presented by the entertainment committee Friday night at 8:30 o'clock in the new Memorial hall. Bairnsfather's humorous lecture "Old Bill and Me" is the second of five programs to be offered during the winter and spring quarters of this school year.

Bairnsfather is the creator of the well known cartoon character "Old Bill" which ran in all the European papers during the trying times of the war. It has been said of him that he was "worth an army corps to the Western front."

"Old Bill' was a private in the Allied army during the stirring days of fighting. His humorous adventures amused the people back home and also gave them a new side of the war to think of. Bairnsfather drew on his own experiences in the war for the episodes that happen to his comic strip character. He served with the Warwickshire Royal Regiment for three years and was elevated to the rank of captain during this time.

Bairnsfather is now in America working for America's foremost publications. His art may be seen in such magazines as Judge, The New Yorker, Life, The American Magazine, and The Mentor.

He has appeared as the featured attraction at many of the foremost halls in England and America and has probably produced more laughter by his humorous monologue, illustrated lectures and drawings than any artist in the same field.

WARD DISCUSSES FRATERNITIES FOR RADIO AUDIENCE

Inter-Fraternity Council Head Describes Fraternity Life And Problems.

Jack Ward, president of the inter-fraternity council, in his talk yesterday afternoon over WPTF explained the purpose and workings of the council together with some of the problems which confront the fraternities on this campus. The topic of his speech was "A Discussion of Fraternities."

Ward first gave a brief summary of fraternity development at the University noting that there are thirty-one national chapters and five locals here. In referring to the inter-fraternity council, Ward said "the inter-fraternity council is absolutely non-political, and political discussion of any sort is banned from its sessions."

The main problem of the council is in enforcing regulations regarding the rushing of freshmen. "Much trouble arises in the usual case of several fraternities attempting to get the same frosh into their folds —and to this end the council has worked out an elaborate system of rushing rules and penalties, so that this fighting season can be carried on fairly and squarely yet at the same time maintain the existing good feeling between the fraternities."

"The idea of fraternity men being a bunch of snobbish rich men's sons has faded out of the picture at the University. The fact that a boy does not join a fraternity at the regular time does not mean very much, and in many cases it is the freshman who feels that he will not fit in with the group rather than the fraternity. I feel that I can

MEDICINE GIVES SMALL RETURNS

Manning Tells Freshmen That Profession is "Rich With Opportunities for Service."

"The profession of medicine is rich with opportunities for service, but presents little offer of wealth," Dean Isaac Hall Manning of the school of medicine told freshmen in chapel yesterday. He put scholarship at the top of the list of requirements for entrance to the medical school, declaring also that the willingness to work is of nearly as much importance as scholastic attainments.

Manning discussed the scholastic requirements fully. He said that the minimum amount of preparation required by the prominent graduate schools of medicine is a total of sixty semester hours. That is equivalent to two years of pre-medical work at this university. Several schools, however, require much more intensive training than that.

In preparation for this work, Manning advised a comprehensive study of the basic sciences in order to gain a thorough knowledge of these fundamentals. Such courses are chemistry, botany, zoology, and physics. An especially intensive knowledge of chemistry is to be desired, thus requiring six courses in this subject.

In addition to these qualifications, the dean stressed the im-

MARIONETTES ARE TO BE PRESENTED THIS AFTERNOON

First Performance Will Be Given At Three O'Clock and Second at Eight.

Sue Hastings' famous marionettes will be presented by the Carolina Playmakers at their theatre this afternoon in a matinee performance at three o'clock and tonight at eight-thirty o'clock.

There is a rare charm about marionettes felt by both children and grown-ups alike. Sue Hastings has brought a peculiarly American flavor to this ancient art. She carries her companies of four and five persons with their elaborate scenic and lighting effects and their miniature stage into home, school and club.

Winnie the Pooh, the matinee production, is adapted from books by A. A. Milne. Similar productions by the marionettes are Puss in Boots; Peter Rabbit; A Trip To the Moon; Hansel and Gretel; Sinbad the Sailor, and others.

The Puppet Revue, which is the night production, is a gay and intimate revue, sparkling with the sort of humor that brings chuckles and shrieks one after the other. It includes songs, dances, and short plays such as The Gooseberry Mandarin; A Chinese Fantasy; Breakfast For Two; A Ballet Girl; Bobby and Daisy—on their bicycle built for two; Katinka from Russia; A Concert Singer; The Buggy Ride; Noah and the Ark; The Milkmaid and her Cow.

Among the many comments on Sue Hastings' Marionettes, The New York Times carries the following: "The performance of Sue Hastings' Marionettes at the Martin Beck Theatre smacks as thoroughly of its Theatre Guild

JUNIOR SMOKER SET FOR TONIGHT

Dr. Collier Cobb Will Speak; Buccaneers Will Furnish Music.

Tonight at nine o'clock in Swain hall the junior class will have a smoker. Theron Brown, president of the class, wishes to impress upon the members of the class the necessity for attending the smoker, as matters of great importance to the class will be discussed at that time.

Ty Sawyer and his Buccaneers will furnish the music for the affair. Dr. Collier Cobb, head of the geology department of the University and one of the oldest members of the faculty in point of service, will speak to the class.

Last week the senior class held their smoker in Swain hall and Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the English department, addressed the gathering. Dr. Coffman in an interesting talk told about the reputation the University has in different parts of the country, and of the glorious traditions of this institution. Dr. Cobb has not yet decided as to what his topic will be.

Sigma Xi Fraternity Elects New Members

The Sigma Xi engineering fraternity met Tuesday night at the Carolina Inn, and elected new members. The program was in charge of Dr. A. M. White and Dr. F. W. Cameron of the department of industrial and engineering chemistry, and Dr. R. W. Bost and Dr. A. S. Wheeler of the department of organic chemistry.

The following new members were nominated by the executive committee and elected into the fraternity: M. L. Braun, of the graduate school, who received his Ph.D. last spring; A. E. Hughes, who will receive his Ph.D. degree in chemistry at commencement.

The associate members elected were: Chemistry—H. C. Thomas T. B. Douglas, G. G. Albritton, J. P. Sanders, G. H. Fleming; Physics—C. J. Craven; Mathematics—R. L. Garrett; and Zoology—L. L. Williams.

COOKE TO SPEAK ON LABOR UNIONS

Noted Industrial Engineer To Lecture in Gerrard Hall February 25.

In its series of public lectures on matters of timely interest in the field of economics and industrial problems, the department of economics and commerce will present a lecture by Morris L. Cooke, of Philadelphia, Wednesday, February 25, in Gerrard hall. Mr. Cooke will talk on the subject of the experience in America with union-management cooperation.

Representatives of various points of view are being presented. Last year, Mr. Bernard Cone and Mr. Henry P. Kendall, mill owners of North Carolina, and Mr. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, spoke from their experiences.

Mr. Cooke is one of the most noted industrial engineers in the world. He has been secured for this lecture through the cooperation of the local branch of the Taylor Society, of which he is a past president. He represents neither the labor nor the employer point of view, but that of the practical economist and management engineer.

His subject, the experience of certain American industries and plants with cooperative trade unionism, with special reference to the cotton textile industry, should be of great interest to every one, since the speaker has had experience in this field.

JOINT COMMITTEE FAVORS INCREASE IN APPROPRIATION

Graham's Speech Has Effect of Securing Favorable Vote from Legislative Group.

THIS ACTION NOT FINAL

The joint appropriations committee of the state general assembly, at the best attended meeting held since the "executive sessions" began, voted Tuesday to endorse the appropriation of $875,000 for the University which was requested by President Frank Graham when he appeared before the committee several days ago. It was the first time this year the committee had voted any substantial increase over the budget bill figures. The vote was carried by a majority of over two to one.

The appropriation was an increase of approximately $200,000 over the appropriation of $573,000 recommended by the advisory budget committee. The cases of the other state institutions will be taken up today.

The address before the committee made by President Graham, in which he told the members that the proposed economy would in effect tear down much of the University that the state had spent over 100 years building up, and would be poor economy, was given much credit for the action of the committee.

Alumni and friends of the University in the legislature have worked hard for an increased appropriation ever since the session started. Yesterday many of these were present for the meeting who had not attended for many weeks before.

The large attendance was noted by Representative Harris, chairman of the committee, who asked that all members be present to take part in the vote on the appropriations for the other institutions of the state.

The action does not mean that it will be the final committee report, much less the final action of the legislature. Before submitting the bill to the House and the Senate, the committee will take up each section of the bill, voting on each section and then on the bill as a whole.

The $875,000 annual appropriation the committee voted is the same voted by the 1929 legislature but which was never given the University as it was cut the first year to $759,837. The appropriation for the present year is $682,700 or 20 per

Coffin Settles "Likker" Dispute Between Long And Atlanta Paper

O. J. Coffin, head and foot of the journalism department, was chosen by the Raleigh Times Tuesday to render the final verdict on the dispute between Huey P. Long, governor and senator-elect of Louisiana, and the Atlanta Constitution regarding the question as to whether corn pone should be dunked or crumbled in pot-likker. According to the Raleigh paper Mr. Coffin is classed as a "noted collard consomme and chitterling expert."

It is the Louisiana governor's contention that corn pone should be dunked, whereas, the Constitution, strongly opposed to such an idea claims, that Southern gentlemen always crumble their 'pone in the potlikker.

The journalism department head, on the other hand, is against both of these plans. He goes on to say that both of these methods are passe. "The only correct and modern way to consume cornpone and potlikker," he continued, "is to butter the cornpone, hold it in your left hand while the 'good woman' places the potlikker before you in a bowl with a handle on it. Then take a bite of buttered 'pone and drink your potlikker."

For the benefit of those not acquainted with the term "potlikker" it should be here explained that it is not what the name might imply, but the essence of certain greens, such as turnip-tops, cabbage, spinach, beet tops, and green beans, boiled and seasoned.

Green Declares Buttitta's Play To Be Original, Clever, Dynamic

(By Bob Betts)

Paul Green discussed enthusiastically his reactions to Anthony Buttitta's new three act comedy of illusion, Playthings, now in rehearsal for production. He seems to see in the play an unusual touch of originality, mixed with a surprisingly clever handling of minor details and important incidents—all carried through with dramatic fire and irony by "dynamic dialogue."

"The play, it seems to me," said Mr. Green, "has three levels of reality, with the possibility and suggestion of a fourth dimensional concept. The first act is a play, the illusion which becomes a reality in the second act, and finally we have the results in the end. Real people become an illusion on a stage, this illusion is imposed upon the reality, which in time overcomes reality with its stupidities to assume the vitality of illusion. Briefly it makes an unusual twist of the play within a play techinque in an attempt to show, quite unconsciously, the effect of illusion upon reality.

"It is highly experimental—experimental in that no scenery is necessary for production and that three actors can carry the action of seven composite characters. Instead of having the modern slant of melodrama, sexual perversion, and sensationalism, the play is strictly an experimental piece of work with sufficient psychology and philo-

Our Stock Rises

No bit of news was ever more welcome to any group of people than the word received by the student body yesterday, with the Raleigh News and Observer as informer, that the Assembly's committee on appropriations has at last decided that the University's budget shall not be cut, if it lies within their power to prevent such a thing. Not only has the committee decided that there shall be no further reduction; it has recommended that the University be provided with the former appropriation of $875,000.

That the committee has recommended the adequate amount does not mean, of course, that the University will necessarily receive such an appropriation. There are further obstacles to surmount. The budget commission recommended a reduction in the present budget, and it remains to be seen whether the legislature will follow the committee or the commission. We shall not enter here into a discussion of why the legislature should adopt the recommendations of the committee, for we consider as obvious the advantages of adoption and the disadvantages of rejection. Likewise we consider it obvious that a compromise will not be sufficient to meet the needs of a growing, working public servant which is the University.

Our hope lies in the calibre of the men who constitute our Assembly. If the other members of the legislature are as farsighted and intelligent lawmakers as the members of the appropriations committee have proved themselves to be, then we need have no anxiety.—B. M.

A horse does not breathe when he bucks.

Both Sides

The faculty committee has made its report on the question of class attendance for undergraduates and its recommendations are to go into effect next fall. Optional class attendance will be allowed those students making the honor role two successive quarters, but for all other students "the maximum number of unexcused absences shall not exceed, during any quarter, the number of weekly meetings of the class." However the report also states that "No student shall be given credit in the University for any course unless that student has attended at least seventy-five percent of the class meetings of the course." Does this mean that optional class attendance will be limited? If so then the insertion of the phrase "optional attendance" is merely a blind and has no meaning.

The case against optional attendance for juniors and seniors may be briefly stated. First, a student is supposedly in college to prepare himself for his future vocation and if a student develops habits of laziness and indifference these will be a great handicap to him in his chosen profession. It is further stated that a person is not allowed "optional attendance" in the business world so why should he be allowed it in his period of preparation for business. Then again, a student is in college to get an education and the best way for him to get it is by attending classes regularly. It is also argued that those who are able and willing to profit by optional attendance are not the ones who cut classes but rather those who are already far below average in their work.

It is admitted that students in the professional schools are preparing themselves for a vocation and the students in the school of commerce are supposedly preparing themselves for business, but why are students in the college of liberal arts? According to the University catalogue "a liberal education such as should be found within this college is designed to free the individual from thoughtless prejudice, hasty judgment, and careless imitation, and to set up in place of these evils a mind trained carefully in self-mastery, self-criticism, and independence of thought." We wonder if forcing a junior or senior to attend classes is the best way to attain the above. Are "self-mastery, self-criticism, and independence of thought" best attained by rigid attendance at classes or by allowing a student who has completed two years of college work to use his own judgment as to whether he should attend a particular class or not? As for students in the professional schools and the school of commerce there may be reason enough for not allowing optional attendance, but the reasons for not allowing it in the college of liberal arts are certainly not convincing to any liberal-minded person.

As for the final decision of the committee regarding attendance regulations it is evidently an attempt to give the impression of compromise without any real concession and is certainly not a very creditable or satisfactory solution of the problem.—J. C. S.

With Contemporaries

Not A Living Wage

Neither the state of North Carolina nor the United States of America pay their highest officials a living wage.

It is not uncommon to hear men urged to run for office declare that they can not afford to. Governor Gardner has frankly told the citizens of this state that he can not live on his governor's salary, and it is well known that those in our diplomatic service abroad are embarrassed in their relations with representatives of other countries unless they have means of their own.

A salary of $75,000 a year seems plenty large to most of us, yet every President admits when asked that he can not live on that. A President must entertain large numbers of persons, must do a hundred and one expensive things which the average person does not take into account.

On the other hand in both national and State government there is an over-abundance of subordinate officials, of clerks who are paid much more than they are worth. Public opinion in North Carolina is beginning to be aroused against this use of public money to build up patronage.

In the meantime, whether we like to admit it or not, those who have not independent means have been and will continue to be greatly handicapped in the performance of the duties of the higher offices by an inadequate salary—a salary that will not keep them going without some outside assistance. This inadequate salary also—in many instances—prevents capable men without necessary resources from holding high public office. We folks think of the amount of these salaries as being a huge sum but we are not in a position to see the incidental expenses that a high official has to put up with.

That we should keep our statesmen in royal luxury is, of course, impractical, that capable men should be paid as much for governing the state or nation as they could get in another line of work seems also out of the question, but it does not seem anything to be proud of that Americans will not pay those at the head of their commonwealths enough to make ends meet—Edenton Daily News.

cent less then appropriated. The figure the advisory budget commission recommended was 34.4 per cent less than that appropriated two years ago. The University, in its first estimated budget, asked for $926,000, but the committee cut this request to $875,000, the figure of two years ago.

A Warning

Those in charge of circulating the student petition to the General Assembly have issued a warning that the committee report does not settle the matter and that it is quite possible that it may not pass when put to a vote of the legislature itself. With this possibility in view, they are asking that the students do not relent in their activities in spreading publicity against the proposed appropriations cut.

If the students do their part, as they have been asked, in this non-retrenchment movement, it is hoped that the lawmakers in Raleigh can be prevailed upon to alter their position. The campus leaders say that they intend to fight their battle up until such a time as the bill shall actually be defeated, or passed, by the General Assembly. They are asking the complete co-operation of every student in sending letters to their parents asking them to write to their legislative representative, condemning the proposed cut.

Ed Hamer president of the Y. M. C. A., who is helping Red Green, student union president, direct the petition movement, had this to say: "The question is not settled. The movement among University students to petition the Legislature is not in vain, but is wisely timed. The University will need every bit of support now that it can muster."

Green Says Buttitta's Play Is Original, Clever

sophy to make it stand out as a different type of dramatic construction."

Some bits of technique and certain passages in the play impress Mr. Green as unusually significant. The subtitle, "Two Acts and a Comedy," strikes him as being original as Cabellian nomenclature. The tickets episode Mr. Green points out as the most clever piece of dramatic manipulation. The cosmopolitan aspect of the play, its unusual psychology, and philosophy of fourth dimensional magnitude, the technique of presentation, and the intense use of "dynamic dialogue," are enough to convince Mr. Green of the play's significance as an unusual experiment.

The production is being sponsored by Professor Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, as an experimental presentation.

The cast includes: Whitner Bissell, Eve Brickman, and Harold Baumstome.

The play is under the direction of Walter Grotyohann; John Edwards is stage manager, with Shirley Carter assisting. Playthings is scheduled as an invitational performance at the Playmakers Theatre, Saturday evening, February 28.

frankly say that any boy of ability and accomplishment will be invited to join some fraternity at the University if he so desires.

Every fraternity has a very elaborate constructive program in order to live up to the high ideals fostered by every fraternity. The most evident result of this is seen in the fact that the various fraternities encourage and push their brothers to achievements on the campus.

"When a freshman is pledged, the fraternity questions him concerning his aspiration for recognition on the campus and then directs him to the proper course to pursue in order to attain this end. The main benefit of a fraternity is to encourage its members in the pursuance of some extra-curricula activity that will give the man valuable experience that mere study does not furnish.

"Even though the council is concerned with social orders, it realizes that the problem of scholarship is the greatest one confronting the fraternity. In furtherance of even bettering this condition the council each year gives a cup to the fraternity having the highest scholastic average for the year. The council in cooperation with the faculty committee on fraternities last year passed a ruling to the effect that fraternities could not initiate its pledges unless the group averaged eighty per cent or above in the fall or winter quarter.

"The scholastic records kept by the dean of students, Dean Bradshaw, show that the fraternity average is very much higher than the general campus average, and that the fraternity average is still slowly but surely rising. As every boy comes to the University primarily for the purpose of scholastic betterment, the council takes great pride in the fact that it has been able to play a part in the furtherance of this move for the improvement of scholastic standing.

sponsorship as any production of O'Neill or Shaw. The puppets are dainty little confections and the scenery and back drops are prettily painted in modern nursery style." And again, speaking of the appearance at the Palace Theatre in vaudeville: "The high spot is probably the rendition by Sue Hastings Marionettes of the song, The Wedding of the Painted Doll."

The Parent-Teacher Association, of Nyack, New York, says, "The marionettes were the biggest success we have ever had, financially, because we increased our treasury more, with less effort than ever before, and also because we gave the greatest enjoyment to all, old as well as young. The joy of the children was a delight to see, and I have never known them so enthusiastic before."

Carolina Boxers And Matmen Win Bouts

Tar Heel Ringmen Win 4-3 Victory Over Duke To Annex State Title

Tar Heels Come Back To Win By 4-3 Margin After Trailing 2-3.

WARREN CLINCHES MATCH

Levinson Gains Decision Over Duke Captain; Only Two Knockouts Scored.

(By Jack Bessen)

Five thousand shrieking, babbling, insane persons saw a great Tar Heel boxing team defeat Duke, 4-3, Tuesday night in the new beautiful Duke gym.

By winning the bouts Tuesday night, the Tar Heels annexed their sixth consecutive state title. Since boxing was reorganized in 1926, Carolina has won the state championship every year.

Again John Warren, Carolina heavy, played the hero role, taking the final fight when the score stood three all. The same situation arose in the Virginia fights, Warren coming through to provide the margin of victory.

Although there were only two knock-outs, the fights were all close, and the victory was not assured until the referee gave his decision.

Sonny Young, fighting his first bout in the Blue and White spangles came to grief in the second round of the opening fight, when his seconds threw in the towel to save him from further punishment. Floyd Riddick, the Duke bantam easily won the opening round, hurting Young with right crosses. Riddick kept up his pounding in the second session, and the seconds threw in the towel in one minute and fifty seconds.

Martin Levinson encountered his toughest opponent in the person of Captain Southgate Martin, Duke's star feather. This fight was the closest one of the evening, going an extra round before the Tar Heel feather won the verdict.

Levinson easily won the first round, smashing his opponent with hard rights and lefts. The second and third stanzas were even, marked by a remarkable comeback by Martin. For a while, it looked like Martin would suffer his first defeat of the year, but he was too smart for the Duke boy. Both boys were rather tired, but Levinson's experience and greater stamina easily took the extra round.

Captain Noah Goodridge gave Ralph Starnes, Duke lightweight, a perfect boxing lesson, and easily took the fight. Starnes landed one hard blow in the first round that jolted the Tar Heel captain, but Noah's jabs kept Starnes at good distance, and after the first round, the result was never in doubt.

The fight between Dail Holderness and Hensel Wentz in the welter classic had the fans on their feet from start to finish. Both boys went in to slug away, and slug away they did, Wentz matching his left against Dail's right with the wrong arm on the long end. The opening round was fairly even, though the Duke battler held a slight edge. Wentz piled up a great lead in the second round, beating Holderness continually to the punch. The fireworks came in the final stanza. Holderness came out to end the fight in a hurry, and while unable to do so, gave Wentz plenty of punishment, and took the round by a wide margin.

Obie Davis, star middleweight, stepped out of the undefeated class, losing by a technical knock-out in the third round.

Sport Slants

By Don Shoemaker

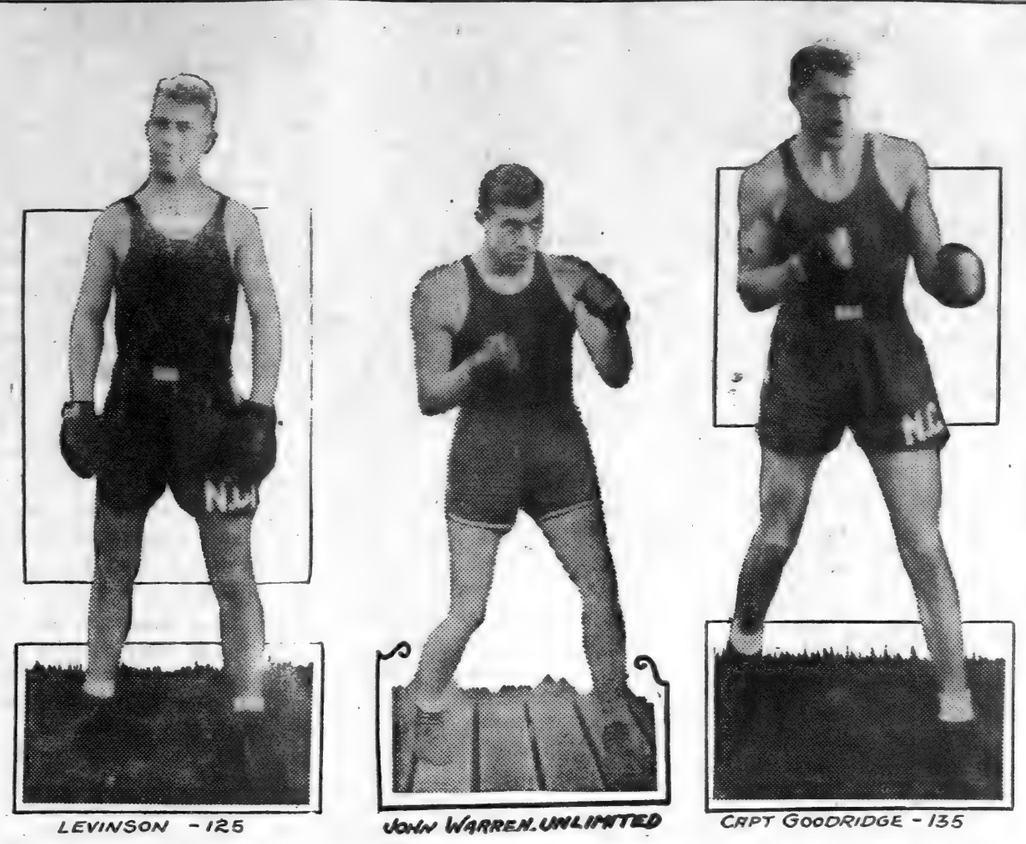
An invention which bids fair to revolutionize the cage coaching profession was called to the attention of this humble department by a visiting scientist who was here yesterday to investigate the possibility of using the Wickersham printed reports for wrapping paper.

It seems that our scientific friend had only recently attended a basketball game in the state and was aroused by cries of "Get Hot, Team," during the game. How, he reasoned, could the coach know when his men were "hot" or in the process of heating?

A few hours work in the laboratory and he had evolved a scheme to advise the coach as well as spectators of the tepidity of the home team.

The apparatus is very simple and compact and may be carried about in a trailer hooked on back of the bus transporting the team. It consists of a length of wire attached to the towel which is thrown to the players during time out periods. When each player wipes his face on the towel, it comes in contact with a thermostat in the hem which is connected directly to the wire. The latter is hooked to a large score board, mounted at one end of the court. As the player's face touches the towel and thermostat, electricity conveys the extent of his heat back through the wire to the board where a series of red, blue, and yellow lights indicate just how "hot" each man is. The coach may then more easily judge the proficiency of each man and anticipate necessary substitutions and scoring.

As soon as the inventor can raise the necessary capital, his invention will go on the market and in no time he expects to amass a vast fortune, this department receiving a royalty of one-twentieth of a millrae on each lot of one hundred such machines sold. Before our graduation in 1939 we should be easily able to make a down payment on that second hand typewriter we saw down town the other day.



Colleges and universities throughout the country are now busy compiling 1931 and 1932 grid schedules, including in them the usual fifty per cent set ups usually carded. Ever wishing to be of service to our dear public, we here offer a complete list of class "A" set ups which may possibly be booked for games within the next three years.

Wheaton college, enrollment at about 500 and 1931 prospects fair offers potential possibilities. Wheaton defeated Crane 12-6 last year and downed Mt. Morrie by 7-6 and only lost the other six games by narrow margins, losing 45-0 to North Central and 33-0 to Elmhurst.

Lake Forest college may possibly have a few places open on their schedule. Lake Forest only lost six out of seven games last year, but managed to turn in a pretty good record in the Wahooska county checker tournament.

Occidental and Straight offer stern competition to any of our Big Ten or S. I. C. teams. Straight scored a perfect season, defeating Y. M. C. A., Wiley, Tougaloo, Xavier, Southern, and Jackson, by large margins.

THREE UNDEFEATED TAR HEEL BOXERS

These three leather pushers are as yet undefeated, and kept up their record against Duke Tuesday night. Platt Landis, light heavy, also won his fight, but no mat of him has been released yet. Captain Noah Goodridge defeated Ralph Starnes, Martin Levinson scored a victory over Captain Southgate Martin, and John Warren provided Carolina's margin of victory with a win in the final bout. Landis defeated Don Hyatt in the light heavy division. The 4-3 victory over the Devils gave Carolina her sixth state title since 1926.

"BLUES" AND "ORANGES" BATTLE TO 6-6 TIE GAME

A 6-6 tie which neither team could break deadlocked Carolina's "Blue" and "Orange" winter grid teams in the fifth practice game in Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon.

The Blues counted their touchdown after a concentrated drive down the field had carried the pigskin near the final marker and from there Weisker, flashy freshman back, scored the lone six points.

MOVIE PROCEEDS WILL GO TO DENTAL CLINIC

One of the ways in which the proceeds for the benefit movie next Sunday will be used is in conducting a dental clinic at Carrboro school. This will be done in cooperation with the Chapel Hill branch of the Red Cross.

The show is a comedy entitled "Skinner Steps Out," and features Glenn Tryon. Arrangements for giving the show have been made by the Kiwanis Club through the courtesy of the Movie Guild.

WRESTLERS GET 29-3 WIN OVER STATE COLLEGE

Victory Over Wolfpack Is First Step in Tar Heel Trek Toward Championship.

FROSH DEFEAT O. R. M. I.

Captain Eason Only State Grappler To Register Win; Four Falls Scored.

The Tar Heel wrestlers passed their first milestone in their quest for the state title Tuesday night when they swamped the N. C. State Wolfpack by a score of 29-3. In the preliminary bouts the Blue and White freshmen tossed Oak Ridge for a 24-10 loss to register their first win of the season.

The varsity won seven out of the eight matches from State with four of the victories coming through falls. The falls were contributed by Mayne Albright, Harry Tsumas, Marion Cowper, and Percy Idol, while two other Carolina winners, Captain Fred Stallings and Don Conklin, missed winning by the fall method only by narrow margins.

Captain Eason of State continued undefeated for the season by getting a time advantage over Usher in the 118 pound class, but Pete gave him plenty to worry about before the match was decided. Aside from Eason's win over Usher, Big Chief Sam Gurneau put up the best exhibition for the Wolfpack when he went in against Ken Hampton in the unlimited class. Hampton, however, won a decisive time advantage after a rough and tumble battle.

Although failing to win his match by a fall, Captain Fred Stallings won decisively over Beazemore of State with a time

KIWANIS CLUB IS TO PROTEST CUT IN APPROPRIATION

Resolves to Petition Assembly Not To "Take Backward Step In Public Education."

The following resolutions were unanimously passed by the Kiwanis club of Chapel Hill at its recent meeting: Whereas—We consider a fundamental objective of Kiwanis to be the encouragement of education for all the children of all the people—such a policy being directly related to the greatest happiness and prosperity of the greatest number of people; and,

Whereas—Due to the "Depression," which we believe to be only a temporary condition, there is abroad in North Carolina sentiment favorable to recession from established educational standards, which have been attained by years of struggle against poverty, lack of faith in the people and in the possibilities of the state; and,

Whereas—It is our conviction that a failure now to support our great investment in commonwealth building made in past years at great sacrifice and expense through the building up of our educational system, will cost us much of the price paid in a loss of leadership of position as the most progressive state in the South;

Be It Resolved—By the Kiwanis club of Chapel Hill that it is our firm conviction that this is not the time to listen to a call of retreat or take a backward step in public education; and that we communicate through our representative to the General Assembly in session in Raleigh, our endorsement of the policy of adequate support by the people of North Carolina of the state's educational institutions and its public schools.

Be It Further Resolved—That this action be given as much publicity as possible, through the press and through personal efforts."

This same set of resolutions has been passed by the Kiwanis clubs of Henderson and has been recommended to most of the other branches of the organization by the presidents of the respective groups. The Henderson club has been the most active in this work and was the first to take this action in the matter.

Adult Illiteracy Group Will Seek Congressional Aid

"Governor O. Max Gardner is strongly in favor of a plan to educate adult illiterates and holds that if state aid is impossible at present the state commission on adult illiteracy will look to Congress to provide the necessary financial assistance," R. M. Grumman, secretary of the commission said yesterday following a meeting of the executive committee in the governor's office Tuesday.

Others present, besides Governor Gardner and Mr. Grumman, were S. L. Davis of High Point ,chairman and Dr. A. T. Allen, state , superintendent of schools and a former president of the North Carolina education association.

Chairman Davis explained the interest of individuals and organizations in the movement to reduce adult illiteracy and urged a state-wide program with state support.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Ruffin Swamps Law School

Ruffin won its eighth victory of the season over the Law School 39-14 yesterday afternoon. Ruffin jumped away to an early lead and was never headed. Royster led the winners with ten points. Every man on the Ruffin team scored at least two points. Kellog led the Law School with seven points.

K. A.'s Win Over Pi Kap's

The K. A.'s, led by Wells with nineteen points, defeated the Pi Kappa Phi's 60-18 yesterday afternoon. The K. A.'s jumped into the lead from the start and were never in danger. Dixon, forward, was best for the losers, gathering eighteen points. Oliver and House, with sixteen and thirteen points respectively, played good games for the K. A.'s. Hockaday played a good defensive game for the Pi Kap's.

Sigma Epsilon's Win 29-27

Led by Blackwood, with ten points, the Sigma Ep's defeated the Lambda Chi Alpha's by the narrow margin of two points, winning 29-27. The game was close and hard fought throughout. For the losers, Davis with eight points, and Lodge with seven points, were best.

Sigma Zeta's Win Fifth

In a game marked by bad basketball on both sides, the Sigma Zeta's defeated the S. A. E.'s 29-20. Both teams got a lot of bad basketball out of their systems. The Sigma Zeta's jumped away to an 8-4 lead at the end of the first quarter, lost it in the second, but got their eye on the basket in the last quarter, scoring twelve points while holding their opponents scoreless.

Beta's Win Over Kappa Sig's

The Beta's defeated the Kappa Sig's 39-20 yesterday afternoon. At no time was the lead of the Beta's in danger. Anderson and Moody, with eleven and ten points respectively, led the scoring for the Beta's. For the losers Eagles was best with ten points.

Sigma Chi's Win 33-16

The Sigma Chi's defeated the Deke's 33-16. The Sigma Chi's jumped into an early lead and held it. Chandler, with tw points, and Wood and Myers, with ten points each, were best for Sigma Chi. W. Parson and Hall with six points each were best for the Deke's.

COMMUNITY CLUB DISCUSSES PLAYS

Many Ideas Submitted at Open Forum Meeting In Episcopal Parish House.

A slight reversion from the dislike of "idea" plays that has been expressed and demonstrated in local dramatic circles several times recently was experienced Tuesday night at the open forum meeting in the Episcopal parish house of the Community Club's literature department. Ralph Westerman, the newest member of the University's dramatic faculty and business manager of the Carolina Playmakers, speaking on "The Salient Difference Between the Old and New Drama," cited the need of more solid material—philosophical, if you will—in the Theatre (especially the American Theatre) today. Before this can be accomplished, he declared, we must develop more intelligent censorship and more playgoing interest among young people.

W. S. Bernard gave foundation and background to the discussion by comparing Greek drama with modern form. He explained that the chorus, besides relieving tension, was the mouthpiece of the poet-philosopher and that the omission of the Dionysius' worship for which it stood could be no more willingly effected than could Christ be dropped from the Passion Play. Thus, he concluded, did the Greek Theatre conceive of a dualistic universe, without which conception, it was his opinion, true tragedy is dead.

Following these talks, Mrs. George Howe, chairman for the evening, drew out of a number of selected members of the audience interesting ideas as to "What Constitutes a Fine Play." Mrs. Irene Fussler referred to effective drama as "a grating on the nervous system." George McKie voiced such a complete love for the theatre that he could find little objection to raise. Mrs. H. C. Nolen wished we might still have a Greek chorus to make comments but thought we should give modern play machinery credit for rarely showing. Sam Selden likened dramatic emotional tension to a stretched rubber band that snaps in a climax. Mrs. J. M. Valentine stressed the importance of situations' growing out of character.

Mrs. Oscar Coffin spoke of many shows nowadays as pig pens that should be cleaned up. Mrs. Howe herself said that a play should get somewhere. Anthony Buttitta pointed out the futility of laying down any rules. And Mrs. P. C. Farrar wanted something to satisfy the mature intelligence of a reasonably-developed audience.

portance of actual ability and natural inclination toward medicine. It is necessary to be interested in the work to derive the most benefit from it.

As for the cost of a degree in medicine he warned freshmen that it is the most expensive of degrees. The tuition is much higher and the graduate courses and interneship add appreciably to this expense.

Concluding his talk, he warned all desiring to acquire riches to abandon hope of gaining it by following medicine.

Engineers' Dance Tickets

All engineers who plan to attend the engineering ball Friday night are advised to get their invitations very soon. The supply is limited, and there are only a few left now. Invitations may be obtained from a committee of seniors in the senior rooms of their respective branches of engineering.

YEARLING QUINT TO ENGAGE BABY DEACONS TONIGHT

Win Over Wake Forest Frosh Will Give Tar Babies State Freshman Cage Title.

Carolina's Tar Babies, their string of victories broken at six straight by Raleigh High Tuesday night, will engage the Baby Deacons from Wake Forest tonight in the Frank Thompson Memorial Gymnasium at Raleigh. A win for the yearlings will clinch the Big Five championship with a percentage of .714 gathered from five wins and two losses in Big Five play.

The Tar Babies have lost three games in regular play this year, losing to State Frosh, Duke Frosh, and Raleigh High. A pre-season game was dropped to the Randolph-Macon freshmen after only one day's practice.

A win tonight will nose out Duke in the standings by .047, by virtue of their victory over Davidson's Wildkittens last Thursday night. Davidson freshmen only participate in one game each year, meeting Carolina this year. A loss for the Carolina yearlings will give the championship to Duke with four wins and two losses, Duke having split with State and Carolina, and having defeated the Baby Deacons Wednesday night for the second time this year.

The Raleigh game played Tuesday night was lost 35-31.

The Tar Babies will play two more games, meeting Presbyterian Junior College here Saturday night and engaging Durham High School in Durham next Tuesday night.

Carolina Boxing Team Wins Over Blue Devils

Obie's poor showing can be somewhat explained by the fact that he was under a great handicap before entering the ring. While training, Obie received a bad cut over his left eye, and in addition caught a left from Guthrie flush on the nose. In the very first mix-up Phil Bolick accidently butted the cut eye, which ultimately cost the Tar Heel the fight. In the second round, Bolick caught Davis with a terrific right to the nose, sending him to the canvas for the count of eight. It was only Davis' experience and courage that prevented Bolick from registering a knock-out in that round. Referee Charles Short examined Obie's eye and refused to let him continue, awarding Bolick a technical knock-out in the third round.

Platt Landis, fighting for the first time as a varsity man, easily defeated Don Hyatt in the heavyweight class. Landis kept after Hyatt, bringing that terrible right to bear on Hyatt's face and flooring him no less than eight times in the last two rounds, three times in the second round for counts of 9, 9, and eight. In the third round, Hyatt went to the canvas five times, and was on the floor as the fight ended. The referee had already counted five when the bell rang, and the Duke boy hadn't moved. It was a clean knock-out.

Then came the thriller—the Warren-Rankin fight. The Duke boy had knocked out Gentry of Virginia in one round, and he was expected to take Warren, but Warren out-boxed and outslugged him to take an easy decision.

Frosh Win

In an abbreviated freshman match, the Tar Babies scored their greatest triumph, getting a shut-out victory over the Imps, 7-0. Three fights, the welter, the middle, and the heavyweight classes were forfeited to Carolina, and the Tar Babies easily won the four remaining bouts.

advantage of nine minutes and forty-five seconds out of the ten minute period. On several occasions Stallings almost pinned his opponent's shoulders to the mat, but on each occasion Beazemore managed to wriggle out of it.

Don Conklin added another victim to his list in winning over Oakley of State in the 145 pound class. Conklin's advantage was nine minutes and twenty-nine seconds. He has won three time decisions, two with over nine minutes advantage, and one fall ths year, and is undefeated.

Ken Hampton, making his second varsity appearance in Fred Ferguson's berth, looked good in winning over Gurneau. Hampton's time advantage was four minutes and fifty-two seconds.

All four falls registered by the Tar Heels were all accomplished in less than six minutes, with Mayne Albright leading the way by throwing Evans in one minute and forty-three seconds. Tuesday night's victory was the third Mayne has won this season and each has been by the fall route.

In defeating the Oak Ridge Cadets, 24-10, the Tar Babies registered their first victory of the season. Previously, the freshmen had a loss to Barium Springs and a tie match with the V. P. I. freshmen on their record.

Tom Bennett, flashy 126 pounder, furnished the biggest thrill of the night when he tossed Waller down and pinned his shoulders to the mat in forty-seven seconds. The freshmen chalked up two more falls, when Best and Cahoon broke into the win column for the first time this season by winning falls over Wooten and Smook respectively.

The Cadets came back in the last two bouts of the match to score a pair of falls and do all of their scoring. Bob Wells and Sam Walens were the victims in 3:29 and 6:57 respectively.

Marshall Thompson, freshman 155 pounder, won his first bout of the season by getting a time advantage over Ferebee of the Cadets, while Sim Efland added his second win of the year by taking an advantage over McCormick.

TEST SCHOOL AT WISCONSIN WILL BE DISCONTINUED

Dr. Meiklejohn, Founder of Experimental College, Will Conclude Its Work in 1932.

Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, founder of the experimental college at the University of Wisconsin, has just announced that the work of that branch of the University of Wisconsin will be suspended in June 1932.

This news is of interest to the campus because of the fact that a transfer student from the University of Wisconsin experimental college was refused entrance to the University because he had not completed the courses required here.

According to President Glenn Frank the experimental college was but one phase of the general research going at the western institution. As such, its research has been completed and the staff in charge feels ready to present their findings to the faculty of the college of letters and sciences for its consideration.

"The experimental college," the president went on to say, "has been a very valuable means of approaching the problem of the first two years of college work in the university.

The reason given by Dr. Meiklejohn in his report, for presenting his proposal of suspending the experimental college at this time was that it seems proper to call a halt for appraisal of the work accomplished, to determine its results, and to see what phases of those results may be applied to the regular college work of the freshman and sophomore years.

The proposal contained three

METZENTHIN TO BE GIVEN FREE TRIP TO EUROPE

German Professor Selected By Steamship Company to Lecture to Passengers.

Dr. E. C. Metzenthin of the University German department has just received notice of signal recognition accorded him by the steamship line (not a German one) in whose ships he travels in his frequent trips to Europe to study medieval manuscripts.

It is Dr. Metzenthin's custom, when on shipboard, to enliven the dreary days by conducting classes in German conversation and lecturing on such topics as: "A World Language, Esperanto," "Evolution of Roman Speech," "History of the Alphabet," and "Development of Writing."

The steamship company showed its appreciation of Dr. Metzenthin's part in entertaining the passengers by offering him an individual cabin on one of the finest of liners leaving New York in June, and another individual cabin for himself as well as one for his daughter when he returns with her early in September.

Of course the passengers like diversion during the time of their ocean trip, and even college tourists, when not feeding the fishes or sea-gulls, are anxious to increase their knowledge of these subjects.

The steamship companies are

Boggs Gives Spanish Lecture from WPTF

Professor R. S. Boggs, of the University Spanish department yesterday gave the fourth of a series of twelve lectures which are being given over station WPTF in Raleigh every Thursday afternoon between five-fifteen and five-forty-five o'clock.

This is the first lecture to be delivered by Mr. Boggs. The first three talks were broadcast by Professor N. B. Adams.

Professor Boggs in his lecture explained the second conjugation of regular verbs and mentioned a few facts concerning the conjugation of special verbs. The last part of the lesson was occupied in the Professor's giving a list of words which are to be memorized.

The weekly lectures so far have proved to be very popular.

CAST SELECTED FOR NEXT PLAYS

Playmakers To Produce Three Original Plays by University Students.

Tryouts for the plays of the Carolina Playmakers' spring production were held in the Playmakers theatre Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 and again that night at 8:30 o'clock.

The plays selected for the spring production are: Ever' Snitch, a comedy of the Carolina fisher class by Irene Fussler of Chapel Hill; Theodore Herman's Blue Remembered Hills, a comedy of college life; A Very Pink Pale Angel, a fantasy by Ellen Stewart of Camden, South Carolina.

Tentative casts were selected at the tryouts. For Irene Fussler's play the following were selected: for Henry Jeffcoat, Donald Wood or Charles Elledge; for Huldy, Marion Tatum or Marjorie Goode; for Mrs. Bickles, Bess Jones Winburn; for Tom Gatlin, Joe Fox, Tom Loy or Philip Milhous; the boy, Bobby Koch.

The tentative cast of The Blue Remembered Hill is made up of James Queen and Henry Pickard for the part of Dick; William Harris in the character of David; John Sehon, Pete. Tommy will be portrayed either by Frank Dorsett, or Everett Jess.

Ellen Stewart as the Pink Angel; Ralph Westerman as the man, and Charles Keener as the cherub is the tentative cast for Ellen Stewart's play.

Reading rehearsals will be held this afternoon for the trio of plays. Rehearsals for Ever' Snitch will be held at 4:00 o'clock at Person Hall. Those selected for A Very Pink Pale Angel will meet in Ralph Westerman's office at 4:30 o'clock for rehearsal. Samuel Selden will meet the tentative cast for The Blue Remembered Hills in his office at 5:00 o'clock this afternoon.

These plays constitute the second bill of original plays this year. The first included Cloey, Sam Hinkle, Fireman, and Git Up an' Bar the Door.

Reporters

Ed G. French requests that the following reporters come to the office of the Daily Tar Heel with their notebooks for conference at one-thirty today: W. E. Davis, F. W. Ashley, Frank Hawley, Dan Kelly, George Malone, and Charles Poe.

CAROLINAS MERGE Y ORGANIZATIONS

Comer and Hawley Represent University at Charlotte Conference.

A complete merger of the Young Men's Christian Association interest in the Carolinas was effected in Charlotte Wednesday by representatives of the Y.M.C.A.'s located throughout both states, with the adoption of a new interstate constitution, election of officers, and naming an interstate committee composed of representatives from North and South Carolina.

Details of the merger were quickly settled. The only clash occurred in a discussion of the constitution which designated the consolidated association as "The Interstate Association of Young Men's Christian Associations of the Carolinas." This name remained unchanged. Another item of business consisted in reducing the number of electoral districts in the state from three to two, and dividing the third district or student district between the two. Representatives to the national convention will be selected from these districts.

George Irving, representative of the national council, delivered a devotional address Wednesday, and was one of the principal speakers at the final banquet that night.

North and South Carolina were first united in Y. M. C. A. work in 1903. From 1897 to 1903 separate state associations were maintained. In 1919 the interstate office was abandoned, and a return was made to separate state organizations.

Harry F. Comer, general secretary of the local Y, and Frank Hawley of the sophomore cabinet represented the University at the conference. Mr. Comer was elected as a representative of North Carolina on the interstate committee.

MAGAZINE ISSUES HISTORIC NUMBER

Library Gets Copy of "Country Gentleman" Which Summarizes Story of Agriculture.

The "Historic Number" of The Country Gentleman was published recently for the month of March. In this number is summarized the history of American agriculture for the past one hundred, and the number celebrates the one hundredth anniversary of the farm magazine, the oldest in the world.

A copy of this issue, bound in parchment, was presented to the University library with the thought that it might serve as a permanent reference in American agriculture for both the students and faculty. In the 192 pages of reading matter are contained 88 articles relating to every phase of agriculture from influence of power on the farm to changes that have been made in the crop planting.

The table of contents of the historic number lists ten general articles; six fiction stories by eminent writers including Clarence Buddington Kelland, Hugh MacNair Kahler and Katherine Newlin Burt; fourteen stories and articles devoted to women's activities; thirty-eight articles dealing with various departments of farming—agricultural engineering, orchards and small fruits, dairy, livestock, crops,

HOBBS LECTURES A.B. FRESHMEN

Dean Says Application Keynote Of College Scholastic Work.

Dean A. W. Hobbs of the school of liberal arts spoke to the A. B. freshmen yesterday at chapel period. Hobbs said that the main difficulty first-year men found on the campus is the inability to study. He continued to say that this fact, although seemingly a simple thing has been found one of the greatest obstacles in the way of a student's scholastic success; namely, concentration on study. He urged more attention to hard work and application.

Hobbs next discussed the reasons for the existence of required courses in the University curriculum. He showed the indispensability of languages, science, and mathematics. "Knowledge of languages is necessary," he said, "for language is the most important possession a race can have; mathematics teaches clear and logical thinking; while science, of course, is the basis of our modern life."

"Stick to the task immediately before you," said Hobbs, "and don't become dissatisfied too easily." He asserted that if students would think of themselves as real members of society with a definite duty to perform they would show much more cooperation in their work.

The dean warned the freshmen that the regulations governing class attendance are entirely in the hands of the various departments. These departments restrict absences as they see fit. No student, however, may be dropped from a course without consultation with the dean of his school. In connection with this subject of classes Hobbs advised students against the vacation complex which causes dissatisfaction at the length of holidays.

SPRING HOPE TO HEAR GLEE CLUB

Group of Twenty-Six Men Will Appear in Concert There Tonight.

The University glee club under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer of the music department, goes to Spring Hope tonight to render a program of Maennerchor songs at the high school auditorium. The trip will be made in the private cars of the members of the club, leaving here in the early part of the day and returning immediately after the performance.

Twenty-six men are to be taken on this trip: William Barfield, J. H. Clifford, Walter Cook, E. V. Conrad, Archie Davis, Charles Duffy, Arthur Fleming, D. A. Harrell, Wofford Humphries, J. D. Linker, Steve Lynch, J. E. Miller, H. Parsley, J. C. Pfohl, L. E. Rackley, C. M. Sawyer, Jess Slaughter, A. J. Stahr, M. A. Toff, C. S. Templeton, G. I. Truill, W. T. Whitsett, Kenneth Wilson, and George Winston.

C. B. Overman will have charge of the managerial duties while the club is away from Chapel Hill, and Harry Lee Knox will be the chief accompanist of the musical entertainment.

Library Shows Works Of American Authors

The subject of the latest exhibit in the Library is the "Books and Autographs of the Transcendentalists" from the collection of Professor Raymond Adams of the English department.

This material is being shown in connection with Professor Adams' course in American literature and illustrates the typical works of the Transcendentalist group, which was composed of New England writers who drew their inspiration from Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Portraits of Hawthorne, Thoreau, William Channing, Ellery Channing, and Moncure Daniel Conway are shown, along with an original etching of Emerson himself.

Of especial interest is a copy of the second issue of the first edition of A Fable for Critics by James Russell Lowell.

ENGINEERS' DANCE SET FOR TONIGHT

Annual Revel Will Take Place In Gymnasium From Nine To One.

The engineering school will give its annual ball this evening in the Bynum gymnasium, which will be decorated for the occasion. The dance will last from nine till one.

The dance will be formal. The chaperones are Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Lear, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Hoefer, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Stainback, and Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Baity.

This will be the fifth of the balls which are given each year by the engineering school. Three of the dances have been given in the gymnasium. Last year, the ball was held in the Carolina Inn, but this year the scene of the dance will once more be the gymnasium.

Engineers who have not obtained their invitations may still get them from the committees in the senior rooms of the different branches of engineering. Two invitations will be given to every engineer asking for them, one of which may be used for himself, and one for the use of his guest. In any event, one girl must attend the dance for every two invitations that are given out.

Electrical engineers may obtain their invitations from Pat Hayes or Frank Jaycocks. Bob Plummer and Aubrey Parsley have charge of the invitations for the mechanical engineers. Invitations for the chemical engineers may be obtained from Raymond Ruble, Adam Fisher, or George McCormick. Rankin White, Tom Riddick, and John Brown are distributing invitations for the civil engineers.

HIGH SCHOOL DEBATERS PREPARE TO MEET HERE

Much interest is being shown in the high school debating contest, as is evidenced by the fact that over 200 schools have enrolled for it. The tri-angular debates will take place April 3, with the final contest here April 16 and 17, at which time the interscholastic track meet and tennis tournament will also be run off.

A large number of students are trying out in the preliminaries, with which the schools are occupied at present. At Washington High there are eighty students taking part in these try-outs.

ENTERTAINMENT SERIES PRESENT ENGLISH AUTHOR

Bruce Bairnsfather Will Tell of War Time Experiences Tonight.

Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, English lecturer, author, playwright, and cartoonist, appears tonight in Memorial hall as the performer in the second offering of the student entertainment committee. Bairnsfather's subject for the lecture will be "Old Bill and Me."

"Old Bill" is the comic strip character created by Bairnsfather. The doings and accomplishments of this soldier at the front amused the people of England and the Continent during the trying times of the late war.

The lecture will be illustrated; pictures which he has drawn particularly for this purpose have been made into slides, and will end his lecture by drawing, in front of the audience, a large sized picture which will be signed and presented to the entertainment committee.

When General Sir Ian Hamilton introduced Captain Bairnsfather at Queen's hall, London, he was given the title "The man who made the world laugh in its darkest hour."

It is not to be supposed by those who will see Bairnsfather that he will offer humorous lectures on the war entirely. His experience is so broad that this will be but one phase.

Captain Bairnsfather served for three years in a detachment of the Warwickshire Royal Regiment on the western front and the episodes in the life of "Old Bill" are drawn from real life and actual wartime experience.

COBB ADDRESSES JUNIOR SMOKER

Head of Geology Department Says University Trains for Life Work.

Dr. Collier Cobb, head of the Geology department of the University, in his talk before the Junior class at their smoker in Swain Hall last night spoke about the part played by the universities in the life of the youth of today.

"The college tries to sum up in a clear and definite way for the youth the things that he has been learning throughout his life in a somewhat desultory way, and to put him in possession of his faculties."

Dr. Cobb continued to say that this generation is making new demands on the universities in the way of training. The college man is expected to discover early in his course the work to which he is best suited and to prepare himself for worthy service along some definite line of endeavor.

Dr. Cobb, who has been teaching at the University probably longer than any other professor here at the present time, stated in closing his talk that the University has never in its history rendered better service in helping a student to discover his life work and in preparing him for it than today. In his closing sentence the speaker stated, "Our University has now become the state's most valuable asset, serving mankind in the nation and throughout the world as well."

Out In The Open

The evolution of dancing in North Carolina has passed through a number of stages. It has finally reached that stage in which students of Davidson, the last of the major institutions in the state forbidding dancing, are appealing to the board of trustees for permission to give dances at the college. It was not so long ago that practically all of the denominations forbade dancing on more or less moral grounds. But that day has passed and dancing is recognized as just another form of amusement.

No action was taken on the appeal at the Tuesday meeting of the trustees, but a special committee was appointed to investigate the entire matter. We trust that this committee will see fit to endorse the appeal of the students.

There are objections to staging dances within the confines of an educational institution. These may be boiled down to one—interference with routine. And that is just why we think that Davidson students should hold their dances at home. In the past it has been customary for them to go to Charlotte for their social affairs. This has proven inconvenient and has caused far more interference than having the blaring of saxophones and the presence of girls on the campus.

Davidson students are similar to those here. To forbid dancing will not stop it. A nearby city will provide the hall and there are plenty of automobiles on the highways. We believe that if the committee investigates the matter thoroughly they will find bringing the dances home will prove the better plan for all concerned.

Let's Pull Together!

The University faculty and students, and everyone interested in its welfare, truly breathed a sigh of relief yesterday when the committee on appropriations recommended no cuts for the University's budget for the coming year. This was one of the most important decisions affecting the University and its welfare that has come out in many days. Most of the students at this institution do not even know of its occurrence. Most of them, as usual, are very much interested in what they are doing and what affects them directly, but they are generally content to let well enough alone and let the "others" on the campus do the work. They have completely blinded themselves to the future by the pleasant-enough facts of their present surroundings. They do not realize in any extent whatever the true meaning of almost a thirty-three percent cut since the 1928 appropriations.

These statements seem a bit harsh, but, when those students who were circulating the petitions to be sent in, actually had to use high pressure sales tactics to get some of the men in the dorms to sign them, the issue becomes clearer. How can we hope for the legislature to be far-sighted and progressive when we, who should be the most interested and progressive group in the state, do not seem to know what it is all about?

Let's all pull together in these last few days and really work, so we can have a University during the coming generation which will merit our admiration and respect as it has in the past. Every man in school should take an active part in this struggle for adequate funds which actually mean life to a school we all admire.—O. W. D.

The New And The Old

It is with a sigh of reminiscence and a little sorrow that we learn of the latest action of the Publications Union Board. It has recently voted to secure two new typewriters for the Daily Tar Heel office.

Something of the thrill of writing an editorial will be gone when these new machines arrive. It was no small adventure to sit down at one of the three eccentric typewriters that grace the office and start an editorial. For one always had the feeling that the typewriter was about to duplicate the feat of the famous one-horse shay. And if the machine did not happen to fall apart, it at least groaned and shuddered as if it would. One never quite knew whether or not he would finish the paragraph. All of which gave a zest to writing.

Then, too, these three typewriters have all acquired unique personalities. We have learned to know them as individuals. And as individuals, they have their faults. Take the Royal in the editorial room, for instance. It has a nasty habit of jumping two or three spaces just as we are in the middle of some polysyllable word. And nothing we can do can reform it. And then there is the Underwood on the sports editor's desk. It dislikes working quickly. If one reaches a pace of over sixty words a minute, the machine will immediately jam. Deliberately, of course. The Underwood on the reporters' desk is an annoying individual. It insists on tangling its ribbon at the end of almost every line. And no amount of profanity will help it in the least.

But with the invasion of these new, spotless, and characterless typewriters, all will be changed. They will perform their duty coldly and perfectly. No spark of mischief will be shown by them. They will never skip spaces; they will never jam; they will never tangle their ribbons.

And we will no longer be able to blame the typewriters for our mistakes.—P. L.

Recognition

When the state budget committee of the Indiana General Assembly two days ago approved an increase of $100,000 in the biennial allowance of the University, in the face of reduced allowances for other state colleges and universities and a total reduction of no small amount in the state budget, it gave recognition to the widespread educational and scientific research work going on at the University. Although the increase of $100,000 is only a drop in the bucket when compared with the total amount of the appropriation, it is the attitude with which the members of the budget committee apparently regard the work of the University that is most significant.

Purdue University is far more than a mere institution of higher education. It is a far-reaching influence that penetrates into the largest industries of the nation, influences experiments in laboratories over the entire world, and moulds scientific opinion in countless Middle Western farm homes. Its numerous experimental projects, in the fields of both engineering and agriculture, are generally accepted as authoritative when they are released for publication. The practical results of this experimental work have gone a long way toward increasing the efficiency of industry and agriculture and elevating the general strata in which the American people live. It was undoubtedly a knowledge of the past work of the University which prompted the committee to increase the biennial allowance when other educational institutions received less than in former years.—E. L. B., The Purdue Exponent.

The Lowest Form Of Wit

Every once in a while some individual with a fair amount of world-wide prestige such as Sinclair Lewis or Charles Lindbergh or Dean Inge or Bernard Shaw enjoy, comes out with a statement which is revolutionary, which blasts former conventions in thinking. And then, " all we like sheep" read hurriedly, digest partially, and agree whole-heartedly. That is what is known as the "mass mind."

So it happened that a while ago, of course after the immortal Shakespeare's time, some public idol remarked that punning was the lowest form of wit. Since then it has become fashionable to declare with an air of sophistication with one eye closed in a knowing manner, "Puns . . . Oh, aren't they inane things, though? By all means, they're the lowest form of wit." And everyone else, if there is an assemblage, grins and bobs his head up and down and agrees. No one has enough stamina to say that he holds a different opinion.

And yet, isn't it true that there is nothing quite so delectable as a clever pun. There is that classic, which was the dying words of the great English punster, Hood. ". . . my dying will enable the undertaker to urn a lively-Hood." True, a pun is not designed to bring down guffaws of laughter. It is a drollity, one might say, an ingenius and unusual interchanging of words. But it can hardly be accused of being the lowest form of wit.—Minnesota Daily.

Administration

Students at the University of Wisconsin, through the medium of 80 research teams, have declared that while they believe that they are intelligent and capable enough to govern themselves, they do not wish to accept such responsibility.

We do not believe that this is either a commendation and a wreath for the dean's office or a blow at the educational theory that students should take more responsibility upon themselves.

The absence of student administration and the necessity of students taking on some form of responsibility can both be reconciled to such a finding.

Students do not want to govern themselves, and it may easily follow that they do not want to be governed. There is a necessity for the routine following of some sort of red tape, but not to an adherence to a special set of disciplinary rules set out to make the boy a clean, upright citizens by code of law rather than by reason. A policy of "let them alone" should be followed, with no penalties attached except for those instance which endanger the peace and safety of the student community. There must, of course, be a discrimination here, probably for upperclassmen, for it is to be doubted that most upperclassmen could take the correct attitude on life without some college training.

Second, the sort of responsibility that students need is that which is found in activities, each choosing his own field, with the results to the individual much the same. It is a responsibility which does not carry too much weight behind it, but one which is highly necessary to the full development of the individual. Student government carries too much responsibility, some of our so-called student activities, too little.—Daily Illini.

Things Would Become Complicated If the Faculty Had to Give Interesting Lectures

A system of grading the faculty members, which has already been adopted by three eastern universities is now being extended to the Ohio State University with the hopes of furthering some sort of educational advancement and democracy. Under the new plan, the Ohio State seniors will be allowed to grade their professors during the spring quarter, the results of which will be utilized by the administration to decide the individual and instruction value of the professors.

Ohio State feels that this new innovation will mean a forward step in university work, that is, if the system is properly directed and carried out. But a new idea whether properly conducted or not, will never get any place if the work it requires profits nothing in the end. Without doubt, the Ohio president has put a lot of confidence in the senior class, but he has not guaranteed that their efforts will be seriously considered, if at all.

With the evils of the present student grading system very evident and much talked of, it is rather improbable that students, even seniors, will be able entirely to put away their prejudices and personal feelings to grade the faculty fairly. Besides, the continuation of this grading scheme will become dependent upon the intelligence and integrity of the present class and should they fail the next senior class will never be given the opportunity to try the plan.

At present, we are trying to abolish one grading system, why be so inconsistent as to establish another?—Daily Californian.

by MOORE BRYSON

Despite about a half a dozen efficiency signs which are posted in conspicuous places around the office of the Daily Tar Heel, I was unable to find any typewriter paper when I settled down to write the world's worst column, so I sauntered over next door to the University Press and borrowed some from my friend Frances Stratton. From now on I hope that the office will be out of supplies every Thursday morning.

It appears from last Saturday's issue that if I am to maintain my coveted position at the cellar (the term "cellar" is used purely in the figurative sense) among column writers, I am going to have to do some hard work. My indomitable spirit will not allow J. H. Smith to take my rightful honors without a struggle, so here goes:—

I see where President Jack Ward gave a talk over the radio on fraternities the other day. If President Jack was quoted correctly, I hereby make him honorary president of The Smile Club. Specimen quotation, "—any boy of ability and accomplishment will be invited to join some fraternity at the University if he so desires." Typical Smile Club saying, "—it (the council) realizes that the problem of scholarship is the greatest one confronting the fraternity." Jack, Jack, Jack, I am surprised, and here I thought that the Law School would help you.

"Eddie" Marshall is starting to grow a moustache.

"Opp" Wolfe has joined the staff of the University Press. It is to be hoped that she will return to her old stomping ground on the Playmaker boards and do a few more of her delightful characterizations for us. It wouldn't hurt a few of the present actors to see how things were done "in the good old days."

A certain chaperon was heard to remark the other day that she wished her little visitor could meet some nice boys in Chapel Hill since the only ones she knew as yet were Betas. Dear, oh, dear, and we have heard that "Classical Clyde" Dunn has been an ardent admirer ever since she arrived.

Scott Benton is eating an hour earlier than usual these days. The report is that he is doing so in order to avoid a certain young lady. That doesn't sound a bit like our Scott. I wonder what the real reason for the change is.

While I am on that bunch, "Co-Ed" Curlee, not being content with one perfectly good nick-name, has acquired a new one. The name "Tweet-Tweet" is very significant to those who know the story.

Alfred Hamilton was made a charter member of the "Snards" a few weeks ago.

Among the last year's co-eds who were in Chapel Hill for the past week-end were Anne Melick, Phoebe Harding, and "Lib" Barber.

I wish "Rooney" Melick was back with us. I haven't had a real good Social Secretary who could or would get "Blind" dates for me on short notice since she left. I'm not trusting Adelaide McAnnally with the job any more.

Greensboro, February 18.—A Winston-Salem girl, Miss Mildred Brunt, is the new president of the sophomore class at North Carolina College. Miss Brunt was chosen leading officer in the class of 1933 at a recent election of officials at Students' building.

Miss Margate Stallings, of Louisburg, was made vice president of the organization at the election.

Other officials selected were as follows: Miss Mary Parrish of Rocky Mount, secretary; Miss Eloise Cobb of Bryson City, treasurer; and Miss Allene Charles of Grifton, cheerleader.

Sophomores at the state institution for women have two sets of officers for the year. The new officials will be in charge of the affairs.

Tar Heel Boxers Will Meet Collegiate Champions Saturday In Final Dual Meet

OFF LAST NIGHT TO BATTLE PENN STATE PUGILISTS

Ten Men, Including Manager and Coach, Make Trip to Pennsylvania City.

LIONS HAVE STRONG TEAM

Captain Epstein, McAndrews, Lewis and Stoop Best Bets for Northerners.

Fresh from a 4-3 victory over the Duke Blue Devils, the Tar Heel boxing squad entrained last night for State College, Pennsylvania, where the Blue and White will meet Penn State, four times intercollegiate champions, tomorrow night, in an intersectional meet.

With possibly one exception, Carolina will be represented by the same outfit that put Duke out of the state title chase.

Those making the trip are: Martin Levinson, feather; Captain Noah Goodridge, lightweight; Dail Holderness or Cecil Jackson, welter; Obie Davis and Tom Parsons, middleweight; Platt Landis, lightheavy; and John Warren, unlimited; Coach Rowe and Manager Weeks.

Last Dual Meet

This will be the last regular dual meet of the season, and the Nittany Lions are the only team that can prevent the Tar Heels from having a perfect record.

The strength of the Lions can be realized by the following special dispatch from State College:

Dave Stoop, 115 pounds, intercollegiate champion, is the leading candidate at this weight and seems a likely repeater in the tournament in March. In the only bout to date he knocked out his West Virginia opponent in less than a minute.

Epstein Clever

Captain Julius Epstein, 125 pounds, formerly 115 pound intercollegiate champion, who defaulted his title last season to enter the 125-pound division, may succeed in regaining a championship this season. He is by far the cleverest boxer on the squad, depending on defensive skill to win his bouts; he hasn't much of a punch but apparently doesn't need one to win.

John L. McAndrews, 135 pounds, a sophomore and brother of last year's captain, is the find of the season. McAndrews is a much better boxer than his older brother and still has enough of the Irish characteristics of the former light heavyweight champion to make him a good scrapper in a mixup.

Lewis Dynamite Carrier

Alfred E. Lewis, 145 pounds, a junior, is the squad's dynamite carrier. In ten bouts in his collegiate career Lewis has won five times by knockouts; four other bouts went to him on decisions while he lost one to Hall of Navy in the finals of the championship tournament last spring. Lewis' eye was cut in a mixup in the first round, and the referee refused to let him continue for the next round. Lewis had beaten Hall in a dual meet and undoubtedly would have beaten him again and won the title had the referee permitted him to go on.

Best bet is Ed Polak, 160 pounds, a junior, whose inexperience is a big handicap. He was beaten in his only start this season, against West Virginia. Johnny Girvan, manager of the varsity soccer team last fall, is another possibility in this division; he took part in one bout as a sophomore but did not come out last year.

Joseph Yacochonis, 175 pounds, junior, is still the best prospect in this class, although he lost on a knockout to the West Virginia light heavy in the first meet. If one of the heavyweight candidates returns to form, John Guelfi, a sophomore, may be used at 175 pounds; Guelfi entered the heavyweight division in the opening meet with West Virginia but was outweighed too much to make it a contest; the referee also stopped this one to save Guelfi punishment.

Frank Skoberne, a football man, is the heavyweight in doubt. He injured his hand in practice some time ago and has not taken part in a meet as yet. McMillen, football tackle, is another heavyweight prospect but lacks experience.

Penn State Coach

HOUCK

Coach Houck can boast of the greatest boxing team in the country. His Penn State Nittany Lions have won the Eastern Intercollegiate championship four times in recent years.

DAVIDSON MAT TEAM CRIPPLED

Three Regulars on Injured List As Tomorrow's Bouts with Tar Heels Draw Near.

Davidson, February 19.—Indications today pointed that the Davidson wrestling team which closes its Big Five mat schedule Saturday against the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will be seriously hindered by injuries. Three men who helped to defeat State and who wrestled in Davidson's defeat by Duke last week will be unable to make the trip.

Pat Boyle, unlimited, has been kept off the mat since the Washington and Lee meet two weeks ago because of a broken rib, and will likely be out for the remainder of the season. Vick, 115 pounds, has been in the infirmary with an attack of influenza, and there is only a slight chance that he will be out in time for the match. The third member of the squad who will be unable to accompany the team is Thad Brock, 155 pounds. Coach Unger has been casting around frantically attempting to fill these vacancies, and says he will be able to send a strong squad against the Tar Heels.

Two members of the Davidson team have so far been undefeated in their weights this winter, and victories against their Carolina opponents will give give them state titles. Captain Conway, 165 pounds, and Gorham, 125 pounds, both have victories to their credit against both N. C. State and Duke, and will be trying for their third Big Five victories Saturday.

Editor's note: Gorham, 125 pounds, will be up against Captain Fred Stallings and Captain Conway, 165 pounds, will face Percy Idol, 165 pounds.

MINOR CHANGE IN FOOTBALL RULES

The national football rules committee has met and has allowed the most popular American game to go for another year under the same rules as those of last season, except for the following change:

Extra points will not longer be awarded for the defensive team's being off side on the try for the point. Under such conditions the defensive team will be penalized half the distance of the goal, and if the offensive team is offside, it will be penalized the customary five yards.

This change comes as a relief to many teams over the country which have lost important games because of a man's being offside at an inopportune moment. We are glad to see this change made, and see no reason why an offside penalty on a try for extra-point play should not have been the same as an ordinary play many years ago.

MORE OF THIS OVER-EMPHASIS TALK

A sports writer from one of the large state dailies several days ago asked Chuck Collins, "What do you think about this talk of over-emphasis, because of spring training?"

"That gives me a good laugh," said the head Tar Heel football mentor. He continued, "Building a football team is very much like building a house; you must have a concerted program before you can get anywhere. Spring football training is just as essential in the construction of a gridiron machine as concrete, brick or wood are in the erection of a house."

Coach Collins wants plenty of ground work before starting on the upper stories and putting on the finishing touches. It's the blocking that wins football games, Knute Rockne has said, and it is in the spring training period that these fundamentals can best be learned.

CHAMPIONSHIP MAT AND MIT TEAMS

Carolina can rightfully boast of the excellent showings of the boxing and wrestling teams, both having made splendid records to date. The pugilists are undefeated; the grapplers have lost only to Navy, and that by a close score.

Davidson College's Wildcats come down here tomorrow to meet the Tar Heel wrestlers in their third home performance. They will meet the V. M. I. Cadets here next Saturday, and then will get ready for the conference tourney at Lexington, Virginia, March 7. They should stand right at the top when the tournament at Lexington comes to an end.

The boxing team will be up against its toughest assignment of the year tomorrow night when it meets the strong Nittany Lions of Penn. State College, and they will be crippled by the fact that Dail Holderness and Obie Davis are not in good form for the fights. Jackson is an able sub for Holderness, but it will be difficult to replace Davis. The Lions are said to have their best fighters in the four lighter divisions, and that their 160-pound, light heavyweight and heavyweight fighters are not so good.

The Tar Heels have a good chance to stop them with Levinson, Goodridge, Landis, and Warren. The Lions will be up against one of the toughest assignments that they have met this season at any rate.

TULANE TO MAKE STRONG BID FOR S.I.C. MEET TITLE

Louisiana School To Send Eleven Veterans To 1931 Indoor Event Here.

Tulane University should make a strong bid for premier honors in the forthcoming Southern Conference Indoor Track and Field meet in the Tin Can March 7.

In the Southern Conference indoor meet last year Tulane tied with Virginia for fourth place. This year the Louisiana institution is sending a team of eleven varsity men and one freshman.

Probably the biggest threat of Tulane's strong 1931 team will be de Coliqny, a hurdler, high jumper, and dash man. Last year de Coliquy placed second in the 60 yard high hurdles, third in the high jump, and fourth in the 60 yard low hurdles. Wells, last year's winner of the Southern Conference indoor mile run, will be back again this year and will probably run the half mile. Whatley and Zimmerman, stellar football men, will run in the dashes, and Olkers will be entered in the shot put.

Tulane's eleven entries are: Olkers, de Coligny, Whatley, Zimmerman, Miller, Wells, Pischoff, Felts, Taylor, Haynes, and Glover. Wilson, a freshman, will also make the trip and be entered in three events.

Tennessee has notified Fetzer of its intention to enter the meet, but has not yet sent in a list of its entrants. This year will be Tennessee's first year of participation in the Southern Conference indoor meet.

Although the closing date for receiving entrance blanks is ten days distant, Fetzer has been receiving a great many acceptances from various Southern Conference colleges and predicts a bigger and better indoor meet than ever before.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

New Dorms Loses First

New Dorms suffered its first defeat of the season yesterday afternoon, losing to the Question Marks, 22-4. H. Beam led the Question Marks with eight points. Barnwell played a good game at center for the winners, getting six points for runner-up honors. It was the Question Marks' fifth win of the season against no defeats. Only two teams in the dormitory league have yet to suffer a defeat. Best House, the other undefeated team, meets Ruffin this afternoon.

Francis Scores Forty-Six Points

Francis, forward and manager, scored a total of forty-six points this afternoon, to lead Lewis in their 70-18 win over Carr. Francis, in the last half, scored a total of thirty-eight points, one less than the previous high scoring record held by Council, Beta forward, with thirty-nine points.

Steele Gets Forfeit

Steele received a forfeit in the intramural basketball league yesterday afternoon when Aycock failed to put in an appearance.

Mangum Defeats Everett

Mangum defeated Everett yesterday afternoon 32-9 to register their sixth victory of the season while losing three. Mangum jumped into the lead from the start and was never in dan-

Freshman Cagers Win State Title

The freshman basketball team barely nosed out Wake Forest last night with the score of 21-20, in the State College gymnasium in Raleigh, to cop the state championship for the University. Weathers, Fisher, and McCachren were outstanding in the evening's play, which was a preliminary to the varsity match with the Deacons.

The win was made on top of a defeat by Raleigh high school this week.

At the time that the Daily Tar Heel went to press last night, the report on the varsity contest was unavailable.

VARSITY TO MEET FROSH ON TRACK

Intersquad Meet Scheduled for Emerson Field This Afternoon at Three.

A varsity-freshman track meet will be staged at Emerson field this afternoon starting at three o'clock, the field events beginning at this time. The track events will not get underway until four p. m.

Coach Ranson announces that he expects some good performances in the meet this afternoon since a large part of the regular squad has been taking workouts daily, only members of winter sports teams not being actively engaged in drills. The pole vault event promises to show some excellent talent, the assistant track coach said yesterday.

Johnny Henderson, captain of the 1928 Carolina track team, will take part in the six-lap run.

The order of events and time schedule follow:

Track Events

4:00 p. m.: 70-yard low hurdles; 4:10 p. m.: 3-4 mile run; 4:15 p. m.: 70-yard dash; 4:20 p. m.: 70-yard high hurdles; 4:30 p. m.: 150-yard dash; 4:35 p. m.: 660-yard run; 4:40 p. m.: six-lap run.

Field Events

(Each man will have only three trials.)

3:00 p. m.: discus, javelin, broad jump; 3:30 p. m.: shot put; 4:30 p. m.: high jump (at Tin Can); 5:30 p. m.: pole vault (at Tin Can).

GRAPPLERS WILL MEET DAVIDSON HERE TOMORROW

Bouts With Wildcats Will Be Second Engagement for Carolina in Five Days.

TEAM IS IN GOOD SHAPE

Line-up Should Be Same as in State Meet But Ferguson May Get Call.

Coach Quinlan's mat artists will encounter their second Big Five opponent within five days here Saturday night when they hook up with the Davidson Wildcats. Davidson holds a 17-13 victory over State and may offer the Tar Heels some serious opposition.

Carolina will probably use the same line up that appeared against the Wolfpack Tuesday night with one possible exception. Fred Furguson, veteran star in the unlimited class, may get the call over Ken Hampton who won decisively over Gurneau of State. Ferguson has two wins to his credit this season against one defeat, while Hampton's win over Gurneau is offset by a loss to Bibbs of V. P. I. in his first varsity bout. Both boys have been showing good form lately and, with a number of hard matches just around the corner, Coach Quinlan may decide to use them alternately.

Don Conklin, the Tar Heel 145 pounder, had little or no trouble keeping his slate clean against State, and indications are that he should continue undefeated against the Wildcats. Conklin had a time advantage of nine minutes and twenty-nine seconds over Oakley of State, while Oakley defeated Tyack, the Davidson 145 pounder with an advantage of two minutes and forty-nine seconds.

Davidson will offer its strongest and most dangerous man in Captain Conway who wrestles in any class from the 155 on up. He scored the only Wildcat points against Washington and Lee by taking a time decision over Wright in the 165 pound class, and has a decision over Sutton of State in the same weight. Against Duke Conway wrestled in the unlimited class and came out the winner in spite of the fact that he gave away almost fifty pounds.

definite resolutions, designed to facilitate cooperation between the faculties of the college of letters and science and the experimental college in arriving at a true appraisal of its results. The resolutions were:

1. No freshmen be admitted to the experimental college in the academic year 1931-32.

2. The advisors of the experimental college be directed to prepare for consideration by a committee of the letters and science college faculty a full and detailed report of its experience in dealing with the problems of freshman and sophomore instruction.

3. That advisers be authorized to appoint a committee which will discuss with the letters and science faculty committee the principles and situations with which the report deals. The gist of this discussion to be presented to the faculty of the college of letters and science.

In the report Professor Meiklejohn went on to raise certain questions which might be used in future discussions between the two committees. Three sets of problems studied by the college advisory faculty were enumerated:

1. The relative values of a course of study made up from separate subjects and a course integrated in a single subject.

2. The relative value of classroom instruction and group guidance.

3. The relative values of scattered residence and group living.

These problems will form the basis of the experimental college committee's work in drawing up its report to the letters and science faculty. They involve the three distinct differences between the experimental college and the college of letters and science.

In closing his statement to the press, President Frank said: "The proposals made by the staff of the experimental college do not mean that the college, as such, has been either a success or a failure. They mean only that one phase of educational experimentation upon which this group has been working is, as far as experimental purposes are concerned, rounded out and ready for consideration by the University.

"These proposals mean, then, not the end of experimentation but a fresh turn in the road of experimentation.

Phi Delt's Win On Forfeit

Zeta Psi forfeited to the Phi Delt's yesterday afternoon in the intramural basketball league. The Zeta Psi's did not have a complete team and were forced to forfeit.

Phi Alpha Wins Second In Last Half Minute

The Phi Alpha's won their second game of the season, defeating the strong Delta Psi's by the narrow margin of one point. Going into the last half minute, the Delta Psi's held a one-point lead but Lorberbaum, Phi Alpha, cut loose with a long shot from mid-court to win the game by a 19-18 score.

Taylor Society

All members of the Taylor Society are requested to be in front of the library at ten-thirty o'clock this morning for a group picture of the organization.

Fencing Postponed

The regular fencing bouts scheduled for this afternoon will be postponed so that all men out for intramural fencing may have the opportunity to witness an exhibition given by the varsity fencers.

Sophomore Chapel

Dr. Isaac H. Manning, dean of the school of medicine, will address the sophomore chapel today on the subject of "The North Carolina School of Medicine."

Track Managers

All track managers are requested to be at Emerson Field this afternoon at two-forty-five o'clock.

Phi Gam's Defeat Zeta Psi Fencers

Phi Gamma Delta won its second victory of the intramural fencing season at the Tin Can Wednesday afternoon by taking a 5-4 decision from Zeta Psi. It was the second successive loss for the Zeta Psi boys who were runners-up to Beta Theta Pi last year.

The Phi Gams were again led to victory by the brilliant work of Kent Creuser who won two out of his three matches. Pitkin won two bouts for the Phi Gam's and Hubbard was responsible for the other point. Although losing two of his three bouts, Hubbard won the match for Phi Gam by winning over Bill Cooper 3-2 in the final match of the afternoon. It was Cooper's first defeat of the season.

Creuser showed the best form of the afternoon in winning his two bouts, while Hubbard won his only bout of the day by aggressiveness.

University of Kansas Offers Fellowships

The University of Kansas offers for the year 1931-32 university fellowships paying from $400 to $500 for the academic year to students who have had no graduate work. Only a graduate who has completed at least one year of graduate study is eligible for a $500 stipend, and only students who have completed two years study are eligible for a stipend of $600. The fellows are to give full time to graduate work, but may be asked to give not over six hours of educational service per week. The fellowships may be obtained in anatomy, bacteriology, botany, chemistry, economics, education, engineering, English, entomology, geology, germanic languages and literature, history, home economics, journalism, Latin and Greek, mathematics, medicine, music, pathology, pharmacology, pharmacy, physics and astronomy, physiology, political science, psychology, romance languages and literatures, sociology, Spanish, and zoology.

Applications should be mailed to the dean of the graduate school, University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas.

There are also a number of graduate assistantships which require part-time assistance in the field of study.

eager to please their patrons, and do their best to provide entertainments and lectures of the best kind. It is essential that the lectures be given in a light vein so as to draw the interest of the tourists who usually are in no mind to engross themselves in profound subjects.

Miss Esther M. Metzenthin, the professor's daughter, will have completed a year's study at the University of Bonn, Germany, by September, and will return to America to teach in one of the famous women's colleges in the North. Miss Metzenthin is engaging in research in French and German at the University of Bonn on an international fellowship. She is now traveling through Austria, Italy, and France.

Dr. Metzenthin has been studying at various old monasteries in Europe for the last few years doing research work on old German manuscripts of the ninth and tenth centuries. Metzenthin has contributed many articles to leading philological journals and is generally recognized as an expert in deciphering old manuscripts.

This year the German professor will study at the Cloister of Saint Gaul in Switzerland, one of the famous monasteries of the continent, and as it is over 1200 years old many experts believe it to be the oldest Christian monastery.

night are selections from the Maennerchor concert. Now Let Every Tongue Adore Thee by Bach; O God of God by Wagner; and Ave Maria by Arcadelt are scheduled as the opening songs of the concert. Ave Maria, which is sung in Latin, offers a novelty to the listeners as one of the few numbers sung in the original. These are sacred songs, and were written in the Middle Ages.

Next come the songs of northern Europe—Russia, Finland, France, Hungaria, Scandinavia. One is a mournful nature song from middle-Europe, Autumn by Gretchaninov, and has met with success in all its presentations by the club. Other songs in the group are: With Heart Uplifted by Schvedov; Finnish Lullaby, an arrangement of Palmgren; Fireflies by a Russian of unknown identity arranged by Davison. There follow two French songs: Dreamworld by Duparc; and Chorus of the Camel Drivers by Franck. The concert will be concluded with a group of four early-American songs: Hymn of the Pilgrims by MacDowell; Dance of Gnomes by the same composer; the Bugle Song by Foote; and the final selection, A Sea Song by Gaines.

Baseball Practice Started for Winter

The first call for candidates for the 1931 Tar Heel baseball team went out yesterday afternoon with about eight men reporting. Bunn Hearne, veteran player and manager of the Piedmont league, will coach the battery and has complete charge of the squad until the end of the basketball season when Head Coach Ashmore will take charge.

Only three regulars from last year's Tar Heel baseball team, Captain-elect Whitehead, Longest, and J. D. Shields, pitcher, reported. The 1931 Tar Heel baseball team will be hard put to replace men like Captain Jimmy Maus, "Nap" Lufty, Fleming, Wright, Jackson, and others. Rand, star second sacker, is not in school but will probably be back next quarter in time for the regular season.

THOMAS SPEAKS ON COLLEGE MEN

Dr. John M. Thomas, president of Rutgers University, recently spoke over a nation-wide radio hook-up concerning his opinion of American college men. In his talk the college president placed the American college men on a high plane of intelligence, honor, and integrity.

Dr. Thomas maintained that present day college students learn faster than those of his generation and that they accomplish more. It was the opinion of the Rutgers head that modern college men were willing to attack harder problems and see that they are carried through to completion.

In the estimation of the Rutgers University president, students of today have a much harder time than students of former days. He made this statement on the grounds that the modern student must spend much more time in preparation for life than college men of his own generation.

Dr. Thomas declared that a student should not be blamed if he shows evidence of impatience in college, as it is youth's prerogative to feel the urge to get out and have a chance at the life for which he has been so long preparing.

Editor Establishes Fund for Awards to Southern Writers

George F. Milton, now the president and editor of the Chattanooga News, in a desire to render permanent service to the cause on International Peace, an ideal to which his life was devoted, established in his will a fund to be known as the George F. Milton Awards in Journalism, the income from which is now available to Southern writers.

For 1931, a cash award of $500 will be made to the writer who shall publish in any newspaper or periodical in the South during the calendar year of 1931, the best editorial or editorials in the interest of International Peace. The term "South" includes the states of Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Maryland.

In addition to the award in journalism, the Milton Fund provides for a cash award of $200 to the woman writer in the South who shall accomplish most for her sex during the calendar year 1931.

These awards are administered by the University of Tennessee, at Knoxville, Tennessee. All clippings of published articles should be mailed to the extension division of that institution.

Bill To Curtail Activities Of Book Exchange Brings To Mind Its Usefulness To The Campus

Organization Began as Place for Students to Exchange Second-Hand Books.

BEGAN PRIOR TO 1914

The bill now under the consideration of the state legislature to curtail the activities of the University Book Exchange calls to mind the many years which this organization has served the campus.

About twenty years ago the secretary of the Y. M. C. A. consented to operate a book exchange, where the students of the University could trade books with one another. After the University became too large for the students to get along by trading books, the book exchange filled the position of a sort of clearing house where books might be purchased second hand.

In 1914 John W. Foster, a student, received an option for operating the book exchange. Under Foster's management the book exchange began to sell pencils, pens, paste, ink and other small articles. For his services Foster received a small commission.

Following closely upon Foster's policy of expanding the services rendered by the exchange, the name of the organization was changed to the Student Exchange; and as an added service it sold new books. The organization was run on a profit-sharing basis and at the end of each month rebates were granted from the profits remaining after the overhead expenses had been paid.

Previous to 1920 the Student Exchange had been situated in the west parlor of the Y. M. C. A., but in this year the cabinets of that organization voted to have the service store moved to the rear of the building.

In 1923, because of a deficit in operating this service, Mr. C. T. Woollen was called in to revaluate and reconsider the proposition of running the Book Exchange. Mr. Woollen said that as the organization was a student enterprise he would prefer to have the students decide for themselves what should be done about the matter.

A committee composed of Y. M. C. A. Cabinet members investigated and found that the students of the University were greatly in favor of the continuation of the exchange.

As a result of this committee's investigations, and as the private enterprises, which for 130 years had undertaken to provide the service which the Book Ex-

English Cartoonist Presents Picture To Entertainment Body

Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, English cartoonist and lecturer, spoke before an audience of students and faculty members last night in the new Memorial hall auditorium. His subject for address was "Old Bill and Me."

The lecture was illustrated by slides which the artist had drawn especially for the purpose of his lectures. At the end of the performance he drew a large picture before the audience and presented it to the entertainment committee.

Bairnsfather, a well-known lecturer in England and on the continent, has for the past year or two been speaking in America on wartime subjects.

Michigan Librarian Visits L. R. Wilson

W. W. Bishop, librarian of the University of Michigan and reputed one of the country's most eminent men in library affairs, was a visitor in Chapel Hill last week. He and Dr. Louis R. Wilson, came from Nashville, Tennessee, where they were attending to business for the American Library Association.

A tea was given in honor of the visitor by the University library staff. Bishop told the company of his expedition to Italy, a year or so ago, to help recatalogue the library of the Vatican.

EXHIBITION WILL INCLUDE PICTURE BY DAINGERFIELD

Painting of Carolina Mountains Will Be Shown at Artists' Meeting.

Included in the exhibit of the North Carolina Association of Professional Arts, which is to be on exposition in Chapel Hill in April, will be a painting of the North Carolina mountain country by Elliott Daingerfield, one of America's celebrated artists.

The artist, though not a native of this state, but of Virginia, came to Fayetteville when he was two years old and spent his youth there. He conducted a summer class for painting in his studio for many years at Blowing Rock. His first wife, Roberta Strange was from Wilmington.

As a young man he studied drawing and painting under private tutors in New York and at the Art Student's League. New York has been his chief home since that time.

He expressed in a letter his keen interest in the development of art in North Carolina and is quite pleased to have one of his creations at the April exhibit.

The mural paintings of the Lady Chapel in the Church of St. Mary the Virgin in New York were done by Daingerfield. Among his most notable paintings are "Madonna and Child" in the Haley Fiske collection, "Slumbering Frog," in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and "The Story of the Madonna," which won a prize at the National Academy's exhibit in 1902. His "Madonna of the Hills" is in the Blowing Rock church.

Charles Baskerville, another North Carolinian in New York is also expected to be represented at the exhibit here.

The exhibit which will open here April 23 and continue for about a week, will be given in the University music building. Arrangements are already pending for the hanging of the pictures. The National Association of College Publicity Agents will have its convention here the latter part of April and will doubtless have one of its social gatherings at the exhibit.

Legionnaires To Give Supper

The Chapel Hill post of the American Legion will have their annual supper Friday night, February 27th, at the Episcopal parish house. Members of the local auxiliary will be guests.

Federal Liquor Investigation Considered

According to information received from reliable sources late last night, the Daily Tar Heel learned that the government of Chapel Hill has under consideration an invitation to federal prohibition agents to investigate the violation of the Volstead Act and the Eighteenth Amendment in fraternity houses and dormitories on the campus.

The action it is thought, prompted by recent raids at the University of Michigan and other universities in the country, has been under consideration for several days. At the Michigan institution, five fraternity houses were raided, padlocked and a large quantity of liquor was confiscated by federal agents.

Though no general cleanups have been attempted here, several entrances upon fraternity houses with a similar intent, have been effected during the last few years.

LARGE GROUP OF LAW SCHOOL MEN ON HONOR ROLL

Proportion Much Higher Than That in Liberal Arts School For Last Quarter.

The University Law school administrative department has just released the honor roll of that school for last semester. The law school has an enrollment of ninety-five students, twenty-one of which are on the honor roll, thus giving the Law school almost twice as great a percentage of honor students as the undergraduate schools of the University combined, who had but twelve percent of the students making B averages or better.

In the Law school six of the twenty-one students on the honor roll averaged A while twenty-six of the 305 honor students of the undergraduate schools achieved the same high scholastic standing.

From the consideration of these statistics the belief that graduate students make better grades than undergraduates seems to be well substantiated, as twenty-two percent of the honor students in the Law school made all A's while only eight percent of the undergraduates could rate the same grade.

The scale of marking in the Law school is very different from that in the undergraduate school. In the undergraduate school the scale of grades is as follows: 70-80 is D; 80-90 is C; 90-95 is B; and 95-100 is A. The grades in the Law school are: 60-67 D; 67-75 is C; 75-80 is B; and over 80 is A.

The students who received all A's for term marks with their averages are: J. H. Chadbourn, 89; H. B. Campbell, 85; H. L. Lobdell, 85; J. M. Little, 82; T. C. Smith, 82; and Edward Scheidt, 81. Those students who made B's are: W. T. Covington, 79; J. G. Edwards, 78; Dallas McLennan, 78; Wex Malone, 77; T. T. Brown, 77; G. P. Boucher, 77; W. J. Adams, 77; R. M. Gray, 77; Naomi Alexander, 76; J. O. Moore, 76; Peyton Abbott, 75; G. T. Davis, 75; H. L. Lyon, 75; C. E. Reitzel, 75; and M. R. Alexander, 75.

ENGINEERS' FIFTH ANNUAL BALL IS WELL ATTENDED

Annual Social Event Given By Engineering Societies Takes Place in Gymnasium.

The annual ball given by the engineering school took place last night from nine o'clock to one in Bynum gymnasium. Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra provided the music for the occasion. The gymnasium was decorated, each of the four engineering societies having its emblem illuminated with lights.

This, the fifth annual ball to be given by the engineering school, was well attended. The chaperones for the evening were Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Lear, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Hoefer, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Stainback, and Mrs and Mrs. H. G. Baity.

The annual ball is practically the only social activity given by the engineers, and due to this fact, they always make an effort to have the ball considered the highlight of the social life on the campus. The ball was sponsored by the William Cain chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the local chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the University branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, and the local chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers.

Manning Points Out Requirements For Study in Medicine

Dean Isaac H. Manning of the University medical school gave a talk to the sophomores in chapel yesterday about the medical school here, outlining the necessary entrance requirements as well as the desired personal qualifications for the work.

He pointed out the need of willingness to work hard and mental efficiency combined with an average brain and that no one should enter the profession of medicine unless intensely interested in the work. This, according to Dr. Manning, is a prime requisite for a successful career in the profession.

Class Attendance Clause

President Frank P. Graham has called the attention of the Daily Tar Heel to the fact that the new attendance regulations, adopted by the undergraduate faculty last Friday with the approval of the president, as reported by the Daily Tar Heel contained a clause which was not adopted by the faculty, to-wit:

"No student shall be given credit in any course in the University unless that student has attended at least seventy-five percent of the class meetings of the courses during the quarter in which it was offered."

This clause was presented to the faculty and was inadvertently reported as having been approved by the body.

Local Y Will Bring Negro Quartet Here

The University Y. M. C. A. has recently completed arrangements with the Hampton Quartet (colored) for a program of negro spirituals on the evening of March 6 in Gerrard hall.

This quartet is said to have won a lasting place for itself among Chapel Hill music lovers. Wainwright's deep bass is considered the crowning thrill in the program; he has been performing this part for the organization for more than thirty years. When not traveling and singing with the quartet he is Professor of plumbing at Hampton Institute, Hampton, Virginia, where all the musicians come from.

SUBSCRIPTION TO RED CROSS FUND IS $854.90 HERE

$600.00 Will Go To National Fund and $254.00 Will Remain in County.

According to Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt, chairman of the local chapter of the American Red Cross, the total amount raised by Chapel Hill for relief was $854.90, of which $600 was for the national fund and $254.90 for relief in Orange county.

Total contributions to the national drought relief fund February 17 totaled $8,376,342. Besides these contributions, many carloads of food have been donated: in Idaho, sixteen; Texas, three; South Dakota, four; Minnesota, three; Washington, two; Oregon, one; Colorado, eleven; Nebraska, twelve; Kansas, two; Iowa, thirteen; Illinois, three; Wyoming, one; and California, two.

Wednesday evening Mary Pickford broadcasted over the Columbia broadcasting system accepting in the name of the Red Cross five carloads of citrus fruit given to the drought sufferers by California fruit growers. In Oklahoma, 44,269 children are being served hot lunches and in Arkansas, 61,702.

The pupils in the sixth grade of the Columbia School in Bellingham, Washington, donated $6.68 to the Red Cross relief fund. This is the money they had collected to buy valentines.

A seven year old boy in Vermont presented himself to the Westminister branch of the Central Windham Chapter with a ten cent contribution to the Red Cross relief fund, and said: "I want to help the Red Cross, you know, those little children who are so hungry. I sold my sled for thirty cents. The kids that bought it couldn't pay that much down, but they'll pay the rest by the week. I'll be around pretty soon with some more money."

James L. Fieser, vice-chairman of the American Red Cross, who is in executive charge of the task of feeding the people in the drought areas, on his return from a visit to part of the area, said that he was glad that the federal and state loan funds are being set up for "the future depends upon them and the weather, the opening up of employment, the re-establishment of normal credit facilities and sheer human grit."

University Officials Point Out Usefulness Of Service Rooms In Dormitories To Legislature

Woollen, Comer, and Williams Represent Service Organizations Before Committee.

SITUATION EXPLAINED

There has been considerable discussion for the past two years in university circles on the subject of the dormitory service rooms and their functions. This agitation has been fanned into a flame by the recent introduction of a bill before the North Carolina legislature by the North Carolina Retail Merchants' Association designed to abolish thoroughly and absolutely the existence of such organizations.

Thursday a group from the University composed of Mr. H. F. Comer, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., C. T. Woollen, University business manager, and J. A. Williams, superintendent of the dormitory clubs, went to Raleigh to appear before the senate committee as representatives of the interests of the self-help students. The Honorable W. A. (Sandy) Graham, a leading member of the board of trustees of the University, acted as chairman of this group.

Mr. Graham made a preliminary explanation of the situation pointing out the fact that the Merchants' Association has appealed once before to the board of trustees of the University in an effort to abolish the service rooms. The appeal was rejected then and now it recurs this time before the Legislature.

Mr. H. F. Comer was introduced Thursday to give a short history of the service rooms, their evolution, and their functions. He also undertook to present the self-help interests. Comer drew a distinction between the old type of dormitory store, which was an actual nuisance, and the dormitory service room as it exists now. In the old form both the buildings department and the self-help bureau worked jointly together either to abolish or radically alter them. In the absence which followed their removal, however, the evil of constant interruption of students' studying by sales agents caused the demand for relief from this annoyance. The self-help students naturally protested against being deprived of a legitimate means of earning expenses. And another group desired the convenience of purchasing necessary articles at their doors rather than do without them or make a trip to town.

Still another factor entering into the establishment of the service rooms was the growing number of thefts occurring and blamed upon the laundry and merchants' deliveries. These deliveries brought about innumerable complaints of stolen suits or other articles which soon presented a delicate problem.

It was on account of these causes, then, that the self-help bureau, buildings' department, and the dean of students collaborated to solve this problem in the idea of having all commercial transactions conducted through the service rooms. The service room was formed from an enlargement of the old telephone monitor's room in order to incorporate this telephone service with the others. An information bureau was also set up in this centrally-located base of dormitory life.

Comer gave the various departments of service rendered

Unequivocally For Student Stores

For two or more years merchants of the state have looked with disapproving eye upon the mercantiling services which the state institutions have been forced to carry on in order to insure continued service of high quality. In the beginning the Merchants' Association of the state petitioned the University to desist from this sort of thing. Now comes a movement led by Willard Dowell, representing the North Carolina Merchants' Association, John A. Gilmore, representing the Southern Retail Furniture Association, and Raleigh and Chapel Hill merchants individually, by which these men hope to abolish the dormitory stores, student barber shops, and to restrict the activities of the buildings' department, the Book Exchange, and the Consolidated Service Plants in such a manner that they will no longer be able to participate in any mercantile business whatsoever.

The lobbyists who favor the bill are powerful enough to cause it to be enacted, were there to be no opposition to the measure on the part of friends of the University and its self-help men. It is said by Dowell that he has been to Governor Gardner about the problem and that the Governor has agreed that the business now conducted by the self-help men and the University must be stopped.

The theory upon which the Merchants' Association is basing its case is a strong one, and one calculated to properly sway the votes of the legislators who will be called upon to sit in judgment of the dormitory stores and the University's activities. The association men say that no state owned school has the legal right to compete with tax paying businesses of the state by underselling these tax paying businesses or taking trade away from them. After all, the legislators' chief duty is to please the tax-payers so that they may more easily carry on the larger business of the state.

And that is just where the argument of the lobbyists proposing the bill breaks down. The larger business of the state demands that its citizenry and its future leaders be educated efficiently at the lowest possible cost. If, by permitting students to operate stores they can earn their way through school in a community notoriously lacking in means by which young men of limited wealth may earn their way, the legislators are but living up to that larger purpose and obligation. Further, the proponents of the measure kill their case, and thoroughly break down their logic in trying to generalize and make a law for the entire state. There is no disputing the fact that Chapel Hill is the brilliant exception, and that what is fair and good to communities much larger is grossly unfair to Chapel Hill.

No student generation passes from the Hill without witnessing a rapid succession of failures of private enterprises, regardless of whether the University offers them any competition or not. Chapel Hill because it is entirely subservient to the University and its student population, which is never opulent and which fluctuates in size, is always a risky place in which to do business. Due to this condition of undependability—never knowing whether private services essential to the comfort of the community will be forthcoming—the University has had to take the initiative in providing such services.

Our understanding is that the University has never willingly sought to enter any of the activities under question, and has done so only to insure continuous and reasonable service. There was a time not so long ago when the question was not whether the University should own and operate its own light system but whether it should have lights at all. Graduates can remember when water had to be carried from the Old Well so that the occupants of the dormitories could bathe. The University was forced to enter the water business. Such has been the case all along the line, the University being forced to enter all kinds of businesses in order to safeguard the health, comfort, and continued conveniences of its community because of the failure, inefficiency, or lack of private enterprises.

Were the merchants who propose to take the livelihood of worthy self-help students who run the dormitory stores and student barber shops successful in their undertaking, we fail to see what benefit they would derive from the thirty or so paltry dollars which the twenty or so students earn on their merchandise. In the first place this is really extra money which would not otherwise be spent in the town at all. Divided among twenty merchants of the town this magnificent sum which the students earn would be equivalent to seven dollars and a half a week for the businesses mentioned, and it takes some mathematician to figure how seven dollars and a half per week is going to save failing private enterprises.

As for curtailing the work of the Book Exchange by disallowing them to sell cigarettes, quiz books, candies, soft-drinks, ink, typewriters or other things than mere books and athletic equipment, the services rendered by the Book Exchange are downright essential.

It is said that the work of the buildings' department would be practically wiped out with the exception of some few small tasks. The Daily Tar Heel has often complained of the low price the buildings' department pays self-help men, but the fact remains that it does provide the largest single source of work, and without it many men would have to leave school.

One reason why the University is able to hold its great men at ridiculously low salaries is due to the fact that on some few commodities such as coal the purchasing power of the University has devolved upon the households of these great professors, thus enabling their real wages to approach that offered them by other institutions.

The Tar Heel stands now and for all time for dormitory stores, student enterprises, and whatever mercantiling activities the University may deem necessary for the continued health, comfort, and welfare of its community, and calls upon the student body to educate itself on this issue and stand by ready to fight any curtailment of their conveniences, so that the University may continue to so regulate price levels that every son and daughter of the state may be privileged to obtain an education whether he be rich or whether he be poor.—Jack D.

Strange Comparisons

We read in recent foreign dispatches that Philip Snowden, Chancellor of the Exchequer for England's Labor government, has hinted that he will resign if members of his party continued to treat his work with suspicion. Washington reports tell us of President Hoover's statements which indicate that he will veto the bonus bill in order to throw the responsibility for the legislation back on the Congress. Here are strange cases.

The British Chancellor became world famous when he told conferees over the Reparation question England's position in regard to debt cancellation. Mr. Hoover has distinguished himself by his failure to control a Congress which is in name at least Republican. Throughout the entire debt reduction conference Mr. Snowden minced no words in stating his government's position. He spoke and was respected.

During the wranglings between the Congress and the White House Mr. Hoover has spoken, but strange to say he has been inclined to compromise with the Democratic-Insurgent's coalitions. These compromises have not heightened the President's prestige in the halls of Congress. While Mr. Snowden is not the head of his party and while Mr. Hoover does not appear to be the head of the Republican party, both are in positions to dictate to their parties. There is no compromise about the Chancellor; he makes his decisions and sticks to them. The great weakness of Mr. Hoover is that he allows a group of so-called Progressives or pseudo-Republicans to bully him into compromise. Whatever one's opinion of the legislation one cannot fail to notice the lack of force about Mr. Hoover's decision.

Frugality And Extravagance

Without being a pessimist, we may as well admit that these are times when the practice of frugality is particularly important. But before practicing frugality, we must first know what it is. An academic definition is probably easy enough. But practically, the trouble is that it's so much easier for us to see the other fellow's lack of frugality than to see our own. Somebody has defined extravagance as "the other fellow wasting his money on things in which we are not interested."

But when it comes to the question of frugality and extravagance, there's something that's more important than money, paradoxical as that may sound right now. And that thing's time.

We haven't the slightest intention of preaching, but while we're on the subject of frugality, it might not be a reproach to human intelligence if we bothered a little about this matter of wasting time. There's an old saying that if you want a thing done, get a busy man to do it.

This is by no means intended as a paean of praise for the drudge. Heaven forbid. In fact, if we don't waste any time while we work, we'll have plenty of time to play. But we won't have any time for either unless we're as careful in the use of each minute as we are in the use of each penny now that financial frugality has ceased to be a virtue because it has become a necessity.—V. A. D.

Abolish Examinations?

The trend of criticism of the times appears to be directing itself more and more against the age-worn institution of examinations as a means of determining the relative knowledge an undergraduate has acquired at the end of a term. With the tedious, wearying events of the last few weeks still fresh in mind, it might seem out of place to set down a few of the considerations which we believe excuse the examination system as it exists today, with all its psychological brutality and its inadequacies, as a standard of cultural measurement. When one considers the recent statement of the New York World that "examinations are a pretty sorry way to test knowledge and absurdly out of joint with the modern world," he is forced to admit that on the face of things the opinion might hold water.

On the other hand, there is not an ideal situation facing the educational world today. The hampering influence of the "four-year loafer" and misfit on his fellows is becoming generally recognized in educational circles. The need for a weeding-out process is essential if the universities and colleges are to be maintained as dispensaries of culture in the best meaning of the word. Herein then, lies the most cogent argument for the examination and here is a need, to eliminate the misfits from colleges, that no other agency has been invented to meet.

Aside from their value in this respect, examinations perform another function, in the urge they develop for the work by holding a threat over the head of the undergraduate. Even grades, however faulty and inexact they may be, provide a certain visible record of achievement, which serves as a kind of compensation for energy expended. It offers an opportunity of a sort for a man to check up on himself, to give direction to his efforts. Of course, too often examinations bring a rigid limiting influence that makes for fact-cramming but that type of test is here, at least, happily tending to disappear, giving rise to questions demanding more comprehensive, integrated knowledge. A third feature of examinations is the forced review of the course as a whole, which they necessitate. Again and again men will find that this retrospect gives unity and meaning to the subject that had been impossible to grasp during the weeks of more segmented study.

This is rather an apology for examinations than a defense of them. We appreciate the weaknesses of the system but we also recognize the needs that it meets, however inadequately. Under the present educational conditions these needs must be met, and until a better means is offered or until these conditions themselves are radically changed, we feel that examinations will remain.—Daily Princetonian.

Ann Arbor Liquor

Metropolitan papers have lapped up the report of the activities of the federal agents among the fraternity houses at the University of Michigan. Five fraternity houses have been padlocked until September 1, and the college has handed down an order placing them on "social probation" for the ensuing school year.

We can do nothing but sympathize with the 79 men who are to face legal action. We can do nothing but applaud the statement made by a level-headed Michigan congressman whose comment follows:

"From all appearances the raid was staged to get the fullest publicity, and I do not think the university or its student body should be subjected to the criticism that is bound to follow. All of the trouble could very easily have been corrected by the university authorities themselves and the harmful publicity avoided."

Seated at our distant editorial desk, it appears to us to have been another case of bungling on the part of the federal agents. Again this mountain of federal authority has labored and has brought forth an insignificant mouse. It is a commonly accepted fact that drinking is more or less prevalent on college campuses, especially at a time of house party festivities. Taken by and large, there is nothing horribly pernicious about it. We believe that.

We realize our happy position when we hark back to the situation of the minions stationed about the dormitories of recent date. We appreciate our position of being an institution not under the pursed-lip supervision of a state board of education. We appreciate more sincerely the quiet and well-balanced attitude that prevails among the administrative offices. And enthusiastically we wave our tattered banner that proclaims to the world our somewhat trite but none the less effective motto: "Nothing to excess."—Daily Dartmouth.

Feet Of Clay

Crash! And down comes another of America's greatest men. Or so Edgar Lee Masters would have him topple from a position he long has held as The Emancipator. For more than 65 years American people have hailed Abraham Lincoln as one of the greatest statesmen, presidents and leaders.

But now, six days before the 122nd birthday of that martyr of slavedom, comes a large and wordy volume by a one-book author, dragging Lincoln through the mire, calling him "a slick and crafty politician, cold, mannerless, unkept, at times neurotic and superstitious."

Masters' book, published yesterday, bears the trite title of "Lincoln, the Man," and portrays Lincoln as much the same sort of simple-minded citizen that Rupert Hughes showed George Washington to be. Hughes' efforts caused some what of a flurry several days ago, but has been heard from but little since.

"Hero worshippers," American people have been called, and perhaps hero worshippers they are, but what of that? Men who do things out of the ordinary deserve special mention for it. Even if Lincoln lived the way Masters claims, it makes little difference to the millions of people who will celebrate his birthday next Thursday. Lincoln is remembered for what he did ,not for the way he lived.

Masters claims that Lincoln could have prevented the Civil war merely by letting the southern states secede. "They would have been back in the Union within five years," he says. How peacefully they would have reentered is still a question, however.

Masters picked an ideal subject to arouse the interest of the American people, and he needed it to increase his popularity. After the "Spoon River Anthology" had lost a little of its early attractiveness, little, if anything was heard of its author. "Lincoln, the Man" will undoubtedly put him "back in the swim."

After "Babbitt" and "Main Street" had played out their term, Sinclair Lewis accused America of being too commercialistic to appreciate literature or any other "cultured" field. Rupert Hughes has been less popular since his book defaming Washington appeared.

Masters denies to Lincoln practically every virtue attributed to him by America, excepting his sense of humor. Masters' fate, of course, hangs in the balance, but it is a pretty safe prediction, that Americans will still be hero worshippers and that they will still observe February 12 as the birthday of one of their greatest men, long after Edgar Lee Masters and his book have died.—Oregon Barometer

FIREMEN DECIDE TO WEAR BADGES

The volunteer fire company of Chapel Hill met last Tuesday night at seven o'clock in the fire station to take up certain business concerning their coming year's work.

It was decided that a record of the attendance to fires should be kept throughout the year to show which firemen were constant. A board will be put up in the fire house, and after each fire the men will return and chalk their names on it. A permanent record will be taken from this and the men checked upon.

Another decision reached was that all firemen will be given a badge so that at fires they can be recognized. On several occasions when fires have broken out the house would be plundered by loafers while the firemen were working to extinguish the blaze. By wearing badges, they will know who to put out, and may prevent loss of household goods. These badges of identification will be ordered immediately.

"Fanny" Fisher, forward, made good a free throw in the last fifteen seconds of the Tar Baby-Baby Deacon encounter in Raleigh Thursday night to defeat the Wake Forest first year men 21-20 and clinch the Big Five basketball title. The win over Wake Forest gives the Tar Babies the title by the margin of a win over the Davidson Frosh who faced the Tar Babies in their only game of the year.

The Tar Babies will engage Presbyterian Junior College tonight in the Tin Can. The game is a preliminary to the varsity game with the V. M. I. Cadets, and will start at seven o'clock.

The Tar Babies led by a 14-11 count at half time and in the final period with three minutes to go held a 20-16 lead, but the Baby Deacons staged a rally to tie the score at twenty-all with thirty seconds to go. With fifteen seconds of play left Fisher made one of two foul shots good for the winning margin.

Weathers, yearling star forward, topped the individual scoring with eight points, while Jones, his teammate, gathered six to take runner-up honors.

TAR HEELS DOWN DEACON QUINTET

Dameron and Marpet Break Loose To Score Twelve Points Each.

The University basketball varsity defeated Wake Forest college Thursday night 45 to 25. The victors held a 24-14 margin at the end of the first half.

The defeat shoved the Deacons into undisputed occupancy of the cellar in final Big Five standings. The game was Carolina's last in the Big Five, while Wake Forest plays Davidson next week in the curtain event in the loop season.

Captain Marpet and Sandy Dameron caged a dozen points each to lead the Tar Heels, while Owens, guard led the losers with ten points.

Shifting as the desert sands is the Pacific coast basketball title. Last week the University of California was last ranking in the conference standing, now they lead; last week U. C. L. A. held the top rung of the ladder, now they occupy last place.

Pug Retner, erstwhile Northwestern University fullback, suffering from badly strained muscles in his arm, has waved aside the rubbing table and the medicine kit. Remedy: A quarter of a mile swim in the university pool each day. Results: Fullback Retner in perfect condition again.

Mentorial harangue prior to an important basketball game or during the half time period is a thing of the past at Purdue University, state Hoosier advisers. Before the Purdue-Indiana game, ambitious sign painters got busy in the Boilermaker dressing rooms, placarded the walls with "Run I. U. Ragged," "Drive Gets 'Em," "Revenge Is Sweet," purporting to heighten the teams morale.

The typically journalistic cognomen "elongated" seems to fit not one but all of the University of West Virginia basketball team. Ranging in height from slightly over six feet to six feet two, the Mountaineer cagers are one of the tallest quintets in the game today.

THREE MAJOR SPORT EVENTS ARE CARDED FOR TODAY'S ACTIVITIES

Game With V. M. I. Heads List of Sport Attractions; White Phantoms Hold One Win Over Cadet Five; Winter Grid Game Scheduled for Two O'clock.

With football, wrestling and basketball all crowded into one day's program, Carolina is prepared to entertain sport fans, regardless of the quantity or quality of their tastes, with a varied menu today.

The program will start at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon and will run almost continuously, with a brief intermission for supper, until ten o'clock that night. The separate events, by times, are: two o'clock, seventh winter practice football game in Kenan Stadium; four o'clock, Carolina-Davidson wrestling meet in the Tin Can; 7 o'clock, Carolina Frosh-Presbyterian Junior College basketball game in the Tin Can; 8:30 o'clock, Carolina-V. M. I. basketball game in the Tin Can.

In all probability the Tar Heel basketeers will draw the largest gallery, since this game is next to the last Southern Conference engagement scheduled, but the wrestling meet and football should get their share of the limelight, too.

The Carolina grapplers have everything to lose, since they have a clean record in the South and State, and Davidson's victory over State, in spite of their loss to Duke, makes them a worthy foe.

In Gorham and Captain Conway Davidson will present two worthy stars to match Captain Stallings and Ferguson, and these bouts should be the features.

The Tar Heel quint in an earlier game gave V. M. I. its worst licking of the year. Past performance, however, will probably mean little in this case, and the Tar Heels are looking for a tough Conference tilt. Carolina has its star center and leading scorer, Sandy Dameron, back in shape, and will be trying to the utmost to raise its Conference standing.

Carolina will probably start Edwards and Hines, forwards; Dameron, center; and Alexander and Captain Marpet, guards. V. M. I. will likely use M. and R. Brown, forwards; Mergenhagen, center; and Gregory and Grainger, guards.

Winter football netted another 7-6 game on Wednesday, and the strength is expected to be divided evenly to net another close game Saturday. Hard-hitting and spirited play has characterized the earlier contests, even if it has been too early to expect polished attacks, and another interesting game is expected.

Ringmen Tackle Penn State In Keystone State Tonight

Northern Pugs Claimants of 1930 Intercollegiate Title; Win Will Give Blue and White Clean Ring Slate for Season; Southern Conference March 2 Is Next Test.

Their Southern Conference schedule finished with a straight row of victories, the Tar Heel boxers left yesterday for State College, Pennsylvania, where tonight, in their last pre-tournament meet of the season, they will engage Penn State, eastern intercollegiate champions of last year and one of the strongest college teams in the country.

Carolina will use two relatively new men against the Lions—Cecil Jackson, 145 pounds, and Tom Parsons, 160. Jackson hasn't boxed since Carolina's first meet, in which he won a decision over his South Carolina foe. Parsons will be breaking in for the first time. Obie Davis, regular 160-pounder, who sustained a cut over the eye in the Duke meet, accompanied the squad but will in all probability be rested. Dail Holderness, regular 145-pounder, whom many fans thought deserved at least a draw at Duke, was left at home for a much-needed rest.

The Tar Heels will forfeit in the 115-pound class, and in the other weights they will use a quartet of undefeated stars—Martin Levinson, 125; Captain Noah Goodridge, 135; Platt Landis, 175; and John Warren, unlimited. Levinson, Goodridge and Warren have fought and won in every match this year. Landis only broke in against Duke but made a fine showing there.

Penn State will present a powerful team that is strongest in the first four weights. Dave Stoop is 115-pound champ. John McAndrews and Alfred Lewis are both stars in the 135 and 145 classes. Polark, Yacochonis and Skoberne, to round out the Penn team, are more or less newcomers, but all of the number are understood to be good.

Ruffin Eliminates Best House

Ruffin defeated the Best House yesterday afternoon 31-22 to eliminate the Best House and clinch the Dormitory championship for the Question Marks in the last games of the regular season. Royster, Ruffin center, led the individual scoring with fifteen points. Blake, forward, led the attack of the Best House with ten points. Dunlap, Best House center, and Riggs, Ruffin forward, played good for their respective teams, gathering six points each. Crouch, Best House guard, also gathered six points. Ruffin's win this afternoon eliminated the Best House who were previously undefeated in league play, leaving only the Question Marks undefeated. It was Ruffin's ninth win of the season against one defeat.

Ranson House 19-17

Ranson House closed the intramural basketball season yesterday afternoon with a win, defeating Aycock by the narrow margin of two points, to win 19-17. Davidson Wildcats To Engage Matmen Today

In Unlimited Division

FERGUSON - UNLIMITED

Fred Ferguson or Hampton, may get the unlimited call against Davidson this afternoon. Both lads have made the unlimited division one of the stalwart departments of the Blue and White mat team.

Contest Is Second Big Five Battle for Tar Heel Grapplers.

THREE DAVIDSON MEN OUT

Frosh Bouts With State Cancelled; Duke Yearlings Next Opponent.

The second Big Five opponent of the week in the form of the Davidson Wildcats will meet the Carolina wrestlers at four o'clock this afternoon. This will be Davidson's final test in the Big Five race, while the Tar Heels will have only the Duke Blue Devils left on its state schedule.

With three of Davidson's most dependable men on the injured list, the Tar Heels are doped to win, but Davidson expects to put a fairly strong team on the mat and plans to give Coach Quinlan's boys plenty of trouble. Carolina suffered no injuries in the State meet, and will be able to muster full strength for the Wildcats.

Vick, 118 pounder, Thad Brock in the 155 pound class, and Pat Boyle, in the unlimited division, are the three men who will probably not get a chance to work against the Tar Heels. Vick has been out of the line up recently with influenza and probably will not see action for some time, while Boyle is out for the rest of the season with a broken rib.

Davidson will offer star performers in the 125 and 165 pound classes. Gorham, who fights in the 125 pound class, has won over State and Duke, and has only a defeat at the hands of Captain Abramson of Washington and Lee to mar his record. Conway, in the 165 pound class, is undefeated this season and has done brilliant work in all of his engagements.

The Carolina line-up will consist of: Pete Usher in the 118 pound class, Captain Fred Stallings in the 126 pound class, Mayne Albright 135, Don Conklin 145, Harry Tsumas 155, Percy Idol 165, Marion Cowper 175, and either Fred Ferguson or Ken Hampton in the unlimited class. Ferguson has wrestled in four meets this year once in the 175 pound division, while Hampton has held down the unlimited berth in the last two meets. Hampton lost his first bout, but came back Tuesday night to gain a decisive victory over Gurneau of State. Regard-

FROSH RINGMEN MEET STATE IN CLOSING BOUTS

Victory Tonight Will Give Carolina Yearlings Claim to Big Five and Southern Titles.

THE LINEUP

Williams or Glover	115 lbs.
Raymer	125 lbs.
Langdon	135 lbs.
Allsbrook	145 lbs.
Guthrie	160 lbs.
Brown	175 lbs.
Pace	Unlimited

The undefeated Tar Baby boxers will travel to Raleigh tonight for their closing meet of the season, with the State frosh.

If the freshmen defeat the Techlets, they will be undisputed champions of the North State, and will also have a substantial claim to the Southern title, having already won four conference meets, Duke, V. M. I., Virginia, and V. P. I. In addition to these fights, the Oak Ridge Cadets are among the Tar Baby victims.

State will furnish the strongest opposition to the Carolina fighters that has been encountered all season. The Techlets defeated Duke handily on two occasions.

Cliff Glover, bantam, Bruce Langdon, lightweight, and Red Allsbrook, welter, have been showing up well this past week, and they can be counted on to give good performances against the State battlers.

This year's aggregation has amassed a record that hasn't been approached by any frosh outfit since 1926. Four men have been undefeated, rolling up a tremendous knock-out record.

Furches Raymer, feather, has scored three technical knockouts

There will be a short meeting of all students interested in the University Rifle Club Tuesday night at seven-thirty o'clock in the club office.

Hobbs Points Out Requirements For Next Registration

Announcement was made yesterday by Dean A. W. Hobbs of the School of Liberal Arts in regard to the regulations concerning registration in the spring quarter.

Dr. Hobbs calls attention to the University regulations in regard to eligibility for registration in the spring quarter. The rule is as follows: A freshman must pass two courses in the first two quarters, and five courses in the first three quarters. After the freshman year, a student must pass at least one course each quarter, four courses in two consecutive quarters and seven courses in three successive quarters. Deficiencies may be made up by correspondence or in summer school, in which case only credits exceeding one course credit so obtained shall count for readmission.

"By two successive quarters is meant the last two quarters of residence, and by three successive quarters is meant the last three quarters of residence."

All students, the dean said, should assure themselves that they have complied with the above ruling before registering for the spring quarter; if this is not done and the student registers without complying with the ruling the registration will have to be cancelled.

read by the coach to the team in the dressing rooms prior to each game.

That college presidents are not immune to the dangers of the ring was demonstrated at the University of California recently. President Sproul and Frank Kleeberger, head of the physical education department were occupying ring side seats together at the inter-class boxing matches when one of the participants was knocked from the ring, through the ropes, and onto the educator, felling both him and Kleeberger. Arising, Sproul remarked that the fistic art is more dangerous to spectators than boxers.

Noted Graduate of 1879 Is Buried in Franklinton

Funeral services for Dr. Richard B. Henderson, the oldest physician in Franklinton, who died Thursday at Duke hospital in Durham were held Friday afternoon at his home. He was one of the seven surviving alumni who graduated with the class of 1879, the first class which had been at the University four years after the civil war. This class is famous for its pairs of brothers. The Manning brothers and the Winston brothers, members of this same class, are still alive.

Dr. Henderson had been a practicing physician in Franklinton for many years and at the time of his death was seventy-three years of age. He had been ill for several weeks. Three sons, L. W. and A. E. Henderson of Franklinton and R. B. Henderson of Durham, survived him.

University Officials Point Out Usefulness Of Service Rooms

with a description of their origin and functions. The telephone service, of course, besides furnishing twenty jobs for needy students, is a necessity for the occupants of the dormitory. In return for this service, the two students in charge of the service room receive their room rent.

One of the most important aids rendered to students is the laundry service. The former system of distributing laundry was notoriously inefficient. Thefts of entire laundry returns was so frequent that the laundry department received constant complaints. Under the present well organized system of carefully supervised service rooms, however, there is almost perfect protection against loss.

Another activity of these rooms is that of acting as agents for pressing clubs. Thus a convenient method is furnished of caring for clothes as well as protection against loss. Shoe repair service, in which these rooms act as relay men for the shoe repair shops, is another function.

The store feature, in which candies, milk, and daily necessities are sold, is one of the least of those enumerated. It is almost wholly devoted to the convenience of the residents of the dormitory. As to the income from this feature, a daily report of all sales and transactions is handed over to the buildings' department. According to estimates, figures show that if the total earnings of all the service rooms were divided between the twenty business houses of Chapel Hill it would add to each of these houses only thirty dollars a month. Thus the purely mercantile side of these ventures is almost neglible.

The service rooms, beside caring for nearly all the needs of dormitory residents, give steady work to twenty-six students who would otherwise have to leave school.

C. T. Woollen made a statement after Mr. Comer's talk about the other University activities which would be affected by the passage of this bill. J. A. Williams made a statement as to the wishes and the attitude of the dormitory clubs which are comprised of student residents.

In summary, the committee from the University reported to the senate that the abolition of these service rooms would affect vitally the ability of this institution to carry out its high principles by depriving some students of the means to get their education and that the complaining merchants would be very slightly benefited.

Sigma Zeta Wins Seventh

Led by Feit, star forward with seventeen points, the Sigma Zeta's gained the right to enter the play-offs for the fraternity title with the Phi Gam's, Phi Delt's, and K. A.'s, by defeating the Sigma Ep's 28-23. The game was close throughout, the score at the halfway mark being 10-7. In the last quarter the Sigma Zeta's opened up to pull away from the Sigma Ep's and clinch the victory. Whitley, with ten points, and Blackwood, with seven were best for the losers. It was the seventh win of the season for the Sigma Zeta's.

Four Reporters Receive Weekly Theatre Passes

The reporters E. Spruill, Mary Buie, W. R. Woerner, and Phil Alston were awarded free passes to the Carolina Theatre for their work last week on the Daily Tar Heel.

The four passes given each week are not given for the quantity of work alone, for several reporters handed in more copy than those above, but also in consideration of the quality of the work and the attitude of the reporters.

Vernon Guthrie, middleweight, one of the Big Four, has only participated in three bouts but has won two of them by knock-outs.

Peyton Brown, lightheavy, is the heavy hitter of the outfit. In his five fights to date, Peyton hasn't let his opponent go the distance, most of his fights ending in the first or second rounds.

Lacey Pace, stocky heavy, has in his four bouts, scored two knock-outs, one a clean one, while the other was stopped when his opponent's seconds threw in the towel.

In the early days of the University, before the advent of the exchange, private book stores which served the campus were so inefficient that students would sometimes have to wait twenty or thirty days after their classes had started before they would have books to work with.

Since the time of its incorporation with the U. C. S. P., the Book Exchange has served the campus well in providing the students with books, athletic equipment ,candy, cakes, paper, notebooks, inks, pencils, pens, and other sundry commodities, retailing these articles at a price as close to the cost price as is possible after the overhead expenditures are paid.

LATE DEAN SEES DREAM OF YOUTH FULLY REALIZED

Dr. Howell Builds up Great School During Thirty-Three Years of Service.

By Mary Buie

Thirty-three years ago a prosperous retail druggist in Rocky Mount, just three years out of college, pulled up stakes and came to Chapel Hill. Edwin A. Alderman, then president of the University, had asked the young man to establish a school of pharmacy, a project which was a big gamble at best.

The University had set up pharmacy schools on two previous occasions, and both had been short-lived. One lasted from 1880 to 1886, was revived in 1889 and again had a short career.

Last week the man who dared to leave a lucrative business to accept a challenge that promised but small reward was buried, but the memory of him and his great contributions to pharmacy will never perish.

Edward Vernon Howell came to Chapel Hill in 1897 to begin his work with a salary of twenty-five dollars a month plus a small commission on his students' tuition, and with meagre quarters and a small sum for equipment. Had he been a timorous or superstitious youth or lacking in energy, this story would never have been written. But it happens that he wasn't.

From Family of Educators

Vernon Howell was endowed with an excellent background. He came from a long line of educators, the first of which was David Royster, a school teacher who came to North Carolina before the Revolution. Besides Edward Vernon Howell, there were four other direct descendants of David Royster who were educators connected with the University; Percy Hole Royster, who was assistant in physics at the University; James Finch Royster, who was dean of the graduate school; Wilbur High Royster, instructor in Latin and

JOHNNY HAMP TO PLAY FOR JUNIOR AND SENIOR BALL

At the Junior smoker in Swain hall Wednesday evening, dance leaders for the coming Junior Prom were elected. Theron Brown, president of the class, was unanimously chosen dance leader and John Phil Coopper and John Stallings were elected assistants.

After refreshments were served, Dr. Collier Cobb, head of the University Geology department, addressed the class telling them of the great service rendered by the universities of the country today, and especially this University in particular.

When Dr. Cobb had finished his talk, John Phil Cooper gave the report of the dance committee. The committee has decided to engage Johnny Hamp and his "Kentucky Serenaders" to play for the Prom April 24, which is to take place in the Tin Can. Hamp and his orchestra, which is one of the first ten best orchestras in the country, will also play for the Senior Ball which is to be given the night following the Junior Prom. Only members of the Junior and Senior classes will be permitted to attend the dances, which will be known as the Junior-Senior Ball.

DUTCH PROFESSOR TO ADDRESS CLUB

"Farming in Holland" Is Subject Of Talk Before N. C. Club Tomorrow.

Dr. A. N. J. den Hollander, international traveling scholarship fellow of the Rockefeller Foundation, will speak before the North Carolina Club tomorrow night at its regular semi-monthly meeting. The subject of Dr. Hollander's address will be "Small Scale Farming in Holland." The speaker intends to contrast and compare agriculture as practised in Holland and the Netherlands with agriculture as conducted in North Carolina.

Dr. Hollander is making a study of the poor whites in the South and while he is in this country is making the University his headquarters, because of the collection of data and literature dealing with Southern social-economic conditions. Dr. Hollander has been given quarters in the rural social-economics department whose library serves as his workshop.

During the last few months Dr. Hollander has traveled extensively over the state and the South collecting materials and observing at close range the nature of our agriculture, especially the economic and social status of that part of our society known as the poor whites.

The club meets at 7:30 o'clock in the library room of the rural social economics department.

PROHIBITION OFFICERS TO RAID FRATERNITIES?

The local police department declined to issue a statement concerning the rumor that three federal prohibition officers were in Chapel Hill yesterday for the purpose of raiding fraternity houses on the campus.

Information from authentic sources received at the Daily Tar Heel offices indicated that there were three of these officers in Chapel Hill. The action which may be taken concerning the violation of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act by fraternities on the campus is thought to have been suggested by the recent raids made on five fraternity houses at the University of Michigan last week, which resulted in the arrest of 75 men.

Town Is Invaded By Rug Vendors

By Otto S. Steinreich

Pedestrians and shoppers were mildly surprised yesterday forenoon to see three men of obvious foreign extract hawking Arabian prayer mats, Italian tapestries, and Persian rugs on Franklin Street. When one of the facetious minded Tar Heels innocently remarked that he thought the merchandise was imported from New York City, the foreign gentleman hastily remonstrated that their goods were absolutely genuine, "Hey boy, ya kin even smell the ocean on it."

In the beginning, the townspeople and students totally disregarded the oddities, believing them to be fraternity pledges being initiated. But after listening to the accent for a few moments and noticing the gestures so characteristic that they would defy emulation by better actors than pledges, the onlookers became a bit more interested in the peddlers' wares.

The sales talk of the hawkers consisted of a curious jumble which when rearranged and pondered over revealed itself to be a plea for the curious persons looking on, to purchase some of the imported articles.

TRABUE ATTENDS COUNCIL MEETING

Education Professor To Go To Detroit After Washington Meeting.

Dr. M. R. Trabue, of the education faculty left Thursday afternoon for Washington, D. C. where he attended a committee meeting at the offices of the American Council on Education.

The committee is attempting to advise one of the large research foundations regarding problems for investigation in the field of emotional measurement. This problem is only one of a considerable number which the American Council on Education is recommending for the financial support of the foundation.

Dr. Trabue will go from Washington to Detroit where the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association is holding its annual convention next week.

A great many other national organizations hold their annual meetings at about the same time as this convention, and Dr. Trabue will attend sessions of the National Society for the Study of Education, the Progressive Education Association, and the American Educational Research Association, of which last named body he was president in 1925. Several other members of the University Education faculty will attend the meetings next week.

The Bill To Kill Dorm Stores

A bill to be entitled:

"An act to prohibit the use or lease of any property of any educational institution of the state for the conduct of a mercantile business."

The General Assembly of North Carolina do enact:

Section 1. That the boards of trustees or other governing authorities of the various educational institutions of the State be, and they are hereby, forbidden, directly or by or through any of their agents or representatives, to engage in any mercantile business or the sale of any goods, wares or merchandise, or to permit the operation of dormitory stores or of other stores for a mercantile business or sale of goods, wares and merchandise upon any property belonging to such educational institutions, or on any other property or to lease any of the property of such educational institutions for such purpose; Provided, that this restriction shall not apply to the sale of books and athletic supplies by, or under the control or supervision of, such educational institutions.

Section 2. This act shall be in force and effect from and after its ratification.

Guilford Choir Will Sing This Afternoon

The Guilford College choir will sing at the music auditorium this afternoon at four forty-five under the direction of Max Noah. This concert is in exchange with the University glee club, which will sing at Guilford next Saturday night.

The director, Max Noah, is a graduate of the Westminster Choir school in New York. The director of the Westmister choir John F. Williamston, last week came down to Guilford and rehearsed the choir, giving it a professional criticism. He expressed himself as being much impressed by its work.

The program this afternoon will consist of selections from the Latin and Russian sacred songs, and from the English chorals. All of the singing is done without accompaniment of any kind.

TAYLOR SOCIETY TO HEAR COOKE ON MANAGEMENT

Industrial Engineer Will Address Organization on Union Management Subject.

Morris L. Cooke, of Philadelphia regarded as one of the most prominent industrial engineers in the world, will lecture in Bingham hall at eight o'clock Wednesday night, on the subject of "The Experience of America with Union-Management Cooperation."

Mr. Cooke, who is being secured through the cooperation of the local branch of the Taylor Engineering Society, of which he is a former president is said to represent neither the laborers' nor the employer's point of view, but that of the practical economist and management engineer. He has had direct experience in initiating union-management cooperation in cotton mills, and he is recognized as an authority on the subject.

Mr. Cooke's lecture is one of a series on matters of interest in the field of economics and industrial problems, which the department of economics and commerce is sponsoring. Others who have lectured here in this series include Bernard Cone and Henry P. Kendall, mill owners of North Carolina, and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Lewis '91 To Direct World Fair Booth

J. Volney Lewis, an alumnus of the University, will direct the department of geology and mining at the World's Fair, which is to take place in Chicago in 1933.

Lewis graduated from the University with the class of 1891 with the degree of B. S. He was a Phi Beta Kappa student, and for a while after he graduated was an instructor here. Since then, he has taught at Clemson college and at Rutgers University, Brunswich, N. J.

EXTENSION PROFESSORS GO TO DETROIT MEETING

R. M. Grumman, director of the University extension division; George Howard, of Tarboro, and Roy W. Morrison and Leroy Jackson, of Asheville, left yesterday by motor for Detroit, to attend the meeting of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association.

DEBATING SQUAD PLANS FOR TOURS NEARLY COMPLETE

Those Who Will Make Trips Are To Be Chosen Thursday.

Active preparations for Carolina's heaviest debate schedule in history will reach a climax next Thursday night with tryouts for the three long trips and twelve home meets, according to announcements made at the regular squad meeting last week.

It is expected that approximately fifteen men will tryout for the trips to Texas, Boston, and Northwestern. The tryouts will be on two questions: free trade and unemployment insurance. For the free trade question a complete brief of arguments on both sides of the question must be submitted. For the unemployment insurance question the tryouts will be oral, but a written statement of the issues and an evaluation of them showing the relative importance of each must be submitted to the judges.

The first home debate will be with the University of Georgia, March 3rd. The subject will be free trade. The men who met State College on the same question last quarter will probably constitute the team for this meet. The second home contest will be with Asbury college, March 10th.

Teams to represent the University in the meets with Georgia Tech, Texas and Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Boston and New York University; Purdue, Northwestern and Cincinnati, will be chosen Thursday night. As a result of these tryouts the debaters will be ranked in order of descending proficiency. This is the same method used in ranking tennis players. Those at the top of the list will be allowed to chose the trip they prefer to make.

The trip to Texas which includes Tech and Tennessee, and the trip to Boston which includes N. Y. U. and Penn. will be taken during the spring holidays. The trip to Northwestern on which Purdue and Cincinnati will also be debated will be about April 15th. The contest with Cincinnati will be broadcast over WLW. The meet with N. Y. U. will also be broadcast. A letter from New York announces that several stations are competing for the right to broadcast the debate there and that Carolina may be asked to debate both afternoon and night so that more than one station may be accomodated.

The Chapel Hill Movie Guild will give their seventh charity presentation this afternoon, beginning at 2:30 o'clock and running twice. "Skinner Steps Out" is the name of the show, starring Glenn Tryon; there will also be shown a travelogue and a cartoon comedy. Proceeds will go to the Kiwanis Club, for the purpose of establishing a dental clinic in the Carrboro school. Wives of the Kiwanis club members, assisted by local high school girls, are selling Guild tickets for the production.

Next Sunday the Movie Guild will present "Ten Days That Shook the World," a picture about the Soviet Republic.

A Long and Tough Fight

The legislative committee considering the appropriation bill, a part of which is one of tremendous importance to the University, is preparing rapidly to submit its recommendations to the legislature. As we all know the University's budget was set at $875,000, and some seem to think that the fight to save Carolina from the "one building" university is over. They are wrong. Mere approval by the committee does not necessarily mean that the fight has begun properly.

Before we may consider our work over the appropriation must be considered again by the committee, for the University's part is only an item in the appropriation measure. Then the bill must face the "economy- at-any-cost legislators on the floors of the two houses. That is where the real fight will be staged.

We made a great beginning when President Graham presented his appeal to the committee. If the entire legislature had heard that appeal then the University might rest easier. As it is we still face the greatest fight of all. The action of the committee should only cause us to feel that the time for greater effort is at hand. To drive home the full force of Mr. Graham's speech every student should utilize every opportunity to make it known all over North Carolina. No one interested in the cause of education in this state should be unfamiliar with that appeal. It is not merely an appeal for the University; it is an appeal for all education.

Mr. Graham laid down the barrage. Now let the University go over the top under its protection.

United We Stand

The student body has wholeheartedly taken its stand against any effort on the part of members of the state assembly to cut the revenue which the University must live on for the next two years. This action, it is true, is taken by persons prejudiced in favor of the University. That is not the idealistic outcome of the affair, but rather that wholeheartedly, every faction has come to the support of their Alma Mater, putting aside for the common weal all the petty and the inconsequential.

It is easy to say that a thirty-four percent cut of what is considered barely essential to hold the University to the very high standard which it has attained is wrong, but there are many universities and colleges in the country whose sons and daughters do not fight like the followers of Colonel William R. Davie do.

A united student body of one attitude, disposed to work at all times for the good of the institution rather than their separate gain, the glory of the state, and the progress of the nation is the end which all student generations should work toward. It is the ideal which should most concern the student body of the University of North Carolina today.

United we stand for intellectual and mental freedom, for efficient and honest management of our enterprises, and the further advancement of our already illustrious University; or divided we are powerless.—Jack D.

Legislative vs. Executive

The senate has chosen John W. Davis to represent it in its clash with President Hoover over the right of Chairman Smith to his office as chairman of the power commission. The dispute arose over the refusal of the senate to confirm Smith's nomination. Attorney-General Mitchell advised the president that the action of the senate was not legal and therefore President Hoover refuses to admit the legality of the rejection.

These clashes between the different departments of the government are always interesting because of the possibility of some new interpretation of some clause of the constitution. According to the constitution the president has the power to make appointments by and with the advice and consent of the senate. However the senate has practically lost the power of advising the president as to appointments. The makers of the constitution were extremely careful to limit the president's power, but since the adoption of the constitution the president's powers have been steadily increased through decisions of the Supreme Court and custom. Now that there is a new clash between the legislative and executive departments there is a possibility of a decision in favor of the senate thus checking the continual expansion of the president's powers.—J. C. S.

We Are Men!

There is an increasing number of learned persons, whose opinions are universally respected whether they be agreed with or not, who have come to the decision that this "wild," "inconsiderate," "selfish," and "radical" younger generation is after all the antithesis of these adjectives, and even more, that the notorious younger generation is superior in experience and intellectual attainments to the one which we shall very shortly succeed.

It is embarrassing to be continually harassed by prep school rules dictating the manner of life, and the methods of study which it is assumed college "boys" must follow. Having come from more or less rigid homes (a condition we do not regret) having been through four years of high and prep school discipline and reached a mental and physical age where we have demonstrated that we are perfectly capable of taking care of ourselves, we are no longer boys to be pampered, to be protected, or to be disciplined —We Are Men!

Being men, we manage our activities, manage or mismanage our money, organize movements, and otherwise conduct ourselves in a fashion identical to that of the generation which now holds forth. We are told to "wait until we get out in life." This is life. And we firmly believe that the younger generation is doing a good job of wrestling with life, and that such disciplinary measures as the faculty's movement to force attendance upon classes ignores the fact that we are men.—Jack D.

OPEN FORUM

As It Should Have Read

Editor The Daily Tar Heel:

The executive committee of the University faculty on Wednesday, February 18, 1931 suspended a freshman from the University for the remainder of the school year for a conviction, over his denial, of a violation of the honor system in connection with a quiz in one of his courses.

What Price Prohibition!

Editor The Daily Tar Heel:

Saturday's issue of the Daily Tar Heel contained a notice stating that the government of Chapel Hill is considering inviting the federal prohibition agents to conduct a raid on the fraternity houses and dormitories of this campus. Thank you, Mr. Editor, for your timely warning. It may save us future embarrassment.

If these raids must be conducted why not have them raid all of the Universities? Yes, by all means, let them blacken the names of all our universities, and broadcast it to the world. America! the greatest nation on earth, with her universities filled with "sots" young and old. I ask you, gentlemen is that what we are? If the federal officers were to raid the rooms of the present state legislators wonder what they would find? Yes, I wonder!

Students and faculty: are we of such a debased nature that we must be humiliated by such an action on the part of the local authorities? Shall we stand by and see our ideals blasted, our names blackened, and our University disgraced? Are we going to stand idle and see our greatest student institutions padlocked as they were at the University of Michigan? No, a thousand times no! Where are the Carolina Gentlemen who are so famous for their noble conduct? In the gutter? No! Far from it. They are here, and ready to defend our Alma Mater. We are men, not children, and we act as such. In other words, gentlemen, are we men or are we babies?

Smallest Daily

The smallest daily newspaper in the world is the Tryon, North Carolina, Daily Bulletin, which has a page size of about five by eight inches, a circulation of 700, and an advertising rate of four dollars and half per page, according to the latest issue of Colliers. In the same publication it is stated, also, that eighty-one per cent of all the cigarettes made in America are produced in the states of North Carolina and Virginia.

At The Carolina

Monday at the theatre sees Dorothy Mackaill back on the screen with her latest release, "Once A Sinner." In this photoplay the blonde star portrays a woman with a past who seeks to forget her indiscretions in the happiness of marriage, a plan which fails because of her husband's jealousy and lack of forgiveness. Joel McCrea, remembered for his work in Will Roger's "Lightnin,'" takes the role of the husband who makes a reconciliation impossible. Others leading the cast are Ilka Chase and Sally Blane.

Lawrence Tibbet appears Tuesday in his third screen feature, "The Southerner." Tibbet, since his desertion of the concert stage for Hollywood, has become celebrated for his talkies. Producers claim his personality and the wonderful voice, which won him plaudits galore from opera enthusiasts, both appear with their charm unimpaired before the vitaphone film, as the success of his past productions. "The Rogue Song" and "New Moon," has demonstrated. In "The Southerner," the baritone plays the part of a scion of an aristocratic Southern family who breaks home ties to become a hobo, and then decides to return The cast includes Esther Ralston and Cliff Edwards.

The attraction Wednesday, "The Devil To Pay," starring Ronald Colman, represents a screen story from the pen of Frederick Lonsdale, known for his stage successes, of which one in particular, "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," was widely successful as a film. This play is done in the characteristic manner of the playwright.

Buster Keaton comes to the theatre Thursday in "Parlor, Bedroom, and Bath," the most recent release of the prolific comedies the poker-faced Mr. Keaton has to his credit.

The far-famed Swedish star, Greta Garbo, takes the leading role in Friday's attraction, "Inspiration." This film was directed by Clarence Brown, who has directed most of the films produced with this leading lady and contains some novel shots. A distinctly unusual one is a scene in which crystal glasses are placed to form a glistening pyramid with the smaller ones ranging toward the top. Into the smallest Lewis Stone begins pouring champagne and continues to do so, forming a cascade of the beverage, until all the glasses have been filled.

"The Scandal Sheet" Saturday brings George Bancroft as a star, this time playing the lead in a newspaper story in which his characterization is that of a ruthless, domineering journalist who tries to print all the news, regardless of whom it affects, and holding to this tenet works his own downfall when his wife elopes and the story gets in the papers. Kay Francis and Clive Brook are chief supporting players.

Hayes Speaks To New Spanish Club

The Students' Spanish club met Friday evening in the Y. M. C. A. The chief speaker on the program was Francis C. Hayes of the romance language department, who spoke about some interesting experiences that he had while in Spain.

This club was organized three weeks ago for the Spanish students of the University. Much interest is being shown in its activities. Membership in the club is by invitation.

New York Publisher Is To Issue Anthology Of American College Verse

Due to the fact that American college and university poetry has grown rapidly in the last few years, Henry Harrison, the New York publisher, will issue an anthology to be called American College Verse. All students who write poetry should communicate with this publishing house, so that they may receive full details. Mr. Harrison himself will edit this anthology. Prizes of $25, $15, and $10 are to be awarded the authors of the three best poems sent in, the poems to be judged by a distinguished board of judges. In writing for information students should mention the name of their college and address Henry Harrison, Publisher, 27 East 7th Street, New York.

Week's Study Period To Precede Holyoke Spring Examinations

A faculty ruling at Mount Holyoke College in Mount Holyoke, Mass., enacted the first week of the new semester, introduces a far reaching change in the plan of June examinations as an experiment this year.

The innovation will require seniors to take only three finals in place of the normal five, the two omitted being courses in their major departments. For the entire college there will be a reading period of one week preceding examinations.

The purpose of the new plan is to give seniors a week to prepare for the general examinations in their major departments, and underclassmen to do suggested supplementary reading.

Three Mat And Cage Events Remain Before Tournaments

Sewanee Is Last Foe For White Phantoms; Wrestlers Meet Duke and V. M. I.

BOXERS RANK FAVORITES

Duke Remains As Only Stumbling Block Toward State Wrestling Title.

Tourney-time rolls around this week, but not before the Tar Heel basketball and wrestling teams have three severe tests here at home.

The Tar Heel quint meets Sewanee, another Conference foe, in the Tin Can here Tuesday night at 8:30 o'clock, then after a day of rest leaves for the Southern Tourney, which starts in Atlanta on Friday.

The Tar Heel wrestlers meet Duke's varsity and freshmen teams here Tuesday, then engage V. M. I.'s varsity and freshmen here Saturday night, for the Conference wrestling tourney doesn't come until the following week.

The wrestling meet Tuesday night will be Carolina's second State title clash with Duke this winter.

Carolina's boxers wound up their season's dual meets with the Penn State meet last night, and will have next week to get ready for the Southern Tournament, which starts at Charlottesville, Virginia, Friday.

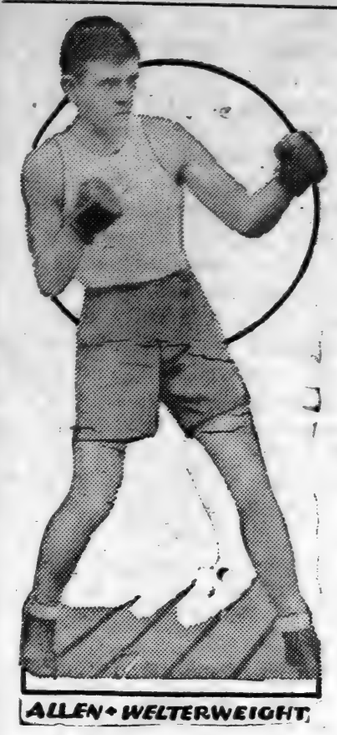
The Tar Heel boxers should rank with the tourney favorites on the basis of their having won all Conference meets, while downing such teams as South Carolina, V. M. I., V. P. I., Virginia and Duke.

The rating of the wrestlers will depend on their showing in the feature meets carded with Duke and V. M. I. for this week. Duke has beaten both State and Davidson and will have to be passed if Carolina is to gain the state title. V. M. I., conquerors of Duke and unbeaten in the South for three years, will be even tougher.

Carolina has a victory over Princeton, a clean Southern slate, and one of the strongest teams in years, composed of Usher, 115 pounds, Captain Stallings, 125; Albright, 135: Conklin, 145; Tsumas, 155; Idol 165; Cowper, 175; and Ferguson or Hampton, unlimited.

Hopkins Faculty Attacks Intercollegiate Football

Forty members of the faculty of Johns Hopkins university have gone on record as favoring the discontinuance of intercollegiate football at that university. A resolution urging the abolition of the sport was adopted unanimously at the annual dinner of the Baltimore chapter of the American Association of University Professors.



Although the meeting discussed the future of athletics at the university at some length, the academic policy and the future educational methods, such as the abolition of the point-credit system were also considered.

Dean Edward Wilbur Berry of the college of arts and science at Johns Hopkins spoke of the future of the college and in his discussion mentioned the athletic policy. It was at this time that a professor urged the adoption of a resolution seeking the discontinuance of all intercollegiate athletics and his idea was a substitution of a system of intramural sports.

The faculty decided to word the resolution so that it would include only football and in this way create an opening wedge in the athletic policy that ultimately would result in the abolishment of all intercollegiate activity.

ALLEN • WELTERWEIGHT

Archie Allen has again proven his worth as a leader . . . this time as a coach. The former welterweight champion has led the freshman boxers through an undefeated season, which netted them a state title and a Southern title. Allen was captain of the 1930 Tar Heel ring men and was undefeated until the final round of the southern tournament, where he was defeated by Captain Bob Rainey of Virginia. Allen won the championship in 1929.

BASEBALL DRILL IS INAUGURATED

Thirty-five Men Report for Practice Session; Whitehead Only Regular Infielder Back.

Baseball practice got underway officially at Carolina Friday. A squad of 35 reported, although several men will be tied up with other sports for a few days yet.

Bunn Hearn, old-timer of the pro circuits, is in camp and will help for a week or so with the battery candidates, Coach Jim Ashmore being still engaged with basketball.

The Tar Heels lost heavily in pitchers and infielders last year, everybody in the infield, in fact, except Captain Burgess Whitehead, star shortstop. There is much material this year, but most of it is green, and Coach Ashmore will be hard put to develop a winning team.

Pitching candidates include Edwards, Shields, Hinton and Auman from last year's squad; Griffith, Scarboro, Chandler and Adkins, up from the 1930 frosh; and Meredith.

Aspirants for the catching post are Potter and Johnson from last year's squad, and Pattisol, Peacock and Connor from the frosh.

Captain Whitehead is the only regular infielder back, although Johnson and Leonard were members of the 1930 squad. Wyrick, a reserve and football man, and Dixon, Ferebee and McCaskill, all sophs, are the other leading candidates.

Outfielders from last year's squad include Blythe, McKinney, Davis, House, Paxton and Crouch. Hornaday is another candidate, and Whitehead, Daniels and Croom are up from the frosh.

Senator Norris proposes to abolish the electoral college. Might as well. Nobody ever hears anything about its team. —Winston-Salem Journal

SPRING ATHLETIC CARNIVAL PLANS SHAPING RAPIDLY

Southern Conference Indoor Games, Monogram - Rookie Grid Game, Athletic Banquet, To Feature Program.

Plans are rapidly shaping up for the University spring Athletic Carnival, which is to be held March 7.

Featuring the program will be the second annual Southern Conference Indoor Games and the annual Monogram-Rookie practice football game, a contest that marks the end of winter gridiron activities.

The football game will get under way at 2 o'clock; the indoor track meet at 4 o'clock. At 6 o'clock there will be a banquet for the athletic officials, and sports writers, and at 6:45 the indoor games will be resumed. It promises to be a day that will provide a rare menu for sport lovers.

Under the guidance of Athletic Director R. A. Fetzer the Southern Indoor games proved a great success last year. Besides the freshman, high school and prep school racers, ten Conference institutions sent the cream of the South's trackmen, and the night exhibition held a capacity crowd in the Tin Can until the final relay race settled the meet and gave Washington and Lee a 29-27 victory over Carolina.

Generous approval and the big reception accorded the South's first indoor track championships made the Conference decide to hold another. The University is again to open its doors and extend the facilities of the Tin Can, the best site for an indoor meet in the South, with the program so broadened that the meet is expected to be much better even than that of last year.

BOB BETTS

V. M. I., matchampions of the Southern Conference last year, will be hard put to it in order to retain their crown at the coming wrestling tournament at Lexington, Virginia, March 6 and 7. Coach Matheson of Washington and Lee has one of the strongest wrestling teams that the South has seen recently. The Generals have held such teams as Army and Davidson scoreless; they have yet to be defeated. Ranking right up with W. and L. are V. M. I. and North Carolina. The Tar Heels have won all of their meets with the exception of the one with Navy. Incidentally Navy has not lost a dual meet during the past three or four years. The Lexington Cadets have not dropped any meets in the Southern Conference this season. There are wrestling teams at V. P. I., Duke, N. C. State, V. M. I., Washington and Lee, and North Carolina this year, and all of them will probably be represented with full squads at the Lexington gathering.

Captain Eason of N. C. State has not lost a match this season and is the outstanding contender for the 115 pound division championship. Gamble, Duke, Evans, W. and L., and Price, V. P. I. are some of the other contenders in this weight. Graves, V. P. I., was champion in this weight last year.

In the 125 pound weight there are three stars battling for the same crown. Graves, champion of the 115 pound division last year, is making a strong bid for honors in this division this season. Captain "Shorty" Stallings of Carolina is determined to win the 125 pound championship. Stallings is one of the best

Matmen Swamp Davidson By 27-5 In Second Big Five Tilt

Three of Seven Matches Won Gained By Falls; Cowan Only Wildcat Victor.

ALBRIGHT WINS FOURTH

Two of Three Wildcat Injured Wrestlers Perform; Fifth Victory for Conklin.

The Tar Heel matmen swamped the Davidson Wildcats by a score of 27-5 to win their second Big Five match in the Tin Can yesterday. Two of the Wildcats' three injured wrestlers performed. Vick, 118 pounder, who has been out of the line-up recently with an attack of influenza, was the only Davidson regular out of the line-up. The varsity won seven of the eight matches, three by falls. The falls were contributed by Mayne Albright, 135 pound class, Conklin, in the 145 pound class, and Cowper, 175. Captain Stallings, 125 pound division, Tsumas, 155 pound, and Hampton, unlimited, won on decisions.

Cowan, substituting for Vick in the 118 pound class, won the Wildcats only match, winning by fall, after a hard fight by Usher. Usher put up a good fight, Cowan's fall coming after nine minutes and eleven seconds.

Although failing to win his match by fall Tsumas won decisively over Thad Brock, Davidson football star, with a time advantage of eight minutes and fifty-five seconds. On several occasions Tsumas almost pinned his opponents shoulders to the mat, but on each occasion Brock managed to wiggle up.

Don Conklin added another victim to his list by winning by fall over Ashcraft of Davidson in the 145 pound class, in eight minutes and fifty-five seconds. He has won five matches this year, three by decisions and two by falls, and has yet to be defeated this season.

Ken Hampton, appearing in his third varsity match this year in the unlimited class, looked good in winning over Doyle of Davidson. His time advantage was eight minutes and four seconds.

All three falls registered by the Tar Heel matmen were accomplished in less than fifteen minutes. Cowper led the way throwing his man in one minute and thirty-five seconds. Yesterday's victory was the fourth of the season for Mayne Albright; each has been by the fall route.

115 pound class—Cowan, Davidson, won over Usher, Carolina, by fall in 9:11.

125 pound class—Captain Stallings, Carolina, won over Gorham, Davidson, with a time advantage of 5:35.

135 pound class—Albright, Carolina, won over Tyack, Davidson, by fall in 3:44.

145 pound class—Conklin, Carolina, won over Ashcraft, Davidson, by fall in 8:55.

155 pound class—Tsumas, Carolina, won over Brock, Davidson, with a time advantage of 8:55.

165 pound class—Idol, Carolina, won over Captain Conway, Davidson, with a time advantage of 8:35.

175 pound class—Cowper, Carolina, won over McFadden, Davidson, by fall in 1:35.

Unlimited class—Hampton, Carolina, won over Doyle, Davidson, with a time advantage of 8:04.

AYCOCK, PHI GAMS REMAIN TIED FOR FENCING HONORS

Only two matches were run off in the second week of intramural fencing and each of these games saw Zeta Psi lose by a score of 5-4. Aycock was the winner Tuesday, while the Phi Gams won by the same score Thursday when Jim Hubbard handed Bill Cooper, Zeta Psi captain, his first defeat of the season in the final bout of the afternoon.

Zeta Psi's two reverses dropped them from a tie for first into third place. Aycock and Phi Gamma Delta, in winning from Zeta Psi, turned in their second victories of the season and remained in a tie for first place with two victories and no defeats. None of the other teams in the league saw action and remained on the bottom of the league standing with one loss and no wins.

All but one of the five men who were undefeated at the end of the first week of play met with defeat during last week's play and only Urband of Aycock is left with a perfect record. Urband did not get in the match when Aycock defeated Zeta Psi and still has only two wins. After winning four bouts in the first two matches of the season, Bill Cooper of Zeta Psi lost to Jim Hubbard of the Phi Gams, but still retains second place with six wins against his single loss. Kent Creuser met defeat at Cooper's hands however, and was pushed down into the third place with five wins and one loss. Creuser has been in only two matches, however, while Cooper has been in three. Bill Liberstein and Red Herman, both of Aycock, were undefeated at the end of the first week of play, but lost when they hooked up with the Zeta Psi's.

By scoring eight points in two games, the Zeta Psi's jumped into the lead in team scoring with fifteen points. Aycock follows with thirteen points scored in two matches, while the Phi Gam's are in third with ten points. Both of the Phi Gam victories have been by scores of 5-4, but in winning these two victories, Phi Gamma Delta has defeated two of the strongest teams in the league, both of whom were favorites in pre-season rating.

Bill Cooper and Kent Creuser, starring for Zeta Psi and Phi Gamma Delta respectively, turned in the best work of the week. Creuser has led his team to both its victories, while Cooper has been best for Zeta Psi.

Carolina Wins From V. M. I. By 30 To 21; Frosh Beat P. J. C.

Carolina won its sixth Conference basketball game last night by defeating the V. M. I. Cadets 30-21 at the Tin Can.

The game was very rough, a total of twenty-two fouls being called, thirteen for the Tar Heels and nine for the visitors.

Dameron and Moore were the high scorers for the Tar Heels, with twelve and seven points respectively. R. Brown led the losers with eleven markers.

The score at half time was 17-11 in Carolina's favor.

Freshmen Win

The Tar Babies defeated the Presbyterian Junior College quint 30-12 in a preliminary to the varsity-V. M. I. encounter. Weathers and Collett led the Tar Babies, with ten points each, Collett sinking several beautiful long shots. For the losers, Rogers, forward, was best, gathering two action tosses and one free shot for five points. The score at the half was 9-4 in favor of Carolina.

'BLUES' CONQUER 'ORANGE' TEAM IN WINTER PRACTICE

Victors Stave Off Last Minute Passing Attack To Win 12-0.

Staving off a desperate last-quarter passing attack, and holding once on the two-yard line and again on the half-yard line, the "Blues" beat the "Oranges," 12-0, in yesterday's seventh winter practice grid game.

Two rookie subs, fullback Anaucauskas and center Redding, did the scoring. Anaucauskas, a hard-driver, went through a hole at left guard opened by Strickland and cut back twenty yards for a touchdown in the second quarter. A pass intercepted by center Gardner had put the "Blues" on the offense and led indirectly to the score.

Redding scored at the end of the third quarter when he intercepted Phipps' pass and, surrounded by a bevy of interferers, went fifty yards down the sidelines for an easy touchdown.

Chandler missed both tries for point, but the veteran performer had pulled a heady piece of work earlier. A second quarter "Orange" threat had been stopped on the three-yard line, and Chandler was to punt from the goal. Center's pass was wide and the ball rolled back. Instead of covering, Chandler batted the ball out beyond the last back line into neutral territory, so neither touchdown nor safety was counted.

The "Oranges" led in first downs by ten to five. One, however, was on a penalty, and seven were on passes, so that they only got two off the stout "Blue" line in which three big tackles — Hodges, Underwood, and Strickland figured prominently.

Both teams showed more defense than offense, and while the "Blues" scored twice and the "Oranges" knocked at the door three times, there were no concerted drives except those on passes in the last period.

White, sub "Orange" fullback, unleashed a last-hope passing attack, principally to McNeill, sub fullback, and Nash, newcoming sub end, that netted six first downs. The "Oranges" as a result got within the goal's shadow twice, but they lacked the punch, and the "Blues" held once on the two-yard line, once on the half-yard line.

Lineups:

"Blues"	Pos.	"Oranges"
Grindstaff	L. E.	Hoffman
Hodges	L. T.	Smith
Shore	L. G.	Froneberger
Gardner	C.	McIver
Eanes	R. G.	Dunavant

POSTER CONTEST ENCOURAGES ART

Parent-Teacher Group Sponsors Annual Competition for Elementary Schools.

Announcements of regulations for the 1931 state poster contest has been made by the University extension division for it is the seventh annual contest which is sponsored by the North Carolina Congress of Parents and Teachers in cooperation with the University extension division.

The contest which will be completed April 15 is open to the public elementary and high schools in North Carolina. It is intended to stimulate an interest in simple works of art among pupils of the public schools and to encourage the actual production of posters.

The posters will be judged in two divisions, the elementary schools being judged separately from the high schools. Classification will be divided further in order to separate those schools having an art supervisor or teacher from those having no trained art instruction.

Each school will select its three best posters and submit them for judging in the contest. Prizes which are given by the State Congress of Parents and Teachers will be awarded the students winning first and second places in each section of each division.

Three Cases Tried At Recorders' Court

The Chapel Hill Recorder's court had only three cases up before it yesterday. Although there is no optional attendance, the others summoned were not present.

The first case was that of reckless driving, damage, and leaving the scene of wreck. Rod Allridge was fined $34.95 to be paid J. E. Merritt, plaintiff, and the cost.

Much argument was caused by the next case which came up. Roscoe Brewer was charged with having in his possession the paraphernalia for manufacturing whiskey. The officers stated that they found a strait piece of copper pipe under the front porch of Brewer's home, and three hundred yards from the house in a thicket, a lard stand apparently used for boiling mash and farther away a doubling keg. Brewer, however, plead that he knew nothing about it and was acquitted.

The last case was J. T. Johnson vs Betty Weaver for stealing wood from Johnson's premises. Johnson stated that the negro woman, along with her husband, had stolen a cord of green oak wood from a piece of land where he had cut it. The court ordered the Weavers to avoid Johnson's property, and conduct themselves properly under the observation of the police for one year.

Inside Telephone System Installed in Spencer Hall

A telephone for communication within Spencer hall has been installed. This telephone is not connected with the regular system for communication outside the building, and will in no way interfere with the use of the outside telephone.

Communication conditions in Spencer hall for the last year or two have been bad because of the fact that the building was constructed in two separate parts, with no way of communication between these parts. The new telephone was installed to establish a means of communication between the two wings of the hall.

wrestlers in the South, having lost only four matches in his whole career. Will of V. M. I., champion in this division last year, is the third mat star after this title. Abiarmason of Washington and Lee is a fast wrestler and will give some of the other men trouble.

Osterman, W. and L., Albright, Carolina, Dewey, V. M. I., and Wall, Duke, are the main contenders in the 135 pound weight. Dewey is a brilliant matman and successor to Fields who was last year's champion.

Don Conklin, Carolina's sophomore sensation, is one of the leading contenders for Kellum's crown in the 145 pound weight. Conklin has never lost a match in his career. Captain Bailey of V. P. I. is another contestant for this title along with Thomas, W. and L., and Stith, V. M. I.

The 155 pound division has a galaxy of fine wrestlers grappling for the same championship. Carolina is represented by Harry Tsumas, one of the cleverest wrestlers on the squad. Duke has Captain Cole in this weight; he is one of the best matmen in the state. The Generals have Mathes in this weight. He is wrestling coach's brother and one of the finest wrestlers in the country. McCrary of V. M. I. was champion last season.

Captain Talman, V. P. I., "Perc" Idol, Carolina, Hall, W. and L. and Mullens, Duke, will fight it out among themselves for the 165 pound title. Captain Talman is a fast, clever wrestler, he was last year's champion. Idol is a fine grappler who has been constantly improving with experience.

Tilson, W. and L. and Cowper and Ferguson, Carolina, are the leading candidates for the 175 pound championship. Tilson, champion in this weight last year, is a brother of Duke's wrestling coach, "Tex" Tilson. The veterans Ferguson and Cowper alternate with Hampton for the two heavyweight positions. All three men are very good.

In the unlimited division there are five good matmen. Mitchell, W. and L., is a skillful and powerful wrestler. Gibbs, V. P. I., has made a good record this season. Carolina may send either Cowper, Ferguson, or Hampton into this division, depending upon their weight and condition. Other men in this weight are Shell, V. M. I., and Hughes, Duke.

FIVE TEAMS ARE UNDEFEATED AT END OF INTRAMURAL CAGE RACE

Question Marks, Phi Gam's, Phi Delt's, Sigma Zeta's, and K. A.'s Tie for Top With Perfect Records; Peacock Leads Scorers for Season With Ninety-Three Points; Dunlap Holds Second.

The end of the final week of competition in the 1931 intramural basketball league found five teams, the Question Marks, Phi Gam's, Phi Delt's, Sigma Zeta's, and K. A.'s, tied for the top with a perfect record in league play this season.

In the dormitory league, the Question Marks top the field with a perfect record, gathered from five wins and no defeats New Dorms and the Best House were eliminated during the past week by the Question Marks and Ruffin respectively. Ruffin heads the defeated teams with nine victories and one defeat for a percentage of .900, closely followed by the Best House with seven wins and one defeat, and New Dorms with six victories and one defeat. Only one game remains to be played in the dormitory league, a postponed game between the Question Marks and the Ransom House. A victory over the Ransom House Monday afternoon will clinch the dormitory title for the Question Marks, while a loss to Ransom House would result in a play-off series between the Question Marks, Best House, Ruffin, and New Dorms.

In the fraternity league four teams, the same as last week, tie for top honors with a perfect percentage, although the Phi Gam's have won one more game than their nearest rivals, the Phi Delt's with eight wins. The Sigma Zeta's and K. A.'s finish out the undefeated teams with seven wins each. The A. T. O.'s take second place with six victories and one defeat for a percentage of .857.

Officially the fraternity league season ended with the end of the past week, but a play-off between the four teams with a perfect record is necessary. The semi-final games will be played off Tuesday afternoon with the Phi Gam's meeting the Phi Delt's and the Sigma Zeta's meeting the Kappa Alpha's. The winners of these two games will play Thursday afternoon for the fraternity championship. The final game, between the winner of the dormitory championship and the winner of the fraternity championship for the campus title, will probably be played Monday night, March 2, as the varsity court will be unoccupied at that time.

Peacock, Phi Delt forward, scored fifteen points during the past week to bring his total for the year up to ninety-three and high score for the season up to date. Dunlap, Best House center, brought his total for the year up to eighty-six points for second place. The players scoring seventy points or more for the season up to date are as follows:

Player and Team	Points
Peacock, Phi Delt's	93
Dunlap, Best House	86
Dixon, Pi Kap's	79
Purser, Sigma Zeta	78
Crouch, Best House	76
Blackwood, Sigma Ep's	73
Eagles, Kappa Sig's	72
Royster, Ruffin	70

In team scoring eleven teams have gathered a total of 200 points or better. Ruffin gathered a total of seventy points during the past week to bring their total for the season up to 256 and high score. The A. T. O.'s, with thirty-six points scored during the past week take second place with 249 points. The Kappa Alpha's made the greatest gain during the past week to score eighty-eight points and take third place honors. The teams scoring 220 points or better during the season up to date are as follows:

Teams	Games	Points
Ruffin	10	256
A. T. O.'s	7	249
Kappa Alpha's	7	248
Mangum	10	244
Best House	8	241
Sigma Zeta's	7	223

The high spots of the week's play were the Ruffin-Best House and the New Dorms-Question Marks tilts in which the Best House and New Dorms suffered their first defeat of the season. The Question Marks held the highly touted New Dorms quint scoreless in the first half, limiting them to four points, on two action tosses by Perry, guard, in the entire game.

Francis, Lewis forward, set a new record for individual scoring with forty-six points, thirty-eight of which were scored in the last half.

The intramural department wishes to announce that the reason some teams have played more games than others is because the schedule was originally made out on a seven week basis. The seventh week's play was discontinued as it was necessary for the track team to have the Tin Can for indoor practice. The standing of the leaders is as follows:

Dormitory League

Team	W	L	Pct.
Question Marks	5	0	1.000
Ruffin	9	1	.900
Best House	7	1	.875
New Dorms	6	1	.857
Aycock	7	2	.778

Fraternity

Team	W	L	Pct.
Phi Gam's	9	0	1.000
Phi Delt's	8	0	1.000
Sigma Zeta	7	0	1.000
K. A.'s	7	0	1.000
A. T. O.'s	6	1	.857
Beta's	6	2	.750
Sigma Ep's	5	2	.714

The final standings for the entire season will be released later in the week.

LATE DEAN SEES DREAM OF YOUTH FULLY REALIZED

Greek; and Edward Vernon Kyser, associate professor in pharmacy.

Edward Vernon Howell was the son of Rev. James K. Howell, a native of Granville county and a graduate of Wake Forest College, who served in the Confederate Army. His mother was Virginia Carolina Royster, the great-granddaughter of David Royster. She was a school teacher and in her day was considered one of the best educated women in North Carolina.

Vernon Howell was born in Raleigh, March 30, 1872. Graduating from Selma Academy in 1889, he entered Wake Forest College from which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He not only demonstrated ability as a student but was one of the state's greatest athletes. For three years he played fullback on the Wake Forest football team, acting as captain in 1890. He was third baseman on the baseball team, captain of the lacrosse team, and winner of the medal then offered for the best all-round athlete in college.

Entered Drug Business

In 1882, while still a student, he passed the examination of the North Carolina Board of Pharmacy, along with his sister, Mrs. P. B. Kyser, the first woman pharmacist in the state, and her husband. After receiving his diploma at Wake Forest, Dr. Howell entered the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and was graduated two years later with the degree of Graduate in Pharmacy.

He did not use the scholarship in chemistry which he had won at Johns Hopkins, but returned to North Carolina and became a partner in the Kyser Drug company in Rocky Mount. There he remained until called to the University in 1897.

In the days when Dean Howell became a member of the University faculty an institution could play anybody on the football team, and soon after his arrival the new faculty member was asked to play. The first year he played, Virginia licked the Tar Heels twelve to nothing. But the next year it was a different story. Dean Howell played the game with a broken nose and finger and it was a 55-yard run of his through the whole Virginia team that won six to two for Carolina. It was the first time that Carolina had beaten Virginia in a regularly scheduled game. And this was the one undefeated Carolina football team of history.

For many years after he quit playing, Dean Howell was a member of the faculty athletic committee at the University.

Did Considerable Research

Dean Howell joined the American Pharmaceutical Association in 1900, and served as chairman of the Historical Section, member of the Committee on Drug Reform, and chairman of the Scientific Section.

In 1892 the dean joined the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association and had attended every meeting since then except the one in 1900 when he was in Europe. At these annual meetings he had presented altogether more than thirty-five papers and fourteen times had represented the Association at the convention of the American Pharmaceutical Association.

Dean Howell was the author of some fifty papers presented before national and state pharmaceutical associations, these embracing the results of original investigations and covering a wide range of technical research. In addition to the national and state associations, he was affiliated with the American Chemical Society, American Historical Association, North Carolina Historical Association, North Carolina Folk-Lore Society, and the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society.

Last year Dean Howell received one of the highest honors that can be accorded a pharmacist—appointment to the Revision Committee of the United States Pharmacopoeia, a committee of fifty who are selected to revise the official drug code of the United States every ten years. He had also been actively identified with the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy of which he was vice-president in 1923-24 and member of the executive committee in 1926-28.

As a teacher, Dean Howell had the happy faculty of being able to give emphasis to salient facts through the use of anecdotes.

Under his guidance during those thirty-three years, the pharmacy school at the University has won an important place among the pharmacy schools of the country. From one lecture room in New West building and seventeen students, the school has grown until today it has a staff of seventeen instructors and an enrollment that has been as high as 148. Five years ago, the school was moved from its second home in Person hall into the chemistry building which is now known as Pharmacy hall.

His Hobbies

Dean Howell's hobbies were folk-lore and history. He had the true collector's love for anything that was rare, unusual or old, and his home was a storehouse of antiques and relics, of rare old books, newspapers, diaries, and letters. He was an ardent fisherman. He owned an entire island off the Carolina coast, and there in a comfortable cottage with a well-equipped houseboat he often entertained his friends during vacation seasons with fishing and duck shooting.

Dean Howell always took an active part in the business and social life of Chapel Hill and was well known and much loved in the community. For years he was president of the People's Bank, and the people will never forget how, by his enterprise and labors, when calamity came to the bank, he saved the situation and finally paid off the depositors without a loss to any of them. He like nothing better than to entertain his friends and the barbecues, turtle stews, and other repasts served by his famous chef, Foy Baker, will linger in the memory of those fortunate enough to be invited to partake.

Number of College Students Increases Despite Depression

Despite business depression, the number of college students in America for the current year shows a marked gain over last year's attendance. Total attendance, as shown in a statistical study prepared annually by Dean Raymond Walters of Swarthmore and published in School and Society, is 871,184, a number including part time and summer school students.

Fulltime students number 578,111, an increase of two and one half percent above last year which exceeds that of any year since the war. Columbia University leads the nation in total enrollment, having 33,144 students on its register. In the West the University of California dominates with 22,797.

Many a Republican believes that there ought to be two major political parties, but a Democrat is a man who believes that there actually are two.—San Diego Union.

MORRIS L. COOKE TO MAKE SERIES OF TALKS HERE

Nationally Known Engineer to Deliver First Address Tomorrow in Bingham Hall.

Morris Llewelyn Cooke, nationally known consulting engineer in management, of Philadelphia, will deliver three addresses at the University tomorrow and Thursday. He comes under the auspices of the departments of economics and commerce, the local student branch of the Taylor Society, and the four University chapters of the engineering societies.

Mr. Cooke will deliver his first address at twelve noon in room 103 Bingham hall tomorow. His topic is "Planned Work as an Aid to Industrial Stabilization." He will speak tomorrow night at eight o'clock in Gerrard hall on "Experience with Union-Management Co-operation." Significant new developments in labor relations and major current problems in industry are dealt with by Mr. Cooke. All the lectures are open to the public.

Mr. Cooke received the degrees of M.E. and Sc.D. from Lehigh University and was a newspaper reported from 1890 until 1894. He has had much extensive experience in industry and commerce. During the Spanish-American War Mr. Cooke was an assistant engineer in the United States Navy. From 1905 until 1911 he was engaged in commercial organization work and then became director of public works in the city of Philadelphia until 1915. Mr. Cooke was chairman of the storage section of the war industries board of the national defense and was executive assistant to the chairman of the U. S. Shipping Board. In 1923 he was director of the Giant Power Survey of Pennsylvania. He is a member of numerous national engineering and management societies, and is past president of the Taylor Society. He has written numerous books and articles for scientific journals.

LIBRARY SHOWS FRENCH PAINTINGS

The subject of the library exhibit for this week is the paintings of the Impressionists, the Neo-Impressionists, and the Post-Impressionists. The development of modern French art from the middle of the nineteenth century is shown through the first decade of the present century.

The reproductions are both plain and tinted, and represent such French artists as: Manet, Monet, Cezanne, Renoir, and Degas. The exhibit has especial bearing on Somerset Maughan's Of Human Bondage.

Chapel Programs for Week

P. L. Burch, head of the buildings department, speaks before the freshman chapel today. His subject is "The work of the Buildings Department.

Wednesday: There will be no chapel since Dean Carroll wishes to see all freshmen in the school of commerce in 103 Bingham at the usual chapel hour.

Thursday: Dr. Collier Cobb, head of the geology department, will give a few "Reminiscences of Chapel Hill."

Friday: P. L. Burch will repeat his speech of Tuesday for the sophomore chapel.

Dungan To Conclude Radio Talks Series

Jack E. Dungan will conclude the series of radio talks which the University student government has sponsored for the past three months when he speaks on "Utopian College Education and How It Relates to the University of North Carolina" over station WPTF Wednesday afternoon at five o'clock.

He will briefly summarize new departures in higher education within the past few years with particular regard to the present year. In his talk he will discuss optional class attendance, individual curricula, self education, tutoring systems, housing plans, work systems, experimental colleges, new grading systems, and many other problems that have been successfully solved by other colleges.

The plans which he will discuss are ones that have been put into effect at Columbia, Harvard, Yale, the University of Chicago, Stanford, Dartmouth, Colgate, Wisconsin University, Michigan, Northwestern, Purdue, Pomona, Syracuse, University of Washington, University of Oregon, Beloit, and Oberlin.

TAYLOR SOCIETY SCHEDULES TWO NOTED SPEAKERS

Sloan, President of Textile Institute, and Gilbreth, Consulting Engineer, to Speak.

George M. Sloan, president of the Cotton-Textile Institute and Dr. Lillian M. Gilbreth, consulting engineer in micromotion study, are two of the speakers to be brought to this campus sometime this spring by the Taylor Society.

The local student branch of the Taylor Society was organized in the fall of 1928 among advanced students in engineering and commerce and now numbers more than fifty members. It is the only branch in the South, the others being located at the Universities of California and Pennsylvania, Ohio State University, and Colgate.

Over a dozen formal meetings were held last year, with an attendance of over five hundred. The addresses delivered were of such fine quality that they were edited by G. T. Schwenning and published by the North Carolina Press under the title of "Management Problems." It is planned to publish this year's addresses under the title of "Trends of Management." The following speakers have already appeared before the Taylor Society this year: F. M. Craft, chief engineer of Southern Bell Telephone Company; E. S. Draper, landscape architect and engineer; P. H. H. Dunn of Department of Commerce; E. H. Eige, of Western Electric Company; C. L. Holmes, of U. S. Department of Agriculture; and General Rees, assistant vice-president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

The Taylor Society is an international society to promote the science and art of administration and management. The main objects are: through research, discussion, publication, and other appropriate means: (1) To secure—for the common benefits of the community, the worker, the manager and the employer—understanding and intelligent direction of the principles of administration and management which govern or-

HOUSE ADDRESSES GROUP IN DURHAM

Executive Secretary Chooses George Washington as Subject of Kiwanis Talk.

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, while speaking before the Durham Kiwanis Club in a Washington's birthday address at the club's regular meeting last week, said, "Many lessons applicable to the present time may be learned from the life of George Washington, who risked his life, his personal fortune—in fact, everything—because he had the courage and decision to meet the problems of his own day.

"The course of history is largely determined by the faith, action, and integrity of character of men like Washington, and not by those who cling to an attitude of passive acceptance while awaiting for something to happen," Mr. House said.

The theme of Mr. House's talk was that Washington was a great builder who placed service to country above self.

The Durham address was the second of the week given by the executive secretary. Earlier he had addressed the Parent-Teachers Association of Greensboro on the value of education.

"A man who does not believe in education loves darkness rather than light," he said in his Greensboro talk.

"The single specific issue in North Carolina for more than one hundred years has been education," he said. "The times of our greatest prosperity have been the times when we have had leaders who could preach effectively the gospel of education. The essential remedy for our present troubles is more and better education. Civilization functions through the process of education."

REALTORS GATHER HERE NEXT MONTH

Guy W. Ellis, of Detroit, and Paul Stark, of Madison, Wis., will compose the faculty of the second annual Real Estate Institute which will meet at Chapel Hill March 9th under the auspices of the University Extension Division.

This institute, which will last for two days, will take the form of an intensive course in real estate problems. Its sessions will be in Bingham hall at the invitation of D. D. Carroll, dean of the school of commerce. W. A. Fonvielle, of Wilmington, who is president of the North Carolina Association of Realtors, together with R. C. Cantwell, Jr., secretary of the association, and M. F. Vining, of the extension division, constitute the committee in charge of the program.

Ellis is a former president of the Detroit Real Estate Board and a member of the advisory council of the National Real Estate Institute. Stark served as first vice-president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in 1928 and is a member of its real estate educational committee.

Mrs. Stallings Passes Away

Mrs. W. T. Stallings, mother of Mrs. T. E. Best, died Thursday morning at the home of the latter on Pittsboro street, at the age of seventy-four years.

Funeral services were held at two o'clock Friday from the Primitive church in Clayton.

GAY MACLAREN TO APPEAR MARCH 2

Noted Dramatic Artist is Third Presentation of Entertainment Committee.

Miss Gay MacLaren, dramatic artist extraordinary, will appear in the re-creation of an entire play in Memorial hall Monday, March 2 at 8:30 p. m. This presentation will make the third of the series of programs offered this quarter by the entertainment committee.

Gay McLaren is the young woman who gives entire plays in the voices and actions of all the players of the original cast. She has often been called, "The One-Girl Play Company."

In her childhood she displayed an amazing talent for mimicry, and astounded her teachers by reproducing an entire play after sitting in the audience, seeing the play several times and then reproducing the words, gestures and voices of the players without having seen the manuscript.

Her teacher took her to New York where she was presented before the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences and created a sensation. Mark Twain became interested in her and had her reproduce his play, "Pudd'n-head Wilson," in his home down on Tenth Street.

The newspapers called her "phenomenal," and declared her a "genius." Clubs and societies heard of this "Girl with the Camera Mind," as the New York World called her, and invited her to appear before them. Mrs. Thomas Edison became one of her patronesses and attended her recitals.

Owing to her ability to memorize a play and give it after hearing it four or five times, she developed a large repertoire of plays, which she could give at a moments notice.

When the Panama Canal was in the course of construction, the United States Government sent her down to entertain the employees of the "Big Ditch" at the government clubhouses. She was still in her teens, but had already mastered twenty of the most popular plays of the day.

She was contracted for one tour of the Isthmus to give seven plays. So great was her success that she made four trips and gave one hundred and eight recitals. The Panama Morning Journal called her "The Idol of the Isthmus," and she was given a Roosevelt Medal.

The only time General Goethals, Panama's constructor, ever set his foot inside a Zone Clubhouse (he being opposed to the management) was to hear Gay MacLaren on the occasion of her one hundredth appearance at Culebra.

Duke Inaugurates Series Of Recitals

The Duke University Y. M. C. A. is sponsoring a series of music programs this year which are to be known as the Tuesday Evening Recitals. These recitals are presented solely for the enjoyment of the music lovers of the surrounding towns, and no admission is being charged to any of the concerts.

The first of this series will be presented tonight at 8:15 in Page Auditorium on the West Campus of Duke University, and will feature members of the Duke faculty and their wives, assisted by the women's and men's glee clubs and the symphony orchestra.

Five Bills On Di And Phi Calendars

When the Di senate convenes tonight in its regular meeting at seven o'clock, the following bills will be discussed.

1. Resolved: That, the students of the University have too little control in extra-curricular activities.

2. Resolved: That, the University of North Carolina should not adopt an athletic policy similar to that recently adopted by the University of Pennsylvania.

The following are the bills that the Phi Assembly will act upon at 7:15 o'clock.

1. Resolved: That, a failure, without valid cause, to vote in two successive general elections should disqualify the voter in the next ensuing general election.

2. Resolved: That, provisions should be made for a more adequate infirmary to be used in case of an epidemic.

3. Resolved: That, the consolidation of the hundred counties of the state into approximately one half that number would be for the best interests of North Carolina.

LAW ASSOCIATION SETS DANCE FOR COMING FRIDAY

Series of Two Law Dances and Grail Complete Schedule for Quarter.

Dances this week-end will conclude the full dance program of the winter quarter. The annual dance of the Law Association will be given Friday evening, February 27, a tea dance by three law fraternities Saturday afternoon, February 28, and the third Grail of the quarter Saturday evening.

The dances will take place in the Bynm gymnasium which will be decorated with the law school's colors of red and white. The committee in charge of the Law Association's dance, Archie Allen, McDonald Gray, and E. L. Curlee, have engaged Jelly Leftwich and his University Club Orchestra from Durham to play. This orchestra will play for all the dances of the week-end.

The law school executive committee composed of Ray Farris, H. B. Parker, and Travis Brown, is in charge of the affair on Friday night which takes place between the hours of ten and one o'clock.

The chaperons at the dance will be: Dean and Mrs. Charles T. McCormick, Professor and Mrs. R. H. Wettach, Professor and Mrs. A. C. McIntosh, Professor and Mrs. T. Van Hecke, Professor and Mrs. P. H. Winston, Professor and Mrs. Albert Coates, Professor and Mrs. M. S. Breckenridge, and Professor and Mrs. F. B. McCall.

The three law fraternities, Phi Delta Phi, Delta Theta Phi, and Phi Alpha Delta will entertain at a tea dance from six to seven-thirty o'clock Saturday. The committee in charge of this dance is composed of J. A. Williams, Phi Delta Phi; Beatty Rector, Delta Theta Phi; and Bill Uzzell, Phi Alpha Delta.

The series closes with the last Grail of the quarter, from nine to twelve Saturday. This dance will also take place in Bynum gymnasium with Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra playing.

STATE VOLUNTEER Y CONFERENCE TO CONVENE FRIDAY

Delegates from Thirty-Five Colleges and Normal Schools Meet Here Over Week-end.

The State Student Volunteer Conference of North Carolina college Y. M. C. A.'s will convene here Friday afternoon and continue through Sunday, March 1. The delegates will gather in the Methodist church for all their sessions.

The conference opens Friday afternoon at two o'clock when registrations will be in order, after which the speakers and leaders will be entertained at an informal tea in the Methdist church from 4:30 to 5:30 Friday night from 7:30 to 8:30 the delegates will assembly for the first time to organize, and at nine o'clock Professor J. M. Connally of Payne College, Augusta, Georgia, will formally open the conference with an address on the theme of the gathering, "Human Need and World Christianity."

Mrs. J. E. K. Aggery will lead the Saturday morning worship from 8:30 to 8:45, after which group discussion and addresses will be in progress until 12:30 o'clock. The director of the Y at Yale University, Fay Campbell, will give the first talk on "Economic Disorders in the World," a challenge to Christian students. Following this, Dr. Elbert Russell, dean of the school of religion at Duke, will address the body on "Ignorance and Superstitution in the World." The last address of the morning will be "The Inadequacies of Non-Christian Religions," delivered by Dr. McNeall Poteat, pastor of Pullen Memorial Church in Raleigh.

Lee Phillips, a young negro student and poet from Howard University at Washington, will speak Saturday afternoon on "The Present and Future of the Negro Missionary." Dr. Paul Harrison, a missionary from Arabia, will follow up this address with a discussion of the subject, "Disease in the World." At five o'clock the conference will adjourn to the music building to hear an organ recital given by Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, of the University department of music.

Saturday evening between 7:30 and 9:30 an Egyptian, Hagop Hagopian, will give "Messages From the Nations," assisted by T. C. Kin of Korea, K. K. Thomas, of India, and Mrs. J. E. K. Aggery, wife of the "Aggery of Africa."

Sunday's program consists of

SPRING HOLIDAYS BEGIN MARCH 14

The spring holidays for this college year begin Saturday March 14 at one p. m. and continue until Monday, March 23 when the classes begin for the spring quarter.

Freshmen and sophomores are required to register on the Saturday preceding the beginning of the spring quarter and consequently must return to the Hill then. The juniors and seniors having registered before the holidays began are not forced to be back until eight-thirty Monday morning.

These spring holidays which the University has take the place of the Easter holidays that most colleges in the country have.

Wanted: A Strong Leader

Chairman Raskob of the Democratic National Committee has called a meeting of the committee for March 5. Since his call went out Democrats occupying seats in Congress have well nigh exhausted themselves re-hashing the prohibition question. Mr. Raskob has maintained a discreet silence as to his plans for the meeting and statements emanating from political circles are based on supposition of what he intends to do.

We haven't the slightest idea why Mr. Raskob called the meeting. The prohibition question may have prompted him, but we doubt seriously if that is all he wishes the committee to discuss. There is a question of raising half a million dollars to pay some debts incurred by the party two years ago when it nominated a candidate who had a chance to win. More important, however, is the question of policies to be followed by the party in the next Congress. In the past it has been unnecessary to have a Democratic policy as the party has always been hopelessly in the minority. The next congress will show an equal division of strength and it becomes necessary for the Democrats to settle a few issues. Mr. Raskob may have had either or both of these questions in mind. He may have been thinking of the prohibition question.

Being a business man Mr. Raskob naturally thinks in definite terms. He has learned some politics, but not enough to know that politicians and especially Democratic politicians dislike stating policies in definite terms. The very noise being made by wet and dry members of the committee illustrates the greatest need of the party—a strong leader. A leader who can force or drive the Democrats into stating definitely their policies may alienate certain parts of the party but such a leader will make the party a national party instead of a collection of individual units with no ideas of their purposes.

A Little More on Self-Help

This attempt on the part of the state Merchants' Association and some individuals to abolish the dormitory stores has been editorialized upon in Saturday's issue, and our voice has been raised before on the question of self-help employment and opportunity here. The injustice of the movement has only brought to mind our often mulled over thoughts on the matter.

We realize that some of the faculty and townspeople have made a sincere effort to raise the price given University students for their work and have tried to provide work for men to do, but on the other hand it is a lamentable situation where a man about to receive an A.B. or a M.A. can command no more remuneration than twenty-five or forty cents per hour, and where he has to work four valuable hours a day merely to feed himself.

No one can do anything but admit that when a man has to work three or four hours a day just to feed himself, he tas little appetite for scholastic endeavor and that there are scores and scores of men in the University whose bodies are perpetually fatigued to such a degree that they are not physically capable of mentally carrying on their work.

Twice before this we have reiterated the fact that the most crying need this University has is not more buildings, or more remuneration for professors, but more endowments in order that those toil worn students who fail their courses because they have to work so many hours a day, which day really belongs to study, may be given scholarships of sufficient stipends that they will not have to work.

The loan funds are inadequate, and besides most men are too proud to borrow. We have a pretty good idea that if these men were released from financial worry many would stand high in Phi Beta Kappa, and honorary circles.

The Daily Tar Heel calls upon President Graham to next turn his genius to finding permanent funds by which not less than twenty, five-hundred-dollar scholarships may be awarded each year.—Jack D.

One Side

For one reason or another, money in this state isn't going around. We aren't economists, so we won't attempt to say why. Some people have it and some haven't it. And there are people wanting to come to school who can't afford to. There aren't enough scholarships to go around, unfortunately. And there aren't enough self-help jobs to go around, unfortunately. And yet the legislature is considering wiping out a means some students have of earning part of their expenses.

We must confess absolute ignorance of dormitory stores in the other state colleges. But the dormitory store in the University has several things in its favor. It costs the University nothing. It is, undeniably, a convenience to the students. To a great extent it does away with any excuse for peddling. And if we were less cautious, we might generalize and say the dormitory store always pays. Instead, the dormitory store almost always pays, and pays well.

We have been presenting, frankly, only one side of the question. Theoretically and proverbially, every question has two sides. Perhaps the merchants have a case.—V. A. D.

A. Knocker

I am a knocker. I am one of these royal pains which flock to every place interesting or which is supposed to be good and proceed to say "Cheeze—wot a place!" I then start raving about what there was back at old Siwash which the University of North Carolina can't even touch.

Especially am I to be seen and am obnoxious at the dances The old Southern custom of tag dances doesn't please me in the least. When I go to the trouble of bringing a girl to the dance, I want all the boys in school to dance with someone else and leave my girl to me and my thrilling charms. My conversation about what a helluva a note these Southern dances are is enough to please any Southern dame, and they should appreciate greatly a break or an invitation by one of my type. I am very cute and have a winning way which no one can follow to any extent.

After going back to the abode at the scheduled holidays during the year, I always decide that I want to come back to the University. I always want to come back and talk about the registration system, the state's dairy products, and the way they cook eggs and bacon. My professors are worse than ever, for every time I come back my genius fails to respond to their proddings, and they are therefore broadcasted as terrible profs. All in all I make a thorough nuisance of myself to everyone who takes any pride in what he is doing and what he believes in, but I have a swell time—just knocking.—O. W. D.

Uncivilized Chicago

Crime-ridden Chicago, seat of the gangster kingdom and controlled by bosses reminiscent of the old days of political buffoonery next Monday faces the task of trying to pick a Republican candidate for mayor. With the hope of having a capable and good man in the office for the World's Fair of 1933, the voters will be up in arms for the occasion.

For the past few months, the several candidates for the nomination have insulted and disparaged each other in such a way as to please the heart of any politician of the old school. Underhanded work, mud-slinging and actual fighting have given the country a veritable slapstick comedy. However, due to the seriousness of the affair, the whole thing is far from humorous.

One wonders, when reading the reports which have come from the fourth largest city in the world, just how much the law-abiding citizens of that metropolis are going to stand from the crooks and bosses who are apparently making the politicians eat out of their hands. To the people all over the world, Chicago has been given a black-eye which has far from helped her in any constructive work which she has attempted. The voters have been slumbering peacefully, excusing themselves by the alibi that there was nothing that they could do about it.

With the prospect, however, of an unsuccessful World's Fair in 1933 staring them in the face unless some housecleaning is done, the voters have been aroused and apparently for the first time in years, an intelligent vote might be recorded and a competent man put into office. If this is done, Chicago will have done much towards helping her reputation and will again be classed as a civilized and respectable metropolis instead of a hang-out for the barbarians and vandals which have been representative of the city—Michigan Daily.

Political Cure-All

Prohibition is a topic which has been discussed pro and con for the last two decades or more. Today the question has become uppermost in the minds of many citizens. A presidential campaign looms in the near future, and the two major parties are unsettled as to a stand on the Eighteenth Amendment. A powerful organization, the Crusaders, has come into existence to fight the W. C. T. U. and other dry cliques.

Another problem which needs solution through legislation is the proposed bonus for war veterans. This plan has been fought strenuously by Mr. Mellon, high corporation officials and by economists in general.

Although one usually does not associate the above two problems they probably could be solved as one. Here is the idea, briefly outlined.

Repeal the Eighteenth Amendment. Place a heavy tax on liquor trade. Completely abolish the saloon and the speakeasy. This would automatically decrease crime. Use the profits, which would be tremendous, from liquor tax for the benefit of war veterans. Here we have a plan which, if put into effect, would "kill two birds with one stone."

The plan seems plausible as we write this. We believe in the modification of legislation against drinking. We also believe in a bonus for war veterans. Why not combine the two problems in one solution?—Student Life.

Cagers Meet Sewanee As Wrestlers Combat Duke In Big Five Title Battle

Duke-Carolina Mat Bouts Set for 8:30 in Durham; Basketball Here at 8:30.

BLUE DEVILS ARE STRONG

Sewanee Cagers Hold Victory Over V. P. I.; Frosh Game As Preliminary.

Carolina's wrestlers will engage Duke's matmen for the state title in Durham tonight, while the basketeers will stay at home to close their season with a Southern Conference engagement with Sewanee.

The Carolina and Duke freshmen meet on the mats in Duke's gym at 7 o'clock, while the varsities clash at 8:30 o'clock. The Tar Heel quint will begin its game with Sewanee in the Tin Can here at 8:30 o'clock. A Carolina Freshman - Durham High game at 7 o'clock will serve as a preliminary.

Sewanee beat V. P. I. 34-27 last week, and, since the Tar Heels split their brace of games with the Gobblers, the chances are that the two teams will be well matched.

Sandy Dameron, center, is still leading the scorers, but is being closely trailed by Captain Artie Marpet, an All-State guard whose fine work promises to get him another berth this year.

These two will undoubtedly start against Sewanee and at the other posts Coach Ashmore will probably pick Tom Alexander, third high scorer, for the other guard; and Paul Edwards and Jimmy Moore, forwards.

With decisive victories over State and Davidson already on their string, the Tar Heel grapplers will advance upon the Duke Blue Devils tonight in the deciding meet of the Big Five wrestling race. Both teams are undefeated in North Carolina, and the winner of tonight's bout will have an undisputed claim to the state wrestling title.

Carolina has piled up tremendous margins in winning over State and Davidson, and ranks as favorites to take the Blue Devils into camp. However, the Dukemen have strong men in the 118 pound and 175 pound classes, and may offer unexpected opposition.

Gamble, in the 118 pound class, is one of the best men in the south at his weight, while Emory Adkins, Duke football star who works in the 175 pound class, has been doing good work all season. The Blue Devils will offer another strong man in Captain Cole, 155 pounder, who has been showing good form in all his matches.

The Tar Heels will probably present the same lineup that faced State and Davidson, with the exception that Fred Ferguson may replace Ken Hampton in the unlimited division. Hampton has been in the last three meets and has been impressive in each of them, but Coach Quinlan may decide to use the veteran Ferguson against the Blue Devils. Ferguson has had a long rest and should be in top shape for the Duke match. Hampton has an edge in weight over Ferguson, but Ferguson is wrestling his third year on the varsity and has a decided edge over Hampton in experience.

The rest of the Carolina lineup will be: 118 pound class, Pete Usher, 126 Captain Fred Stallings, 135 Mayne Albright, 145 Don Conklin, 155 Harry Tsumas, 165 Percy Idol, 175 Marion Cowper. Duke will probably present Gamble in the 118, Williams 126, Wall 135, Thomas 145, Captain Cole 155, Mullins 165, Adkins 175, and Hughes in the unlimited.

LAST LOCAL APPEARANCE

The Tar Heel basketball team will play its last home game tonight in the Tin Can against the University of the South, and many fans are expected to turn out to see Coach Ashmore's men ring down the curtain. Captain Artie Marpet and Sandy Dameron will not don Tar Heel togs in Chapel Hill after tonight, and will be doing their best to turn in stellar final performances.

Sandy and Artie have been the backbone of the team this season, and they will be sorely missed when the Tar Heels assemble for the season next year. They have already played their last Big Five game, but their work tonight should have much to do with whether or not they place on the All-State outfit. Artie should have a first place about sewed up, but Sandy is competing with Joe Croson for the post. It will be a nip and tuck affair between them.

Judging from their performance against V. M. I. last Saturday, the quintet is playing a better brand of ball than they played for a while, and it is likely that they will show Sewanee a few things before the night is over. They will be off for Atlanta Thursday and will hook up with Vanderbilt in the first round of the tournament. They are not rated as likely conference contenders, but then they may show form and give the best of them a race for the title.

ANOTHER BIG FIVE TITLE?

The wrestling team will go over to Durham tonight to try to cop the Big Five wrestling title. The boxing team succeeded in winning the state title last Tuesday over in the Duke gymnasium, and Coach Quinlan's men are anxious to repeat what the pugilists have already accomplished.

The wrestling team keeps in action longer than the other winter teams since the conference tournament does not start at Lexington, Virginia, until next Friday, March 6. The V. M. I. Cadets, varsity and freshmen, will be here this Saturday to close the dual meet season for the grapplers. This meet promises to be probably the stiffest local meet for Carolina, since V. M. I. is rated high among the conference teams.

GAVE PENN STATE CLOSE FIGHT

The intercollegiate champions of the east succeeded in handing the Tar Heel boxing team its only loss of the season, but it was not without considerable effort. Four and one-half to two and one-half is very close, especially so when several of the decisions are said to have been close.

They will work hard all of this week preparing to go up to Charlottesville Thursday for the opening of the conference tournament, and should be in top form for the annual event. According to the scoring system used in the tournaments, only the finalists count in the scoring—five points for the winner and three for the loser. This means that a team with two or three good men can win

Some Members Of North Carolina Wrestling Squad

Pictured above are the outstanding members of the Carolina wrestling squad who clash with Duke in Chapel Hill tonight in a meet that will settle the state title. It will be the second state title that has been decided by Carolina and Duke teams this winter, the Tar Heel boxers having defeated Duke last week. The Carolina wrestlers have not lost a meet this season in the Big Five or Southern Conference, and Duke's outfit, also undefeated in the Big Five, ranks among the favorites in the Conference. The state championship meet tonight will be held in the Tin Can and the varsity events will get under way at eight-thirty, preceded by the freshman meet at seven o'clock.

CAROLINA DOWNS V. M. I. WHILE P. C. FALLS TO FROSH

Win Over Keydet Quint Gives Varsity S. I. C. Standing of .500.

Carolina brought its basketball average for Southern Conference play to .500 tonight by defeating V. M. I. 30 to 21. It was Carolina's sixth S. I. C. win in a dozen games.

The Tar Heels held a 17 to 11 lead for the first half play and play in the closing period was on more even terms.

Sandy Dameron, center, led the Tar Heels with a dozen points while top honors for the visitors went to R. Brown who counted 11 points, five of which came on free throws.

In a preliminary to the varsity-V. M. I. encounter Saturday night in the Tin Can, the Tar Babies defeated Presbyterian Junior College 30-12. The Tar Baby offense seemed unable to get started during the first period, the half ending 9-4. In the second half the Tar Babies opened up to score twenty-one points, while holding their opponents to eight.

Captain Dave McCachren celebrated his first game as captain by scoring two action tosses and one foul goal for five points. Captain McCachren scored first for the Tar Babies, sinking a beautiful long shot from mid-center. Collett and Weathers led the Tar Babies with ten points each, Collett scoring several times on long shots from almost any angle.

Rogers, forward, with five points, and Sandlin, guard, with four points, led the visitors.

The Presbyterian basketeers tied the Tar Babies at four all in the opening minutes, but the yearlings went to work, scoring seven points before another goal was countered for the visitors.

Coach Shepard made numerous substitutions, using a total of eleven players during the game.

The one consolation about deflation is that it affects a lot of heads that way, too.

Penn State Takes Narrow Ring Decision Over Heels

Nittany Lions Down Carolina by Count of 4½ to 2½ as Tar Heels Forfeit in Bantamweight.

WARREN GETS KNOCKOUT

Goodridge Outpoints McAndrews for Decision; Marty Levinson Loses Close Bout.

Carolina's five game winning streak was abruptly smashed last Saturday night when the Penn State Lions took a close match from the Tar Heels, 4½-2½, at State College, Pa.

The bouts were witnessed by over 6000 fans, the largest crowd that the Tar Heels have played to all season.

Carolina's point winners were Captain Noah Goodridge, lightweight, John Warren, heavy, and Tom Parsons, middleweight. The latter fought a draw.

The bantamweight class was forfeited to the Nittany Lions.

Martin Levinson, slugging featherweight, fought the best fight of his career, but was outpointed by Dave Stoop, intercollegiate bantam champion, in a bout that many thought should have been a draw. Although Stoop is considered one of the fastest boxers in the country, Levinson was right with him, punishing the Penn State battler with hard rights to the head.

Captain Noah Goodridge won the cleanest victory of the meet. He clearly outpointed McAndrews in every round, and the decision was never in doubt. However, it was Noah's toughest fight to date, and he had to step lively to beat his clever opponent.

One of the best fights of the evening was between Cecil Jackson and Lewis in the welterweight class. Lewis was the finalist last year in the intercollegiate tourney. Jackson won the opening round, outboxing Lewis by a narrow margin, but he was unable to keep up the fast pace, Lewis finally taking a close decision.

Tom Parsons, making his varsity debut, put up a great fight to hold the highly touted Babb to a draw. Obie Davis, veteran middleweight was unable to box because of a severe cut over his eye, which was incurred in training about two weeks ago. However, Davis will be available for the Conference tournament, which starts Friday.

NO DESTRUCTION OF FOOD

Numerous Rotary clubs and Rotarians became concerned at news reports from Turlock, California, relative to a so-called egg-throwing contest. Apparently this report had no basis in fact for a telegram from Rotarian Arthur Crites, governor of the second district, reads as follows:

"Turlock egg throwing contest so called is stunt planned by Turlock Chamber of Commerce to distribute remaining cold storage eggs to poor families of community. No destruction of food. No criticism justified."

Question Marks Meet Ranson In Dorm Title Tilt

The regular schedule of the intramural cage league has been completed, but one postponed game in the dormitory league remains to be played, that of the fast Question Mark quintet versus the Ranson House team. At the end of the regular schedule, the Question Marks were the only group to have a perfect average. They have played only five games, but have won them all decisively, and if they defeat the Ranson House five tomorrow, they will be the champions of the dormitory league.

Other teams finishing high in the percentage column were those of Best House and Ruffin. Each of these teams has lost only one game. Ruffin has won nine contests while Best House has emerged victorious in seven starts. These teams will have to be reckoned with if the Ranson House quint beats the Question Marks tomorrow. If the Question Marks win, however, they will be the undisputed champions.

The supremacy of the Question Marks has been questioned by several of the high ranking teams, because of the fact that they have played only six games. This was due to no fault of that team, but occurred because the games were cancelled on account of the state high school boxing and wrestling tournament. Then too they were scheduled to play three games this week but it was necessary to abbreviate the schedule one week so that the track team might get in shape for the Southern Conference indoor meet in the Tin Can March 7.

There are still four undefeated teams in the fraternity league. On Tuesday, the Phi Delta Theta team led by Peacock and Eubanks, will meet the undefeated Sigma Zeta five. And the Kappa Alphas and the Phi Gams will fight it out to see which of the two will be eliminated from further competition in the race for the trophy. The two fraternity teams that remain undefeated tomorrow night will play for the fraternity championship on Wednesday or Thursday.

Meiklejohn Thinks Universities Have Failed In Purpose

Dr. Meiklejohn, of the University of Wisconsin, recently expressed the opinion that modern education has failed in the purpose for which it exists. "The university of today," he said, "has not produced minds to cope with the situation."

The Wisconsin professor stressed the inequality of men in this country today, when some men are growing fabulously rich while the majority are struggling to exist. "Government helps to create two classes, the rulers and the ruled," said Weiklejohn. "The rulers know the game and play it; the ruled are tools to the few and obey them. Every man must make his own life or he becomes merely a cow or pig or anything owned."

"There are two other states of opposites in life, beauty and ugliness. We are creating great wealth, building a tremendous machine civilization. But there is little of fineness, delicacy or sentiment of the proper sort in it. Our wealth has stopped rather than helped beauty to come into our lives," he added.

with the S. I. A. A. champions, and with one nationally prominent intersectional foe, Penn State. Besides, the Tar Heels will participate in the Southern indoor and outdoor championships, in the Penn relays and in the State meet.

The Tar Heels won the Southern Conference outdoor meet last spring and will be concentrating this year on carrying off top honors in the Southern Indoor championships, in which Carolina placed second last year.

Carolina will again be host to the Southern Conference Indoor games. An extra class for Non-Conference teams has been added, and the schedule has been enlarged in the divisions for Conference, freshmen and scholastic teams.

The complete Carolina schedule, which is almost identical to last year's except for the omission of the Georgia Tech relays, which are being discontinued this year, follows:

March 7—Southern Conference Indoor Games at home.
March 28—Presbyterian College at home.
April 3—N. C. State at home.
April 11—Georgia Tech at Atlanta.
April 18—V. P. I. at home.
April 22—Duke at home.
April 25—Penn Relays at Philadelphia.
April 27—Washington & Lee at Lexington.
May 2—N. C. Conference Championships at Greensboro.
May 9—Penn State at State College, Pa.
May 15 and 16—Southern Conference Meet at Birmingham.

Emory U. Adopts Quarter System

Emory University will adopt the quarter system at the beginning of the next fall quarter announced the Emory Wheel recently. Heretofore they have had a combination of the quarter system and the semester system, which did not work well.

In pointing out the advantages Professor J. G. Sipe said that students graduating from the liberal arts school could enter the Law School the next quarter. It makes courses easier to arrange. Everyone could register at the same time, pay their bills at the same time, and get their grades at the same time.

ting light heavy, just nosed out Platt Landis, Tar Heel sophomore. Landis hurt his right hand in the Duke meet, and consequently could not use it to best advantage last Saturday night.

John Warren, heavyweight, remained undefeated, knocking Skorbene out in the second round. Warren floored the Penn State fighter for a count of nine in the opening session, and finished the bout in the second with a terrific right to the mid-section. The referee did away with the formality of counting, awarding the fight to Warren. Skorbene was so badly hurt that a doctor had to be called to revive him.

The referee was Bryan Hayes of Philadelphia.

Captain Noah Goodridge, Martie Levinson and John Warren are three good men, to say nothing of Obie Davis, Platt Landis and Dail Holderness. They will face stiff opposition from Virginia. Florida's Gators have announced that they will not enter to defend their title, so Carolina's problems will be to halt Virginia again. Mississippi A. and M., however, is said to have a likely group of pugilists, despite the fact that this will be their first appearance at the Charlottesville tournament.

DUTCH SCHOLAR PICTURES FARM LIFE IN HOLLAND

Compares Agricultural System There With "Roving Tenant" Plan in North Carolina.

Dr. A. N. J. den Hollander, international traveling scholarship fellow of the Rockefeller Foundation, talked before the North Carolina Club Monday night on the subject "Farming in North Carolina and the Netherlands" showing a comparison of the methods and conditions in both countries.

Dr. Hollander pointed out first that both countries conduct their farming on a small holding scale. In Holland there are tens thousands of holdings not exceeding two and one half acres. Great differences occur in different parts of the country, but the size is nowhere exceptional. In the heavy sea-clay the holdings go down to fifty acres and in the sandy regions the average is from fifteen to twenty acres.

Dr. Hollander explained that the small holding of North Carolina is caused by the fact that the chief crops are cotton and tobacco in which the use of machinery to any great extent is impossible. In Holland, it is caused by a dense population, very high prices and intense agriculture.

Continuing his comparison, Dr. Hollander said: "Both countries have cash crop farming." But, he stated, "the cash crop of North Carolina is one crop or at most two crops, giving an income once in a year and necessitating the farmer to live in advance trusting on the results of the year to pay his expenses." In Holland there is an income the year round because of the highly diversified system.

Dr. Hollander stated also that Holland has a high tenancy rate—about fifty per cent. "In Holland as elsewhere, ownership is considered highly preferable to tenancy for several reasons, but it is not looked upon as such an unmitigated evil as it is here." He explained that in Holland the restless, roving tenant typical of the South who changes his place every two years is not found. The farmers there have their farms leased for several years, have a certain capital, have working stock, and pay a cash rent.

Dr. Hollander stated that he saw this autumn in the South advertisements of travelling shows for 1925 still on the walls of farm dwellings. This, he affirmed, would not be true in Holland, for there the tenants have a pride in their homes since the tenants are allowed compensation for improvements due to their labor.

Notice to Seniors

It is imperative that Senior Superlatives and Class Day Officers meet at the Yackety Yack Office today at 1:30 to have snap-shots made for this year's annual. This is absolutely the one and only time for these to be made. Absence for any excuse will mean the exclusion of these persons from their proper places as Senior Superlatives and Class Day Officers.

Signed:

Pat Patterson, Pres. Senior Class.

Final Radio Talk Is Set for Today

The tenth and final talk in the series of programs, which the University student government has sponsored, will be delivered from WPTF, Raleigh, at the usual hour, five to five-fifteen this afternoon.

Jack E. Dungan is to speak on "Utopian College Education and How It Relates to the University of North Carolina." He will touch on many of the questions which are of major importance to colleges today and he will illustrate their practibility or impossibility by citing numerous institutions that have various of these plans in operation.

GAY MACLAREN IS TO APPEAR HERE MONDAY EVENING

Dramatic Recitalist Appearing On Entertainment Program Is Widely Acclaimed.

Miss Gay MacLaren, who will appear here next Monday in Memorial hall on the student entertainment program, gave her first show when she was only ten years old. From the cradle her career has been a continuous performance. As a little child in Howard, South Dakota, and afterwards in Escondido, California, she mimicked sounds and people.

Nothing delighted her mischievous mind more than to hide where children were playing, and then imitate their mothers calling them. She would go to an entertainment and then for days she was reproducing it at home. She went to "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and the MacLaren house was full of Little Evas, Toms, and Topsys.

When she was ten years old she decided that it was time to start her professional career. The people of Escondido were surprised to see handbills announcing that Gay McLaren would give an entertainment. She had engaged the town hall herself, had made her own program, and then she went on the streets and sold the tickets. The hall was jammed. She gave the pieces she had heard the entertainers give — gave "Bobolink," "Adam's Fall," and other classics, gave some of her own inventions, and even gave the "Maniac" when she didn't know what a maniac was.

For the past few years, Gay MacLaren has appeared on many artist series from coast to coast. Her offering fits in well with the musical stars, and on many courses she has been the only non-musical number.

She made unusual appearances in New York and Chicago, showing that she can create as well as imitate, when she presented her own interpretation of "Romeo and Juliet," with her own scenery and costuming. In her Chicago presentation the Steindel String Quartet from Theodore Thomas Symphony Orchestra accompanied her acting with music. The dramatic critics were extravagant in their commendation. She was invited to give this portrayal in the Shakespearean Memorial Theatre, in Stratford, England, which she yet expects to do when this theatre is restored, it having been damaged by fire.

The medical profession is the costliest, requiring a minimum of $1,000 per year in preparation.

Daily Newspapers Are Issued On Thirty-Eight College Campi

From Epsilog

Nearly every college in the country claims with more or less pride its student newspaper, but only thirty-eight institutions of higher learning are served by a daily newspaper edited and managed by students. More than sixty colleges are served by papers issued either two or three times a week, while more than four hundred others are served by weeklies.

These thirty-eight college dailies claim a circulation of 182,417 or an average of 4,800 copies each, although it doesn't work out that way as two have circulations of less than a thousand, and one distributes as many as 15,000. In the main, the dailies are published at institutions having large enrollments, although three colleges having an enrollment of less than two thousand students maintain dailies. One of the three is Radcliffe, the only girl's college to be served by a daily.

The distribution of the dailies throughout the country, as shown in the accompanying map, presents three rather well-defined divisions. There are twelve located along the Atlantic coast, nineteen in what may rather loosely be referred to as the Mississippi river states, and seven along the Pacific slope. New York and California are tied with four dailies each; Illinois and Indiana claim three a piece; Massachusetts, Oklahoma, Oregon, and Texas have two each, while one is located in each of the following states: New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, North Dakota, and Washington. Twenty - four states are not represented. Cambridge, Massachusetts; New York, and Los Angeles are the homes of two college dailies.

In the eastern group, the general size is from four to eight pages, while in the other two groups the average number of pages an issue are more. In addition the pages are usually larger in the mid-west and western group. Many of the college dailies use some kind of wire service, even though it be only a pony service of a few hundred words, generally telephoned from the nearest bureau of a news-gathering organization. While many of the editorials of the college dailies are devoted to campus affairs a greater proportion of the editorial comment in dailies as compared to the less frequently issued publications are devoted to other than campus affairs.

One of the finest, if not the finest college daily, is The Illini published at Champaign-Urbana, Illinois. The issue of that paper which I happen to have on my desk here numbers 48 eight-column pages, made-up and printed as well as most metropolitan dailies and superior to many. It takes the full Associated Press service and is the only morning newspaper in a community of more than 40,000 persons. Apparently it covers its territory thoroughly as a bulk of its news stories on the front page are college items, but the important national events are given good position.

The Cornell Daily is another college daily which is the only morning newspaper in its community. It also uses Associated Press service. A recent issue showed that of its eight columns at the top of page one were the following date lines—five from Washington, D. C.; New York, Berlin, Havana. Plenty of local stories were on the front page too.

Mention of outstanding achievements of college dailies could be continued almost indefinitely. In fact every one of the thirty-eight, whether they use wire service or limit their coverage to the individual campus, are doing excellent work. In an effort to find out something more about the college dailies, a study was recently made. It has been compiled here in the belief that it contains material of interest to members of newspapers whether they are published daily, tri-weekly, semi-weekly, weekly, or even bi-weekly.

Practically every daily, as is true of the less frequently issued college publications, affords some financial compensation to one or more members of the staff. In general the compensation on the dailies takes the form of salaries, although members of the business staff are often given commissions on advertising account secured. In some cases the editor and business manager are given a percentage of profits made by the publication. The amount of compensation, of course, varies, but in general it runs from $200 to $2,000 a year. In several instances a definite upper limit has been put on the amount of compensation to be received. When the compensation is a definite salary, the average in the returns received was between $500 and $600.

The relationship of the faculty or administration to the student newspaper is always an important question to student editors and business managers. There is nothing, apparently, that arouses so much resentment among students as the idea that the faculty controls, censors, or in any other way directs the editorial or business policy of student publications. Students evidently are perfectly willing to have administration, faculty, or alumni control of their athletics, but any such control of their publications is deeply resented.

In the study made of college dailies, emphatic negative answers were made to the question relating to faculty or administration control. In some cases there is a graduate manager who has general supervision of the finances. Although as a general thing departments of journalism have absolutely nothing to do with the student daily, in the case of the Indiana Daily Student, The Butler Collegian, University Daily Kansan, Oregon State Daily Barometer, and The Ohio State Lantern the departments of journalism use these papers as laboratories. The choice of policies on these papers are just as much in student hands as on other papers.

A faculty member serves as the advisor of some papers. The director of public relations at Syracuse University acts in this capacity for The Daily Orange. This is also true of The Pennsylvanian where the head of the journalism department takes an active interest. In most cases what relationship the faculty has to the paper is

DEAN C. C. TAYLOR DISCUSSES STATE REVENUE PROBLEM

State College Graduate School Dean believes Live-at-Home Program Is Important.

Perhaps the taxpayers cannot afford to pay $100,000,000 a year in taxes, and perhaps the state and its local units of government are in a bad condition because of its $573,000,000 indebtedness, but to go into debt wisely is good business in the opinion of Dr. Carl C. Taylor, dean of the graduate school of State College.

"This state and all others will have to increase taxes as long as our units of government are called upon to render increased services," he declared. "Our annual tax burden for state, county, municipal, and other units of North Carolina is less than thirty dollars per capita, and our indebtedness is only $153 per capita. There is nothing to be very badly frightened over in an indebtedness per capita of $150 when we know that we have made this debt to build roads and schools, to make internal improvements, to furnish health and welfare services, to render social services of all kinds, and to engage in other governmental activities demanded by the people and which would have been poor business not to do," Dr. Taylor said. To see that the taxpayers get value in services for every dollar paid in taxes; to see that the taxes are equitably assessed and col-

CHEMICAL ENGINEERS URGED TO HEAR COOKE

All members of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers are requested to attend the lecture by Morris L. Cooke tonight at eight o'clock in 103 Bingham hall. This talk is being sponsored by the Taylor Society but is expected to be of interest to the engineers. Cooke's speech is to be on the subject of "The Experience of America with Union—Management Cooperation."

Cooke's lecture is one of a series on matters of interest in the field of economics and industrial problems, which the department of economics and commerce is sponsoring. He is a former president of the Taylor Society.

J. GROVER BEARD ELECTED ACTING PHARMACY DEAN

Received Ph.G. Degree in Pharmacy Here in 1909 and Has Been Pharmacy School Secretary Since 1915.

Professor J. Grover Beard has been elected acting dean of the Pharmacy school in place of the late Dean Vernon Howell, who founded the school thirty-three years ago and who served it faithfully during that time.

Acting Dean Beard is a graduate of the University, having graduated with the class of 1909 and later received the degree of Ph. G. in pharmacy. He has been a professor here practically ever since the time of his graduation and has been secretary of the school of pharmacy since 1915.

In September of 1929 he was elected to the presidency of the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy. The convention was held at Rapid City, South Dakota. This association is made up of sixty leading colleges and schools of pharmacy in the country. Beginning in 1932 this group will require a minimum four year course of study for graduation from an accredited school of pharmacy.

Beard has long been prominent in pharmacy work in the state, and has held important positions in state and national pharmaceutical associations. The association which he heads has chosen him chairman of a syllabus committee of twenty-one members, which is to outline a suggested minimum course of study for all institutions holding membership in the association.

Beard was recently named secretary of a committee of fifteen, appointed by the American Council on Education, of

Ex-Governor Byrd Visits University

Ex-Governor Harry F. Byrd of Virginia came through Chapel Hill yesterday afternoon about four-thirty o'clock to visit the University and to pay his respects to President Frank Graham but found that Mr. Graham had just left for Raleigh. He drove up to South building in Governor Gardner's big black limousine, accompanied by Tyre C. Taylor, executive secretary to Gardner, and United States Senator Josiah W. Bailey of Raleigh. When the car, with license plate "number one" passed through town the rumor went out that Governor Gardner had come for a conference with the President.

As he had not seen the University since he attended the Carolina-Virginia football game in 1929, Mr. Byrd decided to drive by here on his way to Raleigh from Duke University which he inspected earlier in the afternoon. He addressed the General Assembly in Raleigh last night.

The party, upon finding both Mr. Graham and the executive secretary, Robert B. House, out of town, remained only long enough to look over the University. Mr. Byrd stated briefly that he was "greatly interested in the University of North Carolina" and wished to meet its new president.

The former chief executive of Virginia is a brother of the explorer and aviator Commander "Dick" Byrd.

A Selfish Fight

In following the actions of the legislature from day to day one is impressed with the power exercised by the State Merchants' Association. We were particularly impressed last week when Mr. Willard Dowell, secretary of that body, appeared before the Senate committee on counties, cities and towns to urge the enactment of a bill which would eliminate dormitory stores, the University Consolidated Service plants and other useful services rendered by University agencies.

We understand that the action of the association was prompted by local merchants. We understand that the most powerful organization in this state seeks to eliminate that part of the University's student population which is dependant upon incomes derived from dormitory store services.

On the face of things the association is fighting for self-preservation. Investigation into the true state of affairs in Chapel Hill will reveal different conditions. These stores render one service which in itself justifies their existence—the elimination of peddlers from the dormitories. A study of the history of the service plants show that they were brought in to being to fill a need which was not and will not be filled by independent enterpreneurs. Say what one may the University is for the students primarily, and the students will not get the services from independent agencies that they get from the Consolidated Service Plants.

The fight of the Mechants' Association is a selfish one. Long before the service plants came into being independent agencies failed. Why impose upon the University population the penalty for the lack of energy displayed by independent agencies?

Or Shall We Let Her Decide?

The problem of selecting a wife will interest most of us at least once during our lifetime, and in some cases, even more than once. Many men have worried themselves into haggard wrecks wondering whether or not She would be the ideal wife. And many of us will soon be reduced to the same state trying to find definite standards by which to select a mate. It is an important selection; there is no denying that, and we certainly ought to have some certain and definite base for this all-important future choice of ours.

Let us look back in history and take the case of the famous Renaissance physicist, Kepler. In his first matrimonial speculation, he married for money, only to find too late that he had purchased his freedom from pecuniary troubles at the expense of domestic happiness. Furthermore, his wife went mad, and died. All of which did not turn out to be a happy marriage.

He determined to be more careful the second time. Being a great scientist, he went about the task of choosing his next spouse in a mathematical manner. Eleven women showed themselves as likable prospects. He carefully analysed their respective merits and demerits on paper. After studying them carefully for some time, he married the one whose merits outnumbered and whose demerits were less than any of the others. And this venture was even more unfortunate than his first! All of which, of course, may prove absolutely nothing, but which is rather interesting.

What, then, are we to do? If a mathematician, using the highest form of reason, could not choose the correct wife, how can we laymen, using only our emotions and feelings for a guide, be expected to do better? Shall we blindly marry the woman with whom we fall in love; or shall we turn to reason for the solution?

Or—and this is what most of us will eventually do—shall we let Her decide?—P. L.

Judgment Suspended

Recently five former officials of Rutherfordton banks now defunct were convicted of violation of the state banking laws. Judge Hoyle Sink continued prayer for judgment until the May term of court. The Greensboro Daily News says "judgment will be suspended against the defendants if they can raise sufficient funds to make good the losses for which they were held responsible." Such an outcome would be to the advantage of the depositors of the banks and would alleviate the hardship caused by the closing of the banks. Also, the convicted men are heads of industrial enterprises, which, if the men were sent to prison, would suffer greatly. Possibly a shutdown would result, and the unemployment situation would be aggravated.

The News, in an editorial on this situation, criticizes the decision, on the grounds that it "strikes at the fundamentals of justice"; that it is unfair for bankers to get away with theft because they can refund the money, while poor men are sent to prison.

It is true that such discrimination is unfair. It should not exist, but, under the present system of government, it seems unavoidable. As the situation is now, when such discrimination is beneficial to a great number of people, it is justified. The public interest should not be sacrificed to meet the demands of abstract justice.—H. B.

America Gains Promotion

America is becoming more intellectual! A decade or more ago, all newspapers and other publications intended for mass persual were written on a mental level of 12-year olds, this being taken as the intelligence quotient of the average American citizen. An article in the Atlantc Monthly explains a recent instance where all radio broadcasting stations have been instructed by the Federal Bureau of Education to present their programs "on the level of 13-year olds."

What is the use of a liberal arts education when society is maintained on the level of a 12- or 13-year old? A college graduate who has spent four of the best years of his life to be able to understand Bacon's essays, or Kant's philosophy finds himself listening to a speaker who deems it necessary to stop every now and then to explain in "baby-talk" certain things which the adolescents in the audience might not have understood.

In Europe the problem is easily solved by the class division system, but in democratic America class distinction is frowned upon. The result is that the intellectual must perforce mask his knowledge or else suffer the appellation of "high-brow."—Junior Collegian.

GUILFORD CHOIR WELL RECEIVED

Somehow, the maxim, "a man is not without fame except in his own back yard," did not obtain in connection with the concert of the Guilford College A Cappella Choir presented in the Music Hall last Sunday afternoon, because the auditorium was well filled with people who "came, saw, and were conquered" by the surprising efforts of Max Noah and his singers. The talented group exploited the library of sacred music, and put it across in an unusual manner.

Several old negro spirituals were sung in a manner that approached perfection. "Steal Away," and "Were You There" by Burleigh were two of the most appealing numbers in this group, and were sung perfectly.

One selection was rendered by Mrs. Max Noah, wife of the director of the club. She was accompanied by a beautiful, low, humming ensemble.

35 Arts Students On Probation Check Work

Last quarter the school of liberal arts had eighty students on probation because of failure to pass the required amount of work. Of these eighty persons thirty-five checked everything at mid-term of the winter quarter. Thirteen of the same eighty received only one W and checked the remainder of their courses.

Many students think that if the delinquent student checks all of his courses at mid-term of the quarter following his probation, the probation is withdrawn. This, however, is not true and the probation still holds good until the end of the quarter.

Electrical, mechanical, and civil engineering students will take the United States Civil service examination today under the direction of S. W. Bynum, of the local post office. This examination will enable the students to be recognized as junior engineers and will be given in the physics laboratory in Phillips hall.

lected, and to see that the incidence of taxes shift with the shift in wealth and income are the three really big tax problems before North Carolina today.

There has been a big shift in the sources of wealth and income in North Carolina in the last fifty years from agriculture to other enterprises, he declared. The $100,000,000 dividends declared by the tobacco manufacturing industries in this state as compared with the lack of income of the farmer producers of tobacco is ample evidence of this. That we do not have the nerve to shift our taxes with these shifting sources of income and so get our tax money from the sources where money is being made and wealth accumulated is one of the chief troubles in North Carolina.

The task of developing wealth in North Carolina that is capable of carrying a $100,000,000 per year tax burden is of even more importance than the equality in assessment and the shifting of tax burdens from non-paying to paying enterprises and persons, Dr. Taylor believes. Therefore the live-at-home program of Governor Gardner is more important than any proposal yet made about either lowering taxes or decreasing expenditures.

The speaker made the distinction also that "farming in Holland is really agricultural husbandry. The owner as well as the renter has before him a well balanced program of agricultural activities for the next two, three or even five or six years to come. The work of the farmer in North Carolina is often looked on as just a job—the taking of a crop from the land and meanwhile managing to carry on life. There is a surprising prevalence of the idea that anybody is good enough for farming."

Dr. Hollander stated also that he had been struck with the absence in the South of the spirit of self-reliance prevalent among Holland's farmers—the idea that there is a vital connection between his care and forethought, and the well being of himself and his family.

Diminishes the Din of Steel Construction to a Whisper

IN Boston—Dallas—Los Angeles—and in other cities, lofty buildings are going up so quietly that the passerby all but stops and strains an ear for the old familiar clangor.

Silently, swiftly, rigidly, economically, arc welding knits steel with joints as strong as the metal itself.

Arc welding is being used more and more in the fabrication of buildings and machinery, the construction of pipe lines and tanks, and as a repair tool of universal utility.

Development of General Electric arc welding has largely been the work of college-trained men. Others of the college men at General Electric are largely responsible for the high reputation won by hundreds of G-E products used in industry and in the home during the last thirty-seven years.

Carolina 37; Sewanee 28

The Tar Heels successfully closed their 1931 basketball season with a 37-28 victory over Sewanee last night in the Tin Can.

Carolina had the lead continually until the middle of the last half when a Sewanee rally made the score 24-21. However, the Tar Heels staged a rally of their own which won the game.

Paul Edwards, forward led the Tar Heel scorers with nine points, being closely followed by Dameron and Alexander with seven each. Captain Goodman led the Sewanee contingent with nine points.

It was Carolina's seventh win out of thirteen Conference games.

The first half was a battle between two tight defenses with the Tar Heels having the slight edge. The score at half being 17-14. Captain Goodman led the scoring for the half with seven points while Marpet and Moore led Carolina with four apiece.

Yesterday after I had turned this column in to the sports editor a representative of one of our largest insurance companies dropped into the office to consult me on a grave problem which he asks to be herein explained.

It seems that the agent witnessed one of our recent basketball games in the Tin Can and was professionally horrified to note the Carolina rooters swaying the stands with a hand clapping and stomping display designed to exhort the White Phantoms to greater heights. "Now," reasoned the insurance mogul, "what if repeated demonstrations of enthusiasm as this would cause the collapse of the bleachers?"

Calling to his command a few simple algebraical formulas, he quickly discovered that if two thousand pairs of feet were to pound day and night on the bleachers for a period of one year, three months, twenty-six days, and fourteen hours, they would collapse and hurl the occupants to the floor.

Although we admit, journalisticly speaking, that such an event would make good news (Think of it in huge headlines—"Twelve Hundred Mangled As Stands Collapse") there are really very few of us who would enjoy such bodily torture as would accompany such a catastrophy.

Now the agent suggests that insurance policies be offered all basketball fans to cover possible injuries when the bleachers eventually collapse at a big game. The small sum of fifty cents down and three dollars a week would cover each policy. Fifty per cent of the policy money would go to the athletic association for the purchase of equipment such as jersies, socks, snow shoes, and curling irons for the backgammon team.

If you wish to learn more about this marvelous scheme, send twenty-five cents and a self-addressed envelope, and just to teach you a lesson, we'll keep the twenty-five cents.

Freshman Lightheavy Defeats State Yearling Heavy By Knockout.

Peyton Brown, Carolina's sensational freshman lightheavy weight, went Frank Merriwell one better Saturday night over at Raleigh. Brown entered the ring in spite of the fact that he was in possession of a newly discovered case of measles. Brown has been on the sick list since the fight.

The measles were first discovered when the team began to dress for the bouts, but in the ensuing excitement everybody forgot them, including Brown. Coach Allen suggested that a "quarantine" sign be attached to his prize lightheavy, but that was the last thought given to Brown and his measles.

As the bouts progressed, it was announced that State would forfeit the lightheavy weight bout to Carolina. Brown didn't like the idea of being ready to fight and then not having anyone to oppose him, so when he remembered that Lacey Pace, the regular heavyweight, was nursing a bad side, he asked permission to fight in the heavyweight division. Coach Allen consented, and Jim Wadsworth received the forfeit in the lightheavy while Brown stepped into the ring against the State heavyweight.

Brown was giving away twenty-six pounds in weight and may have been handicapped by sickness, but results fail to prove this. Brown cut loose with a murderous right to the jaw in the second round that put an end to the entertainment, and caused his opponent to be carried from the ring unconscious.

BEAM BROTHERS LEAD

Score Seventeen Points to Aid Question Marks Remain Undefeated.

Led by the Beam brothers, the Question Marks clinched the dormitory championship by defeating Ranson House 22-13 yesterday afternoon. The Question Marks have won six straight and lost none, while their nearest rivals, New Dorms and the Best House, have each lost one game.

The Question Marks outclassed the Ranson House and were never seriously in danger.

E. Beam topped the winners with nine points, while H. Beam was a close second with eight points. Barnwell scored five points.

For the losers, E. Hunter was best with four points. Baird, F. Hunter, and Hawkins tied for second place with three points each.

The Question Marks will meet the winner of the Kappa Alpha-Phi Delta Theta game for the campus championship in the Tin Can next Monday night, probably.

An unusual thing about Navy's athletic system is that a team must win the majority of its games in order that the members of the team get letters.

That policy could be adopted at Carolina to good advantage. Undoubtedly, all men who are good enough to make a varsity team deserve letters, but there also can be no doubting that a letter would mean more, both to the monogram men and to the non-monogram men, if letters were only awarded to winning teams, or those who won over half the games played.

The great George Kojac was finally beaten. It was done by a Navy lad too. Midshipman Ray Thompson did the trick Thursday in a dual meet as the gobs defeated Rutgers, 42-29. But Thompson had to set a Navy record before accomplishing the feat . . . King Baseball can't be far away. Incidently, Bunn was the first person to teach George V of England how to throw a curve ball. Bunn says he was a pretty rotten pupil. This happened while Bunn was a member of the New York Giants, who with members of the Chicago White Sox, toured the world in 1913.

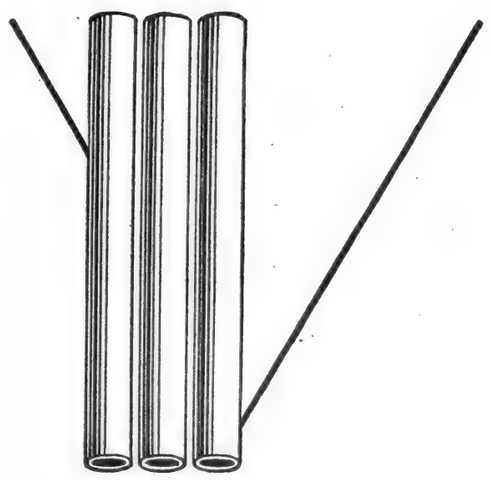
TAR BABIES ARE STATE FRESHMAN MIT CHAMPIONS

Victory Over State Yearlings Gives Coach Allen's Team Undisputed Title.

UNDEFEATED FOR SEASON

Also Claim Southern Title, Having Defeated V. M. I., V. P. I., Virginia, and Duke.



The Carolina Freshman boxing team has the undisputed claim to the state title by virtue of having defeated State College 4½ to 2½ last Saturday.

All the Carolina wins except the bout forfeited by State, came by the knockout route, and each knockout came in the second round.

By defeating State, the Carolina freshmen finished their season without a defeat and took the state freshmen title. They also have a clear claim to the Southern Conference championship, having won over the V. M. I., V. P. I., Virginia, Duke, and State freshmen teams. Out of the forty-two bouts fought during the season, the Tar Babies won thirty-one, lost ten, and drew in the other. Fourteen of the victories were by knockouts.

In winning over the Wolflets, the Tar Babies presented their popular coach, Archie Allen, with a championship team in his first fling at the coaching racket. Last year Allen was captain of Coach Crayton Rowe's varsity battlers.

After a rip-roaring good time at a pep session, three hundred freshmen of Washington and Lee crashed a local theatre clad only in pajamas. They varied in style from peppermint striped nighties to black satin lounging pants.

6-0 lead at the end of the first quarter and were never in danger. The Phi Gam's were held scoreless three quarters of the game, scoring only in the second quarter.

It was the first loss of the season for the Phi Gam's, who had previously won nine straight, while the Kappa Alpha's have won eight straight while losing none.

H. Phipps, forward, with four points, and John Phipps, guard, with one action toss, played good for the winners while for the Phi Gam's, Boucher and Howard contributed an action toss each and Dewey played a good defensive game.

The score at the half time was 8-5 in favor of the Kappa Alpha's.

The Phi Delta Theta's eliminated the Sigma Zeta's yesterday afternoon in the second game of the play-offs for the fraternity championship. The Sigma Zeta's led throughout the first half but were unable to hold their lead in the second half, losing 19-7.

The Phi Delt's opened up with a rush, Moore scoring in the opening minutes, but the Sigma Zeta's tied the score and went into the lead on successive goals by Dave Feit, stellar forward. With an 8-7 lead at the end of the third quarter the Phi Delt's went to work, running up eleven points in the last quarter while holding their opponents scoreless.

through membership on the boards of control. The board of control of The Daily Illini, for instance, is composed of four faculty and four students. This board directs the Illini Publishing Company which owns The Daily Illini.

At Northwestern University, a board of student publications, which is composed of three faculty members appointed by the president of the university, one of whom acts as chairman; one alumni member selected by the student council; the president of the senior class; the president of the student council; one junior or senior student selected by the student council, directs all student publications there. This board appoints all major officers for student publication.

At Michigan, Nebraska, New York University, North Carolina, North Dakota, University of Texas, the board of control of publications is composed of faculty and students. In some cases the board is made up of six students and three faculty, but more often it is four students and three faculty.

Although the alumni have a great deal to do with the control of athletics, they have little to do with publications. Except for the cases where faculty members serving on the board are also alumni, there are only two dailies mentioning direct alumni representation on the board of control. One is The Daily Northwestern, already mentioned, and the other is The Columbia Spectator which is under the jurisdiction of a board of governors composed of four undergraduates, four faculty, and three alumni.

The Cornell Daily Sun has a board of directors composed of two professors, one university administrator, and three townspeople. Most of the other dailies not already mentioned are controlled by boards made up entirely of students.

To direct a daily publication is an important undertaking. Because of the burden it places upon a student, many of the college publications divide the responsibility by having an editor and business manager serve a half year instead of the full academic term. This has the added advantage of enabling many more persons to receive training. Competition is an integral part in the final selection of the editor or business manager. Out of several hundred who may try out for the staff in the freshman year, a score or more are selected for service during the sophomore year and this number is again cut in the junior year. Out of those who have succeeded so far are elected or selected the editor or business manager. Several papers have three major positions instead of the usual two. Some have a chairman of the board who is in general charge of both the editorial and business departments. Others have an editor in charge of policy, a managing editor in charge of news, and the business manager in charge of business matters.

Methods used in selecting the editor on some papers are herewith noted briefly. Upon The Daily Californian he is chosen from the eligible juniors by the senior editorial board to act as assistant editor for one semester. At the end of that time he automatically becomes editor for the following semester. The appointment is then approved by the publications council which is made up of editors and managers of all campus publications and confirmed by the executive committee.

The staff of The Stanford Daily elects an editor twice every school year. At Yale the editor is elected by members of his own board who have gotten on The News through competition. After twelve men from a class have been taken on The News they comprise a board and elect their own officers. The editor of The Daily Illini is chosen by the board of control at end of his junior year. All candidates petition and are interviewed by the board. Practically the same method is followed by The Daily Northwestern.

The editor of the Indiana Daily Student is selected by the faculty at end of each semester. His selection is based upon results of competition. The editor of The Ohio State Lantern and The Butler Collegian are selected by the journalism faculty. The editor of The Harvard Crimson is appointed by the outgoing editor, who bases his selection upon the results of competition. At Radcliffe the editor is elected from desk editors. Each desk editor has one vote, the retiring business manager one vote and the retiring editor-in-chief two votes. The editor of The Dartmouth is chosen by a directorate composed of the editor-in-chief and two managing editors. At Princeton he is elected by news, business and photographic board of Princetonian.

After serving as associate editor of The Cornell Daily Sun for at least a year he goes through a three months' editorial-writing competition as well as one which shows his fitness for the managing editor's berth in case he isn't editor. This is the method followed at Cornell. The outgoing editor and managing editor of the Syracuse Daily Orange select the incoming editor. The editor of The Daily Tar Heel receives his position by a campus-wide election.

Editors of the Oklahoma Daily and The Daily O'Collegian are appointed by a board of publications. The editor of the Oregon State Daily Barometer is elected by a majority vote of a publications board consisting of the incumbent editor, his associate editor, president of the Associated Students, one woman representative of the Barometer, head of the journalism department, and two other faculty members.

The editor of the Brown Daily Herald is elected by the outgoing board following a competition which starts in the freshman year. Under this arrangement sophomores are made assistant editors, juniors become desk editors and are responsible for writing of many editorials and special stories. The editor of The Daily Cardinal at the University of Wisconsin receives his place upon the recommendation of the preceding editor and approval of board of control of five students.

The college dailies of the country are accomplishing things which are a credit to colleges and their students. But the newspapers not issued so frequently and other types of college publications are also doing effective work. The Epsilog will treat the other publications in future issues.

UTOPIAN COLLEGE BASES EDUCATION ON INDIVIDUALISM

Jack Dungan, Tar Heel Managing-Editor Surveys New Education Plans Over WPTF.

Jack Dungan, speaking from radio station WPTF, Raleigh, yesterday afternoon at five o'clock on the subject "Utopian College Education and How It Relates to the University of North Carolina," stated that old methods, old standards, and old ideas are being discarded by the most venerable of educators, and that there have been recent radical departures from the staid old ideas of education.

Dungan stated that the student body of the University of North Carolina is interested in these new educational ideas, citing the fact that the Daily Tar Heel has recently protested against the repeal of optional attendance which has been the privilege of the students for some time.

The speaker emphasized the idea forwarded by John Dewey, professor at Columbia University, that the instructor is not a master from whose lips falls all the cumulative wisdom of the world, but is a master student who is the teacher in the study of the question at hand. He made the point also that in this present machine age in which all things are factory made, education, because of its individualism, holds an outstanding place. Dungan mentioned in this connection, the plan being promoted at St. Stephen's College of Columbia U. for each student to have an individual curriculum based on the ability and personality of the student. Other colleges are reducing the number of required courses.

Dungan pointed out striking changes which have been made in various colleges and universities. At Yale, a plan being used reduces the amount of required

Carolina Graduate Is Imprisoned On Communism Charge

Henry Fuller, bookseller, graduate of the University in the class of 1925 was imprisoned in the Memphis, Tennessee, jail for the past weekend. Fuller went to the police headquarters and inquired for the local communist meeting place. Commissioner Davis locked the man in prison, as is the custom when anyone asks about or seems unduly interested in the communistic movement.

Fuller said that he had been to meetings of the communists in New York, Paris, and New Orleans. When he was released on Monday he thanked the commissioner for a pleasant and instructive stay and left.

He is a member of a very prominent family in Florida. He is not, however, taking work here now as the state papers have stated. His home, when not traveling, is with Dr. Archibald Henderson. His wife is a graduate student in the University.

Soil Tests for Bell Tower Satisfactory

Soil tests have been made at the location on which the new memorial tower is to be built, and have been found satisfactory. Upon completion of these tests, the work of digging the intrenchments for the base of the building was begun, and will be finished within a short time.

Members of the buildings department have been engaged to move the water pipe which leads to Kenan stadium, since this pipe was directly under the site of the tower.

APPLICATIONS FOR LOANS SHOULD BE MADE EARLY

Dean Bradshaw has requested that all students who desire to make application for loans for the spring quarter do so as soon as possible, so that the amount of money needed for this purpose may be determined.

GLEE CLUB WILL SING AT GUILFORD SATURDAY NIGHT

Concert There To Be Followed By Trips To Southern Pines And Winston-Salem.

Following what was pronounced by those who have participated in glee club activity for several years as the finest concert ever to be rendered by this organization on the occasion of the club's visit to Spring Hope last Friday night, plans for three concerts to be given in close succession, are under way.

With the entire squad of some fifty men undergoing intensive training and with the selection of the thirty singers who are to make the concert trips unknown until the day before the club departs, competition has become acute in all departments. Men who have never represented the University in glee club activity off the campus are being considered for one, two, or three of the remaining concerts. Several new men made the trip to Spring Hope last week.

The glee club concert at Guilford Saturday night will be an "exchange of courtesy" with the A Capella Choir of that institution, which gave a concert here last Sunday afternoon.

The program has not been definitely decided upon, but the club will probably render one similar to that delivered in Spring Hope last Saturday night.

On Sunday, the club will sing at the Church of Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines. The University music department is not unknown in Southern Pines as Professor and Mrs. T. S. McCorkle have often presented violion and piano concerts there on special occasions.

On Tuesday of next week the glee club will journey to Winston-Salem, to give a concert.

James Pfohl, of that city, active in musical activities since coming to Chapel Hill, is responsible for the engagement of the musical group in his home city.

The program of this engagement has not been announced, as variety is desired of the different arrangements. Selections from sacred songs, Russian melodies, Finnish lullabies, and English songs will compose the main portion of the program, with other numbers which will be decided by the instructor.

This appearance of the club in Winston-Salem is assured a large audience, according to advance notices, in view of the recent successes of the University singers, and the fact that several years have elapsed since the last appearance of the club in that city.

Student Program Has Extra Number

The student entertainment committee has added another number to the program list of those already secured. It is planned to have Randolph Churchill, son of Winston Churchill, famous English statesman, to lecture here Tuesday, March 10. This addition to the entertainment program has been made possible through the gift of an alumnus of the University.

Young Churchill has been touring the country making lectures in many of the important student centers. The probable topic for his lecture will be "Why I Am Not a Socialist."

BUSINESS WORLD WANTS HEALTHY MEN, SAYS COACH

Coach "Bob" Fetzer, at Sophomore Smoker, Stresses Importance of Sound Body.

Coach "Bob" Fetzer in speaking before the sophomore class last night at their smoker in Swain hall told the members of that class that next to their academic work, the most important thing in college life is athletics.

"It is generally conceded that the object of an education is to fit men and women for life and for citizenship. What can be more essential than a sound body? Again, what can be more essential than the development of character? To learn by actual experience the real lessons of sportmanship?"

"The Commonwealth of Boston, Massachusetts states, 'Any system of education, however perfect must fail if the physical and mental condition of the person to be educated be not healthy, responsive, and alert.' And again, 'What shall it profit a man if he gain the curriculum and lose his health.' "

The athletic director went on to say that athletics is a legitimate part of the college program and that it is the privilege and obligation of every student at the University to engage in some form of athletic endeavor.

It is Fetzer's opinion that a student who does not participate in some sport is not fully developing himself to compete in the great game of life, and that he is also not discharging his full duty to the University. The University athletic association has provided ample facilities for the participation in athletics of as great a number of students as wish to do so.

"The University is being called upon to produce real, finished men. Men who are ready and willing to take their places in the world. Men, who will not be forced aside in modern business or in life, because of an ailing body. Health is necessary for success in business and in life, and the same elements of success in athletics are welcomed and sought after in the business world. The ideals of sportsmanship, honor, loyalty, courtesy, unselfishness, courage, and initiative; what finer characteristics can a man carry with him from his college training, when he enters the field of business."

As sophomores, who, according to Coach "Bob," should take the lead in all campus activities, the members of the class of 1933 should take an active part in the athletic program here.

Student Petition Has 1200 Signers

The petition asking that the General Assembly seriously consider the bill advocating an appropriation of $875,000 for the University has been signed by over 1200 students. This petition was drawn up by a group of prominent campus leaders and the campus was canvassed two nights running by about seventy-five volunteers, who covered the dormitories one night and the fraternities the next.

It is thought that President Graham will have "Red" Greene, president of the student body, present this important plea on the floor of the Assembly.

Legislative Group To Make Decision On Appropriations

The appropriations committee of the state General Assembly will meet in Raleigh this afternoon to reconsider the formerly endorsed appropriation of $875,000, which the committee passed on last week.

When the committee first voted by a majority of two to one in favor of this approximately $200,000 raise in the former appropriation to the University, it was merely as a suggestion to the legislature, which apparently the latter did not decide to follow.

President Frank Graham is expected to attend the called meeting of the committee this afternoon, and will probably make the same plea as was made before, if such becomes necessary. In his talk before the committee some weeks ago the University president put up an urgent request for a raise in the appropriations rather than the proposed cut which has been much talked around the Capitol. He outlined the advancement which the University had made in the past century or more, and described the destruction the cut would cause in all the work so far.

This $875,000 appropriation which the committee suggested is the same as that voted by the 1929 legislature which was never given to the University, because of a cut to $759,837 the first year. This year's appropriation is $682,700 or twenty percent less than was first appropriated.

House's Father Dies

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, was called to his former home in Thelma yesterday by the death of his father, J. A. House, for many years sheriff of Halifax county. The funeral was held there yesterday at two o'clock. Dean A. W. Hobbs, Secretary H. F. Comer of the Y. M. C. A. and other University officials were present.

MORRIS L. COOKE DELIVERS THREE LECTURES HERE

Says Faculty Distribution Is Chief Economic Evil; Will Speak Again Today.

Foresight and predetermination in planning will solve the problem of industrial stabilization, Morris L. Cooke, consulting engineer in management, of Philadelphia, told a group of economics and engineering students in the Bingham hall auditorium yesterday noon. Mr. Cooke also gave three other lectures during his stay in Chapel Hill.

At eight o'clock last night, he spoke in Gerrard hall at the meeting of the local chapter of the Taylor Society, of which he is a past national president. His topic was "Union-Management Cooperation Through Research." He discussed America's experience with this problem, giving specific examples from the methods employed at the Naumkeag steam cotton plant, largest sheeting manufactory in the world, at Salem, Massachusetts.

Since taking his Master of Science degree from Lehigh University, Mr. Cooke has had extensive experience in industry. For a time, in the early part of his life, he was a newspaper reporter. Those positions which he has held that particularly qualify him for the lecture work he is doing here are these: Director of the department of public works in Philadelphia; chairman of the board of referees of Cleveland garment industry; director of the giant power survey of Pennsylvania; and president of the Taylor Society. Incidentally, the society is responsible for his appearance here.

In view of his prominence and his record of achievement, some of the statements which he made to the student gathering yesterday morning are worth especial consideration. In beginning he declared that, "Success-

Gay MacLaren, The One-Girl-Show, Never Rehearses Performances

Miss Gay MacLaren, who is to present Mrs. Fiske's play Helen's Boys at Memorial hall Monday night at 8:30 o'clock, needs no rehearsals. The one-girl show company never rehearses but works hard.

When Gay MacLaren is through giving a play she is about "all in." She sees the actors on the stage, hears their words, reproduces all as she sees and hears (never seeing the book of the play), but she herself may be thinking about what she had for dinner or where she will go tomorrow. She doesn't "feel" the play anymore than a movie camera, and sometimes is surprised when the audience roars with laughter or swims in tears.

"The first time I see a play, I see it just like anybody else in the audience," says Miss MacLaren. "I go back and see it again and again. I make no effort to remember it, but when I have seen it four or five times I find that the pictures, action, dialogue are all there permanently in my mind. Sometimes one actor doesn't register as quickly as the rest. When I was hearing the Music Master I couldn't get the lines of David Warfield. I went again and again and got none of them. Then suddenly I got it all, every accent."

The play stays with her. Ten years ago a great audience gathered to hear her give for the first time Out There, the war play. A guest with her suggested that she go away so she could rehearse the play. "Oh no," Miss MacLaren replied, "I don't rehearse. It will come to me when I get on the stage."

A few minutes before she was to give Channing Pollock's The Enemy by request of a university, the committeemen asked the same question, "Do you want to be alone to get ready to give the play?" She hadn't thought of this play for months, but she said, "No, I'll get enough rehearsing on the platform."

The day the Brooklyn Institute managers were to present her for her first appearance in the East, they nearly had a fit. They couldn't find her after advertising their prodigy. An hour before the appearance time they were scouring Brooklyn. She wasn't at the home of friends of Mrs. Manning, where she was stopping. She was finally found window shopping.

A few minutes before the time to begin she jauntily walked into the Institute ante-room for her portentious debut the calmest one there. She slipped on her Roman gown, and announced that she was ready.

Drama Experiment To Be Tried By Playmakers Saturday Night

Much enthusiasm on the part of all connected with the Carolina Playmakers has been aroused by the coming production of Anthony Buttitta's Playthings, the second of a group of experimental presentations to be sponsored by the dramatic organization this winter. This drama experiment contains, it is claimed, a cosmopolitan aspect, unusual psychology, philosophy of fourth dimensional magnitude, and extraordinary technique of production as well as an approach to the use of the fourth dimension in production technique.

The production Saturday night is the second experimental studio presentation of original plays, the first taking place two weeks ago when The Blue Remembered Hills, by Ted Herman, was given. Admission to the production is entirely invitational.

Buttitta's play, written in the play-writing class under the direction of Professor Frederick H. Koch, is a cool psychological drama, based upon the chief character's obsession that some one is attempting to ferret out his reason for living entirely alone in a great deal of seclusion.

Three persons, playing the parts of seven characters compose the cast, which includes Whitner Bissell, Eve Brickman, and Harold Blaumstrom. Walter Grotyohann directs the play, while John S. Edwards is stage manager.

*Plaything*s, according to all accounts, is exceedingly original in the dialogue, technique, and arrangement, and is unique in the way both minor and important details are handled.

Among those who are taking particular interest in the production Saturday night is Paul Green, whose In Abraham's Bosom won the 1927 Pulitzer prize.

Speaking about the Buttitta play, Green said recently: "The play, it seems to me, has three levels of reality, with the possibility and suggestion of a fourth dimensional concept. It makes an unusual twist of the play within a play technique in an attempt to show, quite unconsciously, the effect of illusion upon reality."

Green lauds the play as being free from the modern slant of melodrama, sexual perversion, and sensationalism and is strictly a piece of work with with so much psychology and philosophy that it is a different type of dramatic composition.

Where Is The Money?

A legislator remarked recently that the legislature was willing to appropriate the money necessary to maintain the University and other state institutions in a decent manner if it could be shown where the revenue could be secured. This legislator revealed a tendency which he had hoped that the present legislators would not show—a fear of imposing any burden upon these powerful interests which exercise their influence either through skilled lobbyists in Raleigh or from their positions of power back home.

In this time of general depression it is not reasonable to ask the University, the educational institutions, and the other departments of the state to bear the entire burden. But unless means of securing additional revenue is revealed then it seems that we will bear the brunt of the depression. Additional revenue can be secured if the legislature sees fit to impose a general sales tax.

Such a measure has been discussed and brought to the attention of the legislature by representatives of other states which have tried the plan. Such a measure is being opposed by that almost all-powerful organization, the State Merchants' Association. This organization contends that the burden of collecting the tax would fall on the merchants. But the burden of paying such a tax would be imposed upon the consumers. We admit the burden which the merchants seem indisposed to bear. But we beg of them to consider that after all this burden will be no greater than that which has been imposed upon other classes, chiefly the landowners, for many years. A sales tax is just and reasonable. It burdens no one class unreasonably. It should be adopted.

Get The Wires Busy

We have all promised to write home asking the folks back in Buncombe, Guilford, Brunswick, New Hanover, Mecklenburg, etc., to write, wire, or telephone the legislators to protect the University from the budgeteers' axe, so that the thirty-four percent cut over the appropriation of two years ago will not go through.

That is what is expected of loyal sons of the University in times of need, but procrastination—that enervator of most good intentions—may have laid hands upon the most well-intentioned of us. If that be so, and if there be any one in the University who has not written home about the matter there is not one moment to be lost. A weary legislature may be already turning its face homeward and in a last minute barrage of enemy argument the University and its proponents may sink down in defeat.

If you haven't written home, do so.—Jack D.

Going The Chinese One Better

We are going, in this editorial to say nothing new, nothing that anybody in even his wildest imagination could call startling. But there will be one somewhat remarkable thing about this editorial, and that is that a southerner is about to say what northerners have been saying a long time.

We read yesterday morning that Dr. A. N. J. den Hollander told the North Carolina Club that in Holland tenants are compensated for any improvements that they may make in their holdings. The implication is plain, and the criticism is plain. Southerners go through life letting well enough alone. A southerner would probably explain away his very dying with "Thus did my father," and he wouldn't need to draw on Mr. Kipling for the four words. "Thus did my father," and his father, and his father, and his father, and his father; and he'd make just as endless story as Scheherazade ever did.

That excuse for everything, and the reverence for "Mine Own People" that goes with it, is very efficiently damning to any progress. Heaven deliver us from the man without any loyalties, but heaven preserve us from the man with insane loyalties! It isn't so much loyalty, either, as it's just pure ancestor worship. And we may as well get over the idea that any man, even the blondest and bluest eyed Nordic, if he comes from above Maryland, is a foreign devil. That's going the Chinese one better.—V. A. D.

Democrats . . . Watch Your Step!

The election of 1932 is not so far off, and the Democrats will do well to think several times before they tackle any issue, and after deciding what issues to tackle they might take considerable care as to which side of the question they take. In particular they will be very wise if they let prohibition alone. The country is at present hopelessly divided on this question and an attempt to make it an issue will only serve to further divide an already disunited party. Prohibition is an excellent issue to straddle. Some might argue that it would be a good policy to take one side of the prohibition question thus drawing the voters adhering to that particular view. The difficulty lies in the fact that the sentiment on prohibition is not unified in any particular section nor is the sentiment on either side very predominant in many sections. This condition makes it difficult to determine the most opportune side to take. Any attempt to determine the sentiment of the majority of the people is mere speculation, and thus it is extremely dangerous to make an issue of such an uncertain question when it is quite easy to let it alone.—J. C. S.

With Contemporaries

And Then Some

The Charlotte News refers to the address of Dr. Frank Graham before the joint committee of the General Assembly as being worth $300,000 to the University of North Carolina.

Then that newspaper goes on to say in part:

"There wasn't much genuine questioning of the capacity of Dr. Frank Graham when his friends made a drive in his behalf and against his will before the board of trustees of that institution to have him made president of the University, but somebody did suggest that he might not be quite forceful enough, a little too timid and modest and unassertive, and especially for the sort of driving fight that would have to be made for the University within the next few years.

"Well, whoever had any such notions about the young executive of the University have already had abundant occasion to see just how deeply in error they were.

"The budget commission of the state had marked the University down from an appropriation of around $800,000 to something like $500,000 when Dr. Graham went over to Raleigh the other day to appear before the appropriations committee of the General Assembly. He stood up before that body in a matter-of-fact sort of way and with his usual calm demeanour, and presented the situation at the University, what the reduced appropriation would mean in the way of setting the institution back, and when he had gotten through with his cool, but deeply earnest and sincere appeal, instead of taking him to task for his assumacy, members of the committee thanked him for his informative and impressive presentation, and this week the University was allotted its $800,000."

Yes that might be called a three hundred thousand dollar speech and if you attach compound interest to that over a period of a generation you put money value to that speech up into the millions of dollars. And it was a boost for higher education that is worth more than the monetary value.—Edenton Daily News.

Birth Control

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, superlative conservative, has progressed to the consideration of a bill providing for legalized birth control. Thirty-one states have already passed a law resembling that which is causing so much agitation on Beacon Street. Nor is the move as sectionalized as the stir in the local press would have it. The Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate is now considering a bill permitting doctors to give contraceptive information to their patients at their discretion, to publish such information in medical journals and to send and receive it through the mails.

While the hearing at Washington is so far privy to the world, the discussion is more in public focus at Boston. As was expected, the Roman Catholic Church is furnishing most of the opposition. The attitude of Catholics is wholly understandable. It follows logically and intelligently from the first premises of Catholic theology. The Church of Rome, consciously limiting itself to the sphere of faith and morals, takes no cognizance of the economic and social aspects of the question. It regards the problems of chastity and procreation as it did in the seventh century and as it probably will a thousand years hence. Ageless and universal, it cannot and will not change its doctrine. Birth control, according to its tenets, must be practiced only by abstinence.

The proponents of the bill are undoubtedly actuated by the highest of priciples. They are trying to solve a modern economic and social condition with the methods of the twentieth century. More individualistic than the Catholic pronunciamento their view is nevertheless not primarily a defense of the right of the individual, but rather an answer to a problem of society as a whole. The industrial age has brought about a condition absolutely reversed from the categorical scheme of an Utopia; it works a totally unnecessary hardship on the poorer classes.

The contrast between the two factions is in the different manner in which they approach the solution of this hardship. To attempt to solve it, as would Catholicism, by the application of a code of morals which ignores the curse of industrial conditions, can in the end only prove disastrous. Sincere professing Catholics are governed by an inflexible law. Since they accept it, they need have nothing to do with a human law which will satisfactorily meet the needs of those of other sects. There is nothing in the bills before the Massachusetts and Federal Legislatures that would make the giving or receiving of contraceptive advice obligatory. For the rest of the people, there will be relief from the present indiscrimination against the classes most in need of information.—Harvard Crimson.

OPEN FORUM

AN ALMA MATER

To the Editor:

Ever in memory's treasure-cell
Thy bell-tones, singing, dwell.
Thrilling in overtones of thy love,
Our hearts, responding, lift and swell,
Dear Mother, Carolina.

Strong as the throbbing life that fills
The oaks that crown thy hills,
Rhythm in harmony with thine own
Thy love within our hearts instils,
Dear Mother, Carolina.

Glad is this spirit, forthright, free;
Thy will not to seem, but be
Direct and neighborly, loyal, true
To faith our fathers dreamed for thee,
Dear Mother, Carolina.

Flaming since Freedom's dawn, thy light
Has guarded free men's right
New truth through reverent toil to win;
Shown patient Truth's eternal might,
Dear Mother, Carolina.

To strong lives lightened in thy way
Long years their honor pay.
Grant strength and spirit attuned with thine
To us, thy sons, in this our day,
Dear Mother, Carolina.

Next week the foreign production will be a French attraction, made in Paris. The title is "Under the Roofs of Paris."

Many Contestants Entered In State High Latin Contest

Fifty-nine schools, represented by 976 contestants, have entered the state high school Latin contest, according to E. R. Rankin, secretary of the contest. Chapel Hill has the largest number of entrants, fifty-five, although Asheville and Albemarle have fifty-three each, and Winston-Salem and Charleston, fifty each.

The contest will be conducted Friday, and is open to all accredited North Carolina public high schools. A trophy cup will be awarded to the school whose student submits the best paper. Durham has won the contest for the past two years, other winners being Charlotte, Lillington, Wilson, and Roxboro. The contest was started in 1925.

STEPPING INTO A MODERN WORLD

Now they manufacture weather for telephone testing

A test illustrating work in the Bell Telephone Laboratories is made with the weatherometer. This device produces rain and sunshine to order, and determines the weather-resisting properties of telephone equipment.

This test indicates an interesting habit of the men engaged in telephone research. It is to get sure knowledge bearing on efficiency, economy, life and reliability of apparatus.

Information is sought continuously during the development of a design, in advance of manufacture and of course long before the equipment gets into use.

Boxers Embark For Southern Tourney

SEVEN FIGHTERS COMPOSE SQUAD TAKEN TO MEET

Tar Heels Rank As Favorites; Held Title In 1928, 1929.

HOLDERNESS' INJURY HEALED

Team In Good Condition for Grueling Tournament; Young To Handle Bantam.

At nine o'clock this morning one of the greatest boxing teams ever to wear the blue and white of Carolina will head toward Charlottesville and the Southern Conference Boxing Tournament. Seven fighters will make the trip accompanied by Coaches Crayton Rowe and Archie Allen, and manager Clarence Weeks.

Led by the brilliant Noah Goodridge, who has won all his bouts this year in decision fashion, the Tar Heels rank as big favorites to regain the title which they held in 1928 and 1929.

Dail Holderness will handle the 145 pound class. While sparring with Achie Allen Tuesday, Holderness was again the victim of the hard luck that has been following him all the year. One of Allen's fast lefts opened a cut in the corner of the right eye that may hurt the hard hitting welter.

John Warren will handle the heavyweight, and ranks as a big favorite to cop the title. Warren has won all six of his bouts this year and topped off his dual meet season by scoring a knockout over Skoberne of Penn State. John suffered a slight hand injury while sparring with Jake Denning, the Durham professional, Tuesday afternoon, but it is not expected that this injury will be serious. Warren has done the best work of his college career this season and his work has given a big boost to Carolina's chances.

Captain Noah Goodridge ranks as odds-on favorite to take the lightweight crown. Goodridge, with only three defeats in his boxing career, is undefeated this season, and in winning over LaGiglia of Virginia, Starnes of Duke, and McAndrews of Penn State, has proved his superiority to the best in the South and East. The Blue and White captain has everything this year, speed, boxing ability, and a punch.

Marty Levinson will handle the featherweight division against the cream of the tournament. Levinson's only loss this year was at the hands of Stoop of Penn State who won the Inter-collegiate title in the 115 pound class last year. Levinson among the best in the South and has a good chance to cop the title although he must face such men as Goldstein of Virginia, Martin of Duke and Menge of Tulane. Goldstein holds a four round decision over Levinson and the hard hitting featherweight is out for revenge.

The veteran Obie Davis will hold down the middleweight division and has a good chance to finish at the top. Davis has only one defeat against his record this year, having lost a technical knockout to Phil Bolich of Duke when Bolich butted him in the eye last week. Davis has recovered from this injury however and should be in great shape for tournament competition.

Platt Landis will handle the lightheavyweight. Landis has been in only two bouts this year winning one and losing one. Landis won decisively over Don Hyatt of Duke and his loss to Miller of Penn State was by a narrow margin. Coach Rowe has been working the big boy in an effort to get him in shape and he has been looking better every day.

Son Young will handle the bantam. Young is a newcomer and has been in only one bout, losing to the veteran Riddick of Duke. Young shows good possibilities, but is handicapped by lack of experience at present.

The team came through the grueling match with Penn State without injury, and will enter the tournament in good shape. They will meet stiff opposition in Virginia, Washington and Lee, Duke, and Tulane.

Intercollegiate Sports

By Don Shoemaker

To Ted Beckett, all-American guard of the University of California 1930 football team, last week went the trophy awarded by the Berkley (Calif.) university club to the "most valuable player of the season." Gridman Beckett was selected from among all players on conference teams.

Fistic artifice is no neglected department of the curriculum of the United States Naval Academy. All prospective members of Uncle Sam's navy must pass a written test on boxing before graduation in the four year course.

Alarmed, did ring fans spring to their feet when Dick Shaughnessy, captain of the University of Washington boxing team limped into the university gym, evidencing great pain in his feet. Coaches and fans alike rushed to the side of the little bantam for a sprained ankle or a broken leg as Shaughnessy's limp indicated sunk boxing title hopes in despair. Much relieved was everyone when it was discovered that a new pair of shoes, a size or two too small was the cause for both limp and alarm.

While cagemen rest between halves at the Marquette University basketball games, spectators conduct a spirited community song fest by way of relaxation.

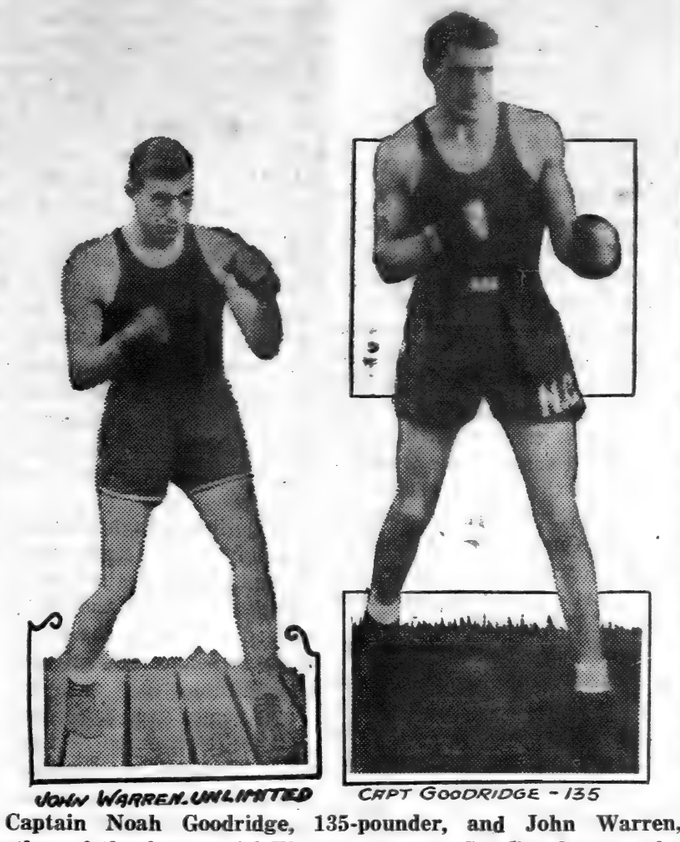
PHI DELT'S AND K. A.'S TO CLASH FOR GREEK TITLE

Championship Games Scheduled For Eight O'clock Tonight In Tin Can.

The Kappa Alpha's will meet the Phi Delta Theta's for the fraternity championship of the intramural basketball league tonight in the Tin Can at eight o'clock. The K. A.'s have proved to be the dark horses of the league, winning eight games so far and losing none. Among the teams defeated by the K. A.'s are Phi Gam's, Tau Epsilon Phi's, Delta Psi's, Sigma Epsilon's, and Pi Kappa Phi's.



On paper the Phi Delt's look the best on the strength of their victories over the A. T. O.'s, Beta's, and Phi Gam's, none of whom had been defeated previous to their meeting the Phi Delt's.

The Kappa Alpha's looked good in their defeat of the strong Phi Gam's, holding them scoreless throughout three quarters.

Kappa Alpha will probably start Henry Phipps and Wells at forwards, Oliver, at center, and John Phipps and Brandt at the guard positions.

For the Phi Delta Theta's the probable line-up will be Moore and Tucker, forwards, Eubanks, center, and Taylor and Peacock, guards.

UNDEFEATED BOXERS

Captain Noah Goodridge, 135-pounder, and John Warren, brother of the famous Ad Warren, are two Carolina boxers who will enter the Southern Conference tournament in Charlottesville Friday with records of no defeats for the season. The Tar Heels have not lost to a Conference or state foe this year.

Dixie's Best College Boxers Will Assemble At University Virginia Friday For Tourney

L. S. U. and Tulane Chief Contenders from Far South—Carolina, Virginia and Duke Best in Northern Sector—Cream of Scrapping in Featherweight Division.

By William H. Wranek, Jr.

University, Virginia, February 24.—Dixie's best college boxers will be brought together next Friday and Saturday in the fifth annual ring tournament of the Southern Conference which will be staged in the Memorial gymnasium of the University of Virginia.

Louisiana State and Tulane will be the chief defenders of the ring reputation of the far South against Duke, North Carolina and Virginia, the three teams with the best records in the South Atlantic sector, as well as against other entries.

The number of teams entered this year may not be as large as in 1930. Clemson's ringmen will be kept home by a quarantine. Georgia has dropped the sport for this season, but will revive it next year. Sewanee's team is not having an intercollegiate schedule this winter.

Washington and Lee has entered a team, but the Generals lost much of their ring equipment when their field house was burned last Wednesday night and the entries may be withdrawn.

The Southern Conference committee on coaching will meet here several days before the tournament to seed the outstanding boxers and to draw for pairs. This committee includes James G. Driver of Virginia, chairman; Robert A. Fetzer of North Carolina, Russess Cohen of Louisiana State, C. W. Bachman of Florida and R. A. Smith of Washington and Lee.

Captain John Minardi of Florida is rated as having a fine chance of defending his bantamweight title which he won last year by defeating Southgate Martin of Duke, champion in the 115 pound class in 1929.

The cream of the scrapping is looked for in the featherweight division. Martin, now captain of Duke, has moved up into this class. And three other team captains are in it, Henry Menge of Tulane, Bill Buck of V. M. I. and Simon Sloshberg of Washington and Lee.

But best of all the 125-pounders are two, Bobby Goldstein of Virginia and Martin Levinson of North Carolina. Both are experienced boxers with several knockouts to their credit. Goldstein nosed out Levinson in a freshman bout last season. This year they have not met.

And as if these six men were not enough for one weight there is a seventh first class man in this group. He is Al Towler, finalist who was eliminated in the last round of the '30 tourney by Captain Fielding Russell of Georgia.

Noah Goodridge, North Carolina's captain, and runner-up in two tourneys, is given odds in the lightweight class. A year ago he was defeated in the finals by Captain Phil O'Connell, then captain now coach of Florida. The season before he won second place in the featherweight class, with O'Connell first this time also.

Wellford Smith, Virginia, who was eliminated last year by O'Connell; Ray Carter, Florida, lightweight runner-up in '29, Bobby Jones of Virginia Tech, and "Ding-Dong" Jacobs of Tulane, are other skilled scrappers in this weight.

Captain Bob Rainey, Virginia welterweight, is doped to retain his title against a strong field. He'll have to defeat Captain Herb Mehaffey of V. P. I., and Dale Holderness of North Carolina, men he has outpointed once, and the undefeated "Red" De Buys of Tulane.

Duke has an edge on the middleweight class in Phil Bolick who has a clean record through two seasons of college boxing. But Bolick hasn't yet met Sam Slavin of Florida, who got second honors in the 160 pound class last winter and who hasn't lost this season. Davis of Carolina and Pound of W. and L. are also fast middleweights.

Up among the light-heavies there'll be plenty of competition. Fenton Gentry of Virginia, is one of the best of these 175-pounders. The Tar Heels have two good ones, Hugh Wilson and Platt Landis, both sophomores.

Fast Field Shaping Up For Indoor Track Meet

Farmer Against Field in Dashes—DeColigny of Tulane Big Hurdle Star—Interscholastic Champion in 440—11 Conference Teams to Participate in Meet.

A fast field is rapidly taking form for the second annual Southern Conference indoor games, to be held here the night of March 7.

Eleven Conference teams will participate, and the calibre of stars entered promises some great competition.

The 70-yard dash will offer Charlie Farmer against the field. The flying Tar Heel won the indoor sprint last year, running just 1-5 second short of a world record, and later equalled both Southern outdoor dash records. He will get stout competition, however, from Zimmerman and Whatley, Tulane's halfbacks; from Slusser, Carolina's flying ball carrier; and from Smith, of Alabama, who nosed him out in the Conference 100 last year.

The hurdles promise more features. Tulane will have Calvert deColigny, a regal looking Frenchman of 195 pounds, rugged enough to play tackle, who Fifteen Diamond Battles Scheduled for Home; Only One Northern Trip.

Carolina's baseball team will play twenty-three games this year, fifteen of them at home.

This year more intersectional games will be played than ever before. Seven games with four northern teams, two with Cornell, two with Pennsylvania, two with Princeton, and one with Penn State. Another unusual feature of the schedule is that the first eight games are played at home.

There will only be one northern trip, on which five games will be played, with Virginia, Maryland, V. M. I., V. P. I., and Washington and Lee.

HOBBS' BOOK HAS RECEIVED PRAISE

"North Carolina: Political and Social" Proclaimed Valuable Book By Critics.

North Carolina: Political and Social, by S. H. Hobbs, Jr., was issued by the University press last fall. Since its publication many favorable comments have been written concerning it which are all combined to make one circular folder, to be issued by the press to previous customers and public libraries.

The following is from the Charlotte Observer: "We are agreed that this book should find its way into the public libraries, into the hands of teachers, newspaper editors, and all those interested in knowing the facts about this state or in a position to direct similar study of other states. . . The book is particularly intended to make North Carolina learn about itself—learn that it has untold resources which it needs only to know of and make use of, and that if would only do this, its farmers need not be poverty stricken, its education need not suffer, its railroad problems need not go unsolved—in short, it need not long rank forty-third among the states in so many vital concerns."

The New York Times Book Review says: "Professor Hobbs' book stands out among books dealing with localities because of its author's freshness, his desire to set forth the exact truth and his determination not to admit into his text rhetorical patches or patriotic outbursts.

"His many years of research into the social and economic conditions of his home state have given him comprehensive knowledge of them, and his purpose in this book is to set it all down with scientific accuracy and impartial statement, whether creditable or otherwise!"

Still another comment is from The London Times Literary Supplement which reads: "It is the explicit teaching of Mr. Hobbs' book that North Carolina must look for a balanced economy, must encourage farm owning instead of farm tenancy, must encourage diversified farming, must educate its rural and industrial lower class into citizenship. In this work the justly famous State University has been a leader; and these studies are models of social diagnosis, candid and thorough."

quality" is the theme song as Loyola University launches its first boxing team. One hundred and sixty-five aspirants reported for the ring sport, all eager to secure a post on the team.

"The National Pastime" is not waning in all American universities, especially at the University of Minnesota. As do a number of large professional baseball clubs, the Minnesota eleven takes to sunny climes for training. Though this period is two months distant, thirty-five men have reported to diamond mentors for early practice.

Adroitly do students at the University of Missouri evade police intervention in the annual battle between the engineers and law students. The brawl is tactfully disguised and dubbed as a football game.

Soon may sweet feminine voices assume a bass note if reports from DePauw University are construed correctly. Excessive rooting at football games and cigarette smoking has brought about a marked lowering in co-ed voices, say university officials.

The Campus Calendar

Basketball Equipment

All members of the freshman basketball squad are requested to turn in their equipment by the end of the week.

Debate Squad

The debate squad's regular weekly meeting will be in Gerrard hall tonight at seven-thirty o'clock. At this meeting the debaters will try out for the trips to Boston, Texas, and Northwestern. Those who are not planning to try out should attend, for presence at this meeting will help to fill the eligibility requirement that states that one must attend a majority of the squad meetings.

Duke University Will Be Host To Student Conference

Today the Southern Students Conference on International Relations will start its eighth annual session at Duke University. This student association was organized in 1923 for the purpose of interesting Southern college students in the international relations of the United States. Since its establishmen, the student organization has spread to many college campuses of the South.

Recently the campus witnessed the organization of a branch of this international relations group, which is called the Polity Forum, and has for its president Jack Dungan. Clyde Dunn is president of the International Relations club at the University. The local organization is planning to have representatives at the conference which is to be held at Duke University.

The program for the meeting of the Southern Students Conference on International Relations calls for talks by a number of men and women eminent in the fields of international relations and education. Some of the speakers are: Professor Edward S. Corwin of Princeton University; Miss Amy H. Jones of the Carnegie Endowment Foundation; Dr. J. Fred Rippy of Duke University; Professor K. C. Frazier of the University of North Carolina; M. Pierre de Lanux of the League of Nations office in Paris; Dr. George Grafton Wilson of Harvard University; President W. P. Few of Duke University; and President Frank Porter Graham of the University of North Carolina.

According to John A. Lang, president of the State Student Federation, that organization has made a great effort to cooperate with the Southern Student Conference and has commissioned Mayne Albright, secretary of the University student government, to notify all the Federation members in the state concerning the Conference at Duke University and to act as representative of the Federation there.

Starting Thursday, February 26, at ten o'clock in the Duke Student Union the Conference will continue through Saturday noon, February 28, concluding with President Graham's speech. Every college student in the state is invited to attend the meeting, and a large attendance is expected.

'BLUES' VICTORS IN HECTIC GRID PRACTICE GAME

"Orange" Gridders Rise In Last Period But Are Downed by Count of 26-19.

Last Saturday the "Blues" beat the "Oranges" 12-0 in a winter football game. Coach Collins matched the same squads yesterday, and the "Blues" came off winner 26-19 in a hectic game in which all tarnation broke loose in the last period.

The first half was close, a pass from Chandler to Ferebee and a placekick by Chandler netting the Blues seven points. A pass from White to Woollen brought a six point score to the Orange-jerseys in the second period.

In the third quarter, another pass by Chandler, this time to Slusser, carried the ball over for the Blues. This was the only score of this period.

Phipps and Weisker, freshman backs on the Orange squad, tied the score 13-13 in the fourth quarter. Thompson, new fullback for the Blues, took the kickoff for ninety yards; Hackney took a couple of passes from Yerton and the Blues led 26-13. A passing attack by the Oranges brought White in position for a twenty-five yard end run for a touchdown but the Blues took the game 26-19.

Fast Field Shaping Up For Indoor Track Meet

skimmed the Conference high hurdles for a 15.1 victory last year and placed in the lows.

Speer of Washington and Lee nosed deColigny out in the shorter indoor high hurdles last year, and Finkelstein of the Generals did similarly in the lows. There should be a duel between these three this year, and Slusser of Carolina should push them too.

The quarter-mile will present Nebby Miller, Tulane's former national interscholastic champion, against a fine field that includes Williams, Washington and Lee's former Conference champ; Shepard and Black, of Washington and Lee; and Weil, of Carolina.

Other stars are entered all along the line. McGinn, State; Mahler, Washington and Lee; Pensen and Baucom, Carolina; Simon and Heizer, Duke; Wells, Tulane; and Barnhardt, Georgia, in the distances; Oelkers, Tulane, Southern record holder; Swart, V. P. I.; and Patterson, State; in the shot; Bagby, Carolina, and Freeman, Duke, in the high jump; Graydon, Georgia Tech, whom Ed Hamm, world champ, has taught to broad jump 23 feet; Arnold and Ruble, Carolina, vaulters, the former of whom got up as high as 13 feet last year. And so on and on!

The meet will be run off in four divisions, Conference, Non-Conference, Freshman and Scholastic, and there will be 26 events in all. R. A. Fetzer is chairman of the Conference games committee and is rushing detailed preparations to handle a record crowd—of competitors and spectators.

Barker Is First of Student Recitalists

The first recital to be given by a senior music student in the liberal arts college took place yesterday afternoon at four o'clock in the Music hall. T. Hays Barker, of Leaksville, piano student, presented his preliminary recital, to be followed on the night of April 1 with a full program representing four years of study at the University under the tutelege of Professor Nelson O. Kennedy.

PHI VOTES DOWN FRANCHISE BILL

Argument for and against the franchise bill in the Phi Assembly took up the greater part of the Tuesday night session. The bill provided that a person failing to vote, without valid cause, in two successive general elections should be disqualified to vote at the next ensuing general election. A vote was taken after much discussion, and the bill was defeated by a narrow margin.

Representative Jacobs, the first speaker on the measure attacked it unmercifully. Representative Douglas who submitted the measure took the floor in defense. Representatives Simons, Haywood, and Kornegay spoke against the bill, and Wilkinson, Sisk and Temple upheld it.

A motion brought before the assembly by Representative Simons to change the method of calling the roll in the Phi to a method similar to the one used in the Di senate was defeated by a large majority.

The committee appointed by Speaker Whittenton at the last session headed by Representative Wilkinson to investigate the proper way to change the constitution so as to prevent the use of the Phi Hall without permission, gave its report. Representative Wilkinson stated the recommendation of the committee, but he requested more time for considering the proper place in the constitution for inserting such an amendment.

work, extends the courses over a year instead of one semester, and introduces comprehensive examinations to take the place of ordinary examinations and which are based on knowledge to come largely from reading periods. Harvard, Colgate, and Dartmouth, also, have free reading periods.

Antioch, in Ohio, is teaching the students for a while and then sending them out to work and put theory into practice. The course of study at the University of Wisconsin covers an entire civilization instead of separate phases of culture. The working of this plan is to be evaluated next year.

Dungan spoke further on the new emphasis placed on a comprehensive knowledge instead of on grades, stating that Johns Hopkins grades students on the basis of pass or fail instead of the old system. He spoke also of a new plan for future education which would center around the following: the economic organization of the world, home love, sex, national and international relations, race relationships, mental and physical health, public opinion and propaganda, government, recreation, aesthetic values in life, religion, and the integration of all of these into a working plan.

Concluding, Dungan said: "No one can predict the exact course that modern education will take or in what manner man will be educated in the future. But out of all the challenging ideas which are being experimented with will come a general plan by which education will be a personal rather than a factory product, and will be education which will serve man rather than a system of rules and compulsions as it is largely at present which is the master of man.

"The University of North Carolina which has always taken part in liberal and forward movements will not be long in becoming aware of the Utopian education."

ful planning (for industrial stabilization) is possible only through the methodology of scientific management (research, standardization, control, and cooperation)."

He contended, further, that no workman or manufacturer was competent to take part in the stabilization of industry as a whole until his own particular part of the work had been stabilized. They should, first of all, not allow themselves to be swayed by external influences or motives in carrying out their stabilization program; they should create the conditions of their own environment.

According to his own statement, Mr. Cooke is not alarmed by business depression. To avoid pronounced rises and falls in the economic system, to do away with exaggerated business cycles, "unemployment within employment" should be eliminated during periods of normalcy. That is, waste of time and effort should be definitely discouraged where workers are being paid for full-time work.

He diagnosed the present ailment of industry as being a maladjustment of distribution and not overproduction, saying that, "As long as there are people needing food, clothing, and shelter anywhere in the world, it is because we don't know distribution that there is overproduction. Integrated distribution is the cure for this ill, he stated.

Up until the present, Mr. Cooke concluded, we have always limited production capacity in order to stabilize industry. The new plan should be to use the surplus of production to supply the needy and in that way get away from business cycles.

Dixie's Best College Boxers Will Assemble Friday for Tourney

Gus Houston, Florida, and Sam Zemurray, Tulane, are both first rate sluggers, but green.

Duke has lost Kidd Brewer, football captain elect and crack heavyweight. They have been alternating two men in the upper classes, and with fair success.

Tulane is pinning heavyweight hopes on Doyless Hill who has won four unlimited matches in a row. John Warren of North Carolina also has a clean slate this season in five bouts. Harry Stark, Virginia Tech, Herbert Bryant, Virginia, and Carlos Proctor, Florida, are a trio of big men who may clash through in this class.

Pierson Recuperating

Dean W. W. Pierson of the graduate school, who has been ill for the past few days, is expected to be able to resume his duties within a day or so.

ATHLETIC POLICY DISCUSSED BY DI

At the regular meeting of the Di Senate on Tuesday night, a measure proposing the adoption by the University of North Carolina of an athletic policy similar to the one recently adopted at the University of Pennsylvania was discussed. The policy at the University of Pennsylvania is that athletic coaches be placed on the same financial basis as members of the faculty.

Senators Weeks and Ramsay opposed the bill, while Kitchen and Whitaker opposed it. The measure was defeated by a large majority.

The Senators approved after much discussion a motion submitted by Senator Ramsay asking that a letter be sent to the General Assembly at Raleigh opposing the passage of any bill favoring the abolishment of dormitory stores now in operation at the University.

The bill stating that the students at the University of North Carolina have too little control in extra-curricular activities was tabled until the next session.

Dangerfield To Send Painting

Elliott Dangerfield, one of America's most celebrated artists, will send a painting of the North Carolina mountains to the exhibition of the North Carolina Association of Professional Artists to be held here in April.

PARDNER JAMES WILL REPRESENT N. C. FEDERATION

Local "Y" Treasurer To Serve As Student Federation Representative at Conference.

In an effort to bring about a closer relationship between the work of the North Carolina Student Federation and the program of the Student Volunteer Association in the state, the Student Federation has commissioned F. M. James, the treasurer of the local Y. M. C. A., as its personal representative at the meeting of the State Student Volunteer Conference which will convene today.

Last fall a close relation and cooperation was established between the work of the State Y Cabinet and the State Student Federation at a joint meeting of the officers of the two organizations at Greensboro and the Federation is trying to carry out its student cooperative program by establishing close relations with the Student Volunteer Association.

James has been requested to ascertain in what ways the various student governments in North Carolina colleges could be of service to the Volunteer Association in joining in any way with the National Student Federation in establishing in the United States a national student publication.

James has been connected with the local Y for several years. Last year he served as vice-president of the sophomore cabinet, and is at present the treasurer of the complete organization. He also was a member of the sophomore executive committee last year and is now the treasurer of the Phi Society.

Business Firms To Send Men Here To Interview Seniors

Henry Johnston, Jr., of the vocational department, has made arrangements with several large business firms to send representatives to the University to interview members of the senior class who wish to obtain positions with these firms. Those who have definitely agreed to send representatives are—Proctor and Gamble, W. T. Grant and company, Standard Oil company of New York, and Du Pont.

A number of organizations who sent representatives here last spring find it impossible to do so this year on account of the present economic depression. Mr. Johnston stated that from the present outlook it will be much more difficult for students to obtain positions this year than last.

Members of the General Electric company who were here last fall said that this organization was employing about one-third the number of new men that it does in ordinary business conditions. The Bell Telephone company which has been the largest source of employment for University students in the past has such a reduced need for new men that it has decided to curtail recruiting activities this spring.

Mr. Kendall Weisiger of the Southern Bell Telephone company in a recent letter to Mr. Johnston urged that he advise any good men who cannot find suitable positions this spring to return to school next fall for the purpose of rounding out their education.

Collier Cobb Tells Of Early University

Dr. Collier Cobb, head of the geology department at the University spoke in freshman chapel yesterday morning on "Reminiscences of Chapel Hill." Dr. Cobb has been a member of the faculty of this university for thirty-nine years and has been a resident of Chapel Hill since 1880. Even before that time Mr. Cobb often visited in the village.

He related many anecdotes of early days in Chapel Hill as well as of life in the University. He compared the treatment of freshmen as it existed then and as it is at the present time. Many novel methods of hazing were recounted in his talk. Dr. Cobb also told of the growth in the number of buildings at the University and described them as they were originally.

The advice he gave in closing his talk was never to live beyond one's income. This, he said, was one of his life-long rules.

Collegiate Rah! Rah! Rah!

"For it's not for knowledge
That we came to college,
But to raise hell while we're here."

One of the downtown stores that boasts of a phonograph for the entertainment of its patrons was the scene of an impromptu dance yesterday in mid-afternoon. The music was going full blast and the three young ladies who formed the nucleaus of the crowd were getting a big "rush." The gaiety had not continued long before a crowd of the curious gathered round. Soon a stag line had formed and its members were clamoring for a chance to demonstrate their ability and grace as exponents of the classic ballroom dancing.

Those who gathered about the edge of the floor were reminded of college life as the movies are wont to depict it, with "happy young girls and boys constantly enjoying themselves and a phonograph playing continually."

The crowd of curious soon increased to an alarming number and the dancers, fearing the arrival of the fire department and the police force, suddenly becoming bashful (a virtue not often found in college students) broke up the affair by leaving. The stags found themselves alone . . . "Somebody stole my gal."

Sophomores Choose Henry Dance Leader

At the sophomore smoker in Swain Hall Wednesday night at nine o'clock, Dave Henry was elected leader of the sophomore dance which is planned for the spring quarter. He was elected by a majority over Nutt Parsley and Milton Barber.

Sparks Griffin was chosen as first assistant over Ted Newland and Shady Lane, and Ben Campen and Jim Hubbard will run off the election for second assistant.

Graham in Salisbury

President Frank Graham left yesterday morning for Salisbury to speak before the western branch of the Teachers' Association of North Carolina. The appropriations problem will be restated by Mr. Graham for this group. His trip will not be prolonged as he is expected to return to Chapel Hill immediately after the address.

GAY MACLAREN'S ART COMMENDED

Minneapolis Artist To Appear Monday Under Student Entertainment Series.

Gay MacLaren, "The Girl with the Camera Mind," will appear here Monday under the auspices of the Student Entertainment Committee. She will be the third artist of the season, and will present an entire play, taking the parts of all of the various characters herself. Her career began quite by accident.

It was all because a little round faced girl had told a Minneapolis school teacher something so ridiculous that the teacher laughed and her classmates jeered. For days afterwards the little girl was laughed at, but she kept on saying it. She had been slipping off to a theatre downtown where an English company was giving The Sign of the Cross. Night after night she saw the play, thrilled by its dramatic power, and then found that she knew it. She made a Roman gown like the heroine in the play wore, made herself a cross and mimiced the whole cast of actors as faithfully as a movie film can do it.

So when the teacher in the Manning College of Music and Drama was slatting the senior pupils for recital programs, this girl just entering her "teens" said that she was going to give The Sign of The Cross. The teacher thinking to correct her said that she probably meant some scene in the play and Gay answered that she knew the whole play.

Her calm assurance convulsed the class. It couldn't be done, since no one had ever done it. When Louise Jewell Manning returned from California, the teacher in charge during her absence said, "You'd better do something about that little Gay MacLaren. She says she's going to give a whole play for her graduating recital, and a terrible tragic play that a little girl doesn't know anything about."

The next day in class, Mrs. Manning told Gay that if she could give a scene from The Sign of the Cross, to get up on the stage and do it. Without hesitating a minute Gay went forward and gave the entire act.

When asked whether she knew any more of it she replied that she knew it all and proceeded to give it. The Roman orgy and the arena scene she reproduced without knowing what it all meant.

The papers carried long stories about her, and she was kept busy giving the play to astounded audiences. She had never seen the book of the play.

COMMUNITY CLUB HEARS SPANISH MUSIC PROGRAM

The music department of the Community Club was entertained Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. A. S. Wheeler at her home on Franklin Street. Mrs. N. B. Adams had charge of a program on Spanish music, and made a talk on the folk music of Spain.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Slade sang some Mexican folk songs with guitar accompaniment, and Humberto Umana sang Costa Rican folk songs also, with guitar accompaniment. Mrs. Slade in a Mexican costume sang Spanish songs, accompanied by Mrs. Patrick Winston at the piano.

DRAMATIC TROUPE TO VISIT CAMPUS

Ben Greet Players, Directed by Sir Philip Greet, To Appear April 13.

The internationally famous Ben Greet Players have been secured by the Carolina Playmakers to give a performance of "Hamlet," April 13, in Memorial hall. The Players have just given a series of 200 performances at the Garden Theatre in New York City. All the leading American universities have been visited by the Players many times.

Sir Philip Greet has been on the stage for fifty years and has taught more actors than any living man. He is noted all over the world as one of the greatest authorities on the English drama. His Shakespearane productions have set a standard both in England and America. In recognition of a life devoted to the cause of drama in education, he was knighted by King George V, of England, in June, 1929.

Sir Philip has schooled his actors in the forgotten art of speaking words. When his actors speak, it is easy to understand the words and their meaning. This splendid actor and his brilliant cast of English players are returning to America in response to insistent demands of leading universities.

The University entertainment committee attempted to secure Sir Phillip for a program on the student series. At that time, is was impossible to make arrangements, but since then a contract has been signed, which secures the Players for an April engagement.

FORTY-FOUR COMMERCE STUDENTS ON PROBATION

This quarter the school of commerce has forty-four students on probation because of failure to pass the required amount of work during the fall quarter. Fourteen or 31.8 per cent of these checked all courses at midterm.

In the school of liberal arts seventy-four are on scholastic probation, and of these thirty-five or 47.3 per cent checked all courses at midterm.

The college of liberal arts showed the greatest improvement by students on probation, but it also had a greater percentage of its students delinquent in studies. At the end of last quarter 10.38 per cent of them were placed on probation, while only 6.93 per cent of the students in the school of commerce were restricted.

Faculty Orchestra To Play In Raleigh

Lamar Stringfield and his Faculty Chamber orchestra will present a concert at Meredith College, Raleigh, tomorrow evening at eight-thirty o'clock.

The personnel and the program will be the same as in the Stringfield concert in the Playmakers Theatre last month. Mrs. Fred B. McCall will be at the piano and D. A. McPherson will be the violinist. For the concluding number the orchestra will render "Cripple Creek," composed by Stringfield himself.

Grail Tickets

Tickets to the Grail dance are on sale at the Book Exchange and Pritchard and Lloyd's.

Boggs Gives Weekly WPTF Spanish Lesson

Professor R. S. Boggs of the University Spanish department delivered the fifth of the series of twelve Spanish lectures over WPTF in Raleigh yesterday afternoon between five-fifteen and five-forty-five o'clock.

In the lecture Boggs stressed the second conjugation of verbs and also the conjugation of irregular verbs. He told the audience how to express possession in Spanish. The vocabulary which Boggs assigned for study contained many modern words such as movie, automobile, cotton, and others.

The lesson was concluded by the lecturer's reading of a few simple sentences which are to be studied by the persons who have been regularly listening to the weekly lectures.

LEFTWICH WILL PLAY FOR LAW SCHOOL DANCES

Social Events of Week-end Include Law Fraternities' Dansant and Grail.

Tonight the Law Association will hold its annual dance in Bynum gymnasium between ten and one o'clock. The gymnasium will be decorated in the law school's colors of red and white.

The committee in charge of the dance—Archie Allen, McDonald Gray, and E. L. Curlee has secured Jelly Leftwich and his University Club Orchestra to play at the affair.

Each member of the Law School will receive two invitations, one for himself and one for his guest. The chaperones at the dance will be: Dean and Mrs. Charles T. McCormick; Professor and Mrs. R. H. Wettach; Professor and Mrs. A. C. McIntosh; Professor and Mrs. M. T. Van Hecke; Professor and Mrs. H. P. Winston; Professor and Mrs. Albert Coates; Professor and Mrs. M. S. Breckenridge; and Professor and Mrs. F. B. McCall.

The three law fraternities, Phi Delta Phi, Delta Theta Phi, and Phi Alpha Delta, will be hosts at a tea dance which will take place between six and seven-thirty o'clock tomorrow evening.

The committee in charge of the affair has arranged to have Jelly Leftwich play at the dance. The members of the committee are: J. A. Williams, Phi Delta Phi; Beatty Rector, Delta Theta Phi; and Bill Uzzell, Phi Alpha Delta.

This dance will immediately precede the Grail dance which will be held the same evening, with Jelly Leftwich furnishing the music, and which will be the the last Grail of the quarter.

Hobbs in Atlanta

Dean A. W. Hobbs of the college of liberal arts left yesterday afternoon for Atlanta to attend the meeting of the executive committee of the Southern Conference Athletic Association which meets annually in that city during the Southern Conference basketball tournament. He will return to Chapel Hill on Sunday.

Sophomore Picture

A group picture of the sophomore class will be taken this morning at chapel hour in front of the law building. There will be no sophomore chapel.

STATE STUDENT VOLUNTEERS TO CONVENE TODAY

Thirty-eight Educational Institutions Will Be Represented at Meeting of State Y's.

The State Student Volunteer Conference of North Carolina Y. M. C. A.'s will convene here this afternoon and will continue through Sunday, March 1. All of the sessions will be held in the Methodist church.

The conference will open this afternoon at two o'clock when registrations will be in order, after which speakers and leaders will be entertained at an informal tea in the Methodist church from 4:30 to 5:30. Tonight from 7:30 to 8:30, the delegates will assemble for the first time to organize, and at nine o'clock, the conference will be formally opened with an address by Professor J. M. Connally, of Payne College, in Augusta, Georgia. His topic will be; "Human Need and World Christianity."

The Saturday morning worship from 8:30 to 8:45 will be led by Mrs. J. E. K. Aggery. Following the morning worship, addresses and group discussions will be in progress until 12:30 o'clock. Fay Campbell, the director of the Y. M. C. A. at Yale university, will give the first talk on "Economic Disorders in the World," a challenge to Christian students. The second talk of the morning will be delivered by Dr. Elbert Russell, dean of the school of religion at Duke university. His subject will be, "Ignorance and Superstitution in the World." Dr. McNeall Poteat, pastor of Pullen Memorial church in Raleigh will conclude the morning talks with an address on "The Inadequacies of Non-Christian Religions.

Saturday afternoon, Lee Phillips, a young negro student and poet from Howard university at Washington, will talk on "The Present and Future of the Negro Missionary." Following this talk, Dr. Paul Harrison, a missionary from Arabia, will discuss as his topic, "Disease in the World."

Saturday evening from 7:30 to 9:30, Hagop Hagopian, an Egyptian, will give "Messages From the Nations," assisted by K. K. Thomas, of India, T. C. Kin, of Korea, and Mrs. J. E. K. Aggery, wife of the "Aggery of Africa."

Lee Phillips will lead the Sunday morning worship, after which Fay Campbell, Dr. Paul Harrison, Lee Phillips, and Joseph Connally will lead special groups. At eleven o'clock, Dr. Harrison will talk on "Human Needs, Our Supreme Opportunity. The conference will be concluded at three p. m.

Colleges and universities which are to be represented are: A. and T., Greensboro; Atlantic Christian College, Appalachian State Teachers College, Asheville Normal School, Bennett, Campbell, Catawba, Davidson, Chowan, Davenport, Eastern Carolina Teachers College, Duke, Elon, G. Political Opportunities

As stated some time ago the policy of the Daily Tar Heel this year will be impartial insofar as political parties are concerned. The news value of the political happenings on the campus is of such a nature as to warrant the reporting of such activities in our columns. To representatives of the different factions we offered space in which each party could present its views to the campus at large. Such presentations were to be published verbatim and even the headlines were to be written by representatives of the factions.

At the same time we made it known that open forum letters of a political nature would not be published. The Daily Tar Heel will not print letters which are attacks on personalities and which are unsigned. Any other such letter should bear the stamp of approval of the political party which it endorses and as such should be published in the space provided for the party.

Following our original offer both factions saw fit to submit statements of their principles. These statements were published. Since then neither party has submitted others. Enough political activity has been evident to justify our again asking the parties to submit statements. If either party has anything to offer surely they are willing that the entire campus know it.

The offer remains and will remain until the end of campus elections.

A School Of Public Relations

One year ago an addition was made to the curriculum of Princeton University in the establishment of a school of public and international affairs. The school was established with the purpose of acquainting undergraduates interested in things public and political with the "various fields of public and international affairs." It was felt by those who were responsible for the foundation that such an innovation would fill a long needed requirement in the training of future leaders in public life, for the curriculum designed for the special school was one which combined the theoretical with the practical. The time is premature for comment upon the success or failure of the Princeton experiment; nevertheless similar experiments elsewhere are being widely acclaimed.

There is a great need for a public relations school here in the University of North Carolina. With special training in history, government, economics, and political science on the one side, with laboratory work in actual public problems on the other, and with a study of the human relationships involved in the study in both parts of the training program, the school would be an effective instrument in providing the foundations for an enlightened public leadership and citizenship of the future. Governor Gardner some time ago recognized this need for more specialized training when he advocated the introduction of courses dealing more specifically with practical issues of state and county government.

South of Washington there is not a single center of study for the undergraduate in public and international affairs. While we are talking of a fine arts school here, let us also contemplate the establishment of a school of public relations.

How About That New Gym?

Governor Gardner has often coined slogans, but the one slogan of his which we object to is his now famous—"The joy-ride is over; pay day has arrived." Perhaps our state has been on a magnificent spending debauch, but to extend this blame to the University is unfair. The teachers and institutions of the state have most emphatically not been on any joy-ride and there is absolutely no reason why they should be forced by thirty-four per cent cuts and a complete cessation of building program to pay for the ride which some one else may have taken.

Way back before our time, which is not so many years ago, the University was preparing for a gigantic and modern new gym, when through some politics or other the money was diverted to other use. The fact is that Bynum gym, long outgrown, has been, is, and may be used for years despite a promise long ago on the part of state politicians that we would have a new and adequate gym.

The legislators can talk all they want to about doing their duty by the state and its citizens, but when it neglects the health and physical education of its citizens enrolled at the University they are inadequately protecting the state's interests.

The University is one of the few great Universities which does not have a decent swimming pool. With no particular reflection upon Sparrow's Pool it is most certainly not fit to bathe in during the months of December and January.

We have a feeling that unless great pressure is brought to bear by the faculty, the administration, and the student body as a whole that Bynum will stand in its antiquated form until we send our children to the legislature to vote for a new gym.—Jack D.

If the ocean back of the bathing beauty looks faded, that's caused by the steam heat in the studio.

By MOORE BRYSON

Ran up to the old home town of Asheville over the week-end and saw quite a few of the old timers. "Bootie" Uzzell (I think that I mentioned something about him a few weeks ago) is now a settled practicioner with an office an' everything. He sent his best to all the boys and girls, and especially mentioned Lib, Liz, Virginia, Frances, Mary, Jane, Agnes, Becky, and Mabel.

From the reports of those who live there, McCauley Street is now the section where the elite men-about-town reside. Now, in my day it was "G" dormitory that was infested by pioneers from foreign fraternities.

Apparently, Dan Cupid beat the robins to Chapel Hill by a couple of jumps this year. I saw one poor robin sitting out in front of South looking like he was about to freeze to death. However, I have seen moon-eyed couples walking around the campus hand in hand, for the past month. By the way, who is the couple that is seen daily on Franklin Street and the campus fondly clutching hands.

My plea of a few weeks ago was without avail, for the Parish House lights are still on and the Smile Club is still smiling. Ah well, a single person can't be expected to do wonders.

The students at one university went on a strike when the faculty decreed that the Co-eds had to be in by two o'clock. And here we sit calmly by and take the girls in promptly at ten-thirty and say nothing about it. Is it that our girls are so unattractive that we are willing to get rid of them that early? Surely that can not be the case, at least, some of the boys would not agree with that line of reasoning. Then it must be because we are sissies and are willing to sit around and take things as they are, or aren't. That being the case, I hereby discard my buttonier and declare myself an advocate for later hours. Come, comrades, gather to the cause, sing a torch song, and CARRY ON.

Frank Gray, the farmer-student, suggests that the state be canvassed for better co-eds just as it is canvassed for better athletes. It isn't a bad idea, for nothing can be so good that it can't be made better.

Joe Fox complains that after all the publicity his publication, the Buccaneer, has given me, that I might at least be courteous and retaliate. Well, let him do something which can be published and I assure him that he will not go wanting.

Fred Carr (what is this rumor I hear about him?) has been elected Vice-President of the Smile Club to assist his roomie, President Jack Ward. Fred has already acquired a perfect smile and is learning to answer to the whistle.

To counteract the evil effects of the Smilers, I propose a new club to be known as the Cynic Club and nominate as president Lib Nunn. Liz Green should give anyone a good race for the vice-presidency. It is reported that Alice Carr is now an eligible member.

Johnnie Scott (who resented my using his name not long ago) pulled the prize pun of the year the other day. I said that I was going to the movie and John said as he pointed to the Carolina theatre, "Go thou and cinema."

That is bad enough to end the "world's worst" for this week.

With Contemporaries

Sad

Now that the flurry over the inconsistencies of the Wickersham commission report has quelled it is not wholly impossible to grasp a moment for discussion of the prohibition question itself. Little enlightenment could be found in the decision of Wickersham and his ten committeemen with the exception of emphasis on the possibilities of outward disagreement of persons who attempt to solve the problem.

College drinkers care little what happens to the Eighteenth Amendment. They drink—amendment or no amendment—but with repeal of the prohibition act a college education would cost them less. On the other hand, the gents of the underworld focus their attention on the activities of the lawmakers. Their jobs depend upon a continuance of the present lawlessness of liquor sale.

Crime, in its bloody ugliness, would not drop from sight if underworld liquor traffic were ceased. Hundreds of "gat" toters would be without employment and without subsistence. Would that not be more of a temptation to commit crime than a mere "bump off" order from a whisky mogul? The underworld was not created by prohibition, but it has become enormously rich from its major indstry.

But crime problems cannot call a halt to thoughts and suggestions toward prohibition repeal or revision. Educationally or economically the underworld can be conquered—victory being only a matter of ten or more years.

Prohibition as it is, is far from successful—we need tell no one that—even the Wickersham commission was fully aware. Intensified enforcement will gain no better results. The Eighteenth Amendment is inelastic—it cannot be adjusted to the demands of the present American populace—mainly because they are unaware of what they want.

A plan, suggested by Henry W. Anderson, granting the power to regulate to Congress is the most valuable, most plausible, and intelligent result of the recent liquor and crime investigation.—Oregon Emerald.

OXFORD STUDENTS REGARD CO-EDS AS MAJOR EVIL

The students of the University of Oxford have a journal known as the Iris, in which the readers recently had the opportunity to read the following article:

"Oxford suffers from two evils—traffic inconveniences and women. The women who have come here to be educated would have done far better had they stayed at home. In the first place they are not agreeable to look at. In the streets they ride bicycles and permit this mode of locomotion to display frightful expanses of woolen hose. In the lecture rooms they nibble at chocolate and biscuits. They possess, in general, neither charm, dignity, nor grace. Is there not somebody who will head a campaign against them with insistent appeals of 'Chassez les femmes?'"

And now, is there a single student of the feminine sex who desires to complete her education at Oxford?

The visiting Englishman who says Americans have a tired look should try listening to Prohibition for eleven years.

Red Cross Makes Complete Report Of Drought Areas

A complete statistical report of all drought areas was tabulated last week at the national headquarters in Washington, showing among other things that Arkansas is receiving more aid from the Red Cross than any other state. In that state, 113,768 families are receiving food and clothing and other forms of relief. In Lousiana, 35,400 families are being aided.

In Mississippi, 18,144 families are receiving aid; in Kentucky 17,490; Oklahoma, 16,293; Missouri, 15,364; Texas, 7,086; Alabama, 6,776; Ohio, 5,366; Tennessee, 5,257; Illinois, 3,184; West Virginia, 4,521; Virginia 4,087; Indiana, 1,113; North Carolina, 518; Montana, 480; Pennsylvania, 441; Maryland 244; Georgia, 100; North Dakota, 96. These make a total of twenty states being served by the Red Cross.

Figuring an average of four and a fraction persons to each family according to census bureau statistics, this total would make a total of over a million being fed by the Red Cross. The officials expect the peak of the demand for aid to be passed in February and the decline to come in March.

More than three fourths of the $10,000,000 drought relief fund has been raised, the total Wednesday being $7,716,000.

White Phantoms Will Open Conference Basketball Tourney Against Vanderbilt

TEAMS MEET IN ATLANTA TODAY AT ONE O'CLOCK

Tar Heels Take to Atlanta Basketball Tradition Unequalled In South.

TEN PLAYERS MAKE TRIP

Carolinians Not Among Favorites, But Atlantans Flock To Their Games.

North Carolina's White Phantoms, 10 strong, plus Coach Ashmore and Manager Chauncey Royster, left yesterday for Atlanta and the Southern Conference tourney, and with them goes a basketball tradition unequalled in the South.

The Tar Heels have been picked to open the Tournament with Vanderbilt at 1 o'clock (Atlanta time) this afternoon. Maybe it's because of that tradition. Maybe it's because the Tar Heels teams can always draw a crowd in Atlanta and start things going right.

And why shouldn't they? Didn't they win a Southern title without a coach in 1922? Didn't they hang 'em up three years running in 1924, 1925, and 1926? Didn't Bill Dodderer make All Southerns at every post? And didn't the Atlanta sport writers glorify the Cobbs, Carmichaels, McDonalds, Hackneys and other Tar Heels as immortal princes of Southern basketball?

In 1925, in the final championship game, Carolina came from behind, scored 6 field goals in 3 minutes, and beat Tulane 36-28 for their third championship in four years. That glorious spurt went down in history as the South's greatest quint charge of history, and it evoked whole eruptions of praise.

Wrote O. B. Keeler: "I wish I could find out the charm those five boys whispered, sitting close together on the floor, before they got up for the last charge. I would say it before many a golf shot, and whenever Bobby Jones stands on the first tee of a championship round. It must be good."

Morgan Blake of the Atlanta Journal had to say: "To win three championships in four years against such stiff competition is one of the greatest athletic achievements, if not the greatest, in the history of Southern sports."

The Tar Heels went on and won the next year, then the lean times set it. They lost in 1927. Dodderer, the eternal, was back in 1928, and Carolina was again the favorite, but Dodderer and Purser, two regulars, sprained ankles in the last Pre-Tourney game. They were beaten down by superior teams, but still Atlanta remembers the Tar Heels, and still Atlantans flock to their games. It's just tradition now.

This year the Tar Heels will take to Atlanta another massive, raw-boned team of six-footers. They've just about an even break for Conference games, and they're nothing like the favorites. They've had some good nights, and played some fine ball. Then again they've had some bad nights, "off-nights" psychologically, two in particular against Duke.

Accompanied by Coach Jim Ashmore and Manager Chauncey Royster, the following players made the Atlanta trip: Paul Edwards, Jimmy Moore, Wilmer Hines, and Bill Markham, forwards; Sandy Dameron and Winslow Smith, centers; Captain Artie Marpet, Tom Alexander, Page Choate and Dave Henry, guards.

Bunn Hearn, Former Tar Heel Mound Ace, Active In National Pastime For Twenty-One Years

Now Training Carolina Pitchers and Catchers for Baseball Season—Played Major League Ball Seven Years—Now Manager of Winston-Salem Twins.

By Jack Bessen

If you were to take a peek out on the baseball diamond, where baseball practice is now in full swing, you would see a husky six footer in the regalia of the New York Giants strolling around talking to some of the candidates, showing them how to throw certain curves and occasionally whipping the balls to the catcher. That man is Bunn Hearn, one of North Carolina's baseball immortals.

Bunn is here assisting Coach Jim Ashmore handling the pitchers and catchers until Ashmore is relieved of the basketball duties.

Bunn was born and raised in Chapel Hill and has been attending football and baseball practices ever since he was a youngster.

In 1910 he made his debut in professional baseball and has been actively engaged in it ever since—a total of twenty-one years. Out of these twenty-one years, seven have been spent under the Big Top with the St. Louis Cardinals, the Boston Braves and the New York Giants. At the present time Bunn is part owner and manager of the Winston-Salem club of the Piedmont League.

Hearn joined the New York Giants late in 1913 when the McGrawmen were the king pins of the senior circuit. In the World Series that year, the Giants were beaten by the "silver haired leader," Connie Mack, and his Philadelphia Athletics.

After the World Series the Giants and a team composed mainly of Chicago White Sox and stars of the American League, such as Hooper and Tris Speaker of the Boston Red Sox, and Sam Crawford, the peer of Detroit sluggers, toured the world, starting from New York and traveling west to San Francisco, Japan, China, the Phillippines, Australia, Ceylon, Egypt, Italy, France and England. One of the largest crowds ever to witness a baseball game saw the United States-Keio University game in Japan. Sixty thousand fans went wild in the very first inning when the Japs shoved over a run and had a lead over the major leaguers. They were all ready to go home when the Americans put on a rally and five runs crossed the plate. The Orientals soon found out that a baseball game takes nine innings.

Bunn had another interesting experience while in London. Some sixty or seventy thousand persons jammed the huge cricket grounds, among them the king and queen, to see major leaguers perform. Before the game Bunn undertook the futile task of teaching George V how to throw a curve ball. Incidentally, it was the only failure of Bunn's coaching career. While on this trip, the members of the two squads were presented to all the "big dogs" of Europe, among them Lord and Lady Denman, Sir Thomas Lipton, King George and the Pope.

When asked what he regarded as his greatest performance on the mound, Bunn replied unhesitatingly, "When I pitched for Toronto against Jersey City on August 12, 1913. Neither side scored in twenty innings. Jersey City used two hurlers while I went the route for Toronto."

Bunn also got his biggest thrill out of this game because he broke a long standing record for scoreless innings pitched. The old record was made by Eddie Summers, old Detroit pitcher.

In 1917 and 1918, Hearn coached at Carolina. He has always enjoyed being in his old home town, and has enjoyed working with young players.

When asked about the baseball situation at Carolina, Bunn said, "In Coach Jim Ashmore Carolina has a fine capable coach and man, and I have enjoyed being associated with him. As for the players, we have a good bunch of clean, wholesome boys, and we should have a good team this year."

Hearn is not only manager of the Winston-Salem Twins, but he also takes his turn on the mound. Since the club is inaugurating night baseball, Bunn expects to have a great year—if they dim the lights. As a manager Hearn has proven a success, having won pennants in the Virginia and Piedmont Leagues.

The former major leaguer is taking an active interest in both Jimmy Maus and Nap Lufty, former captains, who are going up with the Greensboro Pats next month. Bunn's comment about these two players are, "I'm pretty sure that both of these boys will make good. They are good ball players, better than the average fellow who goes up to professional ball. Being college students, they're good clean livers; they're young and also keener than the average sandlot youngster. Most important, they're hustlers and have good dispositions."

CAROLINA INDOOR MEET STARS OF LAST YEAR TO PERFORM MARCH 7

Charlie Farmer, Brodie Arnold, and George Bagby proved Carolina's outstanding performers in the Southern Conference indoor games last year and despite heavy graduation losses to the ranks of the Tar Heel trackmen, all of the trio will be carrying Carolina colors again in this year's indoor meet, March 7.

Farmer set a fast record of 6.4 seconds for the sixty-yard dash, beating out Sandifer of Washington and Lee, whom he later beat in an outdoor race in which Farmer tied the Southern record of 9.8. Arnold vaulted 12 feet, 7 1-4 inches for an indeer record seldom equalled outdoors in the South. Bagby tied Bostic, of South Carolina, for the high jump record at a height of 5 feet 11 1-2 inches.

These Tar Heels, supported by a large cast of less sensational performers, are working hard to give Carolina a strong team for the indoor meet this year. The Tar Heels led Washington and Lee 26-24 until the final event of last year's meet, wherein the Generals' relay team carried off top honors in a thrilling climax to give them a 29-27 victory.

TAR HEELS OUT TO STOP V. M. I.'S MAT CHAMPIONS

Cadets, Unbeaten in South for Three Years, Will Face Carolina Saturday.

SEVEN STATE CHAMPIONS

Carolina Has Seven Champions To Send Against Conference Title Holders.

Carolina and V. M. I. wrestlers meet in the Tin Can here tomorrow night, freshman teams at 7 and varsity teams at 8:30 o'clock, in one of those rare athletic features that match irresistible force and immovable object.

The Cadets haven't lost a meet in the Conference for three years, but they'll be hard put to keep that record. Seven of Carolina's eight wrestlers haven't lost a match in the State, the team is unbeaten in the South, and the Tar Heels beat Duke 27-3, while V. M. I.'s best margin over the Devils was 20-8.

One team will be fighting for a record, the other to break that record. With so much at stake, and with the two rating with Washington and Lee at the top of the favorites for next week's Tourney, it seems the stage is set for a rare feature.

Carolina will present seven individual state champions—Captain Frank Stallings, 125 pounds; Mayne Albright, 135; Don Conklin, 145; Harry Tsumas, 155; Percy Idol, 165; Marion Cowper, 175; and Fred Ferguson, unlimited. Pete Usher, 115 pounder, will round out the lineup.

V. M. I.'s lineup will probably be Marshall, 155; Will, 125; Dewey, 135; Landis, 145; Ruckner, 155; Captain Talman, 165; Rochelle, 175; and Shell, unlimited.

The feature match is expected in the 125 pound class, where Captain Stallings, the Tar Heels' big little star, who wrestled Theobald, Navy's unbeaten star, to a draw, will oppose Will, V. M. I.'s Conference champion.

A comparison of the way the rivals beat Duke predicts a mighty interesting series of scraps. Both teams lost to Duke's 115-pounder, and V. M. I.'s 155- pounder also lost to Captain Cole of Duke, whom Tsumas of Carolina beat. V. M. I. won 6 of 8 matches from Duke with Will, the Conference champ, getting their only fall. Carolina took 7 of 8 from the Devils, while Captain Stallings, Albright and Conklin all won falls.

Ten Boxing Teams Will Compete In Tournament

TAKE WITH THEM A GREAT TRADITION

The Tar Heel basketball team will open the Southern Conference tournament this afternoon at Atlanta against Vanderbilt, and will carry with them the greatest basketball tradition that ever a Southern team has had.

They are decidedly the underdogs because of a poor season record, and there is little hope that they will come out on top in the conference race. But then they have had their good days this year and have proven that they can play basketball.

All Chapel Hill, in fact all North Carolina, is hoping that they will get a little of the Carmichael, Cobb, Dodderer, McDonald, Hackney blood in their veins this afternoon at two o'clock and show the Commodores that North Carolina's basketball prowess is not only tradition.

SOME MORE TRADITION AT CHARLOTTESVILLE

The boxing team also has an enviable record for the past few years, and added to this tradition is the fact that they are favorites along with Virginia, Duke and Florida to win the title this year.

RADIO COMPANY TO OFFER AWARDS IN VOCAL CONTEST

The Atwater Kent Foundation announces the Fifth National Radio Audition, which offers $25,000 in cash awards and musical scholarships to the best young men and women singers in the country. Selection of candidates for the final awards will be made by a joint ballot of radio listeners and professional judges.

In 1929 the women's first prize was won by Miss Genevieve Rowe, a junior at Wooster College and the Wooster Conservatory of music. Other college students have been among the national finalists in each of the four previous auditions.

Any young man or woman between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five years, anywhere within the United States is eligible to compete for the cash and scholarship awards which are to be allotted the winners as follows:

Two first awards, for a young man and a young woman respectively, of $5,000 cash and two two-year scholarships in any musical conservatory or under any recognized vocal teacher the winners may elect. Two second awards of $3,000 and one year scholarship each. Two third awards of $2,000 and one year scholarship each. Two fourth awards of $1,500 and one year scholarship each. Two fifth awards of $1,000 and one year scholarship each.

"I believe we are building for the future in searching out talented young singers for this medium of culture and entertainment—Radio," said A. Atwater Kent, president of the foundation bearing his name, in making the announcement of the contest. "The discovery of one of those rare voices, of which each generation produces a few, seems to me an event of profound national importance. Even when such a voice could give pleasure to only a few thousand people it was a national treasure. Now that millons may enjoy it through the medium of radio, such a voice becomes priceless. So, just as a good voice is a divine gift, radio offers opportunity to share that gift with the greatest number of persons."

The announcement further states that the headquarters of the Fifth National Radio Audition are in the Albee Building, Washington, D. C. and that organization of state and community committees to take charge of preliminary tests during the spring and summer months will begin at once.

his hopes of a conference title and it is more than likely that he will realize his pugilistic ambition. In baseball it's, "You can't hit 'em when you can't see 'em." You can see Goodridge and particularly that nagging left of his, but there are very few of them that are fast enough to get out of the way of it.

John Warren, our other undefeated, would like mighty well to wear the crown that his famous brother once held, and this will be his last opportunity to take it.

Levinson will make his debut in conference tourneys, and will be in a field that boasts the cream of the conference fighters. It will be stiff for him to win, but he has an enviable record for the season.

Platt Landis is the other member of the squad favored to do big things. He has one of the hardest punches of any man on the squad and should be right there with the best of them when the final night comes around.

A REAL TREAT FOR LOCAL MAT FANS

Undefeated for three years. That is the record of the V. M. I. Cadets on the mat. Undefeated in the South this season and only one member of the squad has lost a bout in the state. That is the record of the North Carolina Tar Heel grapplers.

These two teams will meet tomorrow night in the Tin Can in a varsity and freshman meet, and indications point to the best wrestling engagement of the year.

The winner of the match should be in line for the conference title which will be decided at Lexington, Virginia, next week-end. Mayne Albright has five falls to his credit out of six bouts fought this season. Captain Stallings, Conklin, Ferguson, Tsumas and Cowper also have good records. The Tar Heels will pin their hopes on these men.

Ten Boxing Teams Are Competing In Southern Tournament

the leading contenders, they will meet strong opposition in Virginia, Duke, Tulane, Florida, and L. S. U. Carolina holds claim to victories over Duke and Virginia by narrow margins, but will meet unknown quantities in L. S. U. and Tulane. L. S. U. has a 4-3 win over Duke to its credit, while the Green Wave of Tulane has defeated the Blue Devils by a score of 5-2.

Four Tar Heel battlers will be making their tournament debuts when they step in the ring today. They are Son Young, bantamweight, Marty Levinson, featherweight, Dail Holderness, welterweight, and Platt Landis, lightheavyweight. All of these men are sophomores with the exception of Dail Holderness who is fighting for the first time in his senior year. The other three Tar Heels will be competing in the tourney for the third time, all three being seniors.

Noah Goodridge, the "Punching Parson," will lead the Tar Heels to battle this year. Goodridge has been to the finals in two Conference tournaments and is undefeated this year.

The featherweight class will see the cream of the fighting. Practically every team entered has a strong man in this class, although Goldstein of Virginia and Levinson of Carolina are the outstanding men.

Fenton Gentry of Virginia is one of the best among the 175 pounders, but he is yet to meet Platt Landis, Coach Crayton Rowe's hard hitting sophomore.

John Warren, Carolina's undefeated heavyweight, and Khoury of L. S. U. are the outstanding men in the heavyweight division, although Doyless Hill of Tulane also has a good chance to crash through to a championship.

The strong Carolina squad will be somewhat handicapped by injuries. Platt Landis and John Warren are nursing sore hands and Obie Davis' eye is still a little tender. Dail Holderness suffered a cut in the corner of his eye Tuesday while sparring with Archie Allen, but is not expected to be greatly hindered by this last injury.

The Conference tournament will see four Carolina men sing their swan songs. Captain Noah Goodridge, John Warren, Obie Davis, and Dail Holderness will hang up their gloves for the last time when the tournament comes to a close Saturday night.

DELEGATES FROM STATE COLLEGES OPEN Y MEETING

Prominent Speakers To Address Student Volunteer Conference In Session Here Today.

The State Student Volunteer Conference of North Carolina Y. M. C. A.'s opened here yesterday afternoon at two o'clock. Delegates were registered at the Methodist church, after which they were carried to the homes where they will stay while in Chapel Hill.

After registrations, the delegates were entertained at an informal tea in the Methodist church, in which all sessions of the conference will be held. In the evening, the delegates assembled for the first time to organize, and at nine o'clock, the conference was formally opened with an address by Professor J. M. Connally, of Payne college, Augusta, Georgia. His topic was: "Human Need and World Christianity."

The program for today opens with the morning worship from eight-thirty to eight-forty-five which will be led by Mrs. J. E. K. Aggery. Following this, addresses and group discussions will be in progress until twelve-thirty o'clock. The first talk, "Economic Disorders in the World," will be given by Fay Campbell, the director of the Y. M. C. A. at Yale University. Following Miss Campbell's talk, Dr. Elbert Russell, dean of the school of religion at Duke University, will deliver an address on "Ignorance and Superstition in the World." Dr. McNeall Poteat, pastor of the Pullen Memorial church in Raleigh, will conclude the morning program with an address, using as his subject "The Inadequacies of Non-Christian Religions."

In the afternoon, Lee Phillips, a young negro student and poet from Howard university at Washington, will speak on "The

Experienced Cast Will Enact Parts In Unusual Play

Playthings, Anthony Buttitta's three act comedy of illusion, which is to be presented as an experimental production at the Playmakers Theatre this evening at eight-thirty, has an unusually fine cast. Walter Grotyohann, director of the production, has selected a versatile and competent company composed of Whitner Bissell, Eve Brickman, and Harold Baumstone. These three actors play the roles of seven characters. This, of course, is made possible only by the unique technique employed by the author in writing the play.

Whitner Bissell is cast in the roles of Shirley and Cecil Ingram. He has appeared in many Playmaker productions during the past three years. Bissell played the part of Aslaksen, the "moderation" printer, in Henrik Ibsen's famous play, An Enemy of the People in the fall of 1928. Last year he filled the role of Joe, the youthful inventor, in George Kelly's clever domestic comedy, The Show Off. Less than a month ago Bissell had one of the leading parts in Mrs. Wood's play, East Lynne. Bissell has also appeared as Captain James Wrenn in The Lie, a play of the American Revolution, and as Louie Nichols in Graveyard Shift.

Eve Brickman plays the roles of Sarah and Sonia Ingram in Playthings. She was cast in the role of Mrs. Hinkle in Joe Fox's comedy Sam Hinkle, Fireman, which was presented last fall.

Harold Braumstone, a newcomer to the Playmaker stage, takes the part of three characters, a different character in each act. Braumstone plays the Man, Stanley, and Busch.

Walter Grottyohann has been connected with the Playmakers for the past four years in almost every conceivable position—actor, technical worker, and director.

LAW ASSOCIATION DANCE PRESENTED

Presidents of Three Law Classes Lead Annual Ball in Bynum Gymnasium.

Last night the Law School Association held their annual dance in Bynum gymnasium between nine and one o'clock. The gym was beautifully decorated in the law school's colors of red and white. Illumination for the affair was provided by box lights.

The chaperones at the dance were Dean and Mrs. Charles T. McCormick; Professor and Mrs. R. H. Wettach; Professor and Mrs. A. C. McIntosh; Professor and Mrs. M. T. Van Hecke; Professor and Mrs. H. P. Winston; Professor and Mrs. Albert Coates; Professor and Mrs. M. S. Breckenridge; and Professor and Mrs. F. B. McCall.

The dance leaders were: J. A. Williams, president of the Law School Association, with Miss Martha Goodrich of Hendersonville; Martin Kellogg, president of the third year law class, with Miss Jean Quinn of Statesville; MacDonald Gray, president of the second year class, and Jack Ward, vice-president of the first year class, with Miss Molly Allen of Raleigh.

This evening the tea-dance of the three law fraternities, Phi Delta Phi, Delta Theta Phi, and Phi Alpha Delta, will take place in the gym between six and seven-thirty.

The decorations will be the same as those used for the Law School Association's dance. Jelly Leftwich and his University Club Orchestra will provide the music for both affairs.

Construction Begun On Memorial Tower

The bell tower which is being constructed on the campus back of the library as a gift of John Motley Morehead and Rufus Patterson is to be 176 feet tall to the top and approximately twenty feet square. The base will be a pedestal of limestone steps surrounded at the bottom by an arcade of twelve feet. At the top will be a four face clock with glass dials illuminated from the rear, and with a beacon light on the top. The date set for the completion of this structure is the Thanksgiving game between Carolina and Virginia at which time it will be dedicated.

FACULTY ORCHESTRA WILL PLAY CONCERT IN RALEIGH

The Senior Class of Meredith College is sponsoring a program to be played by the University Faculty Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Lamar Stringfield at the Meredith College auditorium tonight at eight-thirty.

The program will be the same as the one recently presented in the Carolina Playmakers theatre. Stringfield will be assisted by Adeline McCall; and D. A. McPherson, violinist.

Campen Elected

At a meeting of the sophomore class yesterday morning, T. Ben Campen was elected over Jim Hubbard for second assistant dance leader for the sophomore hop by a vote of 109 to 64.

The election was held as a result of a close race for this position at the sophomore smoker in which no one received a majority.

TAR HEEL STAFF GETS FREE SHOW

Manager Smith Entertains at Preview of "Scandal Sheet," a Newspaper Story.

The entire staff of the Daily Tar Heel was entertained last night by E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina Theatre, at a pre-showing of the picture, "Scandal Sheet," starring George Bancroft, Kay Francis, and Clive Brook. The picture immediately followed the last showing of "Inspiration." Managing Editor Dungan and about twenty staff members were present.

The manager of the theatre chose this picture since it is a very realistic romance of the newspaper world. It presents the rise and fall of Mark Flint in his thrilling career as news boss of the "Scandal Sheet." Many of the adventures and fates of the newspaper business are illustrated in the picture.

George Bancroft played the part of the editorial boss in his two-fisted quest for news; Kay Francis takes the part of Mrs. Flint; and Clive Brook represents the banker, Noel Adams. The whole cast was well picked, and exhibited a superior style of acting.

Flint's rule in the game of digging up and revealing all the scandal possible was, "If it's news, print it." This he practiced unscrupulously, and never spared anyone from the shame of his paper. All his staff loved him in his humor and feared him in his wrath. No person had seen him flinch until he was faced by the fact that his wife had betrayed him for the love of the banker, Adams.

When he discovered the infidelity of his wife and her affair with the banker, he did not forget his policy. It was news, and he printed it. His staff was astonished when he sat down and dictated a story scandalizing himself, his wife and the banker, but that was his creed and he stood by it.

The grief was too much for even the flint-hearted Flint. He ended his romantic career when he killed Adams and was sent to prison to face the penalty for first degree murder. It is hard to sympathize with such a man, but easy to admire his courage.

After the show many of the staff expressed their pleasure with the film, praising the acting as well as the impressive plot.

A.S.M.E. Will Show Westinghouse Movie

Monday night at seven-thirty o'clock, members of the University chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers will see a Westinghouse picture on the steam turbine. This meeting will serve as the regular meeting of the A. S. M. E. and will convene in room 206 Phillips hall.

W. M. Gallant, field representative for the Westinghouse company in Raleigh is bringing the picture here. The film shows many important and interesting details of the steam turbine.

The A. S. M. E. welcomes students of the other engineering schools to be present also.

Koch in Alabama

Professor Frederick H. Koch left Chapel Hill Thursday for Marion, Alabama, where he will lecture at Judson College. He is expected back Sunday night.

Budget Committee Recommends $800,000 For University Upkeep

Hobbs Announces Requirements For Spring Registration

Announcement has been made by Dean A. W. Hobbs, of the college of liberal arts, in regard to the regulations concerning registration in the spring quarter.

Dr. Hobbs calls attention to the University rules in regard to eligibility for registration. The rule reads: "A freshman must pass two courses in the first two quarters, and five courses in the first three quarters. After the freshman year, a student must pass at least one course each quarter, four courses in two successive quarters and seven courses in three consecutive quarters. Deficiencies may be made up by correspondence or in summer school, in which case only credit exceeding one course credit so obtained shall count for readmission.

"By two successive quarters is meant the last two quarters of residence, and by three successive quarters is meant the last three quarters of residence."

"All students," the dean said, "should assure themselves that they have complied with the above ruling before registering for the spring quarter; if this is not done and the student registers without fulfilling these requirements, the registration will have to be canceled.

Friends of German

The regular monthly meeting of the "Friends of German" will take place Sunday afternoon at the home of Dr. E. C. Metzenthin, on Hillsboro avenue, at four o'clock. The meeting will be spent with the practice of German songs and the playing of German games. The discussion for the afternoon will be "Methods and Opportunities for Travel in Central Germany." Anyone interested in the study of German is cordially invited.

APPROPRIATION IS MORE THAN THAT RECEIVED IN 1930

State College Gets Recommendation for $415,000 and N. C. C. W. for $408,000.

VOTING IS CLOSE

After an all-afternoon argument between widely divergent factions, the joint appropriations committee Thursday voted to recommend an appropriation of $800,000 for the University, and approximately $415,00 for State College, and $408,000 for N. C. C. W. The vote was 17 to 14.

The committee had previously raised the appropriation of the University from the $573,600 recommended by the Advisory Budget Commission to $875,00, the appropriation of State College from $332,000 to $450,000, and the appropriation of N. C. C. W. to $450,000 also. This is the same as the present appropriation which were reduced twenty per cent by horizontal cuts. But when the committee had finished going over the bill for the first time, the increases it had made caused it to reconsider and a reconsideration of the institution and other appropriations were taken. The effect of the reconsideration is indicated by the fact that though the vote to increase the appropriation for the University to $875,000 was passed by a vote of over two to one, the vote Thursday was close and the friends of the University had accepted the $800,000, indicating that there were few if any among the minority who voted "no" in an effort to hold out for the $875,000.

By cutting the University to $800,000 from the $875,000 recommended a week ago, the members of the committee be-

Gay MacLaren Stands Unique Among Dramatic Recitalists

The leading magazines and periodicals of America have praised the art of Miss Gay MacLaren, who will appear here Monday at eight-thirty in Memorial hall under the auspicies of the student entertainment committee. At that time she will present Helen's Boys, Ida Lubenski's well known play, in its entirety.

From The Billboard we read: "Gay MacLaren is really a dramatic medium through which every type of character from 'Juliet' to 'Simon Legree' can speak and act with perfect freedom and uncanny reality. No artist in recent years has had the phenomenal success achieved by Miss MacLaren. She is considered by many the most unique artist presented to the American public."

After Miss MacLaren graduated from Mrs. Manning's school in Minneapolis, Mrs. Manning hastened with her girl prodigy to New York. Brooklyn Institute, where genius was wont to disport itself, wasn't interested in juveniles. But it happened that Leland Powers, master monologist, was there giving Twelfth Night, and after he had finished his performance he said he would listen to the girl from Minneapolis. She unhesitatingly went upon the stage just vacated and before Powers, Director Franklin Hooper, and the editor of The Brooklyn Daily Eagle, she gave scenes from the play.

The men were so favorably impressed that they at once advised the authorities at the Brooklyn Institute to put her on the program. Powers declared that she was the most unusual girl he had ever seen, and added that she was an artist.

They put her in the Brooklyn Institute repeating the performance to audiences that overfilled the auditorium. The Brooklyn Eagle front-paged her, and other papers featured her as a discovery. From that day to this Gay MacLaren has been known in the papers and magazines as what General Smedley Butler called her, "The One-Girl Show Company," and has been busy before audiences marvelling at her unique gifts.

Powers lived his characters; readers, impersonators, actors create their parts, but Gay MacLaren does none of this. Her peculiar mentality photographs the play, the words, tones, movements, personalities, all that the audience sees and hears on the stage on a memory film. Then when she goes on the stage, she reproduces all this from memory.

Laboratory Apparatus Bought By Caldwell In 1824 Is Still In Use

By Jack Riley

Students of Dr. Karl H. Fussler's Physics 2 class were somewhat surprised when they were informed that some of the apparatus they were using dated back to the beginning of the University. But this is indeed a fact.

The matter was first brought up when someone commented on the age of a concave mirror used in class. An investigation revealed the fact that not only this mirror, but several other instruments that are still serviceable, have been used for over a hundred years.

The first president of the University, Dr. Joseph Caldwell, suggested to the state legislature February 1824 that they appropriate a sum of money to be used to buy books and apparatus in Europe. At that time the University was small, and people throughout the state were adverse to spending much money on the little school at Chapel Hill, but the legislature finally decided to rease $6,000 to be spent for the materials suggested by the president.

It was difficult to secure the desired things in America, and they were much more expensive in this country than in England, so in the summer of 1824 Dr. Caldwell left for the latter country. He purchased 979 books at a cost of $3,234.74, physical and astronomical apparatus at a cost of $3,361.35, and the shipping made a total expense of $7,238.01, of which he paid from his own pocket $1,238.01 or the amount he exceeded the appropriation. This was later returned to him by the state.

Dr. Caldwell bought his apparatus from W. and S. Jones, philosophical, mathematical, and optical instrument makers, at the Archimedes No. 30, Lower Holborn, London, and the material was considered the best obtainable at that time.

Today, after 107 years of hard handling and abuse, there are several articles which are still serviceable, and some still carry the trade mark of W. and S. Jones. Dr. Fussler has positively identified one concave mirror, one convex mirror in a blackened frame, and one diamond spotted jar as being part of the material which Dr. Caldwell brought back from his trip to England. There is also one three-foot plate electric machine and one jointed electrical discharger in the physics room which the physics professor believes are the same ones mentioned by Caldwell in his memorandum.

Al Comes Back

Memories of his reception and subsequent rejection by the electorate of North Carolina must stir Al Smith as he returns to the state Monday to address its legislators and those lucky enough to secure tickets. Mr. Smith visited the state during his campaign for election to the presidency of the United States. He was greeted everywhere with enthusiasm. Shortly thereafter the people went to the polls and a majority of them voted for Republican electors. That was about a year before the stock market crash gave the final push to the oncoming financial depression. We were prosperous in North Carolina then.

Now when North Carolina is considering reorganizing its government and is seriously concerned with financial questions it calls Al back for an address. Whether it expects him to solve the financial puzzles or to advise as to governmental reforms is not known. But the representatives of the same people who turned him down in 1928 want to hear what he has to say. We have an idea that Governor Smith will tell us something well worth hearing.

If the former presidential candidate discusses the question of state finances or governmental reform we wonder what the reaction of the legislators will be. As we remember he gave the state along with the rest of the country a little advice in 1928 which we chose to disregard. We were prosperous then. Depression allows time for reflection. We have probably reflected lately. Will the former governor's advice be given the same consideration it received two years ago? We wonder!

The Duty Of The Legislature

From the Greensboro Daily News, February 26, 1931:

Editor of the Daily News:

Please publish this for the good of North Carolina high school boys.

I graduated from Wilson's Mills high school last year and have been working on the farm this year trying to save up money to complete my education at our university.

In the fight of the university to win its appropriations I feel that I have a stake.

We high school boys beg that you help us and our university in our fight to be as good as the best.

James Thomas Underwood.

This letter is a most significant plea for the preservation of the University. The adoption by the legislature of the oppropriation recommended for the University by the budget commission would be a great injustice to the members of the faculty, many of whom have served here for years at half the salaries they could command elsewhere. It would be an injury to the State of North Carolina to lose the benefits of the research being carried on here. But, above all, it would be a repudiation of faith with the youth of North Carolina, a cruel injustice to diminish in any way the educational advantages they now have. To give to North Carolina youth the very best of educational opportunities is not the privilege of the legislature. It is the duty.—H. B.

Don't Weaken!

The members of the state appropriations committee have shown themselves capable of sup porting a measure which they know to be right in the face of strong opposition throughout the state. They have recommended that the appropriation to the University be $800,000, and they must be given credit for their foresight in seeing the absolute necessity of at least this amount for the continued progress of the University. However the time has not yet arrived to give them too much praise, the appropriation still has to be passed by both houses of the legislature and this may not be such an easy thing to accomplish. When the bill comes before the legislature there will probably be numerous protests. Many will say the state simply cannot afford to give the University this much, others will ask where the money is coming from and will point out that the state already has upon it the burden of supporting the county schools and that in a time of such depression it is simply impossible for the state to increase any appropriation. Then will be the time for all those who favor the continued progress of the University to show how much they believe in it. Then will be the time for them to show courage and refuse to allow the legislature to defeat the appropriation. Then after the legislature has voted favorably on the appropriation, it will be impossible to give them too much praise. —J. C. S.

Culture And Our Fine Arts School

This isn't exactly the most opportune time to start thinking about the acquisition of a fine arts school for the University, but the need is a glaring one just the same. Walter Winchell made one of his typical remarks the other day from which the Europeans seem to get quite a little satisfaction: "The typical 'follies' girl expresses the true American spirit." Europeans and more or less cultured individuals of other nations never let the chance slip to tell Americans about their lack of culture. Some of the Universities in this country are getting a bit sensitive about the matter and are spending huge sums on their fine arts schools trying to instill some of the culture we have been missing during our hectic struggle for American "success." The appreciation of culture can be taught through no better media than music and art.

America is beginning to get over her adjusting age and should be taking on culture, which is one sign of a mature nation. The South has long had a reputation for culture among certain classes. It has kept this reputation exceedingly well, but culture for the great masses has been neglected. It is high time for our masses to stop worshipping follies girls and their showy emptiness and start enjoying something of real worth. Is the University again to be the leader in the South?—O. W. D.

OPEN FORUM

Free Speech Again

The Editor, The Daily Tar Heel:

Your issue of February 26 carried an article concerning the jailing of Henry Fuller in Memphis, Tennessee, on the charge of asking for Communist headquarters. Since Mr. Fuller is a graduate of this University, and since I have had the privilege of knowing him very well for several years, I was hoping that if you carried any article about him, you would raise some question concerning the apparent outrage perpetrated on Mr. Fuller by police officials in Memphis.

The accounts of this affair which have appeared in the News and Observer and the Greensboro Daily News, as well as in your columns, have been amazing to me. They record with perfect nonchalance the plain violation of one of the rights which English-speaking peoples have claimed in their constitutions and laws now for some several hundred years. These articles fail entirely to note the fact that if they are true, or even approximately true, they are conclusive evidence that the police officials responsible, and arrogant officials who have taken unto themselves authority specifically denied in the Constitution of the United States, Articles IV and V—rights repeatedly affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States and by State Supreme Courts. I happen to know that Mr. Fuller is being urged to bring suit against the City of Memphis. If the newspaper accounts of the affair are correct, I do not see how he could lose his case; and as a friend of his, I shall do everything in my power to persuade him to bring suit. Besides the matter of personal satisfaction in my opinion it is Mr. Fuller's plain public duty to bring suit; and I think he is entitled to the support of every citizen who has the slightest respect for elementary personal rights and for the Constitution of the United States.

As to Mr. Fuller's being a communist or not being one, that is an affair which is entirely his own personal concern. Since when has it become a crime to hold political or economic opinions which do not coincide with those of the Republican or Democratic parties? It happens that Mr. Fuller is not a communist, but merely one of our more intelligent citizens who is interested in communism and other questions of public concern and probably knows more about them than all the police officials in Tennessee.

Sincerely yours,
W. T. COUCH.

But why call it capital punishment when it's the lack of capital that causes a man to get it.

APPROPRIATION IS MORE THAN THAT RECEIVED IN 1930

lieve that they have not reduced the appropriation for faculty and teaching but have only reduced those expenses, clerical, materials, and the like, which they put under the head of administrative and business expense. That a substantial recommendation of the sort could be made has long been the opinion of some of the members of the committee who say that they do not want to cut the teaching expenses under that asked for by President Frank Graham.

The $800,000 annual appropriation the committee voted is $75,000 less than the appropriation voted by the 1929 legislature but which was never given the University as it was cut the first year to $759,837. The appropriation for the present year is $682,000 or twenty per cent less than appropriated. The figure recommended by the Advisory Budget Commission was 34.4 per cent less than that appropriated two years ago. The University, in its first estimated budget, asked for $926,000, but the committee cut this request to $875,000 and now to $800,000.

The appropriation is an increase of approximately $275,000 over the appropriation of $523,000, recommended by the Advisory Budget Commission.

Bill Proposed To Cut Wisconsin U. Salaries

A bill to cut the salaries of all employees of the University of Wisconsin was introduced in the lower house of the state legislature by Assemblyman Jacob J. Blahnik of Algoma. The wage cut would affect state employees who receive a salary of $90 a month or more, but no salary shall be reduced to less than $90 per month. No salaries would be increased until the existing industrial and agricultural depression has ended, which condition is left to the discretion of the governor. Proponents of this bill see it as an attempt to lessen the taxes on the overburdened taxpayer. The bill also stipulates that: "New employees engaged after March 1 shall in no instance be paid a larger salary than the present salary for the post, less ten per cent."

Iowa State Sponsors Tour of Americas

About twelve students of the Iowa State College are planning to take a ten weeks' tour of America next summer. In the itinerary are included historical places of especial interest to landscape architects along the Mississippi river between Iowa and the Gulf of Mexico, New Orleans, Mayan Indian ruins in Mexico, old cities and gardens in Central and South America, the Bok Campanile in Florida and estates along the Atlantic coast, in New York and the New England states.

Most of the trip will be taken by automobile. Credit will be awarded the students for studies made of the places visited. This is the eighth tour of the kind that Professer P. H. Elwood, head of the Iowa State College landscape architecture department, has sponsored.

Carolina Quintet Defeats Vanderbilt

Tar Heels Victorious In First Tourney Game By Count Of 23 To 21

Atlanta, February 27.—Led by Bill Edwards, performing in the roles of center and forward during a period of the fray and who tallied six points, Carolina nosed out Vanderbilt in the first game of the Southern Conference basketball tournament here this afternoon. The North State quintet's margin of victory was a scant two points, 23 to21.

Schwartz, veteran Vandy forward, gave the Tar Heels no end of trouble, sinking several long ones and a crip to add seven counters to his aggregation's total.

LATE FLASH

Charlottesville, Va., February 27.—Captain Goodridge and Levinson enter the semi-final bouts tomorrow as results of victories this afternoon. Goodridge gained a decision over Graves and Levinson over Jones both Mississippi Aggies. Young, Carolina bantam, was knocked out by Riddick of Duke in second. Holderness advanced in night bout by outpointing McKinney Washington and Lee.

FINAL GRID GAME SET FOR TODAY; SAME PERSONNEL

Carolina's winter gridders will hold another inter-family battle in Kenan Stadium Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

This will be the last game of the winter season except for the annual Monogram-Rookie game, carded for March 7.

Head Coach Chuck Collins will keep intact the personnel of the "Blue" and "Orange" teams and the result should be an interesting game.

These same squads have fought it out twice previously. The "Blues" have won both games, but the last was a hectic 26-19 thriller in which exactly four touchdowns came in the last quarter.

Phipps and Weisker, two of the best of the freshman halfbacks, team together in the "Orange" backfield, while the "Blues" start with Chandler and Slusser, veterans.

Penn State will be host to the Eastern Intercollegiate Association boxing championship tournament March 20 and 21. Six teams, all members of the league, will enter men. State is the present titleholder, having won the championships in 1924, 1927, 1929, and 1930.

DOPING 'EM OUT

By

BOB BETTS

It is highly probable that the teams favored to win the tournament in this column will be eliminated even before this gets in print, but that is just one of the many dangers that any star gazer runs up against. Conference tournaments for the past few years indicate that "dark horses" usually come through as winners while the sure bets fall by the wayside. Time and again teams with almost perfect records for the season find the sailing too rough and sink. It has been fairly well established that the best teams do not always win in tournament play, but rather the teams that are functioning best at that particular time.

Maryland, the unheralded cage team of the season, has a fine chance to win the championship and bring it back to this end of the conference. The "Old Liners" have a powerful quintet, one that has combined offensive and defensive power. Ronkin, Berger, Chalmers, Norris, and Pease are the men who have done most of the playing this season. With the exception of a loss to Virginia, an old rival, Maryland has swept aside all opponents. Maryland has never won a basketball championship, and this should give the boys enough inspiration to make them come through.

Georgia, ranked second by the committee, has compiled the most impressive won-and-lost record in the South. The "Bull Dogs" have won fifteen while losing one to Georgia Tech for a percentage of nine thirty eight. Georgia has a veteran squad lead by "Catfish" Smith, the gridiron star. Moran and Strickland are crack forwards. Reeder, Young, and Sanford look after the other teams' forwards while Mr. Smith jumps center. Keep your eye on the "Bull Dogs" and you may see things.

Alabama, the school with a monopoly on Southern Conference championships and last year's court champions, have another great team to defend their title. The committee picks them to win, but 'Bama will have a hard time because the competition is going to be warm. Alabama has rolled up a large number of points in each game played. Their defense, while not as strong as their offense, has been good most of the time.

Washington and Lee, one of last year's favorites, have a team that may pull an upset and win the title. The "Generals" have one of the outstanding centers in the South in Leigh Williams. Harris Cox, flashy forward, is one of the main reasons why the team is such a threat. With the exception of Captain Hanna it is the same team that went to Atlanta to

MAT MEET WITH V.M.I. SCHEDULED AS S. I. C. CLASSIC

Keydet Team Has Not Dropped Conference Engagement in Three Years.

Carolina's newly-crowned State championship wrestlers, of whom seven of eight are also individual champions, will get their Southern Conference potentialities tested to utmost tonight.

V. M. I. is bringing a team to the Tin Can that hasn't lost a Conference meet in three years, and in view of the fact that Carolina, Washington & Lee and V. M. I. are rated as the three favorites to win the tournament next week, it looks as if this Carolina-V. M. I. meet will be the feature of the college season in the South this year.

The freshman teams of the two institutions clash here at 7 o'clock and the varsities start their big show at 8:30. Carolina beat Duke 27-3, and V. M. I. only trimmed the Devils 20-8. The Tar Heels aren't ready to believe themselves favorites, but they are in a fighting mood and it looks as if the Cadets will be put to the limit to emerge with that three-year's clean slate in the Conference.

Many feature matches are expected, but the best will probably be between Will, V. M. I.'s 125-pound champ of the Conference, and Captain Frank Stallings of Carolina. Stallings was out of shape for the Tourney last year, and he's not at all satisfied that Will is the champ. The Tar Heel wrestled Theobold, Navy's undefeated ace, to an extra-period draw in early season, and he will be out for Will from the start.

In the 135-pound class Albright for Carolina is a favorite over Dewey, because Albright has the remarkable record of 5 falls for 6 matches this year, and the Tar Heel won a fall, the Cadet a decision, against Duke. In the 145 pound class Carolina will present an undefeated sophomore, Don Conklin, who also won a fall at Duke, against Landis, who won a decision at Duke. The 115-pound bout will be between Usher of Carolina and Marshall.

The Tar Heels have the edge in the 155. Ruckner of V. M. I. lost to Captain Cole of Duke in this weight, but Tsumas, the "terrible Tar Heel" came along and beat Cole. From there up the odds seem about even. Percy Idol of Carolina meets Captain Talman of V. M. I. in the 165, and both boys had more than 8 minutes advantage in matches with Duke. Rochelle and Shell are the star V. M. I. heavies, and will meet Cowper and Ferguson, Carolina's stout seniors.

FRESHMAN MAT CAPTAIN CHOSEN

S. L. Efland, was elected yesterday to the captaincy of the freshman wrestling team. Efland has starred in the Oak Ridge, V. P. I., and Duke meets, winning his match in each meet. This is the stellar yearling's first year on the mat.

K. A.'S WIN FRAT HARDWOOD TITLE

Kappa Alpha Wins Right to Contest Campus Championship By Win Over Phi Delt's.

Kappa Alpha clinched the fraternity basketball championship and the right to meet the Question Marks, winners of the dormitory title, for the campus championship, by defeating Phi Delta Theta 19-13 Thursday night in the Tin Can.

The Phi Delt's made a good start ringing up three points in the first quarter while holding the K. A.'s scoreless. The Kappa Alpha's opened up in the second quarter to take a 10-5 lead at the half time. From then on the game was in the bag for the K. A.'s although the Phi Delt's rallied in the final quarter to score five points while holding the K. A.'s to one action toss. The game was too far gone then and the whistle blew before the Phi Delt's could seriously threaten the K. A.'s lead.

Brandt, guard, led the Kappa Alpha attack ringing up ten points, four of which were on beautiful long shots from midcourt. John Phipps played a good defensive game at guard for the winners, gathering three points to figure in the scoring.

For the Phi Delt's, John Peacock, guard, proved to be in the individual star, gathering ten out of his team's total of thirteen, to tie Brandt for top scoring honors. Moore, forward, played a good game getting one action toss to figure in the scoring.

The Kappa Alpha's will meet the Question Marks Monday in the Tin Can for the campus title. The K. A.'s are top heavy favorites to cop the campus title from the Question Marks by virtue of their victories over the Phi Gam's and Phi Delt's, the Phi Delt's having defeated the A. T. O.'s, Beta's, and Sigma Zeta's, none of whom had been defeated until their meeting with the Phi Delt's.

Place Chosen for Olympic Tryouts

Olympic Games year is almost here and the United States Olympic Track and Field Committee recently met in New York to discuss arrangements for the tryouts for candidates to represent this country.

After little discussion it was decided that Soldiers Field, Chicago, largest sporting arena in the world, would act as the site for the tryouts for the 1932 Olympic team.

VIRGINIA TEAMS TOUGHEN FIELD FOR INDOOR MEET

1930 Champs Sending Nineteen Stars; V. P. I. Sends Distance Aces.

Two more Conference teams yesterday reported their individual entries for the second Southern Conference Indoor Games here March 7, and as a result the prospective field of competition looks tougher than ever.

Washington and Lee says they'll send 19 varsity performers, and the list will be well punctured with veterans from last year's team, which won the final relay and the title from Carolina 29-27.

V. P. I., drilling the same number, will be headed by Miles and the stars who ran V. P. I. to second place in the Conference cross country run last fall.

Johnny Miles runs the mile as fast as 4:35. Elder, Fisher, Carter and Gentry are other distance stars from cross country. In other events Stanley Rhinehart holds the V. P. I. record of 50 seconds for the quarter-mile; Bill Turner holds a 11 foot 10 vaulting record for Miles Field; and there are three star shot putters, headed by Jim Swart, who holds the V. P. I. record at 45 feet 5 3-4 inches.

Algy Speer is Conference hurdle champ. Finklestein was a first-placer in the indoor hurdles last year. Bill Shepard is a Conference champ in the quarter-mile, and Leigh Williams won the outdoor title in 1929.

Broderick, Gladden, Phelps, Biddle and Mahler make up a strong distance quintet. Peel Rivers, a sophomore, is jumping around 6 feet, and Curtis and Cook have been hitting 5 feet 10. Stevens puts the shot well above 41 feet.

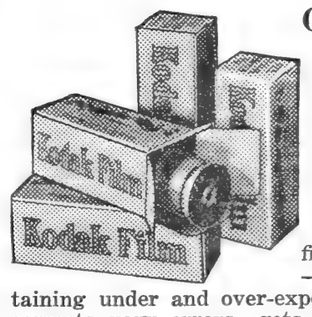
Intercollegiate Sports

The University of Wisconsin basketball team is badly crippled by the ineligibility of four veterans who have been lost to the team since the first of the second semester. A fifth man recently quit because of a reprimand given him by the coach.

Frankness, a virtue in any type of athletic publicity, is practiced at Columbia University a recent report would indicate. The university states that football players are the dumbest scholars in the student body.

In a recent basketball game between the University of Idaho and the University of Oregon, thirty-four fouls were called on players of the two teams in forty minutes. Cryptically remarks the official student news organ of the Oregon institution, "If that isn't a record it is no fault of Mr. Morris or Mr. Coleman, the two officials. No, these two gentlemen certainly made a conscientious effort."

The Auburn "A" Club is offering a prize of a hundred dollars to student composers for a marching song.



A football fan got $1,000 several days ago for not attending a football game.

The Notre Dame-Northwestern game at Evanston last fall was the contest. Tickets for it were scarce, and at a premium. Frank C. Leviton got one, but hardly had he settled himself in his seat, when a policeman removed him.

For injuries to his reputation etc. Leviton sued Northwestern University for $100,000 on the strength that he had secured the ticket from a friend who had

ACCIDENT FATAL TO NEGRO DRIVER

One negro was killed instantly and another injured early Thursday morning when a Chevrolet truck they were in ran into a telegraph pole, turned on its side and was consumed by flames. The dead man was Jasper Miller, and both the riders were residents of South Hill, Virginia. His death was laid to a severely fractured skull, and his body was brought to Chapel Hill to be prepared for the funeral that took place yesterday in South Hill.

The other occupant, Wade Malone, was not seriously injured, suffering from a blow on the head and several scratches about the face. He was carried to the Lincoln hospital in Durham about three o'clock in a state of coma from which he recovered forty-five minutes after he arrived.

Nothing could be learned from him about the accident except that he was asleep on the back seat and remembers nothing until he came to in the hospital. It was gathered therefore that Miller, the dead man, was driving at the time of the wreck although this cannot be substantiated. Malone is resting well now and should be out of bed by Monday.

Miller, the supposed driver, was judged to be twenty years of age while Malone seemed to be about twenty-three. The truck belonged to the South Boston Shoe Shop and the two negroes worked for this firm.

There are at present no grounds on which to hold Malone, and unless further evidence is brought forth he will not be held. Policeman J. D. Blake of the local police force took charge at the scene of the catastrophe, and took the injured man to Durham. U. M. Rackley, also of the local force, took charge of affairs here in the community and looked after the body.

240 Students on N.C.C.W. Honor Roll

Greensboro, February 27.—North Carolina College counts 240 students on the honor roll because of excellent work in the first semester, according to statistics just secured from the office of Miss Mary Taylor Moore, registrar. The number on the roll represents about 16 per cent of the student body, which last semester was made up of 1,734 women.

All students whose average for the semester was a grade of B were put in the honor-class. Many of the 240 made no grade lower than B. Eleven of the number made no grade lower than A. Nine seniors whose names are on the list have been on the honor roll since they entered the college in 1927.

Students who made no grade lower than A during the last semester are named in the following list: Mabel Aderholdt, Lexington; Ellen Fletcher, Salisbury; Pansy McConnell, Gastonia; Fleeta Martin, Dunn; Pauline Moser, Lewisville; Rebecca Rhodes, Bessemer City; Virginia Stecker, Ford Bragg; Evelyn Underwood, Waynesville; Mary Jane Wharton, Greensboro.

Seniors whose names have stood on the roll of honor for four years as follows: Louisa Hatch, Hamlet; Gladys Hicks, Rockingham; Fleeta Martin, Dunn; Charlotte Purcell, Salisbury; Manie Robinson, Norven; Matilda Robinson, Greensboro; Helen Seifert, New Bern; Mary Jane Wharton, Greensboro; Peggy Ann Williams, Asheville.

The standing of the four classes so far as percentage of their numbers on the roll is concerned is shown in this schedule; seniors, 33 per cent; juniors, 21 per cent; sophomores, 15 per cent; freshmen, nearly 7 per cent.

bought it from another friend who had purchased it from someone else. Leviton claimed that he was originally unaware of the lengthy process by which it had come into his hands.

One of football's most distinguished and oldest conferences, the Big Three, may be reestablished, athletic officials in the East announced recently with the release of the new Yale schedule, placing Harvard and Princeton in the final and objective positions on alternate years.

An aggregation of Olympic and worlds records held by Betty Robinson, Northwestern University track luminary was enhanced recently when she captured the 100-yard indoor dash title in record breaking time of 11.1 seconds. Miss Robinson's contender, Stella Walsh, Cleveland, finished a scant half foot behind her.

Half a foot was practically the same margin of victory when the same two women runners met last Fourth of July, though the victory was reversed.

the tournament last year.

Duke will feel the loss of Werber, Farley, and "Chalky" Councilar, although Capelli, Shaw, and Robertshaw have played good basketball this year. The brunt of Duke's attack will be borne by the two co-captains, Croson and Rogers. The Blue Devils may come through this year but it will be a big upset if they do.

N. C. State is in the same boat with Duke. In Gammon, Johnson, Morgan, Rose, Clark, and Gurneau, "Doc" Sermon has a well coached squad of players. If State survives the opening game with Kentucky, they will be hard to down.

Georgia Tech, Auburn, and Kentucky have fine teams. The Yellow Jacket cagemen have shown signs of great power at times this season. In a short tournament they may reach top form and cop the title. Tech has Gooding and Phillips at the forward positions, Herron and Mathis, guards, and Perkins at center. Kentucky has one of the fastest teams in the South. They have been ranked third by the committee, which may mean something or nothing. Auburn's Plainsmen have had a successful season and may cause some trouble before its all over.

North Carolina, winner of more Southern Conference basketball championships than any other school, is not a very big threat this year. In fact, the Tar Heels will have a fight on their hands if they survive the opening round play when they meet Vanderbilt. Tennessee, L. S. U., and Florida have only fair teams this season.

Dr. McClure, Asheville Agricultural Student, Will Address Local Organization Monday.

Dr. J. G. K. McClure, president of the Farmers' Federation, with headquarters in Asheville, is to be the principal speaker at the meeting of the North Carolina Club Monday evening at seven-thirty o'clock, in 103 Bingham hall.

The Farmers' Federation was put into operation ten years ago by Dr. McClure who came to Asheville seeking improved health. He became interested in the agricultural conditions of mountain farmers and sought some means to develop agricultural industries and markets, so that the farmer may confidently increase his production.

This organization has eight warehouses in and around Asheville through which it sells the produce of the farmers, and buys their necessities at cost. This federation has greatly increased the avenue of markets for the farmers of western North Carolina and is gradually extending its program for improvement.

Foreign Relations Conference Opens At Duke University

Students from eight southern states gathered at Duke University Thursday for the opening of the eighth annual Southern Students Conference on International Relations and heard Dr. Edward S. Corwin, professor of jurisprudence at Princeton University.

J. I. Morgan, Jr., Duke student and president of the conference, together with President F. P. Few of Duke, welcomed the delegates in the afternoon session Thursday. At this session Dr. C. B. Gosnell, of Emory University, and Amy Hemingway Jones, of the Carnegie Endowment for international peace, were the principal speakers.

The evening session was given over to the addess of Dr. Corwin on "The Foreign Relations of China." Professor Corwin has recently made a visit to China and was called into conference by government officials upon his return to this country.

Friday morning Pierre De Lanux, director of the Paris information office of the League of Nations delivered his address on "The Outlook for Disarmament," while Dr. George G. Wilson, professor of international law at Harvard University, spoke on "Limitations in the Effectiveness of Treaty Provisions."

Other speakers on the program who addressed the meeting are: Dr. J. Fred Rippy of Duke University; Professor K. C. Frazier of the University; President F. P. Few of Duke University; and President Frank Graham of the University, who made the concluding address before the body.

CRIME SITUATION IS LEGION'S TOPIC

Durham Commander Is Principal Speaker at American Legion's Annual Ladies' Night.

The Chapel Hill post of the American Legion gave their annual dinner and ladies' night at the Episcopal parish house Friday with the members of the Legion Auxiliary and other women in the families and among the friends of the Legionnaires as guests of the post. Paul Robertson, post commander, was toastmaster; J. O. Harmon, manager of Swain hall, had charge of the dinner.

After Adjutant W. S. Hogan reported on the membership for the past year, W. B. Umstead, past commander of the Durham post, addressed the group on the possibilities of the American Legion taking the leadership in relieving the crime situation. He discussed the general situation of law breaking, speaking particularly of the large per cent of white criminals.

At the end of the meeting, Professor George McKie directed the preliminaries to select a representative of the University to participate in state-wide oratorical contest which is sponsored by the state department of North Carolina in Raleigh. L. H. Fountain was selected as representative and C. Rutledge as alternate.

Washington's Rules Issued to Students

A pamphlet called George Washington's Rules of Civility and Decent Behavior in Company and Conversation are being distributed throughout the freshman and sophomore classes by the office of the dean of students. These rules, which were found in some of Washington's papers that were completed before he had reached his sixteenth birthday, were thought at first to have been original with him. It was later discovered that they had been used in France and England many years before Washington's time and that his tutor had used them to teach the boy penmanship.

This booklet, whose title gives a concise description of its contents, was edited by Charles Moore and published by the Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award Committee of the New York southern society. Any student who desires to have a copy of these rules may do so by applying at 205 South Building at the dean of students' office.

Each year this committee awards a medallion to that student in the University who ranks highest in leadership and character as selected by a local committee. This honor was won last year by Ray Farris, and the year before by Ed Hudgins, both of them were past presidents of the student union.

AN EDITORIAL

Some Political Demogogy

Thursday, February 12, the editor of this publication called leaders of both parties into conference to tell them that the columns of the Daily Tar Heel existed for the entire student body and that the leaders of any political faction could have space each day, which was to be edited and written by themselves. Saturday, February 14, the "All Campus Party" and the "Non-Fraternity Party" published statements of their sides.

Conceiving the idea that they were for some reason or other being prejudiced against the "Non-Fraternity Party" complained that they would rather not have any space at all than what was given them.

Again on Friday, February 27, we reissued our invitation to the parties. The "All-Campus Party" replied that they would issue no statements unless the "Non-Fraternity Party" saw fit to do so also. The "Non-Fraternity Party" made no reply, but yesterday released a publication of their own called "The Spokesman."

The Daily Tar Heel reiterates the fact that such a publication as "The Spokesman" is entirely superfluous in such a small town as Chapel Hill. In the first place the students publishing the paper are working directly against the welfare of the official publications of the University in that this is a year of economic depression and even in the best of times the amount of advertising to be obtained in Chapel Hill has a definite limit. The Buccaneer, The Carolina Magazine, and The Daily Tar Heel all lost money last year and unless everyone co-operates they may lose money this year.

If The Daily Tar Heel were unpopular with the student body there might be justification of a sort for the political paper, but two overwhelming votes two years ago and last spring have backed up the Tar Heel and its program. In fact in the election last spring as to whether the daily should be continued or not there were only thirteen votes out of the entire number cast which were opposed to the idea.

On two points then is "The Spokesman" superfluous: it duplicates in its columns articles which were not submitted to The Tar Heel but would have been published had they been submitted, it thus being a waste of human energy; and it secondly places the already established publications in the jeopardy of running into deficits.

Will Yarborough.

LOCAL MAN GIVES HIS VERSION OF MEMPHIS ARREST, IMPRISONMENT

Henry R. Fuller, Book Salesman, Arrested and Treated As Criminal While Asking for Communist Headquarters; Describes Incarceration in Tennessee Jail.

Editorial note: Henry R. Fuller, a college textbook traveling salesman for the Houghton-Mifflin Publishing Co., who makes his home in Chapel Hill, was arrested Saturday night, February 21, by Memphis, Tennessee, police and held until the following Monday morning when he was released without charge. He was arrested as he walked into the police station and asked the address of the local Communist headquarters, the inquiry being made because Mr. Fuller was looking for Horace B. Davis, former professor in a Memphis college.

Mr. Fuller was graduated from the University in 1926 with high honors, and for two years thereafter was advertising manager of the University Press. He comes of a prominent Florida family and is a great grandson of John Sevier, who was for six terms Governor of Tennessee and a hero of the Battle of King's Mountain.

Mr. Fuller's friends, who were amazed at the action of the Memphis police, say he is not and never has been a Communist. In Chapel Hill he is known as a man of unusually quiet and gentle manners. Mr. Fuller's own version of the Memphis affair, which has appeared in the Memphis Press-Scimitar, is given below.

By Henry R. Fuller

I walked into the Memphis police station a student of economics. I came out almost a Communist.

I saw a negro woman slapped in the face by a police officer.

I saw a man with his mouth bleeding and three teeth missing after he had been "questioned."

I was held thirty-six hours incommunicado. No charge was made against me.

"Lucky To Be Free"

I came out of jail with a feeling that I was lucky because I had powerful friends and that the less fortunate could not even hope for a square deal.

I'm confident these conditions do not prevail in Memphis alone.

To go back, I have possibly more than normal curiosity. If things happen around me I like to see them. If congressmen shout that "Communism is menacing the country," I am foolish enough to want to look at the menace.

It was with this curiosity that I walked into the police station Saturday night. I turned to the first officer on my left. I asked if this was the place for asking and answering of foolish questions.

A young man politely said, "What do you want to know?"

Three Questions

"Do the police know of any Communist organization operating in Memphis? Is there any headquarters here for Communistic propaganda? If so, where is it?" These were my questions.

The nice young fellow assured me there had been a few Communists but they had been driven out of town. I mentioned that I had chanced on a Communist meeting in New Orleans which was supervised by police.

As I was turning to go an older and larger man, whom I later found to be a detective, rose from a chair where he had been listening.

"What's this thing you are

Bairnsfather Draws Buccaneer Picture

Two students accosted Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, in the lobby of the Carolina Inn immediately after his lecture last Friday night. They introduced themselves as members of the Buccaneer staff and asked:

"Won't you give us a drawing? We want it for the issue that's just about to go to press."

Captain Bairnsfather hesitated, then said, "I'll do it."

He sat down and with rapid strokes produced an Old Bill picture. He ended it with his signature and turned it over to the delighted students, who in turn hurried it over to Durham to the photo-engraver; the cut was returned to the Orange Printshop; and Old Bill appears in the latest issue of the Buccaneer.

COKER MANAGES "FOREST SCHOOL"

July 8 to August 27 marks the fifth season of the Allegheny School of Natural History. During this time courses will be given in field zoology, field geology, field botany, natural history of birds, and nature study. The faculty is composed of Dr. R. E. Coker of the University, director, (Ph.D. Johns Hopkins); A. A. Saunders (Ph.B. Yale); Professor W. P. Alexander (B.Sc. Cornell); and L. E. Hicks (Ohio State University).

A laboratory in the field, well equipped by nature with a wide variety of original specimens, illustrating many examples of the principles of science, is the scene of this "School In the Forest," conducted by the Buffalo Museum of Science in cooperation with the University of Buffalo. It is located in Allegheny State Park in Western New York, seventy-five miles south of Buffalo, close to the Pennsylvania border.

This school offers the most advanced knowledge and appealing methods of imparting it to students. The surrounding country is composed of a terrain of wide variety and richness, and a cool summer resort in one of the largest state parks in the country, a section of the Allegheny Plateau, in climate and forest cover like the Adirondacks and Canada.

N. C. Press Issues New Sociology Book

Illiteracy In the United States by Sanford R. Winston, Professor of Sociology at N. C. State College, came off the University Press last week. This book, a reference of illiteracy in the United States from 1870 to 1920, shows that in the South Atlantic States illiteracy has declined from forty-six to eleven per cent. The percentage of illiteracy in North Carolina from 1870 to 1920 has decreased from fifty-one to thirteen percent.

Further analysis of illiteracy in regard to sex, age, city, country, race, nationality and according to school systems is also given in Winston's work. The volume also analyzes illiteracy in reference to birth rate, infant mortality, age of marriaeg, suicide and other important social phenomena.

Churchill to Speak

Randolph S. Churchill, nineteen year old son of the English statesman and novelist, Winston Churchill, will speak in Memorial hall March 10, at eight-thirty p. m. on the subject "Can We Be Conservative?"

ECONOMIC TOPICS BROUGHT BEFORE VOLUNTEER BODY

Present-Day Problems Are Discussed in State Y Meeting Here.

The program of the State Student Volunteer Conference of North Carolina Y. M. C. A.'s began yesterday with the morning worship led by Mrs. J. E. K. Aggery from 8:30 to 8:45. Following this, addresses and group discussions were in progress till 12:30 o'clock.

The first address of the day was delivered by Fay Campbell, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Yale University. Her topic was "Economic Disorders in the World, A Challenge to Christian Students." Dr. Elbert Russell, dean of the school of religion at Duke university, continued the program with a talk on "Ignorance and Superstition in the World." The morning's events were concluded with an address by Dr. McNeal Poteat, pastor of the Pullen Memorial church in Raleigh. As his subject, he used, "The Inadequacies of Non-Christian Religions."

In the afternoon from two o'clock to 4 o'clock, a program of special music was presented. Lee Phillips, a young negro student and poet from Howard University in Washington, spoke on the "Present and Future of the Negro Missionary." Following this talk, "Disease in the World," was the topic discussed by Dr. Paul Harrison, a missionary from Arabia. From 5:30 o'clock to 6:00, the delegates attended an organ recital given by Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, of the University.

In the evening, from 7:30 to 9:30, a negro quartette sang, and "Messages From the Nations" was presented by Hagop Hagopian, of Egypt, assisted by Alfredo Nazareno, of the Philippines, K. K. Thomas, of India, and Mrs. J. E. K. Aggery.

The program for today will begin with the morning worship, from 9:00 to 9:30, to be led by Lee Phillips. From 9:30 to 10:30, informal group meetings will be held under the leadership of Fay Campbell, Dr. Paul Harrison, Lee Phillips, and Professor Joseph Connally. From 11:00 to 12:00, special music will be rendered by the church choir, and Dr. Paul Harrison will deliver an address on "Human Needs, Our Supreme Opportunity." The new officers

"The Spokesman" Has Its Say

The issuing of "The Spokesman" and the appearance once more upon the campus after more than ten years of the very best friendly relations of an attempt to split the student body into warring camps for political purposes gives us the opportunity to express our opinion on the whole idea of the demogogy and the persecution complex of a small group of men who are determined to make out that The Tar Heel and the rest of the student body are prejudicing against them.

In large letters at the top of "The Spokesman's first page the members of this group assure everybody that they oppose efforts to split the student body, and then in an editorial entitled "Stop Crying Wolf" they say "But if there is a rift, it will be well worthwhile if it finally brings to this campus the unity and concord that is desirable on all campi," and "But there has been too long on this campus a complete and selfish domination. The Non-Fraternity group intends to break that up or die trying", and "This election may leave a scar, but that scar will be the foundation of better relationships . . . and a greater University." Let us remind this group that when one "breaks," causes "rifts," and "scars" that there can be no other thing than a dangerous, insidious, and unwholesome split of the student body.

The chief war-cry of this band is "unfair," "unjust," but they do not in any specific manner present evidence that the student officers this year or any other year have unfairly, unjustly, or inefficiently managed the affairs of the student body. It seems to us that this unpleasant issue has been raised by men with a persecution complex who believe that they are being crushed down, and although they can't advance any reason why, they delude themselves into believing it to the extent that they take up swords and make a crusade in the old chivalresque manner that "Don Quixote" charged the windmill and with less cause than he had.

Such shibboleths as "minority rule," "friendly relations," "the lag of democracy," roll glibly off their tongues. One is represented as saying through the medium of their "Spokesman" that, "'Blank' flayed the present system of minority control," and "Such minority rule should not continue." It is useless to remind them that in the final analysis the ballots are cast by the student body and not by the political leaders and that for years under the Australian Secret Ballot system the ballots have been fairly and squarely counted, and that each year successful candidates attain their offices through majority control and not minority control," but this happens to be the true state of affairs.

Again they say, "We are not trying to arouse enmity." Whether they are trying or not, although one of their writers boldly anticipates that they will cause a "scar," the fact remains that the only possible result of such an issue is enmity, and politically avoiding the consequences of their action does not erase the issue or the act.

They say that they desire cooperation, but the Tar Heel rises to inquire how the "Non-Fraternity" party can possibly cooperate with anyone when they ignore and denounce at least forty percent of the student body. Regarding these figures. When their first circular came out they claimed that the fraternity group comprised only thirty-one percent of the student body, and in the "Spokesman" they have put this number up to about forty percent. Again we state that they nowhere seem to be in possession of the true state of affairs.

They have something to say about democratic principles—"When a student joins a fraternity he becomes more or less group-conscious . . . He is expected to vote as his fraternity decides, therefore, there is little chance for democratic principles to become uppermost . . . And they, on the other hand, are attempting to appeal to the very thing they deplore—group consciousness of the non-fraternity men and they expect them to vote as their self-chosen leaders decide.

Continuing, they come forth with, "We have the interest of the University at heart and glory in her splendid history and tradition." Tradition has said that splitting the University for political purposes does not promote the glory of the institution.

As issues they have chosen "to support any movement or measures for the advancement of student rights and to all provisions leading to a greater University." We don't know any student in the entire University who hasn't supported these "issues" for one hundred and thirty years. An issue is something over which there can be some controversy. Every loyal Carolina man is pledged to support all movements for the advancement of student rights and all provisions leading to a greater University.

These men further say "we are not opposed to any candidate solely because he is a member of a fraternity, for we believe that all campus officials should be chosen upon the basis of individual merit, regardless of social affiliations," and yet they ask the campus to vote for none but non-fraternity men.

It is insinuated that the past presidents of the student body—Ed Hudgins, Ray Farris, Charlie Jonas and the rest—have withheld the exact date of campus elections. The facts as we have them for the years in question are that the election in 1928 was held Tuesday, April 10; in 1929 Thursday, April 4; and in 1930 Friday, April 2—all within the second week of the spring quarter. It is ridiculous to say that the election day has anything to do with whether the best men are selected or not. These men should be better informed of the facts.

The fact that some men wish to open an old wound, and tear this great University student body asunder should not sway the minds of sane men who know that their activities are efficiently managed and are always under the majority control of the student vote of the University. Those who have chosen to organize a political party along these lines and literally secede from the University have done so at their own desire and not because they were or have been mistreated.

At The Carolina

Douglas Fairbanks, in modern dress for the first time in ten years, appears Monday and Tuesday in "Reaching For the Moon," the star's second talkie and his first production since "The Taming of the Shrew." Bebe Daniels plays opposite Fairbanks, and other leading members of the cast are Edward Everett Horton, Jack Mulhall and June MacCloy. In this comedy-drama the athletic star plays the role of a successful stock broker who puts aside money making for love making aboard a yacht. The scenes transpire against backgrounds of luxury and magnificence, while the settings are ultra-modernistic in design.

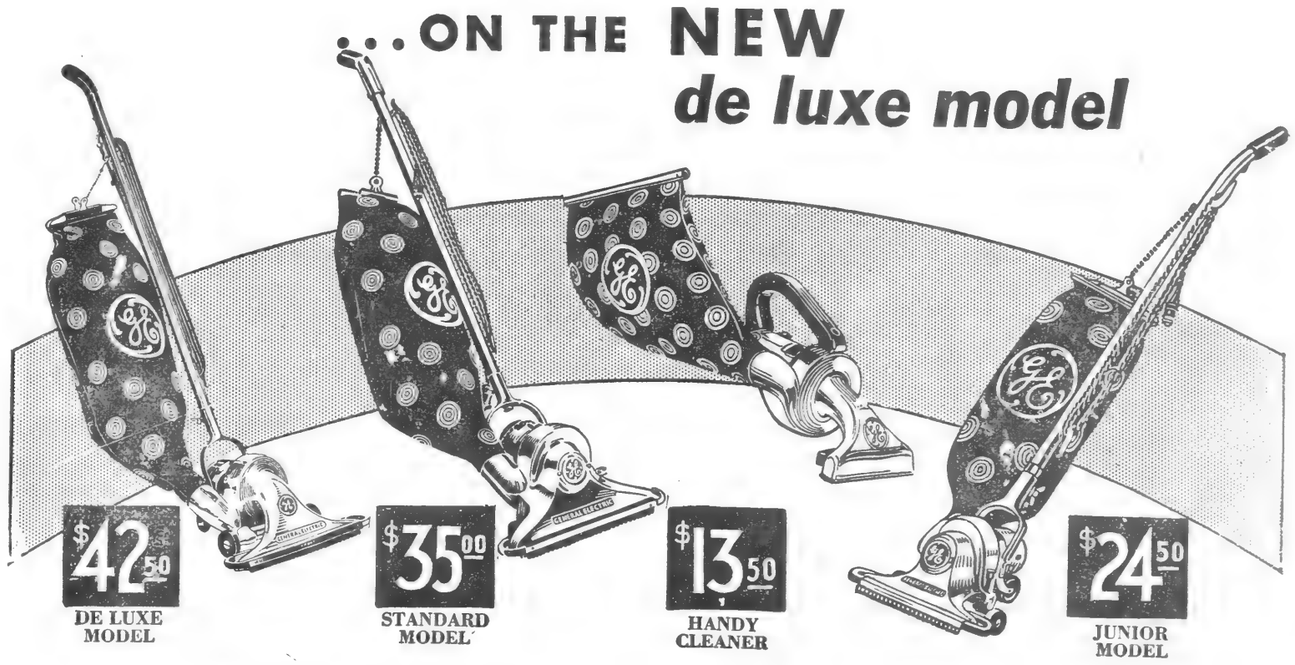
Joe E. Brown and Winnie Lightner, two comedians in their own right, are cast together for the first time in "Sit Tight," the attraction Wednesday. The title of the picture is misleading in view of the story, for Miss Lightner portrays a "health doctor" while the wide-mouthed Brown is Jo-jo the Tiger, her correspondence - school-graduate wrestler and assistant. Between this combination the patients, naturally, are led a merry chase.

"My Past," coming Thursday, brings a varied cast to star in the screen version of the sensational anonymous novel by the same name that appeared some time ago. Bebe Daniels takes the leading characterization, being supported by Ben Lyon, Lewis Stone and Albert Gran, while other members of the cast include Natilie Moorhead and Joan Blondell.

Friday sees the return, in vitaphone dress, of what was probably the most celebrated of the old silent pictures, "The Birth of a Nation." In the talkie version the original filming of the feature has remained intact with its cast, but sound effects achieving a great degree of realism make the attraction as vital and moving a creation as the modern war picture, "All Quiet on the Western Front" for example.

A historical romance filmed on an imposing scale is "The Great Meadows," co-starring John Mack Brown and Eleanor Boardman. The production comes Saturday. The story is taken from a best-seller historical narrative by Elizabeth Madox Roberts, and recreates the vivid tale of the intrepid Virginians who followed Daniel Boone over the Wilderness Road into Kentucky in 1775. Charles Brahin, who has the direction of a number of productions to his credit, did the directing for the talkie.

1084 Seek Honors In State Latin Contest



A total of 1084 contestants, representing sixty-five high schools, participated in the N. C. high school Latin contest Friday. The contest is conducted annually under the joint auspices of the Latin department of the University and the extension division. Each school will select the three best papers and submit them to the University for grading. The high school whose student submits the best paper wins a trophy cup.

The purpose of this contest is to encourage an interest among high school students in the subject of Latin. In the next academic contest which will be French on March 13, a large number of students from many schools have enrolled.

Boxers Take Second Place In Tourney

Captain Noah Goodridge Is Southern Champion; Virginia Captures Title

John Warren Wins in Semi-Finals But Fails to Take Title Bout.

MARTIN BEATS LEVINSON

Holderness, Landis, and Davis Lose Out in Quarter Finals.

University, Virginia, February 28—The University of Virginia boxing team won the Southern Conference boxing title in the Memorial gymnasium here tonight, having placed four men in the finals this afternoon.

The University of North Carolina placed second with eight points, Captain Noah Goodridge winning the lightweight title, and John Warren scoring three points as runner-up in the heavyweight class.

Captain Goodridge made his third appearance in the Conference tourney this year. In the two years previous he has lost to Phil O'Connell of Florida. Tonight his pugilistic ambitions were realized.

Goodridge and Warren fought their last fights for Carolina tonight, both being seniors.

University, Virginia, February 28.—Captain Noah Goodridge, lightweight, and John Warren, unlimited, were the only University of North Carolina boxers to go to the finals in the Southern Conference Boxing Tournament.

Six North Carolina pugilists weathered the first two rouds of elimination and went to the quarter-finals, but they failed to keep this pace and only Goodridge and Warren stood the stiff competition.

Martin Levinson, featherweight, was eliminated by Captain Southgate Martin of Duke, who was Duke's only fighter to go through the first day of the tournament undefeated.

Platt Landis, was eliminated by Gentry, Virginia by decision. Dail Holderness lost to Debeys of Tulane, and Obie Davis was eliminated by Myers of Virginia.

"Jack Of All Trades" Pilots Tar Baby Five To State Title

Bo Shepard, Taking Over Coaching Reins When Enright Went To Georgia, Won 13 of 17 Games and the Freshman Title—But He Gives His Boys the Credit.

Freshman coaches of class being hard to find on such a short notice, the University powers began looking around the campus.

"Bo" Shepard, or George Edward Shepard of Wilmington, to be precise, was decided upon. "Bo" was already assistant to the Graduate Manager, Director of Intramural Athletics, editor of various campus athletic organs, general assistant to the coaching staff, student, and a few other things.

That didn't matter, however. He had so many jobs already, it was held, that one wouldn't make a great deal of difference.

Shepard took complete charge after three games. The freshman season has just ended and the tall cards show that the Shepard-coached Tar Babies won the Freshman championship of the Big Five and 13 of 17 games.

This coaching achievement is more noteworthy for a couple of extra facts. One of the four losses was to Randolph-Macon's Frosh 39-29 after one day of practice. Duke and State's Frosh took first games from the Tar Babies by 43-24 and 29-28, respectively; then after a little more of Shepard's coaching, the Tar Babies came back and licked these same teams 19-18 and 28-19.

Much of the credit is relayed on to "the boys" by Coach Shepard. Virgil Weathers of Shelby, was high scorer, and Ken Fisher filled the other forward post capably most of the time. Collett, Minor and McGlinn split at center, and McCachren, Jones and Harris did the best and most work at guard.

The Tar Baby record is just another reason why Shepard is the jack-of-all-trades of the Carolina coaching force, and one of its most often consulted members.

Shepard's basketball was played at West Point where he was a student for one year and made All-Eastern guard. A brother, Carlyle, was a basketball, track and Phi Beta Kappa star at the University during the years just after the war. Another brother, Norman, coached basketball here from 1922 to 1924. This University Family comes from Wilmington.

BLUES WIN OVER ORANGE IN THIRD STRAIGHT VICTORY

Winter Football Season Practically Ends as Blue Team Wins by 20-13 Score.

Carolina's winter gridders ended their round-robin schedule today, the Blues taking their third straight from the Oranges 20-13, and now only the Monogram-Rookie game carded for next Saturday remains to be played.

The losers got the jump, driving inside and outside the faltering Blue ends for a first quarter touchdown. The Oranges moved the ball fifty-five yards on straight football. Phipps and Weisker, freshman halfbacks, did the most gaining and Weisker drove it over, Woollen dropkicking point.

The Blues retaliated with two touchdowns the next period. They couldn't make much off Smith and Crane, Orange tackles, but a 20-yard pass, Hackney to Thompson, set the stage for Frazier to buck the line for touchdown and Hackney to placekick point.

Substituted tackles proved easier. Ferebee, Hackney and Thompson ran the ball for three first downs, but it took a 20-yard pass, Hackney to Ferebee, to score. Hackney placekicked point.

Hackney and Ferebee added a nice gain or so the third period, but again it was a pass that gave the Blues the second score. Lassiter took a 20-yard heave over left end and cut back 30 yards for this one. He missed the point. Weisker came back for the Oranges in the last period, and his running and a 20-yard pass from Snead to McNeill paved the way for the last score, which Snead bucked across.

Wrestling Team Holds Cadets To 12-12 Tie

V. M. I.'s Three-Year String of Victories Broken By Last Night's Deadlock.

CAPTAIN STALLINGS WINS

Cowper Takes Final Bout To Tie Score; Ferguson Wins.

Carolina's wrestling team broke the V. M. I. Cadets' three year record of victories at the Tin Can last night, holding them to a 12-12 tie.

The Cadet freshmen defeated the Tar Heel yearlings in the preliminary by a 17-9 score.

The summary:

118—De Campo (V. M. I.) defeated Usher (N. C.) Time advantage 2:33.

126—Stallings (N. C.) defeated Wills (V. M. I.) Time advantage 1:14.

135—Dewey (V. M. I.) defeated Albright (N. C.) Time advantage 7:02.

145—Landis (V. M. I.) defeated Leary (N. C.) Time advantage 6:46.

155—Tsumas (N. C.) defeated Recker (V. M. I.) Time advantage 2:04.

165—Talman (V. M. I.) defeated Idol (N. C.) Time advantage 5:51.

175—Ferguson (N. C.) defeated Rochelle (V. M. I.) Time advantage 2:00.

Unlimited—Cowper (N. C.) defeated Shell (V. M. I.) Time advantage 3:36.

QUESTION MARKS TO MEET K. A.'s FOR CAGE TITLE

All-Campus Basketball Championship Will Be Decided at Tin Can Monday Night.

The Kappa Alpha's will meet the Question Marks in the finals of the intramural basketball league Monday night at eight o'clock in the Tin Can. The K. A's are favorites to cop the campus title, having defeated some of the strongest teams in the league. Among the teams defeated by the Kappa Alpha's are the Phi Gam's, Phi Delta Theta's, Tau Epsilon Phi's, Delta Psi's, and Sigma Epsilon's.

The Question Marks looked good in their defeat of Ranson House last Tuesday afternoon. Among the victims of the Question Marks are Ranson House, New Dorms, previously undefeated, Graham, Steele, Law School, and Lewis. The Question Marks have won a total of six games this season. Among their victims are New Dorms, previously undefeated, the Ranson House, Lewis, Law School, Graham, and Steele.

CAROLINA DROPS CONTEST TO OLD LINERS BY 17-19

Tar Heels Get Off To 13-1 Lead Before Old Liners Rally.

AHEAD 16-11 AT HALF

Captain Artie Marpet And Sandy Dameron Play Best For Carolina.

By Herb Clark
Special Correspandent

Atlanta, Georgia, February 28.—North Carolina's Tar Heels bowed before a terrific Maryland attack and a rock-ribbed Maryland defense, 19-17, in the quarter-final round of the Southern Conference basketball tournament here this afternoon.

The Tar Heels were away to an early lead, ran it to 13-1 before the Liners were able to get off the mark and to 16-11 at the half. Maryland's great guard pair, Ronkin and Berger, shut down in the second half, however, allowing the Tar Heels but one point during the period, and between them led a Liner scoring attack which netted eight points and victory.

Captain Marpet and Dameron were Carolina's best players.

Artist On Entertainment Program Is Called "One Girl Show Company"

Gay MacLaren, the third performer on the season's program of the entertainment committee, will present Ida Lubinski's well known play Helen's Boys in Memorial hall tomorrow night at eight-thirty.

Miss MacLaren is called the "One Girl Show Company," giving entire plays by herself, and reputed to have the ability to act all the parts with a realism and perfection that is only explained by the fact that her mind is like the film of a motion picture and she does not have to think the play at all but merely gives it.

The Saturday Evening Post says of her, "Gay MacLaren has the remarkable gift of being able to reproduce a play line for line and character for character after watching it three or four times. She puts on an extraordinary piece of acting."

Quoting from The New York Evening World, "She can produce the whole show, from the leading actor or actress, right down to the bellboy or doorkeeper."

Dr. Glenn Frank, President of the University of Wisconsin, recommends Gay MacLaren's art in the following statement, "I can only say that the illusion was perfect. It was not a reading; it was not an impersonation; it was a re-creation. The original cast lived and acted again."

"Miss MacLaren goes back from these Belasco days, when little room is left to the imagination of the audience, to the simpler days of Shakespeare, when, under the stimulus of good acting, the audience could have the pleasure of building its own scenery with the delightful fabrics of its imagination."

Miss MacLaren longed to give Mark Twain's Puddin'-head Wilson; and when, after her first appearance at the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences, she came to him to ask his permission he though that she was joking, not believing that it could be done. He liked her immensely however and asked her to come back soon to see him.

She did come back; and this time Mr. Pond, who had discovered her genius, came with her to recommend her to Twain. She gave the play version of the book as she had seen it in a theatre, which impressed the humorist deeply, becoming one of her greatest admirers.

Pond had planned to put her on the stage under Frohman's management, but he passed away before doing it. She did play in stock companies a year. When William A. Brady saw her give Way Down East, he offered her the place of leading lady in his company presenting that play. But the joys of being a whole show company herself pulled her back to the art she had created, and she declined. She did a year in Keith Vaudeville, giving imitations of Bernhardt, Warfield, Nazimava, Anna Held, Eddie Foy, Trixie Friganza, and other headliners.

SIXTEEN TEAMS TO ENTER INDOOR MEET SATURDAY

Forty Non-Conference, Freshman, and Scholastic Entries Carded; 300 Expected.

Entries for the second annual Southern Conference Indoor Games were closed Friday, and the final check revealed that sixteen Southern Conference, and forty Non-Conference, freshman, and scholastic teams of more than 300 of the best trackmen from all over the South will participate in the big meet here next Saturday afternoon and night.

Virginia, which had reported earlier that it would have to drop out, kicked in. They send a star distance man Lauck, whom Duke matches with Simon and an array of fast sophs. Mississippi A. and M. with its Conference champion shop-putter Cox, rushed in its entry. Georgia Tech entered a long delegation, headed by Doug Graydon, whom Ed Hamm has taught to jump 24 feet, and by Barron and Asbury. L. S. U. entered Yawn, Klanke and other stars. Georgia announced it would send Maddox, who won the Conference low hurdles and was second in the high hurdles last year, Dickens, who tied for first in the pole vault, and others. South Carolina entered Bostick, who tied for first place in the high jump indoors, and more. Auburn entered another of the famous hurdling tribe of Beards, and Tennessee, Clemson, and State followed suit.

Every one of the first ten teams in the outdoor meet will be represented here, plus Duke, which finished fourteenth, plus five strong teams that didn't go to the outdoor meet—Virginia, Washington and Lee, V. P. I., South Carolina, and Clemson. Washington and Lee won the indoor title last year, and both Generals and Gobblers can show a long line of stars with a longer line of records this season.

The teams to participate in the Indoor Meet which finished first to ten, respectively, in the outdoor championships are North Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi A. and M., Tulane, Auburn, L. S. U., Tennessee, N. C. State, Georgia Tech, and Alabama.

WADE RECEIVES TOKEN OF ROSE BOWL VICTORIES

Coach Wallace Wade of Duke, has more memories of his Rose Bowl conquests now.

Recently, officials of the Tournament of Roses sent the former Alabama mentor a gold football for his part in the three games the Crimson Tide played on the coast under him.

This is the first time the token has been conferred on the coach of a participating team, although annually, it is given to the players taking part in the game.

The scores of Alabama's three Rose Bowl games are engraved on the ball. They were a 20-19 victory over the University of Washington, a 7-7 tie with Stanford, and a 24-0 victory over Washington State.

ENGINEERS TAKE CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATION

Nineteen engineers took the United States civil service examination under W. S. Bynum Wednesday morning in the physics laboratory in Phillips hall. Of this number seven were mechanical engineering students; two chemical engineering students; and ten civil engineering students.

The examination is given to seniors only, and if they pass it, they are qualified for positions as junior engineers with the government.

Community Club Selects Nominating Committee

Strikes And Spares

Benoit, Chi Phi's star bowler, set two new records for the "Frat" league in last Tuesday evening's weekly matches, bowling 145 for the highest single game, and ending his match with a grand total of 359 pins for high individual set. Benoit's average for this match is 119 2-3 pins per game and ranks in the highest class of bowling.

Bill Starbuck, Delta Sigma Phi's star bowler and very popular in Durham, demonstrated his well known ability by bowling 141 for single game and getting a grand total of 347 for the set—which marks second only to Benoit's record.

Woerner, Pi Kappa Alpha's star, also showed up among the fastest class of bowling with the excellent score of 123 for single game and a total of 333 pins for his set.

Hudson, Chi Phi; Nicholson, Kappa Alpha; and Peacock, Sigma Chi, were the other bowlers who reached the 300 pin mark in total pins for three games (set).

The Chi Phi's captured all team honors with 552 pins for high team game, 1477 for highest team set, and 492 for high team average.

A hot battle for first place in the Durham Civic League is bringing out enthusiastic crowds to watch their games. In last Tuesday's matches, the "roaring" Lions Club went back into first place by winning all three games in their match with the Monarch Club.

Cooper starred for the Lions with a grand total of 314 pins for high set.

Kiwanis Club forced A. B. C. Club out of first place standing by beating them two out of three games.

Lions Club won all team honors as follows: high team games, 496 pins; high team set, 1481; high team average, 494.

Raleigh's fast team of bowlers lost a close match to Durham team at Bowling Center last Tuesday night in four exciting games before a large crowd of enthusiastic fans.

Both teams rolled an excellent score of 1515 pins for a tie-score at the end of their three game match. Durham won the match by winning the roll-off game with 515 pins against 495 pins for Raleigh.

Winston - Salem Piedmont League Team will play the Durham City League next Wednesday night in Durham.

The Campus Calendar

Faculty Tennis

All faculty members interested in tennis are asked to meet in room 352 Phillips hall tomorrow afternoon at two-thirty for the purpose of organizing a faculty tennis group with particular reference to use of the courts east of the arboretum.

Guild Movie

Instead of the Soviet picture, "Ten Days That Shook the World," as the Guild feature for today, Edward Everett Horton will be seen in his latest production, "Once a Gentleman." A travelogue furnishes an added attraction.

Friends of German

The regular monthly meeting of the "Friends of German" will take place this afternoon at the home of Dr. E. C. Metzenthin, on Hillsboro street at four o'clock. The discussion for the afternoon will be "Methods and Opportunities for Travel in Central Germany." Anyone interested in the study of German is cordially invited to attend.

ECONOMIC TOPICS BROUGHT BEFORE VOLUNTEER BODY

Local Man Gives His Version of Memphis Arrest, Imprisonment

asking about?" he demanded. "Communist headquarters? Haven't you read in the papers that we don't allow any such in Memphis?"

I said that I was not a Communist. This did not reassure him.

"Come on here with me a minute," he said, taking me by the arm. "The usual headquarters for such folks in Memphis is a cell. I'm not sure we won't have to lock you up, too."

I laughed, I wasn't worried. I didn't know the Memphis police then. Together we walked down the hall. A third man joined us and the detective gave him this information about me:

"This fellow is one of them Communistic agitators. He's been going all over the country."

I'd just said I was not a Communist, but had attended a meeting in New Orleans.

The new man looked at this strange sort of animal, that I appeared to be, and barked, "And you are a nigger-lover, too." He followed it with a question, "And you believe in race equality, too?"

I was hardly given a chance to reply. More questions poured forth. It ended with my being taken through swinging doors to a desk sergeant, who took my name and address, while another man searched me.

Locked in a cell I expected soon to become further examined, to be questioned seriously, and to be given an opportunity to give an orderly account of myself. But no. For the next thirty-six hours I was to live behind iron bars with two or three dozen other men arrested, but not yet tried.

Drunks accounted for a large share of them. Others said they were "on the hook," held for examination and the secret docket without specific charges. Twelve hours later I learned that I was "on the hook."

Sunday was a day of waiting. There were no questions. But I saw one white boy who lacked three front teeth after being questioned Saturday. His mouth was still bloody. He was in solitary confinement. I don't know with what he was charged.

"The Showup"

Action started Monday morning with a police "show up." A long line of men and women, white and black, moved slowly toward the cage. My turn came. I was pushed into a room full of blinding lights and ordered to stand on number four spot.

From behind the blinding lights voices came from men invisible. A policeman's voice read an account of my arrest, describing me as a Communist agitator.

I was asked questions. My answers were interrupted by new queries. All the while, I could see dim forms and yet I felt that every eye was focused on me.

Abruptly, the show-up ended.

Next the identification bureau. Here I was to be mugged—to be photographed, fingerprinted. I was waiting my turn when word came "to send Fuller to Commissioner Davis' office."

I was hurried into the official's rooms to meet politeness itself. He introduced himself and shook hands and offered me a seat. We chatted. For the first time I was allowed to give a quiet account of myself.

As I finished he said pleasantly, "One thing seems certain, the Memphis police have no further need of holding or questioning you."

He cheerfully told me he would give orders for my immediate release. I assumed the interview was nearing an end, but still we chatted casually.

"Mr. Fuller, do you ever do any writing?" he inquired.

"Saw Negro Struck"

It was when I walked back into the identification room that I saw a police officer dismissing a negro woman with a stinging blow across the face.

The officer followed it with a stream of oaths.

The scene ended as I was walked in. An officer was told I was to be released on order of the commissioner.

"All right, let him go," gruffly came the response, "but he'll be up here again in a few days."

Then, too, there was less demand for parking space in the old days because current methods of courtship required only one hand.

But if bootleg chemists can remove the smell from the new industrial alcohol, how will the perfume manufacturers do it?

Alfred E. Smith Makes Plea For Governmental Reform In State

Former Presidential Candidate Tells Assembly North Carolina Needs Political Awakening.

Alfred E. Smith, former governor of New York and Democratic candidate for president in 1928, spoke yesterday in Raleigh on the "Re-organization of State Government." His speech was delivered in the State Theatre before the General Assembly and their friends. Lieutenant Governor Richard T. Fountain called the General Assembly to order. Governor Gardner introduced ex-Governor Smith saying: "The purpose of government is the satisfying of human needs." He paid tribute to Smith by calling him the greatest governor that New York state has had in modern times.

Ex-Governor Smith attacked the present obsolete state government in North Carolina and made comparisons between it and the government of New York state twenty years ago. The problems of the two states were similar according to Smith. The first reform step was made in 1911 when one hundred and twenty-three persons were killed in Washington Square within half an hour. The New York state Investigating Commission recommended that working hours for women and children be reduced from sixty to fifty. This met with strong opposition, for it was pointed out that industries would migrate to New England. During his last term as governor, Smith had working hours reduced to forty eight, and still industry remains foremost in New York. Even the Supreme Court opposed the reform movement, but ten years later reversed its stand on child labor.

It required twelve years to reorganize the state government of New York state, and no state can accomplish a complete reorganization overnight. An example of confusion in the election of state officials came in the position of state engineer. Neither party could persuade a candidate to place himself on the ticket, for the salary was very small. The electorate of the state hardly knew who the secretary of state was, and the attorney general was elected as a compromise to the two parties. The cost of the state government increased from eight million dollars in 1895 to more than

Harrison's Address Concludes Program Of Y Conference

The State Student Volunteer Conference of North Carolina Y. M. C. A.'s closed its programs Sunday afternoon in the Methodist church.

Lee Phillips, of Howard University, led the morning worship from 9:00 to 9:30, after which informal meetings were held under the leadership of Fay Campbell, Dr. Paul Harrison, Lee Phillips, and Professor Joseph Connaly. Dr. Paul Harrison delivered an address at 11:00 on "Human Needs, Our Supreme Opportunity." The new officers of the conference were also installed at that time.

The conference closed with a discussion from 2:00 to 3:00 of the foreign projects planned by the conference. The conference was attended by more than 180 delegates from 30 colleges in the State.

Debating Team Meets Georgia

The University debate team will meet a team from the University of Georgia in Gerrard hall tonight at eight-thirty on the proposition Resolved: That the United States should adopt the policy of free trade. This question is a variant of the free trade question that is the "bone of contention" in all large tournaments this year.

The decision in this meet will be by the "shift of audience vote," in which the audience votes before and after the contest, the side that has convinced the largest number of voters being declared the winner. Carolina will support the affirmative. The local team for this meet consists of Lacy, Williams, and Shreve. The names of the Georgia team have not been received.

INDUSTRIAL SOUTH TO BE DISCUSSED BY TRADE LEAGUE

President Graham, Miss Herring, And Ferger Will Be Speakers At Conference.

The Southern Industrial Conference of the National Women's Trade Union League of America which meets in Greensboro Friday and Saturday has on its program three members of the faculty and executive department of the University.

President Frank Graham is to talk Saturday morning on "Southern Industrialism," as one phase of the general topic, "Historical Progress Toward Industrial Peace." Miss Harriet L. Herring, of the Institute for Research in Social Science of the University, will lead a discussion the same morning on this subject.

Worth Ferger, of the department of economics, will lead a discussion on two subjects which come under the general subject for the afternoon, "Industrial Peace through Employer-Employee Relationship."

The National Woman's Trade Union League of America has as its platform the organization of workers into trade unions; equal pay for equal work, regardless of sex or race; eight-hour day and forty-four-hour week; an American standard of living; full citizenship for women; the outlawry of war; and closer affiliation of women workers of all countries.

The purpose of the conference is to aid in the creation of an intelligent understanding public on the workings and conditions in the South; to present the facts on industrial arbitration and the trade union agreement in maintaining industrial peace.

DR. CHASE GETS DEGREE FROM ROLLINS COLLEGE

Dr. Harry W. Chase, former president of the University and now chief executive of the University of Illinois, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Humanities from Rollins College recently.

Others upon whom degrees were conferred were Reverend S. Parkes Cadman, Doctor of Laws; and John Erskine, author, critic, professor of English at Columbia University and president of the Juliard School of Music, Doctor of Music.

MODERN FACTORY IS WINDOWLESS

Gifford Simonds Will Present Progressive Manufacturing Methods Here Tomorrow.

A new step in progressive manufacturing has been introduced in New England by the Simonds Steel and Saw Company. A factory without windows, as well as modern trends of industrial structure will be explained tomorrow noon in 103 Bingham hall by Gifford Simonds, general manager of the concern.

This new type of factory with manufactured lighting and atmosphere conditions, automatically controlled, has been built by the Simonds Company. Since the two most important factors in factory efficiency are machine-made, the uniformity of these two working conditions are assured.

The estimated increase in production by this new building alone is set at thirty-five per cent.

Simonds has come here to the University to speak especially to the students of the engineering and commerce schools. He will discuss the advantages and disadvantages of such a factory.

Graham To Address Cumberland Alumni

Frank P. Graham, president of the University will be the principal speaker at the annual banquet of the Cumberland county alumni of the University to take place in Fayetteville on Thursday evening.

In addition to President Graham other special guests will be C. C. Collins, head football coach at the Univeristy, William Cerney, assistant coach, and J. Maryon Saunders, secretary of the general alumni association.

Jack Crane and Harry Hodges, members of the football squad whose home is in Fayetteville and R. B. House, executive secretary of the University plan to attend this banquet.

Lawrence in Hillsboro

George Lawrence of the local welfare department spent yesterday in Hillsboro where he attended a meeting of the county board of education and also of the county commissioners.

LIBRARY ACQUIRES ITALIAN LECTERN

Rev. A. B. Hunter is Donor of Sixteenth Century Hand-Carved Reading Stand.

A recent gift to the University library is a sixteenth century hand-carved lectern or reading stand from northern Italy. The lectern was presented to the library by Rev. Aaron Burtis Hunter of Raleigh, donor of the Hunter collection of manuscripts and rare books. It is now on display in the rotunda of the main reading room.

This lectern was probably used in a church since it is designed for reading in a standing position. Seven feet in height, it is ornamented with hand-carved floral designs in low relief. The base is inlaid with birdseye maple panels and the carved ornamentation at the corners culminates in grotesque lion heads. The desk, which surmounts the base, is of the double-face type, with provision for holding an open book on both sides, can be revolved on a pivot. Above the desk is a handsome wrought-iron bracket from which a lamp may be hung to illuminate the desk.

Lecterns were developed as ecclesiastical furniture and are still seen in Roman Catholic and Episcopal churches today. In the early days several might be seen to support the Bible and music books from which the choirs sang. The early books, both manuscript and printed, were much larger and heavier than books today, and required for their comfortable use a solid and permanent support as the lectern furnishes.

The lectern given to the library by Dr. Hunter was purchased by him in Florence, Italy, on a recent trip to Europe. It was probably used in a church to carry the large music books in the choir. Since there is provision for two books it is supposed that the members of the choir stood on both sides of the lectern.

The Hunter collection of manuscripts and rare books comprises 100 manuscripts of the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries and 100 incunabula or books printed in the fifteenth century. The manuscripts range from copies in the handsome handwriting of

Gardner Urges Passage Of Bill To Consolidate State Colleges

Governor Says Proposed Merger Of the Institutions Is Economic Necessity.

Governor O. Max Gardner, speaking from radio station WPTF, in Raleigh, last night, discussed the proposed bill to consolidate into one university the three state schools, the University of North Carolina, North Carolina State College, and the North Carolina College for Women.

Governor Gardner made brief references to the speech made yesterday afternoon by ex-Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York. He complimented Mr. Smith on his excellent record while governor and on his progressive educational measures.

Discussing the proposed bill, Governor Gardner said: "The problem facing North Carolina today is to provide better training for the young men and women in this state."

He urged the citizens of the state not to judge the bill by any narrow affections they might have for any of the three institutions, but to judge it solely by its merit and worth to the students of these schools. Emphasis was laid on the fact that the traditions of all three schools would in no way be destroyed. "The proposed bill would build greater traditions to each school, instead of destroying them," Governor Gardner stated.

Defining the bill as a measure for the relief from taxation, the governor proceeded to give the provisions of the proposed bill. The three schools would be merged into the University of North Carolina with a central administrative board to govern the one school. However, the general plans and policies of the individual schools would in no way be affected. Within 60 days after the ratification of the bill by the General Assembly, a committee of nine members will be appointed to work out a plan for consolidation of the colleges. This committee will be authorized to employ experts in the field of education to work out the best plan for the proposed merger. The report of the committee must be submitted to the Governor by July 1, 1932. Governor Gardner emphasized the fact that endowments which had been given to any of the three schools, previous to the ratification of the bill, would in no way be affected by the consolidation.

"The three colleges belong to the whole people of North Carolina, and the colleges must adjust their problems to fit the needs of the state. The plan for the merger will be done by a small committee of experts in education, and the problem should be studied carefully. I do not honestly believe that the tax-payers are getting 100 cents per dollar for the money that they have invested for education in North Carolina."

Governor Gardner expressed his opinion that the bill would pass the General Assembly by a large majority. He asked "Is there any valid reason why these three schools should not be under one control and one central administrative board? Consolidation of the colleges means more to North Carolina than all the legislating on education that could be done. Fifty years from now the present legislature would be remembered by the merger of the three schools."

MacLaren Presents Entire Play Alone

Miss Gay MacLaren, dramatic artist extraordinary, presented the play Helena's Boys in its entirety with no other aid than her own voice and actions last night in Memorial hall. The production was complete and well done, every shade and gesture that could add to the performance was given.

There was no other scenery other than a back drop and side curtains. No scenery was needed, the word coloring aided by the spectators' imagination being sufficient.

Each character was faithfully portrayed from the most important down to the most insignificant with a care and understanding that was surprising.

DIRECTING CLASS FEATURES WEEK'S PLAYMAKER BILL

Stage Technique Group Will Have Charge of Three Night's Program.

The Carolina Playmakers will present the first public studio productions of the year at eight-thirty o'clock Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

These productions are cast, directed, and mounted by the students in Mr. Samuel Selden's class in directing, and represent the initial efforts of the students in the field of independent production.

The three-night program will be divided into two parts. Thursday night original one-act plays will be presented, several of which are being directed by the authors. Friday and Saturday night, professional and royalty plays will comprise the evening's entertainment.

This is the first time in the history of dramatics at Carolina that the studio productions have been included in the regular series of the Playmakers entertainment course. It is believed that the public is sufficiently interested in the students' work to show a corresponding sympathy for these three programs of one-act plays.

The performances are covered by the season booklets. Coupons may be exchanged at the Student Supply Store for reserved seats.

Literary Societies To Elect Officers

The Di Senate at its regular weekly session tonight at seven o'clock will elect its officers for the spring quarter. All officers will be chosen with the exception of the president K. C. Ramsay, who was chosen at an executive session of the Senate last quarter.

The Phi Assembly will also elect new officers at its meeting at seven-fifteen. A reading clerk, sergeant-at-arms, assistant treasurer, and three members of the ways and means committee will be chosen. Egbert Haywood was elected last term speakers for the spring quarter.

Dr. Coker Visited by Brother

We Cuss Them But They're Good

Comprehensive examinations were administered to the senior class Saturday. For a week they furnished a sure topic of conversation almost any time if there were seniors present. For another week we hear more of them and then quarter examinations will become uppermost in the minds of the seniors.

Wherever the conversation the comprehensive was likely to be "cussed." We didn't cuss because the examination was unfair or too hard or because we didn't like it. We just hated to have this spring weather and a week-end interrupted.

Comprehensive examinations are to us a step forward in educational development. If administered with any thought for the educational value a comprehensive examination will determine just how much a student has derived from nearly four years of higher education. Surely one cannot dispute that examining in this manner is unfair. We are supposed to absorb something in our study here and what we absorb will be revealed by these examinations. They embrace far too much territory to allow "cramming."

After all, what we've learned or absorbed here will be with us long after we graduate or finish. If we haven't learned anything in our major field then the comprehensive will reveal it. One who hasn't learned enough to be able with a little review to stand successfully the comprehensive shouldn't be too critical of the University's methods of educating us.

A Great International Club

We all enjoy that delightful time of day when we sit back in an easy chair, and listen to the bunch in a bull session about the happenings of the day or the week-end. In may cases the events are exaggerated grossly or in detail but this fact doesn't keep them from being enjoyable—probably more so than when they actually took place. This end-of-the-day bull sessioning is being done a great deal lately by the leading current news magazines. It is a very enjoyable and profitable feature of their news as a rule.

In the March number of one of these current periodicals there appeared side by side a review and a comment upon the work done by the Hoover administration and the Boy Scout movements. About the first we will make no comment—knowing quite well that the Democratic Party as a whole and et toto is taking care of comments upon that topic in a very comprehensive manner. About the Boy Scout movement, we think that even the sophisticates which abound on the campus of this University might do well to think about a minute.

Twenty-five years ago Sir Robert Baden-Powell started a movement which we think is destined to become of great international significance. He could hardly have fully realized what great good he was doing. At the International Scout Jamboree boys of every nation come together, forget tariffs and gold movements, and make close friendships. Sectionally, in every country, the good that scouts do is very great also. The juvenile courts of the United States have records of very few scouts which have been brought before them. The natural tendency of the normal boy is to "join a gang," and the scout movement sees that great numbers of them join the right gang, and thus get a great number of lives started right which would very probably otherwise get sidetracked before they were really begun. Scouts have definite stimuli for their ambitions and their accomplishments are definitely measured with others of their group. What better training could the youth of a nation begin with?

As a movement for the building of men, citizens, and gentlemen, we think that this great international club has no equal and should be recommended for its purposes and actions almost without limit.—O. W. D.

Playthings, presented at the Playmakers Theatre on Saturday night, February 28.

By Tom Loy

Anthony Buttitta's comedy of illusions in three acts turned out to be the most gripping experiment of the local dramatic group's current season. An atmosphere of completeness pervaded the production and tended to lift it from the amateurish class toward something of conviction.

As the story goes, a flesh-and-blood couple whose martial relationship has been analyzed rather unflatteringly in the super-staged prelude are prompted by it to do a little analyzing of their own, which amounts to destruction. As Cecil and Sonia Ingram they are husband and wife who get along quietly always alone and never seek to make friends. This unconventional behavior arouses the curiosity of the dramatist, one Mr. Stanley Busch, who dogs their daily-perambulating footsteps long enough to come to the conventional conclusion that it must be jealousy. So jealousy he makes it in his play, which he executes with weirdly stylized fidelity to the situation as seen through his self-appointed-tinker's eyes—even going so far as to call the piece "Intrusion" and to introduce himself as the orienting damnation in the lives of his subjects.

This attempted expose comes so close to the truth that it upsets the lethargic Ingrams and sends Cecil in haste to get what satisfaction there may be out of calling Busch a liar and demanding an explanation.

Ingeniously, for the sake of the parallel and also for the sake of technical simplicity, we are told that the set for "Intrusion" was modeled after the Busch study, so everything is—so to speak—in its proper setting when the demi-play comes to life in the second and third acts. And come to life it practically does. The Ingrams turn out to become the real playthings of the author, undone when it dawns that the husband has really made a puppet of the wife with his reclusive tendencies. The only discrepancy between the first and second hand versions of the tragedy comes in the reason for the niggardly social attitude. Cecil's shell-building is found to be motivated, not by fear that the world might take away Sonia, but by fear that the world might find out certain irregularities regarding his birth that pride would hide.

Some of the passages of "Playthings" could have been more economically phrased, perhaps, but their verbosity has the merit of giving great emotional possibilities to the actors, whose neglect in the foregoing review has been only because newness this time made the play more than ever the thing; for a carefully-selected and drilled cast gave it a surprisingly finished interpretation. Harold Baumstrone, who did the author, was in character and convincing, though his tendency to bear down on prepositions and articles sometimes annoyed. He should be heard from in the future. The husband role was taken by Whitner Bissell in his smooth, irreproachable, past-demonstrated manner. Opposite him was Eve Brickman, who might be modestly termed a find. Her engaging stage appearance and the pleasant timbre of her voice, added to the fact that she can and did act, constitute a challenge for the Playmakers to attempt things bigger and better than ever.

Only a man who knew his theatre could have used ordinary, available materials to mount and present "Playthings" in the imaginative—yes, delightful—way that Walter Grotyohann, the director, did.

Alfred E. Smith Makes Plea for Governmental Reform In This State

three hundred million dollars this year, thus showing the need for simplifying the government. There were over one hundred and fifty commissions, which were reduced to seventeen. There were four commissions on prisons, three on the soldiers' bonus, and three on the state fair. Among other abuses in New York's government were: The land tax, the governor's responsibility to petty commissions, the system of excessive taxation, and the election of irresponsible persons to heads of important departments which should be appointed by the governor. Ex-Governor Smith emphasized the fact that a state constitution cannot be reformed by statutes but by constitutional amendment.

Smith concluded his speech by saying that the state of North Carolina had a wonderful opportunity to take first rank among the states in governmental reform. He made a plea for progressive leadership, for clear thinkers, and constructive and broadminded statesmanship.

Smith's address was broadcast over WPTF, and was received by a specially constructed loudspeaker in Gerrard hall.

STEPPING INTO A MODERN WORLD

Fitting the service to the customer's needs

Bell System service is custom-made. Each of the 65,000,000 telephone calls handled in the average day must meet the exact wishes of the person making the call.

Telephone men study a customer's communication needs, then advise the type of equipment that fits them best. For department stores they may recommend the "order turret" — a special switchboard for taking orders by telephone. Thus they enlarge the store's service and simplify ordering for the customer. They develop equipment and plans for brokerage houses, police departments, nation-wide sales forces — and all manner of business firms.

The telephone industry continues to grow by fitting its service more and more completely to the user's needs. For men with insight and the ability to coordinate, the opportunity is there!

Question Marks Take Campus Cage Title In Upset Win Over K.A.'s

Greek Basketball Champs Held To Lone Field Goal In Final Three Periods.

VICTORS LEAD AT HALF

E. Beam Leads New Title Holders With Eight Points; Brandt, Wells, Good For K. A.'s

Led by E. Beam, flashy forward with eight points, the Question Marks defeated the Kapap Alpha's, 15-8, to win the campus championship and score one of the biggest upsets in intramural basketball this year.

The Kappa Alpha's, top heavy favorites to win the title after their defeat of the strong Phi Gam's and Phi Delt's in the play-offs for the fraternity title, started off with a rush scoring six points in the first quarter while holding the Question Marks to one point, a free toss by E. Beam. The highly touted K. A. atack semed unable to get going after their first quarter spree and the Question Marks coasted through the last three quarters to win easily.

E. Beam, with eight points, and Barnwell, center with three were the big guns of the Question Marks.

For the losers Wells, forward, and Brandt, guard, were best, scoring an action toss each. House played a good floor game for the K. A.'s, although once tucking the ball under his arm in true football style and crashing into two or three men under the basket.

The score at the half was 10-8 in favor of the Question Marks.

The officials were: referee, Artie Marpet, varsity basketball captain; scorer, "Mac" Gray, assistant director of the intramural department; timekeeper, Wallace Shelton, assistant director of the intramural department.

CHARLOTTE MEETS RALEIGH IN HIGH TITLE CAGE GAME

Class A Champions Play in Tin Can Tomorrow Night at 8:00 O'clock.

Four undefeated teams will get into action in the Tin Can tomorrow night at eight o'clock, when the finals of the state high school basketball tournament will be played. In the Class A contest, Charlotte, undefeated in their ten western conference games, will endeavor to halt the march of Raleigh's courtmen, victors in their six eastern games. The other members of the eastern division were Fayetteville, Wilmington, Goldsboro, Durham, Rocky Mount, and Wilson, the last named being the runner-up. Gastonia took second place in the west, other teams being Salisbury, Winston-Salem, High Point, and Greensboro.

The unbeaten Rose Hill quintet will represent the east in the Class B contest, meeting the winner of the Spencer-Bakersville game, being played tonight.

Best Distance Bet

CAPT. CLIFF BAUCOM

Cliff Baucom, cross country captain last fall, will be Carolina's best bet in the distance events here Saturday.

SOUTHERN INDOOR TRACK MEET

The most outstanding sports event of the winter quarter is now less than a week off. We, of course, refer to the Southern Conference indoor track meet at the Tin Can Saturday.

Three hundred entries, sixteen conference colleges and universities, forty non-conference, freshman and prep school teams. That will be a real array of athletic talent.

Our own Charlie Farmer racing against a field of the finest dash men in the south will offer one of the feature events of the meet.

DeColigny of Tulane will be here to take the hurdles at a fast clip, and Maddox of Georgia has made it known that he will give Tulane's star a race for the honors. Maddox was outdoor winner on the low hurdles last spring.

Dickens of Georgia will be here to demonstrate his ability at pole vaulting, and Carolina will present Arnold and Ruble to compete in this event.

Georgia Tech hasn't Ed Hamm to broad jump this year, but Doug Graydon has learned to jump 24 feet, so it looks like some stellar performances will be witnessed in this event.

These are only a few of the many star cindermen who will be here to race on the hardwood track. Almost every school and college entered boasts at least one individual star.

FULL DAY OF SPORTS SATURDAY

The Southern Conference track meet will not be the only event on tap for Saturday. Monograms meet Rookies in Kenan stadium for the closing event of the winter football season.

It will be the last time that such stars as Ned Lipscomb, Captain Strud Nash, Jim Magner and others will don football uniforms for Carolina.

And the winter practice has developed a smooth working machine of no individual stars but plenty of fellows who are capable of working well together. Some of the best football played at Carolina has been played in these Monogram-Rookie games. Indications point to a repetition this year.

WRESTLERS TO MAKE BID FOR TITLE

The wrestling team broke V. M. I.'s three-year string of victories Saturday night, and seem likely contenders for the conference title at Lexington this week. V. M. I. probably ranks as first choice for the title because of past records, and the fact that they have not been beaten in the south, but then the Tar Heels also have not lost in the south. They at least will rank second choice. With Captain Stallings, Mayne Albright, Conklin, Tsumas, Fred Ferguson, and Marion Cowper in form, Carolina should be able to boast of some individual conference title holders next Sunday.

Virginia Pushes Four Men To Finals To Annex Boxing Title

Carolina Places Third As Noah Goodridge Wins Lightweight Title; Warren Second In Heavyweight Division.

(By Phil Alston)

The University of Virginia won the Southern Conference boxing championship Saturday night by pushing four men through to championships; Tulane took second place with Carolina third. Tulane's eleven points came by way of one champion and two finalists while the Tar Heel points were earned when Captain Noah Goodridge won the lightweight title and John Warren took second place in the heavyweight division.

Carolina lost four men in the semi-finals after having pushed six men through the opening bouts of the tournament. Son Young, bantam lost to Riddick of Duke in the preliminaries.

Goodridge won his title by taking a decisive victory over Graves of the Mississippi Aggies, Smith of Virginia, and Barrow of L. S. U. Goodridge showed his usual brilliant form in all three of his matches, and put a fitting end to one of the greatest boxing careers ever known in the South.

John Warren scored two knockouts before losing to Hill of Tulane in the final round. The Warren-Hill fight was one of the best of the tournament. Both men were on the floor several times and the decision was close. Hill weakened Warren with a hard left to the body in the second round and scored heavily with blows to the head in the third round to take the fight after Warren had almost knocked him out in the early part of the second round. Warren's first fight ended in the opening round when John caught Bacon, W. & L. with a right hand punch that put the General battler out for the count. Warren met Proctor, Florida, in his second match and knocked his opponent out with a terrific right uppercut to the chin at the opening of the third round.

Marty Levinson was the first Tar Heel to fall in the semi-finals when he lost a very close decision to Martin of Duke. Both boys battled hard for three hectic rounds, but the Blue Devil carried off the decision. Levinson had previously won a decisive victory over Jones, Mississippi A. & M.

After winning over McKinney, W. & L., Dail Holderness lost to DeBuys of Tulane by a technical knockout in the first round of the semi-finals. Holderness started off well, but DeBuys landed a hard right to the jaw that dropped the Tar Heel.

Intercollegiate Sports

Soccer, a rising sport in the collegiate athletic field, has been made an official minor sport at Emory University. This action was taken by the athletic association in response to appeal of forty-five students interested in the sport.

Among promising collegians signed recently by big league baseball clubs was Dallas Warren, catcher, a University of Arizona product.

Dartmouth College students are vigorously contesting the recent decree of the athletic association to abolish water polo in that institution. Against the statements of three Hanover physicians that water polo participation might lead to defects of the ear, students based the nucleus of their arguments.

Said Knute Rockne, Notre Dame's gridiron mogul, mentor of bone-crushing, line-driving, Southbend elevens, at a recent football banquet in Berkeley, "I have noticed that the Western schools still retain a certain manliness that is disappearing in the East . . . I mean this in all seriousness . . . In the East we are inclining to be the least bit effeminate."

Trailing, 6 to 0, Wake Forest's black shirted winter football team threw aside all hopes of scoring on their more experienced white jersied opponents. Came a pass, black quarter back to one of his own ends from the thirty yard line to the twenty. The end received the pass, was tackled, and the elusive pig skin escaped from his hands to hurtle through the air into the arms of the other end who skipped across the goal for a score and a 6-6 tie.

Prominent among intramural activities at the University of Indiana is the age-old "barn yard sport," horseshoe pitching. Seventy-six teams, comprising 152 players have entered the annual horseshoe tournament at that institution.

Colleges of the present generation have gone conservative, if a recent editorial published in the "Depau," campus publication of Depau University is any criterion.

"Coaches may bemoan the lack of school spirit in the student body and tell how the 'slackers' refuse to yell themselves hoarse at every game just to spurt the team on to another victory. Students still have school spirit but they do not believe in expressing it that way. College spirit as evidenced in pep meetings, celebrations before and after big games, snake dances, and the like has disappeared," the editorial averred.

Shot Putters And Pole Vaulters Abundant For Indoor Games Saturday

South Has Bumper Crop This Year In Shot Put Division; Many Stars Entered.

CHAMPIONS COMING

Tulane Javelin Hurlers Will Enter Pole Vault Event Also; Arnold Highly Touted.

The Southern Conference is having a bumper year for shot putters, and it looks as if this event will prove one of the extraordinary features of the Second Annual Southern Conference Indoor Games.

The twenty-six event program will be run off here next Saturday afternoon and night, and will draw forty Non-Conference, Freshman and Scholastic teams, along with sixteen Southern Conference teams, which is two more than participated in the outdoor championships last spring.

Fatty Oelkers, of Tulane, who holds the Southern Conference record, will be here, and likewise Cox, of Mississippi A. & M., who won the event at the Southern outdoor meet last year.

But that's only a starter. Jim Swart of V. P. I. holds his school record of forty-five feet five and three-quarters inches. Grinus, a Gobbler soph, is almost as good. Hickman of Tennessee and Coleman of Auburn were second and

Tar Heel fans in Atlanta this past week-end have been endeavoring to offer various conjectures as to the identity of a basketball player, snapped by Atlanta Constitution cameramen on the tournament court Saturday, and whose likeness appeared in a huge two-column picture in that newspaper under the caption "Artie Marpet, Tar Heel Captain."

News bureau and Daily Tar Heel sports scribes were of diversified opinions, one stating that the player was a Tulane man, while others upheld the argument that he was a Kentucky basketeer.

The identity of "Artie Marpet" is still unknown.

Plans Made For High Athletic Meets

Plans are being made by the University extension division for the state high school contests in baseball, tennis and track to be conducted this spring. Extension circulars containing rules and information concerning the contests are being mailed to North Carolina high schools.

The tennis tournament will take place in Chapel Hill April 16 and 17, with the track meet April 17.

TAR HEEL IS ONLY COLLEGE DAILY BETWEEN PHILADELPHIA AND TEXAS

Many Former Editors of Thirty-Six Year Old Campus Publication Are Now Prominent in Newspaper and In Many Other Fields.

(Reprinted from the Raleigh News and Observer)

By Starlin Whitaker

Fussing and fuming over balky typewriters, dashing out for last minute assignments, having mental duck-fits trying to compose a long lead sentence in a short three minutes, the staff members of The Daily Tar Heel, student newspaper at the University of North Carolina, six times a week fight hard and doggedly to beat a deadline which is just as inexorable as the deadline of the biggest daily in the country.

Not that Editor Will Yarborough or Managing Editor Jack Dungan are especially hard-boiled; but that every man on the staff knows that every man in the student body will expect to find The Tar Heel at his door when he gets out of bed in the morning. So down in a little basement room of Alumni building a dauntless band of embryo newspaper men, equipped with three or four typewriters and plenty of yellow paper, each afternoon and evening lend themselves to the serious business of getting out the only student daily between Texas and Philadelphia.

36 Years in Age

The history of The Daily Tar Heel runs back across a span of 36 turbid years, and during that time it has served many masters; but not until the fall of 1929, when it was changed from a tri-weekly to a daily, did it come into its ultimate inheritance. In the years that are gone it often lifted its editorial oriflamme in the thick of campus wars and rumors of campus wars, it has attacked and been attacked, but today it has become the thread that binds a growing cosmopolitan student body together.

Founded as the child and official organ of the University's Athletic Association in 1893, succeeding the short-lived Chapel Hillian, The Tar Heel has outlived the Blue and White, a rival which once rose against it, has outgrown and broken away from the Athletic Association, and has absorbed as a Sunday supplement the venerable Carolina Magazine, oldest student magazine in America. Today The Daily Tar Heel is the official newspaper of the University's Publications Union Board, and is regarded as a true reflector of student opinion.

Champions Student Opinion

Since becoming a daily The Tar Heel has been recognized as one of the country's foremost college publications. Manned and operated exclusively by students, the paper strives to ascertain and champion the prevailing student opinion. It is true that The Daily Tar Heel generally deals with University and local matters, yet it frequently evokes editorial comment from the leading state papers.

The Tar Heel staff knows the typical hustle and bustle of the daily newspaper. News must be hunted down and made presentable, editorials must be written, copy must be read and corrected. Day after day the managing editor flicks his verbal whip into the ears of lackadaisical or indifferent reporters, prodding them on to get the news regardless of how much effort is required. It is the age-old fight between reporters and managing editors.

Set-Up of the Staff

Among those who hold the more responsible positions on the paper's staff are: W. H. Yarborough, Jr., Louisburg, editor; Jack Dungan, Chapel Hill, managing editor; and H. N. Patterson, High Point, business manager. The city editors are J. M. Little, Winston-Salem; W. A. Shulenberger, Charlotte; Peter Hairston, Advance; G. E. French, Statesville; and E. C. Daniel, Zebulon. W. M. Bryson, Asheville; Virginia Douglas, Greensboro; Wex Malone, Asheville; E. F. Yarborough, Louisburg; Beverly Moore, Greensboro; Harper Barnes, Lillington; Oscar Dresslar, Nashville, Tennessee; J. C. Sitterson, Kinston; and Philip Liskin, New Rochelle, New York, are members of the editorial board.

Others on the editorial staff are Assignment Editor Charles Rose, Fayetteville, and his corps consisting of Mary Buie, Jackson Springs; E. M. Spruill, Rocky Mount; Frank Hawley, Portsmouth, Virginia; Otto Steinreich, Newark, New Jersey; McB. Fleming-Jones, Chapel Hill; Charles Poe, Raleigh; W. R. Woerner, Richmond, Virginia; L. L. Pegram, Hamlet; Alex Andrews, Raleigh; W. E. Davis, High Point; T. H. Broughton, Dunn; Dan Kelly, Biscoe; T. W. Blackwell, Winston-Salem; P. Alston, Raleigh; Bob Betts, Raleigh; Jack Riley, Dunn; and F. W. Ashley, Gastonia.

K. C. Ramsay of Salisbury is editor of the sports department, which, season after season handles the multitudinous athletic activities of the campus. The beats of the sports reporters include the gridiron, the diamond, basketball and tennis courts, boxing ring, wrestling mat, and track field, all of which have their freshman, varsity and intramural ramifications. Ramsay is assisted by Don Shoemaker, of Middletown, Ohio, and Jack Bessen of New Rochelle, N. Y.

The Business Staff

On the business staff are Harlan Jameson, Winter Haven, Florida; John Manning, Chapel Hill; Al Olmstead, Raleigh; Pendleton Gray, Lumberton; Jack Hammer, Wilmington; Bernard Solomon, Wilmington; R. L. Bernhardt, Salisbury; John Barrow, Zebulon; Frank Dale, Estatoe; H. A. Clark, Hempstead, New York; Bill Jarman, Wilmington; Ed Michaels, Greensboro; James Ledbetter, Rockingham; R. D. McMillan, Jr., Red Springs; James N. Nowell, Raleigh; Wynn Hamm, Charlotte; W. M. Bliss, Orlando, Florida.

The Tar Heel office has been a workshop of practical journalism for a long time, and from it have come some of North Carolina's most prominent exponents of the press, as well as many noted men of the various other professions. Here are some of the men who have served as editors of the Tar Heel since it was founded in 1893:

Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina; Walter Murphy, Salisbury, a former Speaker of the House of Representatives; Thomas Bailey Lee, Burley, Idaho, Justice of the Supreme Court of Idaho; Edward W. Myers, Greensboro, engineer; A. H. Graham, Hillsboro, a former speaker of the House of Representatives; James A. Gwynn, Newark, N. J., editor of various legal publications; Ralph H. Graves, New York City, editor of the syndicate department of Doubleday Doran company; Edward K. Graham, a former president of the University of North Carolina; Willis James Brogden, Durham, Supreme Court Justice; Paul Cameron Whitlock, Charlotte, lawyer, trust officer, American Trust Company.

W. Frank Bryan, Evanston, Illinois, teacher and author; Whitehead Kluttz, Washington, D. C., lawyer; Brent S. Drane, Charlotte, engineer, formerly director of Geological and Economic Survey; J. C. B. Ehringhaus, Elizabeth City, lawyer, former legislator and prominent candidate for Governor in 1932; Nathan W. Walker, Chapel Hill, acting dean of the University School of Education.

In Many Fields Now

Charles Phillips Russell, of Chapel Hill, newspaperman and author; Dr. Frank McLean, New York City, physician; Victor L. Stephenson, Syracuse, N. Y., newspaperman; Herbert B. Gunter, Greensboro, Pilot Life Insurance Company; Oscar J. Coffin, former editor and now professor of journalism at the University of North Carolina; O. W. Hyman, professor at University of Tennessee; William H. Jones, Biltmore, teacher; Frank Hough, Shaw, Miss., school superintendent; Lawrence N. Morgan, teacher at University of Oklahoma; George L. Carrington, Burlington, physician; and Lenoir Chambers, associate editor of the Virginian-Pilot, Norfolk, Virginia.

More Recent Editors

Walter P. Fuller, St. Petersburg, Florida, editor and realtor; Thomas C. Linn, Jr., New York City, on staff of the New York Times; William T. Polk, Warrenton, lawyer, short story writer; Charles G. Tennent, Asheville, formerly with the Asheville Times; William H. Stephenson, Houston, Texas, lawyer; Forrest Miles, Winston-Salem, lawyer; Thomas Wolfe, New York City, author of the Pulitzer Prize novel "Look Homeward Angel," and professor at New York University; Daniel L. Grant, formerly Alumni Secretary and Loyalty Fund Director, now national Secretary of Delta Tau Delta fraternity; Jonathan Daniels, Raleigh, newspaperman and author; J. J. Wade, sports editor of the Charlotte Observer.

C. B. Colton, Tilton, N. H., teacher at Tilton Academy; J. Maryon Saunders, University of North Carolina Alumni Secretary; Henry N. Parker, Raleigh, manager Southern School Supply Company; James T. Madry, Scotland Neck, editor the Scotland Neck Commonwealth; Jud Ashby, editor the Mount Airy Times; Walter Spearman, on the staff of the Charlotte News; and Glenn P. Holder, Chapel Hill, Assistant Alumni Secretary.

Many Shot Putters and Pole Vaulters Are To Appear in Meet Here

third, respectively, in the Southern meet last year. Stevens of Washington and Lee has already done forty-two feet in indoor competition this year.

Other powerful contenders, any of whom may crash through, include Moreau, L. S. U.; Hughey, S. C.; Schectman, Alabama; and De Coligny, Zimmerman and Haynes, of Tulane.

The strength of the field is illustrated by the fact that one prominent Southern coach, who has also coached Olympic teams, entered a forty-four foot shot putter from his institution with apologies. He wrote that he would ordinarily have high hopes for his boy, but not this year. It reminds one of a recent triangular meet in Virginia, from which emanated the story that Lacy Harper, Carolina's man mountain of 6 feet 6 and 215 pounds, was the lightest shot putter entered.

The pole vault always spectacular, should also be a great event.

If you don't believe it, scan the list of stars entered:

Dickens, Georgia, tied for first place in Southern outdoor meet last year, with vault of eleven feet ten, on a muddy field.

Brodie Arnold, North Carolina, dropped to a tie for fourth on the wet field, but Anold holds the Southern indoor record of twelve feet seven, and has vaulted thirteen feet outdoors. Raymond Ruble, another Tar Heel placer, is on a par with Arnold this year.

Causey, Alabama, tied these boys last year, but 'Bama has a sophomore, Merl Reigel, who is said to be a twelve-foot potentiality.

Yawn, of L. S. U., on the wet track, dropped to a tie with Causey, Arnold and Ruble in the outdoor championships last year, but Yawn was favorite and on a good day he reaches twelve feet consistently.

Haynes of Tulane is Conference javelin champ, and Zimmerman is a former national interscholastic javelin champ, but the New Orleans papers report that both are going to be as good in the vault.

Bill Turner, as a freshman last year, moved the V. P. I. record up to eleven feet ten. Sharpe did about the same at Duke last year, and other boys who may soar high and far include Curtis, Maxey and Sanders of Washington and Lee; and DeJarnette of Georgia Tech.

Some one should arrange a joint debate between the Wickersham committee collectively.—Wichita Eagle.

Virginia Pushes Four Men To Finals To Win Boxing Tournament

Holderness came back only to be dropped twice more. The referee stopped the fight just before the end of the round.

Obie Davis lost to Myer, Virginia, in the semi-finals after having defeated Tharpe of Tulane in his opening bout. Davis had Myer bleeding from the nose and mouth and staggered him with hard rights to the jaw, but Myer was awarded the decision after the fourth round.

Platt Landis, heavyweight also went out in the semi-finals, losing to Fenton Gentry of Virginia. Platt injured his left hand early in the first round, but put up a great scrap in spite of it. In his first two fights, Landis won over Mundy, W. & L., by a decision, and scored a technical knockout over Danner, Mississippi A. & M. in the second round.

Captain John Minardi, Florida bantam, retained his title by winning a close decision from Marx of L. S. U. in three rounds.

Goldstein, Virginia, won the featherweight title from "Shack" Martin, Duke. Martin put up a great scrap and gave the Cavalier plenty of trouble before bowing to Virginia's' idol.

Following Noah Goodridge's victory over Barrow, L. S. U., in the lightweight division, Captain Bob Rainey, Virginia, retained his welter title by defeating DeBuys, Tulane. Myer of Virginia, after taking lots of punishment in his first two fights won the middleweight title by defeating Rochelle, Mississippi A. & M. Rochelle had a big lead in points when Myer landed a hard right to the jaw in the third round. Myer had his man almost out when the bout ended.

Fenton Gentry won Virginia's fourth crown by taking the decision from Zamurray of Tulane in three rounds. Hill of Tulane then won the final bout of the tournament over John Warren. Virginia scored 20 points, Tulane 11, Carolina 8, L. S. U. 6, Duke 3, and Miss. A. & M. 3.

TORONTO COLLEGE PAPER ORDERED TO BE SUSPENDED

Publishing of Editorial on Atheism Causes Furore on Canadian Campus.

The campus of the University of Toronto is in the throes of a unique verbal battle over an editorial on atheism which appeared in the February twenty-fourth issue of Varsity, the newspaper of that college. The paper was indefinitely suspended from publication by the student administrative council immediately following the issue containing the editorial.

The editorial claimed that the majority of students and graduates, including many in theology, were practically atheists, that is if they held religious beliefs they did not apply them in their daily lives. It also claimed that much university teaching resulted in practical atheism.

The next day the Toronto press misrepresented the editorial as charging the majority of the students of being atheists and saying that atheism was being taught at the university. The Varsity attempted to quiet the furore that was aroused by the news article on the matter by claiming the misrepresentation and restated their position. However, the university board of governors, who are mostly business men, met and considered the charges as reported in the downtown press. The board renounced the suggestions of atheism and instructed the university ruling body to take dicciplinary measures against the Varsity.

M'CLURE SPEAKS BEFORE N. C. CLUB

Head of Farmers' Federation Tells of Its Activities In State.

Dr. J. G. K. McClure of Asheville spoke to the North Carolina Club Monday evening at seven-thirty o'clock, explaining the work of the Farmers' Federation of which he is president, and whose paper "Farmers' Federation News," he edits.

Dr. McClure was a Presbyterian minister in Chicago and came to Asheville to regain his health. There he became interested in the economic problems of that region, primarily through the University news letter and through the year books published by the North Carolina Club showing the economic conditions of the mountain farmers.

Dr. McClure told his listeners that ten years ago the Federation was started with a few farmers at Fairview in Buncombe county. The thing the Federation worked for was to give the western North Carolina farmers an outside market for their produce. In the beginning, there was only one warehouse at Fairview, but now there are eight in the four counties centering around Buncombe. The Federation has at present more than 800 members and produced last year over a million dollars worth of farm produce. The Federation is managed by the farmers themselves.

Dr. McClure next outlined the different projects which the Federation has carried on and will continue in 1931.

HAMER OUTLINES WORK OF Y.M.C.A. IN CHAPEL TALK

Y President Gives Freshmen Reasons for Participating in Work of Organization.

Speaking in chapel yesterday morning, Ed R. Hamer, president of the Y.M.C.A., outlined the purposes of the Y and told of the benefits that a student might derive from participation in the activities of the organization.

President Hamer urged students to take an interest in campus activities and affairs of the whole state. The four main aims of the Y association are: to develop a spiritual fellowship among the students; to create and maintain throughout the University a better attitude toward the finer things of life; to promote clean morals; and to provide a well rounded program for the campus. Quoting Dr. Harry W. Chase, president of the University from 1919-1930, Hamer said that it was a pleasure to deal with the Y.M.C.A. and that it was generally conceded that Carolina's association was one of the most effective in the country.

In point of service the local Y is the third oldest in the United States, the first and second having been established in 1858 at the Universities of Virginia and Michigan. The Carolina association has existed continuously since its establishment in 1860, except for a brief period following the Civil War. The present building, he pointed out, was erected in 1904 and is entirely inadequate to the needs of Carolina's student body. Some of the former presidents of the Carolina association are: Dr. Samuel Patterson; Dr. Howard Rondthaler, noted educator of Winston-Salem; Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of men at the University; and President Graham.

GRAHAM AND FAUST AT CONSOLIDATION MEETING

STATE'S OLDEST NEGRO RECALLS HARD TIMES WORSE THAN 1930

Uncle March Taylor, Who Celebrated His 106th Birthday Last Sunday, Has Lived Through Four Wars and Vividly Describes The Horrors of the Struggle Between the North and South.

By Dick McGlohon

Sunday, March 1, marked the passing of another year for Uncle March Taylor, North Carolina's oldest Negro citizen, who at the age of 106, still active, takes as much interest in the people about him as the day when he turned from plow to pulpit.

A birthday now means more to Uncle March than even an all-day protracted meeting back in slavery times, for all of his friends, mostly white folks from the countryside and nearby towns, are expected to pay him a visit.

The tumble-down, one-room log cabin, once as much a part of the rural landscape as the fields themselves, today kept neat and clean as a pin by his faithful sixty-five year-old wife, will again echo with colorful tales of bygone days when a Southern gentleman took up arms in defense of a cause they thought to be right.

It was exactly eighty-five years ago that Uncle March, then a lad of twenty-one, first saw his native state prepare to fight a war. That was the Mexican scrap of 1846. Since then he has lived through three other wars, one of which carried him to the firing lines where for four years he got his fill of suffering and bloodshed.

"Hard times was in dis country atter de Civil War, shore," declares Uncle March. "Folks nowadays makes me sick a-talkin' hard times ober nothin'. Dey hain't suffered yit. We couldn't hope ourselves den, but de folks now hain't got nobody to blame but demselves. When de fools had sompin' dey wouldn't keep hit fer a rainy day. Now dey's gittin' wet an' dey hain't got nairy umbrella. Dat's right, shore.

"Hard times done been heah an' now dey's a-wearin' out an' gittin' ready ter leave. You sees dem ever Sadday a-sittin' all long both sides ob de street at de same place de ole hosses an' de steers use ter stan' an' paw groun'.

"All de money done gone up North fer dese heah ottimobiles an' dere hain't none ob hit come back. Dat's de trouble wid dis country, shore. An' now de folks is runnin' all roun' a-shoutin' starvation lak a pack ob younguns scared half ter deaf. Dey done spent all dey money an' now dey's a-cryin' 'cause dey hain't got no mo' ter spen.' Dey ought ter knowd dey can't eat all de cake an' hab it too.

"When de Angel Gabriel blows his horn fer de day ob Judgmint, I 'spects ter see de folks all a-running' out ter hop de ottimobiles an' busses. Dey'll want ter be de fust ter git up ter de Golden Gates so's ter git de fust good look at Ole Saint Peter. Dere's a fool born ever minit down here on dis old worl'. Dey does mo' devilish talkin' dan thinkin'. Dey don't know nothin' 'bout hard times."

This is not the first depression that Uncle March has lived through. The one that occurred during President Cleveland's last administration, some thirty-odd years ago, brought a greater scarcity of money and the best cotton then sold for four cents a pound. No other "money crops" were raised in this section at that time and Uncle March says that the people lived comfortably in spite of the panic for they had their homes and made plenty to eat on the farms.

The scene of wholesale plunder and devastation that greeted Uncle March and his young master as they rode in silence down that lonesome road returning from Lee's surrender at Appomattox Court House in the spring of 1865 still remains a clear picture in the old darkey's memory, the unplowed fields; deserted farm houses—those still standing, for many lay in ashes; plug mules grazing ditchbanks where once stout rail fences stood; former slaves struggling lazily down the narrow country road, while tired women and children grubbed industriously in small garden spots.

"Dat shore looked bad," says Uncle March, "but we got a eye full when we got ter de big house. De smoke house an' de barns was all burnt up. De Yankees done stole all de meat an' corn. De 'lasses done all gone. Dey tuck all de hosses an' lef' three no-count mules. Dey tore up de floor in de big house a-lookin' fer de money, but de Missus done got ahead ob dem an' buried all dat wid de silber down in de swamp. All de slaves done gone 'cept a few ob de ole ones.

"Dat shore was a time on dis earth. Dat shore was a time. Me an' mah marster, we got busy an' raised us a late crap dat year. We didn't hab no money but we had some meat an' bread. We was glad ter git dat much, fer we liked ter perished in de army, shore."

Uncle March served four years with the Third North Carolina Regiment, infantry, as manservant and personal aide to his young master, Sergeant-Major Kenchen R. Taylor. He did no actual fighting but saw every battle from behind the lines where he and the other slaves belonging to the officers looked after the ammunition and reloaded guns. He drilled regularly with the regiment's company of colored manservants, cooked, mended uniforms, kept the camps in order, and helped bury the dead. He wore a Confederate uniform and marched with his company at the rear of the regiment.

Like other soldiers Uncle March had his experiences and hairbreadth escapes, but through it all he stuck faithfully by his master's side, never faltering. Of course, he ducked his head when the "minie balls" came whistling over, but he wants everybody to understand that March Taylor wasn't scared in the least. "Naw Suh, mah knees didn't shake. Dey hain't neber shaked. I knowed what I'd git ef dem legs started workin'. I seen too many ob dem poor fellows sot up by a pine tree an' shot by de shootin' squad."

The pitiful screams of dying men set Uncle March ill at ease at first, but after the first few battles he found himself so hardened to the horrible sights that he didn't care much whether he lived or died. Hundreds of other soldiers felt the same way. He has heard the

Graham Memorial To Have Bowling Alleys

It has been decided to use the ground floor of Graham Memorial as a recreation center, and among the things planned to be installed will be several bowling alleys.

Bowling alleys have been prohibited from Chapel Hill since 1789, and recently students have been going over to Durham and Raleigh for this sport.

The group that will have charge of Graham Memorial will consist of representatives from the student body, the faculty, and the alumni.

PHI BETA KAPPA ASSOCIATION FOR SOUTH PLANNED

Voorhees Speaks at Raleigh Banquet and Begins Permanent Organization.

At a dinner given in honor of Dr. Oscar M. Voorhees, of New York, at the Carolina Hotel in Raleigh Monday evening, steps were taken to organize an association of the Greek letter society of Phi Beta Kappa, the oldest society of its kind in this country. There Dr. Voorhees, the national secretary of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, made the principal talk of the evening.

Dr. Voorhees described how the first society of order was organized at William and Mary College, in Virginia, on December 5, 1776. The words of the original charter described it as an organization to promote a "happy spirit and resolution of attaining the important ends of the society." The chapter at William and Mary, lasted only four years, being discontinued on account of the Revolution, but before it was dissolved, it had granted rights to form branches as chapters were then called, at Yale and Harvard. The society has now grown until it compromises some 114 chapters all over the country. Membership in the chapter is limited to those who have graduated from institutions of college rank. The rule of the society is to grant membership only to those who have been leading scholars in their classes, or to outstanding graduates of the colleges. The celebration of the 150th anniversary of the founding of the chapter at Yale celebrated December 5th, when the noted professor and writer, William Lyon Phelps read an original for the occasion that reflected much credit on its author. The 100th anniversary of the establishment of the chapter at Brown University was celebrated last year also. Chief Justice Hughes, one of the most distinguished alumni of the institution was the principal speaker of the occasion.

In addition to the 114 chapters are some sixty associations, these, however, are not allowed, under the rules of the society, to grant charters.

Representatives from fifteen chapters, scattered all the way from Maine to Kansas were present at the preliminary meeting to form an association in Raleigh Monday night. A committee composed of Dr. Joseph L. Peacock, chairman, Mrs. J. Henry Highsmith, Dr. W. W. Way, and Dean B. F. Brown, of State College, was elected to bring about the permanent organization of the association here.

CHURCHILL WILL LECTURE TUESDAY ON CONSERVATISM

Son of Winston Churchill Brought Here by Grant Made By Owen Hill Kenan.

The directors of the student entertainment committee have arranged to have as a speaker on the entertainment program this quarter Randolph Churchill, son of the famous English statesman, Winston Churchill. Mr. Churchill will lecture on "Can Youth be Conservative" in Memorial hall next Tuesday evening at eight-thirty o'clock.

This lecture was made possible by a grant from Owen Hill Kenan, who is acquainted with the young Englishman and feels sure he will please his audience here. The entertainment directors had planned to bring a sixth program to the students, and they are pleased to welcome Randolph Churchill to Chapel Hill.

Randolph Churchill has distinguished himself in England by his smashing attacks against the proposed Anglo-Egyptian treaty, and he is decidely a conservative. Although he is only nineteen years of age he has impressed the English public greatly by his stirring opinions and the dashing manner with which he presents them to his audience.

Coming from a long line of distinguished English statesmen, Randolph Churchill seems capable of upholding his family prestige and even of surpassing it. He clings firmly to the policies of the Constitutional party in England, and there are many who predict that he possesses the force that will

TAYLOR SOCIETY TO HEAR SIMONDS

General Manager of Simonds Company To Speak in Bingham Hall Today.

Gifford K. Simonds, the general manager of the Simonds Saw and Steel Company, will speak in Bingham Hall this morning at twelve o'clock under the auspices of the Taylor Society on the subject of "The Modern Trend of Industrial Architecture."

Simonds will use the "Simonds Windowless Factory" as an example of the perfect factory from the standpoint of elimination of all changeable conditions. This factory has perfect illumination at all times. The air, moreover, is washed, dried, heated or cooled to the correct temperature, and blown through the building at the rate of 500,000 cubic feet every ten minutes. The walls have been planned to be acoustically perfect.

Because the well-known effect of colors on human reactions and efficiency, the interior coloring of the building has been selected with the idea in view of obtaining the highest possible output from the workmen. The heating system is, of course, thermostatically controlled.

The results of this experiment are claimed to have increased the efficiency of production thirty-three per cent. In connection with this subject Mr. Simonds is furnished with first-hand information and will be willing to answer all technical questions.

Belief And Disbelief

There rages at the University of Toronto a verbal war over an editorial written by the student editor of the Varsity in which it is stated that a majority of the students and graduates are practical atheists. The editor explained that by practical atheists he meant that if the students held religious beliefs they did not apply them to their daily lives. Following this editorial and some comment as to its meaning, publication of the Varsity was suspended.

Events such as this are apt to occur almost anywhere. Always there is a furore and somebody loses a job. And editorial writers are afforded ample opportunity to express themselves on that glorious if somewhat unobtainable ideal of "freedom of speech and the press." We have been guilty of similar expressions in the past.

The University of Toronto is faced with a practical problem. A student charged that if the students hold religious beliefs they did not apply them to their daily lives. He further charged that much university teaching resulted in practical atheism. A private newspaper, the Toronto Globe, is afflicted with the crusading disease. It demands an investigation and purging of that university of atheists.

Is atheism rampant at the University or Toronto? If so surely the editor of the Varsity has committed no sin in informing the world of it. Perhaps those who would expel him and suspend the Varsity prefer to have atheism but not to let anyone know of it than an admission of its existence. If the editor is correct then no complaint can be made against him. If his charges are false then those who would suppress his paper have cause for resentment. Otherwise they appear just a bit assinine.

Smith and Reorganization

Former-Governor Smith was well received in Raleigh, and the impression which his address made upon those who heard it was a surprisingly good one. The speech was timely, as it dealt directly with a subject which at present is occupying the center of the interests of our state legislators; it was a splendid appeal for the reorganization of our state government, dealing with specific problems rather than with vague principles, and with little sentimentality interrupting the straight-forwardness of the discussion; its appeal was not of or for any political party, which was indeed the right thing, for the address was directed to the General Assembly. Yes, the speech as a speech was good, and the good Democrats of North Carolina must have enjoyed the visit of their chieftain. (If Mr. Smith is not now the head of his party, he is at least the former head. And we are not sure that he is not now the nation's foremost Democrat, as far as North Carolina's Democracy is concerned.)

Now, in what we have to say we do not wish it to be understood that we accuse ex-Governor Smith of making a trip to Raleigh merely as a political gesture or that we think certain state officials attempted to put on a show for the benefit of the state's electorate. What we have to say is simply this: Nothing will be accomplished as a result of ex-Governor Smith's address.

North Carolina, in the midst of depression, has discovered that she is laboring under an antiquated system of state government. It is proposed that the government be reorganized. first, to provide for more effective government and, second, to lower the costs of governmental operation. This is all well and good. Let us admit that our state government should be reorganized along more efficient lines. But how may that be done? By bringing in a man like Alfred E. Smith to tell the Assembly how the state of New York did it? Hardly. North Carolina has problems all her own, and they must be worked out by her own leaders. Certainly a survey of reorganizations of other state governments and a study of problems which other legislatures have faced in their efforts to reorganize would be most valuable. The work of reorganization must be carried on by men who are technically expert in governmental problems and by men who know North Carolina's situation at first hand. Little is to be gained by introducing speakers from other sections to tell us how and why other localities made the change.—B. M.

Curiosity, Perhaps Idle Curiosity

There is a scrap of information we want very much, and have wanted very much since before we entered the University. We have wondered; we have asked; we have listened to conversations that were none of our business, hoping that by some coincidence, chance, or combination of circumstances we might have our curiosity satisfied. We have been as insistent and as thoroughly aggravating as Kipling's baby elephant. And perhaps the matter is of no importance anyway. We have been trying to find out what under the sun Yackety Yack can mean. And we haven't found out. So now we follow a line of least resistance and say it probably doesn't mean anything.

If anybody will assure us that it has any meaning whatsoever, we'll try once more to satisfy our "'satiable curiosity" as the baby elephant did, and we'll ask all our aunts and cousins. However, we do draw the line at crocodiles.

But somehow, we don't believe the title of our annual is anything but an ancient football yell, and that is unfortunate. The whole point in and excuse for titles lie in their having a significance. If Yackety Yack means nothing, then for heaven's sake change it for something else in spite of sentiment, tradition, precedence, and habit.—V. A. D.

With Contemporaries

Positively Last Notice

The following is a reprint of a letter which appeared in The New York World.

The World has now twice described me as the author of forty questions which lately baffled some members of the faculty of Columbia University. These questions were first printed in the January issue of Scribner's in a paper named "A Little Exam." The paper itself stated in plain English that the questions were written by a lawyer and an engineer. To date 171 comments on the questions have appeared in American newspapers and reviews. One hundred and sixty-eight of these comments mention me as the compiler or author of the forty questions.

The Commonweal's version of the affair is perhaps the most fantastic variation from stated fact in the lot, as it reduces the number of questions from forty to thirty-seven, declares that I "presided over" the examination (I was more than a hundred miles away at the moment, discussing the verse of Mr. Conrad Aiken with a learned man on the steps of my mother's cottage at Siasconset) and produces for me a state of mind in regard to American youth which is very saddening to me, indeed. Why is it that the solitary English editorial notice of this small business places me quite correctly in my role as a reporter of an event at which I was not present and discovers that "Mr. Beer's own opinion of American cultivation is not given"? Why, why and why?

As this is to be my only published comment on the slaughter of the innocents effected by Mr. Charles Frankel and Mr. C. G. Giddings, will The World allow me some inches of space? The value of examinations generally is nothing much. But the general information "quiz" is rather an old dodge in Europe and schoolmasters there cling to it. It has been denounced and defended and debated by conclaves of professors, but it goes on. They find something in it. Five of the questions posed in "A Little Exam" were remembered by Mr. Giddings from a general information paper set for him when he was in the fourth form of an English public school. If it was fair to ask lads of fourteen and fifteen, in 1903, about Cory's translation from Callimachus and the number of French kings taken prisoner in battle, it is fair to ask graduates of Harvard and Yale like questions in 1930, not because they are graduates of two pretentious universities but because very few people can grow up in an English-speaking country without seeing "They told me, Heracleitus" — — quoted or hearing that there were such battles as Poitiers and Pavia. A well-informed person continues to be just what Newman said he was —"no prodigy of scholarship but one who has made it his healthy habit to remember what he sees, reads and hears."

The habit is uncommon in the United States. Why is it that John who was howling over a new outbreak of Mr. Ogden Nash last night at dinner remembers merely the less useful half of the poet's name at noon today and could not for his life quote one of the rhymes correctly? He was amused. He was delighted. He was going to send a copy of the New Yorker to his invalid aunt in Spokane. But it leaves him. There was something howlingly funny in one of the papers or something yesterday. It was something by a fellow named Ogden—no, Coggins,—no, that wasn't it. . . . Yeah, it was Ogden. . . . Well, it was funny anyhow. And why was it that a gang of young people who were "crazy" about Mr. Ernest Hemingway on the first Sunday of last September could not remember the name of one of his books or "spot" the conclusion of "A Farewell to Arms"? Let The World organize a symposium of psychlogists on the American "will to forget"—for there is such a phenomenon—and it will do the public a larger service than did the youngsters at Columbia who have demonstrated that their teachers are just Americans.

THOMAS BEER.

The Professors Flunk

To our thinking, the main point about this quiz conducted by the Columbia Spectator, a student publication, is not that ten members of the faculty flunked it but that forty-three refused to take it. There was no disgrace in flunking it. Our recollection of the questions, as they were prepared by Thomas Beer and published in Scribner's Magazine, is that they were pretty difficult; in that they did not differ from the average "general information" test, for it usually turns out that one man's general information is another man's useless nonsense. But how about refusing to take it?

It seems to us that the forty-three declinations at Columbia throw into sharp relief at least one defect of examinations, as well as the "honor" that is demanded in connection with them; and that is that examinations lack the basic element of honor, which is the association of equals. Without this, honor has no meaning. In former times a gentleman fought a duel only with another gentleman; if the affront came from a varlet, he boxed the fellow's ears. In examinations, however, where is the code between equals? All the rules are made by the professor, and by him applied. The student may want to write on both sides, instead of one; he may prefer four hours, instead of three; he may think that some question is grossly unfair. The forty-three at Columbia have merely proved what the students have instinctively known all along: that the system works only one way. The moment it is reversed, the professors refuse to play.

In addition to their unfairness, examinations are a pretty sorry way to test knowledge, and absurdly out of joint with the modern world. It is gratifying that here and there they are being abandoned, and that the childish "grades" reckoned from them are being replaced with judgments more mature.—The New York World.

The Ideal Curriculum

St. Stephen's college, the undergraduate college of arts and letters in Columbia University, has been searching for the "ideai college curriculum." The search has not been a great success, according to the faculty, but has not all been in vain. A forward step has has been made.

In the future, the college will deal with each student as an individual, making a curriculum that will be chosen after a year's residence at the college. A faculty committee and the student will confer on the cultural background of the student's home, his work in classes, the opinions of those who have taught him, his intelligence as disclosed by psychological tests, his intellectual interests, the extent to which he still needs orientation studies or special attention in any one field, and his later professional objectives.

Such a program as will be the result of this conference should result in a balanced selection fitted to each student's needs. It will do away with the idea of the average student, and will treat not a class, but an individual. Under this plan, a degree should mean something more than so many hours of class attendance and a certain grade average. Graduates of a much higher caliber will be the production of the college. Specialization and particular attention will fit the student for a better life after college.—Daily Iowan.

At a meeting of the provincial legislature the members of that body urged an investigation of the university, withdrawal of financial support if atheism charges were founded, the suppression of the Varsity, and arrest of editor for blasphemy. The suggestion was opposed by the government majority and no action was taken. The student administrative council met and expressed confidence in the editor, but ordered the publication suspended.

The staff of the paper, which has been retained, is expected to publish at least one more issue this year as a fiftieth anniversary number. It is also thought that the staff may publish a bulletin sheet, but they will take no action until the council decides on a definite plan of action.

Once before, in 1929, the University of Toronto had an affair of similar nature. This was in regard to an editorial printed about the co-eds at the university using their vamping powers on the professors to academic advantage. After a long dispute the affair was settled by having the same staff and management as before. The probation and censorship which was placed on the paper for a while was probably done only as a warning.

Harold Osborne To Give High Jump Exhibition At Indoor Track Carnival

Holder of World's High Jump Record Will Try To Regain Indoor Title Under Official A. A. U. Sanction—Jumps 6 Feet 6 Inches at Age of Thirty-Two.

There's only one man in the world who at the age of 32 has jumped over a bar 6 feet 6 inches above the ground, and that man, Harold Osborne, is going to give a high jump exhibition at the Southern Conference Indoor Games here Saturday night.

R. A. Fetzer, chairman of the games committee, announced the extraordinary feature yesterday. Official A. A. U. sanction has been secured, because Osborne, still holder of the world's outdoor record of 6 feet 8 1-4 inches, thinks he may recapture the world's indoor record and wants it to stand if he does.

A New York University sophomore, George Spitz, lifted the indoor record from Osborne just a few nights back. Spitz took off a slippery board runway and soared to 6 feet 7. Osborne was just an inch behind, the 32-year old school teacher amazing the world by jumping 6 feet 6.

That feat, after 16 years of competition, 14 years of it A. A. U. competition, marked Osborn as the All-Time King of the High Jumpers. He has competed in 173 meets and 152 exhibitions, and he has traveled 192,800 miles around the world making his dates. Moreover, he has jumped higher more times than any man in the world, 6 feet he has done 160 times; 6 feet 1, 143 times; 6 feet 2, 132 times; 6 feet 3, 104 times; 6 feet 4, 86 times; 6 feet 5, 37 times; 6 feet 6, 19 times; 6 feet 7, 4 times; and 6 feet 8, 2 times.

His best year, of course, was 1924. He set the world's outdoor record at 6 feet 8 1-4 inches in May, set two new records at the Olympic Games in Paris, and at the same time won first place in the Olympic decathlon championship for best all-round performances in every event. His outdoor record still stands as a high mark for the high-fliers, and now he plans to shoot to get his indoor record back—at the age of 32.

Osborne, as seen by his winning the Olympic decathlon, is more than the world's greatest high jumper. He is a one-man track team, and it is conceivable that, single-handed, he might beat many a college track team in the country. For instance he has vaulted 12 feet 1 1-2, broad-jumped 23 feet 5 1-2, put the shot 40 feet 6, thrown the discus 135 feet and the javelin 178 feet, run the 120-yard high hurdles in 15.4 seconds, and done the mile in 4:40, the two mile in 10:25 and the five-mile in 27:30.

Feg Murray the sports cartoonist has dubbed him the "hardy perennial," and track followers all over the world will be watching closely when the 32-year old school teacher blooms out in quest of his old indoor world's record here Saturday night.

The sign says: "Send Your Old Clothing to the Police Station." But, gosh, if we do, we're likely to land there ourselves. We couldn't masquerade as a marathon-runner this time of year.—Boston Herald.

FOUR CHAMPS TO RACE ON HURDLES

Washington and Lee Has Great Pair in Finklestein and Speer; DeColigny Also Good.

A burst of speed, a front leg raised with arms stretched forward, a man soaring like a bird and landing on one foot and off for another burst of speed and another soaring. . . . .

The hurdle race is over in seconds, but it remains in memory as the prettiest feature of track. Four champions will be among the soaring speedsters who will run the hurdles at the Southern Conference Indoor Games here Saturday night, and unless those who know their records are sadly mistaken, there is going to be some great hurdling competition.

Washington and Lee is sending Algy Speer and Eli Finkelstein, who last year set the Southern indoor records for 60-yard high and low hurdles at 7.8 and 7 seconds, respectively. Tulane adds another champ in Calvert deColigny, Southern outdoor champion over the 120-high hurdles last year, and Georgia adds Maddox, who was outdoor champion over the 220-low hurdles.

All these boys were in the Indoor meet last year. DeColigny, a massive 195-pounder with power enough to play a tackle in football, was shaded by the flying Generals in the shorter indoor races. His superb power gave him his way outdoors, and for all his 195 pounds, he skimmed the high hurdles in near-record time of 15.1 seconds. Maddox's time over the lows was 24.7, which speaks for itself.

The indoor hurdle races are to be lengthened to 70 yards this year, which will give the massive DeColigny more space in which to display his great power. Those four champs should produce speed and more speed, and a couple of great races.

There'll be more stars too, several of whom may prove dark horses. North Carolina has Slusser of football fame, who was second among the Conference low hurdlers outdoors last year. Alabama sends a sophomore Russell Lipe, whom they say is regarded as one of the best low hurdlers ever to wear the Crimson. Auburn will introduce another of the famous hurdling tribe of Beards, a brother to that breaker of world records, Percy Beard. Coles of Virginia, Foxhall and Williams of Georgia Tech and Rule and Preble of V. P. I. will be others.

Infirmary List

The infirmary reports the following people on the sick list, most of them suffering from attacks of the measles: H. Thomas, W. E. Armstrong, Miss Marion Tatem, R. E. Sisk, R. E. Brooks, F. M. Holloway, M. P. Hiller, W. J. Jenkins, P. W. Glidewell, R. E. Harris, and Earl Funderburke.

HIGH SCHOOLS TO MEET FOR CAGE HONORS TONIGHT

Charlotte and Raleigh Will Compete for Class "A" Title.

SET FOR TIN CAN AT EIGHT

Bakersville and Rose Hill, Class "B" Contestants To Meet At Nine.

The scrap tonight between the undefeated Raleigh high cagers, eastern champs, and Charlotte western victors, likewise unbeaten, promises to be a thrilling battle. The game will start at 8:00, and will be followed at 9:00 by the class "B" title game between Rose Hill, representing the east, and Bakersville, the west.

Raleigh will be fighting to break the Charlotte jinx, which caused them to lose the baseball title to Charlotte last spring, and also the football championship last fall to the same by the score of 14-9, although the losers garnered 14 first downs to the winners' 8. Raleigh boasts victories over Durham, last year's winner, and the Tar Babies, state freshman champs. Charlotte has an equally enviable record.

Raleigh's starting lineup probably will be Hunter and Rand, forwards; Captain Cox, center; Womble and Jacobs, guards. Charlotte will present Aitken and Bell, forwards; Alexander, center; McCachren and Hatcher guards.

Bakersville will present Loven and Burleson, forwards; Baker, center; Ellis and Platt, guards. Rose Hill has not yet announced the names of the men who will start the game for that school.

Ray Farris And Odell Sapp To Don Football Uniforms For Monogram-Rookie Game

Former Carolina Stars, Now Freshman Coaches, Will Be Among Stars to Compete With Rookies—Magner, Nash, House, Lipscomb to Play—Rookies Have Strong Outfit.

Ray Farris

Odell Sapp

Ray Farris and Odell Sapp, two of the finest linemen ever to wear the Blue and White of Carolina are "coming back" for another football game.

Farris, captain of the powerful scoring machine which in 1929 rolled up 346 points to make Carolina the second high scoring team in the country, unanimous choice for the all-Southern guard position and named on prominent all-American teams, is now acting as assistant freshman coach and as such has kept in a condition to do as he did in days of yore.

Sapp, sensational pass snatcher, and fast smashing end, has proved his worth both as a player and as coach. In the latter capacity he recently elicited praise from head coach Chuck Collins which stamps him as a coach with limitless possibilities. The big blonde good-natured boy who has shone for Carolina in many sports is perhaps best remembered for his touchdown against Virginia as the Tar Heels defeated the Cavaliers 14-13 in the game dedicating Kenan Stadium in 1927.

Attorney Sapp's return to the playing field has resurrected an old passing combination—Magner to Sapp, which netted the Blue and White many a first down. The pair so successful on the gridiron have taken up a law partnership together, which all their friends wish to be as successful as their activities on the football field.

A number of famous Tar Heel gridders will don their shoulder guards and helmets for the last time Saturday. Captain Strud Nash, consistent ground gainer; Chuck Erickson, who by his snaring of two long passes in the Virginia game of 1929 brought victory to the standard of Carolina; Jim Magner, whose accurate bullet-like passes have often helped to win the day; and Henry House, fast-driving fullback, who will be among the backs performing for the last time on the battle scarred turf of Kenan stadium.

The linemen who will be driving in there in their last game will include Ned Lipscomb, prominent mention for an all-

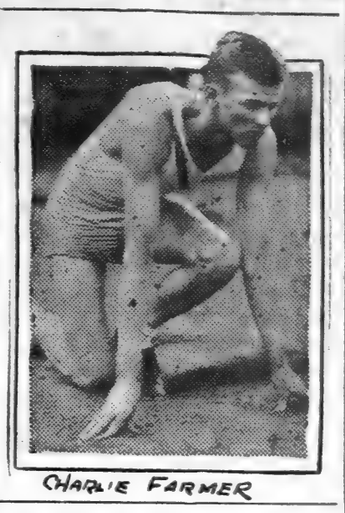
Farmer's Indoor Sprint Record To Be Threatened

Smith of Alabama, Who Won Conference 100-Yard Dash Last Year Good Sprint Man—Bowman, L. S. U., Rule, V. P. I. Other Good Dash Men.

Charlie Farmer equalled both Southern dash records at one time or other last year, but there's a lad by the name of Smith from Alabama who beat Farmer once last year and who is going to threaten Farmer's speed crown to the Nth degree at the Southern Conference Indoor Games here Saturday.



The Alabamian, Brownlee Smith, as a sophomore at Alabama in 1930, went undefeated in the dashes in dual meets, and at the Conference meet he proved a better mud-horse and beat Farmer out in the 100-yard dash. Farmer retaliated by beating Smith in the 220.

Smith ran the 100 as fast as 9.9 seconds last spring, while Farmer was getting down to 9.8 Both boys were just sophomores, and should be the better for added experience this season. Farmer holds the Southern indoor record of 6.4 seconds for 60 yards, and the open question now is which is going to be most effective on a board track.

Speculation raises another interesting question. Smith is short and stocky, with a big pair of legs like Charley Paddock. Farmer, on the other hand, is the tallest of the nation's leading sprinters, and at full stride, looks like a Kentucky thoroughbred. Which physical equipment will produce most speed?

The above, however, doesn't mean one or the other is sure winner. The field will be full of

BLUE DEVILS TURN BACK DAVIDSON IN HARD GAME TO CAPTURE GRID TITLE

No forms of betting or card playing for money are tolerated at the University of Greenland. Three star members of the university outdoor bowling team were expelled from school when they were detected gamboling on the green recently.

"There is not the slightest doubt in my mind," said Captain Uno Sewanso, of Wakiki University," in surveying the past sport year, that our peppy school song 'Hula Hula' is the reason for so many victories of our kankahoua team."

Kankahoua, we might explain, is a rare old oriental game played on ice with whisk brooms. The players are mounted on scooters with caterpillar tracks (that is, the scooters have caterpillar tracks).

Along with this much repeated "O. K. Colonel" of Phil Cook's which is sweeping the country like a disease, this department is crusading to exterminate the ever present howl about over emphasis of football. Now they're even blaming the alleged depression on the said over emphasis of the grid sport. 'Tis even said that four tackles and a quarterback have been fired up at New Haven, so serious is the depression becoming.

Reminiscing of the days of yore when we indulged in the great game (we starred at right tackle in the memorable defeat of Cornell in 1851, remember?) the following evolved from our feeble brain:

A few simple formulas to counteract the much publicized over-emphasis of football:

DIAMOND DRILLS SPEEDED UP AS COACH RETURNS

Ashmore Takes Over Reins Upon Return from Atlanta Basketball Tourney.

WHITEHEAD HITS HOMER

Brother of Captain Hits First Home Run of Season in Practice Game.

With the return of Coach Jim Ashmore from the Southern Conference basketball tournament, baseball practice took on a serious aspect. The period of conditioning is over, and from now on will begin the fight for the first string positions.

Although no official call has been issued for infielders and outfielders, several letter men and promising prospects have taken advantage of the warm weather to beat the call and have the jump on the other candidates who wait until next quarter before reporting.

The first practice game resulted in the two teams battling six innings to a 4-4 deadlock. The feature of the game was the season's first circuit blow—a long line drive to deep center by Lew Whitehead, which was good for the round trip. Extra base knocks were also garnered by Jim Dixon, Captain Burgess Whitehead, Paul Dunlap, and Billy Powell.

Although it is a bit too early to predict, several players are rapidly approaching season form. Of the pitchers, Lefty Mass, a transfer from New York University, Sam Scarboro, Jim Griffith, of last year's freshman squad, Gerald Parks, a veteran, have shown the best form to date. Piggy Potter, John Peacock, and Johnson, catchers, have been showing up well.

Jim Dixon, Paul Dunlap, Pete Wyrick, Billy Powell, Johnston, and Whitehead have been scooping them up all over the infield, while Lew Whitehead, Cloyd Blythe, Clyde McKinney, and Branch Paxton have been doing the same in the gardens.

FIRST OF STUDIO PROGRAMS TO BE GIVEN THIS WEEK

Playmakers Present Original Plays Thursday, Friday And Saturday.

The first studio productions of the year will be presented by the Carolina Playmakers at eight-thirty o'clock, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings. These productions are cast, directed, and mounted by the students in Samuel Selden's class in directing, and represent the initial efforts of the students in the field of independent production.

The three-night program will be divided into two parts. Thursday night, original one-act plays will be presented, several of which are being directed by the authors. Friday and Saturday nights, professional and royalty plays will comprise the evening's entertainment.

This is the first time in the history of dramatics at Carolina that the studio productions have been included in the regular series of the Playmakers' entertainment course.

The plays to be presented tomorrow night were writen in the English 31 class. The first play tomorrow was writen by Tom Loy and is entitled: A Penny for Your Thoughts. This will be followed by, There's a Nigger for You, a tragedy of negro life, written by Mary Griffith. Always a Bettin' Man by Tom Loy, is the next play on the program. A domestic comedy, My Business and My Wife, written by John Edwards, concludes the program for the night.

fast boys from 16 different Conference institutions, and the race may be anybody's if Farmer and Smith aren't at their peak.

Bowman of L. S. U., for instance, is an Olympic performer. Muddy Rule of V. P. I. discarded a baseball suit, donned a pair of track shoes and almost beat Farmer last year. Ade Won the Washington and Lee-Virginia indoor meet for the Generals this year, and Kinkelstein placed in the varsity division and Edwards won the freshman division of the Southern Indoor meet last year. Graydon and Barron are football speedsters from Tech, as are Aimmerman, Whatley and DeColigny, the latter a Conference hurdles champ, from Tulane. Fulmer of Duke, Owens of Georgia, Bradley of Alabama, and Carter and Butler of L. S. U. are other fast boys who must be counted very much in the running.

After watching the rookies in winter practice, where they have been shining consistently, it looks as if the Monogram team might need all their famous stars.

The Monograms won last year's game with a wide-open attack that netted a 45-6 victory, but this year they will find stiff opposition when they stack up against Strickland and Crane, tackles; Barclay, guard; Brandt, end; and McIver, center. These freshmen constitute a line having the power of a steam roller in low gear on the offense, and on the defense possessed of as great fragility and flexibility as the buttresses on the Brooklyn Bridge.

3. Do away with referees and all other officials; clear the field every time that a decision must be made and let the crowd settle it. In this way the team having the largest number of rooters is bound to win. This will encourage a larger attendance.

4. Take away the goal posts and obliterate the yard markers. Let each team have a goal at each end of the field. Then when someone runs the wrong way with the ball he won't be embarrassed.

5. Revise the scoring system so that a fumble will count ten points, a touchdown three points; slugging and clipping seven points each.

6. Move the stadium to the arboretum, thus making both accessible on moonlight nights.

Gallant Addresses Student Engineers

At the last meeting of the student branch of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers W. M. Gallant of Raleigh spoke to the members on the Westinghouse steam turbine. Gallant is field representative in Raleigh for the Westinghouse company and was in Chapel Hill to show a film explaining the turbine to the students here.

Before showing the film, Gallant gave a short talk on the construction of the steam turbine and on other phases of engineering which he thought would be of interest to the group. He touched on the subject of unemployment problems in the profession.

Comer Discusses Blue Ridge at Y Meeting

At the meeting of the freshmen and sophomore cabinets Monday night, H. F. Comer, secretary of the local Y. M. C. He especially stressed the fine way the race issue worked out, commenting on the fact that the Negroes, some thirty of whom were present, were treated without any discrimination at all except in the matter of rooming.

He also stressed the Y. M. C. A. Conference to be held at Blue Ridge this summer, asking that at least forty members attend if possible.

rally the youth of that country to the aid of conservative group.

Correspondents of the American press have given him such high praise that a tour was arranged, and he has been in the United States for the past few months lecturing to various groups over the country. At every occasion he has thrilled and delighted the public with his vivacity and poise. He apologizes for his age, but never for his opinions. Always his views do not meet with agreement, but that only makes them more interesting.

The Director of the Philadelphia Music Academy where he has lectured says, "Randolph Churchill is a keen debater, an extremely able speaker, and undoubtedly a genuine chip off the old Churchill block. I have seldom heard so young a man who is so able a speaker and so well informed."

In all the papers that comment on his lectures he receives the same high praise. The New York Times, the New York Evening World, Brooklin Eagle, Detroit Times, Minneapolis Tribune, and many other large papers in this country have expressed their hearty approval to him.

State's Oldest Negro Recalls Hard Times Worse Than in 1930

wounded beg to be killed; those down with plague and smallpox pray to die; he saw young boys and hired soldiers committing suicide when ordered into battle.

"Dere was plenty ob Confederate soldiers dat neber got buried atter dey got killed," says Uncle March. "Dey jes' laid out on de fields wid dey heads blowed off an' dey guts a-hangin' out an' jes' rotted lak de hosses, cause de libin' soldiers didn't hab no time ter bury dem. I has passed de battle fields an' seen dem a'lyin' dere rottin' an' de buzzards was atter dem.

"Den I has hope bury dem. We fought solid for twenty-four hours widout a drap ob water in de battel ob Sharpsburg an' when de guns hushed dey mouths dere was over 300 killed outen de 520 in de regiment. Dey was layin' so thick out dere dat I could walk on dem as fer as I could see an' not put mah foot ter de groun'. We had ter bury dem. We jes' digged a big long ditch an' drug dem dere an' slung dem in, den covered 'em wid blankets an' let de dirt fly. Dem blankets was throwed away. De soldiers was dead an' nobody knowed who dey was. We got cold atter dat."

Uncle March lost his rabbit's foot while shoveling dirt at Sharpsburg and he is sure that there was a "nigger in de woodpile" when he reached Gettysburg. He knows that hell broke loose there. Muskets fired at such a rapid rate that the ammution ran short an' Uncle March had to rob the dead of the cartridge boxes. Dying soldiers were robbed of clothing and even personal property. After three days of hard fighting the battle ended with a Confederated defeat and the regiment's loss of 223 more men, only seventy-seven filling the ranks at sound of assembly.

The intensive suffering among the soldiers during the bitter winter of 1863-64 still remains one of the most unpleasant memories of Uncle March's military career. The remainder of the half-starved and ragged regiment, then a part of General Stewart's brigade, frequently had nothing to eat for a whole week at a time. As the last resort horses and mules were taken from the ranks, killed and fed to the hungry men as steak and mule soup. The hides were used to make moccasins for the barefooted soldiers. The severe cold, temperature well down to zero, heavy rains, snow, and sleet greatly augmented the sufferings of the half-naked men stationed out on twenty-four hour picket duty.

"I know dey say slavery was wrong, but ole Lincoln, he ought ter paid de marsters fer dey slaves an' sot us free. Den dere wouldn't been all dat sufferin' an' killin'. Dere wouldn't been no kyarpet-baggers a-stealin' an' pilligin' an' rousin' de niggers. Dere wouldn't been no need fer de Ku Kluxes. But I reckons hit all had ter come, for de Lawd Jesus say dat we shall hear ob wars an' rumors ob wars, for all dese things mus' come ter pass, for nation shall rise agin nation an' kingdom agin kingdom, an' dere will be famines an' troubles an' earthquakes. Dat's right, shore."

For sixty one years, after two seasons as tenant farmer on his master's plantation, Uncle March made his living from the pulpit, serving as both pastor and evangelist. He has preached all over North Carolina, and has even been called to Indiana where he held Baptist camp meetings and converted forty people in one night. Great crowds flocked to hear him wherever he went; sometimes he preached for his white friends. He wore his beard full length to appear more like Christ and the Apostles and until two years ago it had never felt the blade of either scissors or razor. Aunt Lou, his sixty-five year-old wife, just "biled over" at the sight of his first shave and she still swears over the doings of these village barbers.

"Folks nowadays hain't lak dey used ter be," says Uncle March. "Dey done change since I come long, shore. De folks now thinks dere hain't nobody eber lived but demselves. De wimmin folks done cut dey purty long hair. Dey done started smokin' cigarettes an' a-wearin' pants. Ef yer don't believe dat git down yer Sears Roebuck catalog an' look fer yerself. De wimmin will be a-shavin' next, see ef dey don't. Hit's a wonder de men don't start wearin' dresses. Now dat hain't funny airy bit. Dresses would become de men.

"I tells yer de truth, we hain't got no real wimmin folks nowadays. Dey is all gals. Dey dresses lak gals, dey does lak gals, dey thinks lak gals. We hain't got no wimmin folks now dat's fitten ter raise our younguns. De ole maids done got so dey won't oben ride de bull kyarts lak dey use ter. Dey got ter ride de 'mobiles an' dese flyin' ships. Ef I libs long enuff I 'spects ter see dem ridin' burrowin' machines dat starts ter whirlin' an' den goes right straight down thru de earth ter China."

Uncle March prides himself on having more white friends than colored. The negroes dislike him, he says, because of his service in the Southern Army and the frankness with which he tells them of their sinfulness and shortcomings. He is intensely interested in the welfare of his race and wants to see his people live right and take advantage of their opportunities.

"Whether dey knows hit or not, de white man is de nigger's bes' friend. De white man, he understan' de colored man an' wants ter hope him. De white folks done hope us do a lot ob things. Dey gib us schools an' work an' encouragemint. Dey done hope us rise up from slavery an' we thanks dem wid all our heart.

"Now de nigger, he need ter do sumpin' wid what our white frien's done done for us. He need ter git mo' learnin' an' mo' 'ligion, sumpin' de young niggers hain't got. When I come long ef a slave got 'ligion he was done converted an' he had ter lib by de Bible er git a good lickin' ob 200 lashes 'crosst he bare back. We was scared ter lie den. But de young folks now, dey libs off'n lyin.' De mo' learnin' dey gits de less 'ligion dey's got."

The future of his race concerns him greatly and he says there is more need for a capable leader and the help of God than anything else at present. He believes that his people, with more education and development, will eventually want to withdraw from the United States and go to another land where they can form a new government of their own.

Uncle March would like to live another fifty years to see exactly what will happen in this old world and he says there is a possibility of his doing so, for many of his white friends have told him he'll live to see 150 and his family is noted for its longevity. His mother, Rhoda, native African, lived to be 112, his Uncle Caleb, 120; and his Aunt Hester, 96.

He hasn't the latest doubt that Li Chung Yun, the Chinaman claiming to be the oldest person in the world, is 252 years old.

Simplicity and temperance in everything are the keynotes in Uncle March's philosophy of long-living. He says that any man can live to be at least a hundred if he takes care of himself and doesn't overeat. He has never practiced dieting himself, but has always eaten simple food. He chews tobacco, smokes a pipe, dips snuff, and likes his coffee strong. Sickness has never given him any serious trouble, but he swears that corns and bunions have. His complexion is still good, his head white, and he doesn't wear false teeth.

The bare mention of monkergland operations as a means of adding years to one's life stirs the old man almost into a rage. It is the same as an insult and no visitor has further to go until Uncle March gives him a piece of his mind. "Dere hain't nothin' ter dat! I tells yer dere hain't nothin' ter dat! Dere hain't nairy a doctor gwine tamper wid me dat away. Naw Suh! Ef dey'd put dem monkey things inter me fer nothin', I'd tell 'em ter go ter de devil, dat dey hain't got no sense! Dey's crazy, dat's all.

"Dere hain't no such thing as old age. A man can be jes' as young as he want ter be. Ef he want ter be a ole grouch, den he can be dat. I feels young an' happy an' I is 106. I don't lak dem monken things! De Lawd's gwine let me lib long as He want me ter, den He gwine snatch me away. I don't mind dyin' but I shore do hates ter be dead so long."

If Uncle March could live his life all over again he says he would not change it one bit. He is proud of the fact that he was for 40 years one of Kenchen Taylor's slaves and he glories in telling of the good times he used to have with the white folks at the big house, Aunt Lou, his second wife, sits by the fireside every night and listens attentively to his oft-told tales of plantation days, how he was raised by the white folks and lived a life of leisure until the outbreak of the Civil War as nurse and playmate for his good master's six children, cooking occasionally in the big fireplace —stoves were unknown then; how he enjoyed going to the white church and sitting up in the gallery with the slaves; all the negroes, including his old mother, had a grand time serenading the big house on Christmas morning where egg nog was served them by his good "Missus"; best of all was the big feast and barn dance held in August after the crop was laid by. He can still hear the old-time tunes from his Uncle Caleb's tinpan banjo and negro mamies crooning lullabies to pickaninnies at summer twilight.

Economics 1 Deficiencies

All students who have E's in Economics 1 may remove them by passing satisfactorily the examination on that course which is to be given Thursday afternoon, March 12, at two-thirty o'clock in 309 Bingham. J. G. Evans, of the school of commerce has charge of this examination, and each student who has a deficiency in this course should see him before taking it.

SIMONDS TELLS OF UNIQUE TYPE OF SAW FACTORY

Head of Simonds Manufacturing Company Addresses Members Of Taylor Society.

Gifford K. Simonds, head of the Simonds Manufacturing Company, spoke to the Taylor Society yesterday on "The Simonds Windowless Factory." This factory which manufactures saws, saw files, and other tools, was built in less than a week.

The windowless factory has been built in an attempt to master all changeable conditions and no pains were spared to carry out this idea. The whole plant is under one roof, and although there are no partitions, no objectionable noises are made. The lighting fixtures are a combination of Cooper-Hewitt and incandescent lamps. The DuPont corporation laid the floors for the mill while the walls and ceiling are noise proof. The news of the day and music are given the employees over loud speakers placed at intervals over the building. The ventilation is regulated to resemble a "spring day" at all times. The Simonds organization has done everything that may in any way reduce outside influences.

According to Simonds the factory will pay for itself in two years. The philosophy is that whenever there is a new way to do a thing better, then you are wasting time by not taking up new methods or ideas, and the organization expects to increase its efficiency eighty per cent.

SAVILLE TO HELP IN RESEARCH ON WEATHER BUREAU

Appointed by American Engineering Council To Help Improve Present Service.

Last week the American Engineering Council appointed Thorndike Saville, professor of Hydraulic and Sanitary Engineering, as one of the four engineers from various parts of the United States who will make a study of the United States weather bureau, and present methods which will improve the present service rendered by that institution.

A new system of providing data for the use of hydraulic engineers is one of the improvements they will undertake to provide. The present methods used by the weather bureau have proved unsatisfactory for the ever increasing needs in that field. The committee will study the situation and present plans they consider more efficient. A large part of the work is to be done in connection with hydraulic undertakings such as flood control, water supply, and water power projects.

Professor Saville has for a long time been connected with the North Carolina department of conservation and development, and has compiled much data for that organization on hydraulic problems of the state. His latest study was on a remedy for the receding coast line along the Atlantic coast of this state. In this and many other similar problems concerning the state's water systems, both inland and coastal, Mr. Saville has done extensive work, and offered helpful solutions.

Graham To Address Alumni Gathering

The annual winter meeting of the Cumberland county alumni of the University of North Carolina is to convene tonight at Fayetteville, with President Frank Graham as the chief speaker.

The officers of this alumni club are—Frank Stedman, president; James S. Huske, vice-president; and Scott Russ, secretary-treasurer.

DI, PHI SOCIETIES ELECT OFFICERS

Phi Assembly Discusses Bill Favoring a More Adequate Infirmary.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Di senate Tuesday night officers were chosen for the spring quarter. All the officers were selected at this meeting with the exception of the president. K. C. Ramsay had already been chosen for this position at a previous meeting.

The following will take office with President Ramsay as a result of Tuesday's election: J. M. Little, critic; McBride Fleming-Jones, president pro-tem; Starlin Whittaker, sergeant-at-arms; Charles Rose, clerk.

All offices were filled as a result of a unanimous vote with the exception of the position of sergeant-at-arms. In this contest Whittaker defeated McNeil by a vote of 18 to 6.

A motion was passed by the senate which provided that henceforth all meetings of the senate would be held at seven instead of seven-fifteen o'clock.

A resolution was submitted by Senator Medford favoring the appropriation of thirty dollars to have three hundred copies of the Di's constitution published for the use of the members of the senate. This measure was passed by a large majority.

The Phi Assembly at its regular session Tuesday at seven fifteen o'clock elected officers for the spring quarter and considered a resolution favoring a more adequate infirmary. The new speaker, Egbert Haywood departed from the usual custom of procedure by with holding his vote on the infirmary measure after the assembly vote had resulted in a tie. The fate of the bill will be determined at the next meeting of the assembly when the speaker casts the deciding vote.

In the selection of officers the Phi elected the first member of the opposite sex to serve as an officer when it chose Virginia Douglas for the position of speaker pro-tem by a unanimous vote. Other officers are as follows: William E. Uzzell, sergeant-at-arms; Lee Greer, reading clerk, and Philip Sassar, assistant treasurer. The ways and means committee is composed of Representative Wilkinson, chairman; and Representatives Campen and Brown.

The resolution, Resolved: That, provisions should be made for a more adequate infirmary to be used in case of an epidemic, was the cause of much discussion, in which nearly every member took part.

The new speaker, Egbert Haywood will give his inaugural address at the next meeting of the Assembly, which will be held at the first of next quarter.

GEORGIA DEFEATS U. N. C. DEBATERS

Audience Acts as Judges on Question of Free Trade Policy.

The debate team of the University was defeated by the University of Georgia in the decision of the audience Tuesday night in Gerrard hall on the question, Resolved: that the United States should adopt a policy of free trade.

In 1897, the University of North Carolina debated the University of Georgia for the first time. This was the first team that Carolina ever debated. H. G. Connor and D. B. Smith were the Carolina's representatives in the discussion of the adoption of the Swiss referendum in the United States.

In the debate Tuesday night, Georgia affirmed that the United States' world leadership was due to our protective policy and that it protected farmers as well as industrialists.

The Carolina debaters maintained that the world leadership of the United States was in spite of the tariff and that the tariff is discriminating in favor of industrial producers against consumers.

Carolina was represented by J. C. Williams and Clyde Shreve, and the University of Georgia by Fred B. Smith and McCarthy Crenshaw.

German Professor On Visit Here

Dr. Gustav Plesow, of the University of Tubingen, is a visitor in Chapel Hill, and for several weeks will be the guest of Dr. E. W. Zimmerman of the school of commerce, who was a class mate of his at the University of Berlin when both were undergraduate students.

At his own university, Dr. Plesow is a professor of Americana, a subject which deals with American culture, life, and education. Here at the University he plans to carry on his study of American social and university life. Dr. Plesow is very much interested in the organization of the university.

NEW DRAMAS TO BE GIVEN TODAY

Four One Act Plays Will Be Presented This Evening at 8:30 In Playmakers Theatre.

This evening at 8:30 at the Playmakers Theatre, four new and locally-written one-act dramas will be given. The general public will be admitted, and season tickets are good for the occasion.

Tom Loy's "Penny for your Thoughts," the curtain-raiser, is a rapid, twenty-five-minute bit of life in the subjective, experimenting with dialogue composed entirely of Eugene O'Neill asides, which give rise to a series of more-or-less-fortunate mistaken-identity situations. In the cast with the author are Bill Long, Mack Pickard, Elsa Craig, and Becky Daniel.

The seriously realistic note of the evening will be struck by "There's a Nigger for You," Mary Griffith's tragedy of shiftlessness, concerning the effect of a half-witted son on a tubercular wife's family. Charles Elledge has directed the piece, and Miss Griffith takes one of the leading roles. She is supported by Patty Jordan, Pat Lumpkin, Wilbur Dorset, Alonzo Kornegay, and Homer Triplett.

Donald Rulfs, the director of "Always a Bettin' Man," another of Mr. Loy's efforts, has built a set recreating the roof of an insane asylum in Maryland, where the action takes place between Mr. Elledge, an inmate and John Edwards, a carpenter.

Mr. Edwards, as it happens, is also the author of the program's final show, a breezy domestic discussion called "My Business and My Wife." Ellen Stewart is the director; her players are Janet Browne, John Sehon, Robert Langford, Virginia Love, and Edgar Hazelwood.

The present group of productions will be continued tomorrow evening with "Mansions," "The Constant Lover," and "Fancy Free"; and on Saturday evening with "The Rising of the Moon," "Cocaine," and "Suppressed Desires"—all professional plays.

Bruce Barton Considers Going To College A Fad, Like Backgammon

"Going to college is a current fad, like Backgammon," said Bruce Barton, prominent author, contributor to various widely-known magazines, and chairman of Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborn, well-known advertising agency, in an interview recently granted the Princetonian.

"Many people," Mr. Barton continued, "are attending college simply because it is the thing to do. Although a great number of these people shouldn't be in college, the fact that they are there doesn't necessarily ruin their chances in life. People who would be ruined by college would be ruined anyway. As we have been told, 'college doesn't make fools, it develops them.'

"An education is no one-way proposition. Many, with the opinion that the sum total of human happiness would be considerably increased if everyone attended college, seek higher education with the hope of a keener appreciation of the finer things. While a college experience undoubtedly augments one's powers for enjoyment and appreciation, at the same time it intensifies his faculties for suffering."

Mr. Barton explains that many people he has known entered college without the necessary amount of potentiality to comprehend the true value and significance of things discovered during the course of a college career. These individuals have left far less fortunate than they entered, for their tastes have been enhanced to such a degree that they are rendered incapable of seeing clearly along many different lines.

"I am not an enthusiast about the courses in college that are presumed to fit one for a job," added Mr. Barton. "Of the subjects I took up in college, Greek and Mathematics, neither having any direct bearing on the advertising business, have helped me most. These subjects compel one's mind to attack a difficult mental operation and think it through to its logical conclusion.

"The mind is exercised and hardened only by accurate hard work. Just being exposed to all

House Committee Favors Bill To Consolidate State Colleges

Fleming-Jones To Be Di Member on Council

McBride Fleming-Jones was appointed by President J. M. Little of the Dialectic Senate as the representative of the Senate on the Debate Council for the coming school year.

Fleming-Jones is a member of this year's debate council and has participated in several debates this season, and will make the trip to Boston this spring vacation. He is a member of Tau Kappa Alpha, national debating fraternity, and was elected president pro-tempore of the Senate for the spring quarter at the meeting Tuesday night.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS GIVEN TO LIBRARY

Rev. Hunter of Raleigh Is Donor Of Sixteenth Century Liturgical Works.

The books being displayed on the lectern given the University library by Reverend A. B. Hunter of Raleigh, which may now be seen in the rotunda of the main reading room on the second floor, are two sixteenth century liturgical works from the Hanes Collection.

One is a Graduale Romanum, printed in Venice in 1580 by Peter Liechtenstein. It contains the words and music for the chants used in the celebration of the Roman Catholic mass, printed in red and black with frequent large wood-cut initial letters. The musical notation seems unusual to modern eyes, since it uses only four bars instead of the customary five. This is a characteristic of plain-song music.

Peter Liechtenstein was a nephew of another Venetian printer and came originally from Cologne. His uncle, Hermann Liechtenstein, was a partner of Johannes Hamman, who specialized in the publication of liturgical works.

The other book is a psalter, or book of Psalms arranged for use in the Roman Catholic service. It was printed in Venice in 1563 by the heirs of Luc Antonio Giunta, the last of a celebrated family of Italian printers who flourished in the latter part of the fifteenth century. This work, too, is printed in red and black with some plain-song music. The text of the Psalms is in a fine large black-letter.

Representative Of W. T. Grant Company To Be Here Friday

H. T. Carmichael, representative of W. T. Grant Company, is to be in Chapel Hill this Friday to interview seniors who are interested in becoming connected with that organization.

Henry Johnston, Jr., of the vocational department of the University, has requested that all seniors who wish to make appointments with Carmichael see him at his office in 204 South building before Friday.

W. T. Grant Company has a chain of 609 stores, located throughout the United States; their chief need at present is men to manage these branches. Booklets may be obtained from Henry Johnston explaining the types of work, chances for promotion, and the training which is required for a position with this firm.

GRAHAM, BROOKS AND FOUST ARE AT DISCUSSION

Graham Proposes That Group of Experts Look Into Matter And Make Report.

The House committee on reorganization Tuesday night voted unanimously to favorably report the amended bill providing for unifying the University of North Carolina, North Carolina College for Women, and N. C. State College into one University of North Carolina.

Although Dr. E. C. Brooks, president of State College offered two amendments which were rejected by the committee, he does not oppose the consolidation of the three schools.

Dr. Julius I. Foust, president of N. C. C. W., expressed the belief that "speaking as a North Carolinian and not as a college president, the bill is fundamentally right and ought to pass, as I believe it will."

Frank Porter Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, described his attitude as "an open mind with a question mark." He offered an amendment, which was adopted by the committee after being endorsed by Dr. Foust, Josephus Daniels, and other speakers, which strengthens the section authorizing the employment of experts in the field of higher education to make a study of the entire matter.

Another amendment proposed by Representative Seawell of Lee, was adopted, which read: "That the final location of any school, department, or division of work now located at any of the three institutions shall be subject to the study and recommendation of the experts and the commission without prejudice by any provision of this act."

The measure, as drawn, pro-

FRESHMAN SMOKER POSTPONED UNTIL SPRING QUARTER

The executive committee of the freshman class announced yesterday afternoon that the first freshman smoker of the year will be in Swain hall immediately after the spring holidays. The committee stated that it was impossible to secure a speaker that would interest the class this quarter.

Wallace Wade, Duke coach, was first asked to speak, but declined saying that he would be glad to come over after he was settled at Duke.

Alfred E. Smith, Democratic nominee for the presidency in 1928 was asked when it was learned that he would speak to the legislature, but he also was unable to come as his plans called for only a few hours stop in Raleigh. The plan was to invite him as guest of honor and after the smoker to have him speak to the student body, but this had to be foregone when his plans were learned. President Graham, "Red" Green, student union president, and President Minor, of the freshman class, each wrote Mr. Smith extending him an invitation to come to Chapel Hill.

The executive committee announced also that three smokers would be held during the spring quarter with Coach Wade and Governor Gardner among the speakers if possible.

Apropos Of Snow

Yesterday's snow and promises of continued cold weather provides an ideal setting for Saturday's football game between the Monograms and Rookies. These games, climaxes of winter practice seasons, have grown in popularity since their institution by Coach Collins several years ago.

Time has improved the quality of football offered and then those who like to attach sentiment to college careers go out to watch the heroes of past seasons gallop out of the picture. Newcomers provide the center of interest for coaches. The veterans are going and the supply of material must be replenished. So we all have different motives for attending the games.

We are apt to watch a good game Saturday. With a bunch of hard running rookies behind a fair line matched against a number of veterans who although slightly out of condition are smart enough to give the youngsters a good time, the game should be interesting. Of course we're going to see some of the idols of yesterday develop feet of clay, but after all that's only part of life. And we're going to have new idols to replace them after the game. So it goes—a college hero yesterday, a veteran against a rookie today and merely a name tomorrow.

Never having eulogized the football team following the close of the past season, and preferring not to do so three months late, we offer this editorial as evidence of our belief that although uneulogized football players remain fairly constantly the source of much discussion and some writing.

The Proposed Consolidation

The proposal to consolidate the University, State, and N. C. C. W. is one of great importance to North Carolina and should be given careful consideration by everyone interested in the future of higher education in the state. In a consideration of this proposal one should put aside any personal or sentimental reasons which he may have on either side, and should consider this proposal in the light of its effects on the system of higher education in the future. This is not a problem which can be easily solved, there are too many factors involved. Even if it were assured that the consolidation would be a benefit to the educational system there would be a great many who would oppose it for personal reasons. Then the fact that there is some doubt as to the benefit of the proposal serves to further complicate the matter. The proponents argue very strongly in favor of the consolidation and advance many points which they consider sufficient to allay any doubt as to its benefit.

Governor Gardner uses as his strongest argument that the consolidation will promote both economy and efficiency. He points out that it is very expensive to support more than one graduate school, and furthermore there is at present useless and wasteful duplication in the departments of instruction. To remedy this situation he proposes the following: first, that the three colleges be merged into one institution, known as the University of North Carolina but the present names be preserved, and the separate campuses be maintained; second, that a new board of 100 trustees operate all three schools; third, that a commission of nine members be appointed, three of which shall be the presidents of the institutions, to work out a scheme for the unification of executive control of the institutions and for the effective consolidation of the component parts of the university.

It will certainly do no harm to have a committee investigate the possibilities of consolidation and if that committee is able to work out a consolidation scheme that "will promote efficiency and economy" without lowering the standards of any one of the institutions, it will certainly be a progressive and beneficial move to consolidate the three institutions. However the proposal now is mainly one to unify the executive control of the institutions and in what way this will promote efficiency and economy, and eliminate duplication it is difficult to see. Georgia has such a unified executive control and apparently it has proved no great success there from the efforts to do away with it. The fact that there are three separate plants at Raleigh, Chapel Hill, and Greensboro makes it extremely difficult for any real consolidation to take place. Any movement to eliminate as much duplication as possible will aid in economy and efficiency, but why call it consolidation? It seems that a thorough survey of the three institutions with the subsequent elimination of as much duplication as possible would be much better than a consolidation which can be a consolidation only in name.—J. C. S.

Like A Pack Of Asses

For appearing to be a communist, Henry Fuller spent 36 hours in a Memphis jail at the request of the Memphis police department. And Chapel Hill has risen in wrath and anger against this outrage of justice. Indignant letters and telegrams of protest have been sent to the governor of Tennessee; newspaper accounts of great length dealing with the incident have appeared; and now Henry Fuller's friends are urging him to bring suit against the city of Memphis.

It is right and commendable that the people of Chapel Hill should stand up and decry the justice that throws a man into prison because of his apparent political opinions. But Chapel Hill does not stir out of its lethargy when people are beaten and tortured in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Danville, Marion, Gastonia, and other localities. Chapel Hill does not cry out in protest because hundreds—perhaps thousands—of innocent persons are rotting away in jails scattered about the country.

But Henry Fuller was a graduate of the University of North Carolina, and well liked by many people in this community. We know his gentle nature and fine character, and we know how he must have felt in jail. But we do not know the many others who, being sincere in their political beliefs, have also been thrown into prison. And because they are not close to us, we do not trouble ourselves to look for any mis-carriage of justice. What do we care for them anyway? For all we care, they can all be in jail.

So we do not protest when we hear of more innocent persons being put in jail. And by our not protesting, we make a travesty of justice, and aid in imprisoning more men and women because of their political beliefs. Henry Fuller, however, is one of us. That is an entirely different situation. And now we are braying our heads off like a pack of asses because Henry Fuller spent 36 hours in jail.—P. L.

OPEN FORUM

The Strange "Playthings"

Saturday night, the Playmakers presented as an experimental production, Anthony Buttitta's "Playthings." It is undoubtedly the finest mental stimulator that Chapel Hillians have encountered in sometime. For the possibility of experiencing the supreme thrill of an "intellectual moment" it almost rivals one of Professor Williams' logic lectures. It is the one occurrence outside of athletic contests that has created profound interest among the students. It is one of the few incidents that have taken place during the last three years which has caused collegians to hold polemic sessions of an intellectual nature.

Most students and some instructors who saw the play evinced a desire to see it again. Many people who did not see the play are damning the circumstances that kept them away. That need not be. Why not have it presented again? That would enable anyone who wishes to take advantage of the opportunity to witness one of the finest spectacles ever seen on the Playmaker stage.

Taking the actors into consideration, since it was only an experimental play, the characters were given the Playmaker stage only four times on which to rehearse! After many difficult pages were memorized the players had to resort to Gerrard hall, lecture halls and even private apartments to rehearse. They feel that if they were allowed to present it again, this time they could offer it in a more highly polished and more smoothly running sequence. And the pity of going thru the hardship of producing the play with only a single presentation!

A petition is being circulated about the campus by a large group of students who are convinced of the merits of the play and concerned over its reproduction. Members of the psychology, philosophy, and English faculty have already stated their willingness—nay, their anxiety to sign the petition and to solicit Professor Koch for a second and perhaps a third offering.

The petition is now in the possession of "Hinkey" Hendlin and those interested in signing may see him. Copies of the petition will soon be circulated over various parts of the campus.

H. HOWELL HENDLIN.

With Contemporaries

Universities—American

In his recently and widely circulated critique of American, English and German universities, Dr. Abraham Flexner, international authority on education, has done more than dip a tentative forefinger into the melting pot of American educational trends and theories. He has dipped out an honest ladleful for examination. Dr. Flexner defines the university as an institution whose raison d'etre is the pursuit of truth, the solution of problems, and the critical appreciation of achievement. Under the terms of this generous definition, the liberal college is undifferentiated from the university, so that in Dr. Flexner's carefully considered criticism there is much that strikes home.

Primarily, Dr. Flexner finds that the national emphasis on acquisition has left its impress on the educational system. There are too many students in universities today who sacrifice broad and deep intellectual understanding to learn administrative tricks. And, in general, universities have yielded to these transient and immediate demands for information that can be realized upon and have needlessly made bargain-counters and public service stations of themselves by the institution and emphasis of practical and technical subjects, in this way overlapping the function of the graduate school.

An offshoot of the generic American urge for acquisition is the desire to get ahead. The average undergraduate is more desirous of preeminence in social than intellectual fields, and regards college mostly as a place to make friends and contacts. Thus the accent on the social motive has lowered the intellectual level of American education.

Dr. Flexner opposes the point system as a basis for graduation, by virtue of which the undergraduate—when he has accumulated enough units and consumed enough time in the process—receives his diploma and his college education in a lump. Broad intellectual effort is impossible under this system because of the superficiality with which the average student dips into a large number of mostly unrelated subjects. Nor does Dr. Flexner regard the selective system effective for the reason that it is impossible for a college to know what pursuits, traits and abilities each applicant may wish to develop, and accept or refuse him on that basis. We shall not rub salt into old wounds by mentioning Dr. Flexner's views on American over-emphasis of sport, or professorial salaries.

Dr. Flexner's conception of an ideal educational institution goes far beyond the present system, and, in fact, starts where it leaves off. It is "a free society of mature persons animated by intellectual purposes and left to pursue their own ends in their own way in an atmosphere of simplicity and tranquillity." These comments by an authority of Dr. Flexner's reputation are well-worth open-minded consideration.—Daily Dartmouth.

Exams Again

Much has been written in these columns on the subject of final examinations. Their total abolition has been advocated and powerful reasons advanced for this decision. Alternatives have been named among them is the solution to the problem—monthly tests.

This system, it is thought, would be by far superior to that of finals. Its principal advantage lies in the fact that it eliminates last minute cramming—an affliction to the majority of students and a bogey always warned against by the professors. According to an American teacher who expressed himself recently in a college publication: — "Eliminate the cramming that is done by students a week before their examinations and you eliminate one of the deepest rooted evils in our modern system of education." —an expression with which we cannot help but agree.

This proposed system has the special advantage of teaching the student not only his subject but also the manner in which to write exams. If he fails in one test he profits by his experience when writing the following one.

Again, when failing in a final, the student is forced to take a supplementary—a process which involves a great amount of work and late hours and does very little to educate the candidates. When, however, a student fails in one or two monthly tests it does not necessarily mean that he has lost his credit for the year as is the case with finals. He merely becomes convinced that he knows very little about the subject and straightway gets down to work for the next one. —The Minnesota Daily.

Higher Education

Another article has been written on the ever-entertaining subject of higher education as it is purveyed to the public of England, the United States and Germany. The writer, in a popular periodical, has faint praise for the system followed in Germany, little regard for the vaunted educational traditions of England and nothing but scathing criticism for the United States. He says nothing of such hybrid growths as the colleges of Canada.

There is but one point where we might take issue with the writer, and that is where he claims for the United States unquestioned pre-eminence in medicine. He states than an appendix victim is safer in Kalamazoo than a sufferer from a common cold in any part of the British Empire. The Medical faculties of Edinburgh, McGill and Toronto may have some reply to make.

There can be no doubt that technical instruction is too much a part of American college administration. One otherwise reputable university gives a degree in Hotel Management. Another considered the advisability of establishing a degree in Glass Blowing. Vassar has a course which masquerades under the euphemistic title of "euthentics" in which the girls learn all about home management. In many schools the psychology department seems to run riot. Courses are given in which the work includes tickling babies and timing their laughter on a stop-watch. Ph.D. theses are written and accepted on such subjects as "Measurement of Ninth Grade Pupils' Spine Curvature."

And McGill is not altogether blameless in the matter of freak courses. To on outsider the announcement of the School of Physical Education would be decidedly funny with its "advance basketball" and its "ice hockey —two periods in the second term." But the best of them all comes from a mid-western college which asks its students to consider "The Bacterial Content of Undershirts!"—McGill Daily.

Quarterly Review Praises N. C. Books On Changing South

In the last issue of the South Atlantic Quarterly, J. Fred Rippy, professor of history at Duke University, wrote an article concerning the present condition of the South entitled The South Examines Itself in which he recommends among a list of books, five which might be a valuable resource to those interested in the South's present condition. The University of North Carolina Press takes credit for the publishing of the five books.

The books mentioned are: Welfare Work in the Mill Village by Harriet L. Herring, of the department of research in social science; Some Southern Cotton Mill Workers by Jennings J. Rhyne, assistant professor of sociology at the University of Oklahoma; Rupert P. Vance, research associate, Human Factors in Cotton Culture. King Cotton is Sick by Claudius T. Murchison, of the school of commerce here; and Income and Wages in the South by Clarence Heer, of the commerce school.

Many Records Due To Be Shattered As 480 Participate In Meet

Indoor Games Here Saturday to Draw Cream of Dixie Collegiate Athletes.

MAY BREAK HIGH JUMP

Dopesters Agree Race Will Be Close; Many Prominent Entrants in Large Field.

The dopesters may differ on the proposition as to whether Tulane, Washington and Lee, North Carolina, V. P. I. or whoozis is going to win the Southern Conference Indoor Games here Saturday night, but regardless, they agree on one thing.

That's the fact that quite a few records are going to be shattered like so much china. Any quantitative and qualitative analysis of the field entered indicates that.

Sixteen Conference teams, five non-conference teams, twelve freshman teams and fourteen scholastic teams will compete in the four divisions—more than 480 competitors in all. The meet is drawing not only the cream of the South's Collegians, but also Harold Osborn, world champ in the outdoor high jump, who is going to shoot to regain his indoor record. Osborn jumped 6 feet 6 just the other night but lost the record to George Spitz, who went 6 feet 7.

There may easily be a new Conference indoor high jump record. In this, the only Conference event to be concluded in the afternoon, Bagby of North Carolina and Bostick of South Carolina, who set the record at 5 feet 11 1-8 last year, will both be back, plus Rivers, a Washington and Lee soph who has been doing 6 feet, and other stars.

The pole vault to be run off at 7 o'clock, is likewise. Arnold of North Carolina turned in the sensational performance of last year's meet when he set the indoor record up to 12 feet 7, but the mark may easily fall. Arnold may see to that, or Dickens, Georgia's outdoor champ last year, or Ruble of North Carolina, or Yawn of L. S. U., or any of a number of other star vaulters.

Farmer of North Carolina and Smith of Alabama, two old rivals, would be a pair of potential record breakers in any dash, but the sixty-yard sprint, oddly enough, is quite unlikely to see a new mark hung up. That's because Farmer set the record last year at 6.4 seconds, just .1 second slower than the world record .

New marks are quite likely in all the middle and distance races for the competitors include such flying speedsters as Shepard, Southern indoor champ of W. & L. in the 440; Williams, former Southern outdoor champ of W. & L. in the 440; Klamke, L. S. U. ace; McGinn, of State, Southern outdoor champ in the 880; Wells, Tulane, ranking miler in the South; and Simon and Lauck and Jensen, distance aces of Duke, Virginia and North Carolina, respectively.

The shot is sure to see the present indoor record of 42 feet 10 1-2 inches shattered. That's because the competitors will include Oelkers, Tulane's Southern outdoor record holder; Cox, Mississippi A. & M.'s Southern champ of last year, along with such other potential 45-foot heavers as Swart, V. P. I.; Coleman, Auburn; and Stevens, Washington and Lee.

Now there's a camera that takes clear pictures at a range of 250 miles, so the general staff can get some good action snapshots next time.

Intercollegiate Sports

Seven University of Washington baseball managers perspired and grunted in the sun, weilding shovels and picks in an apparent effort to excavate the varsity baseball diamond. Curious campus news hounds ventered to question the energetic managers as to the incentive for such obviously exhaustive labor.

Reportial investigation at length yielded the information that the nines' lucky penny, lying buried under the home plate for several years was being sought after.

As repeated digging seemed to no avail, the seven abandoned their task and departed. Head Manager Wirker paused to kick a clod of dirt viciously and there lay the penny. Washington's baseball future was secure.

Keen is the rivalry between basketball and track managers at the University of Southern California. In the heat of jealousy the former group has challenged the latter to a contest in any kind of sport.

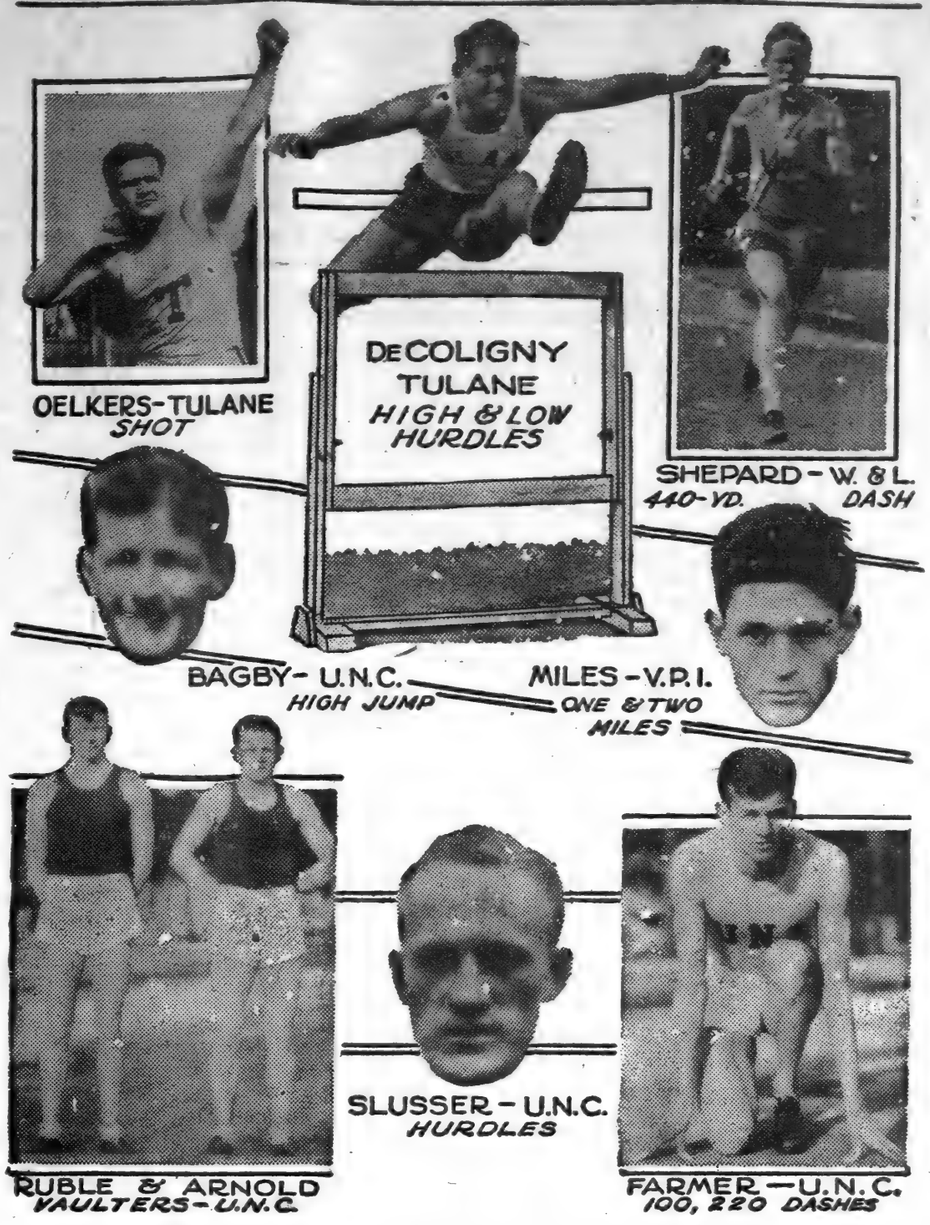
Acceptance of the head gridiron coaching post at the University of California by "Nancy Bill" Bill Ingram and unpleasantness experienced in a recent visit in Los Angeles may bring about the rupture of athletic relations between Notre Dame University and the University of California. Ingram, an old friend of Rockne's is the new head of the Bear football team, and on this information, news mongers base the conclusion that the South Bend institution's 1932 schedule may feature a game with U. C. in place of that with U. S. C.

Unsportsmanlike reception of basketball decisions by student rooters has received a great deal of editorial comment at Yale, Princeton, Pennsylvania, and Columbia campus publications.

Said The Alumni News, Columbia University news organ on the matter, "Time will temper the unconscious antagonism spectators have for basketball officials . . . in the long run, no doubt the booing and hissing will subside.

TULANE OUT FOR INDOOR HONORS

Greenies Serve Notice That They Will Be Out To Take Title Saturday.



Tulane's Greenies from down New Orleans way have served official notice that they'll be out for the title at the Southern Conference Indoor Games, but consensus of opinion is that the Greenies will know they've been in a fight before they take the cup away from the Tin Can here Saturday night.

Sixteen Southern Conference teams will have quite a lot to say whether Tulane sees its ambition fulfilled. Washington & Lee, in particular, will do a lot of arguing.

The Generals have every point winner from last year except Sandfifer, who got second place and three points in the dash and who ran on the first-place relay team. Deducting for Mr. Sandfifer, they are about 25 points strong in veterans, for it is remembered Washington & Lee nosed out North Carolina 29-27 for the title.

SOUTHERN TRACK STARS TO GATHER AT CHAPEL HILL

Over 200 High Schools Enter Debating Contest

Over 200 high schools have entered the annual triangular debating contest, which will take place in April. The preliminary debates are scheduled for April 3, while the finals will be at the University on the sixteenth and seventeenth of the month.

The query is resolved: That immediate independence should be granted the Phillipines.

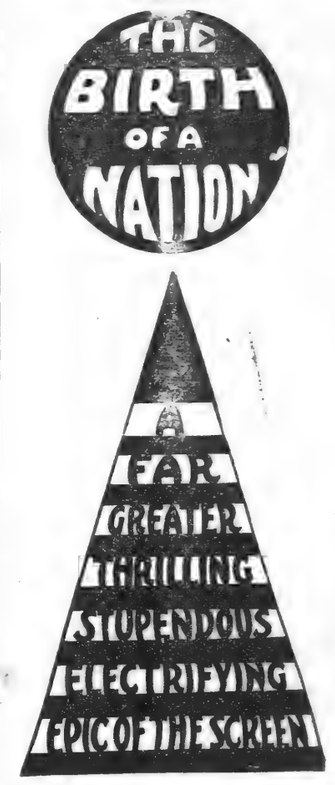
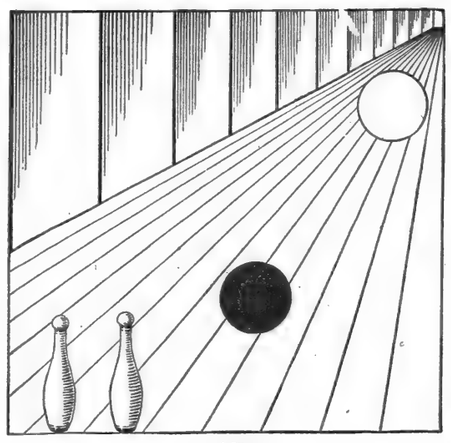
The infirmary list for yesterday increased in number by some five or eight persons and is as follows: Marion Tatem, A. O. Conway, E. C. Wall, W. H. Karle, Lucy Austin, Ida Curry, S. G. Clark, John Way, C. M. Garrison, W. F. Armstrong, Alma Lane, R. L. Bernhart, W. J. Jenkins, Henry C. Thomas, and R. A. Sisk.

Charlotte Wins



The State Championship high school basketball game between Charlotte and Raleigh high schools in the Tin Can last night was won by Charlotte 19-12.



Jacobs, Raleigh guard sank a foul shot which put his team in the lead at the beginning. In the second quarter, however, Charlotte's offense got started and they rolled up eleven points to the Capital City boy's one.

In the second half Raleigh outscored their opponents ten points to eight, but could not overcome Charlotte's lead.

Jim McCachren, Charlotte's captain and brother of Dave McCachren, captain of the Tar Baby team, was high scorer of the game with seven points; Hatcher and Aither also played well for the visitors, and Rand was high scorer for the losers with six points.

COLLEGE POETRY TO BE PUBLISHED

Henry Harrison, New York Publisher to Edit "American College Verse."

Because of the rapid growth of American college and university poetry in the last few decades, Henry Harrison, the New York publisher, has decided to publish an anthology called American College Verse.

This publication will give student writers a chance to print their poetry, and all students who desire to write poetry for the issue should communicate promptly with the publishing house so that they may be sent full details. The anthology will be edited by Harrison himself, and illustrated by Charles Cullen. Students should address their correspondence to Henry Harrison, Publisher, 27 East 7th Street, New York, and when they write, they are requested to mention the college which they attend.

To encourage student writers to submit poetry, prizes of twenty-five, fifteen, and ten dollars will be awarded to the authors of the three best poems selected by a distinguished board of judges.

Harrison's work published in over 100 journals in the United States, Canada, England and France has won for him wide critical praise. In addition to being a critic of poetry, he is author of Myself Limited, a book of poems; edits the annual Grub Street Book of Verse, as well as several other anthologies; and publishes the monthly magazine, Poetry World.

Charles Cullen, who will illustrate the American College Verse, has illustrated Countee Cullen's books, and Harrison's Grub Street annual. His art has won wide acclaim in many prominent journals including The American Mercury, Pasadena Star-News, Toledo Times, Newark News, Spokane Review, and the Syracuse Post-Standard.

Scientists Doubt Jericho's Walls Fell

Paris, March 3, 1931.—The staid French Academy of Science has decided that Victor Hugo's rather fantastic story of how the famed walls of Jericho crumbled under the resonance of seven days of trumpeting is not in keeping with science. Without denying that Joshua's army trumpeted as loud as its lungs permitted the academy doubts if tone can crumble a stone wall.

The academy also decided to send French scientists with Professor Carstang of the University of Liverpool in a final effort to fix definitely the date of the fall of Jericho and the entry of the Jewish army into Palestine.

Professor Carstang has found indications in the ruins of Jericho, which he exposed to the academy and which permit him to believe that the walls of the town were built 18 centuries before the Christian era. He fixes the fall of Jericho at about 1400 B. C.

He bases his estimate on ceramic objects found in the ruins, and has proved that not one set of walls, but double ramparts, surrounded Jericho. He leaves soon to continue his researches.

The Bible devotes chapters to the capture of Jericho by the Israelites on their first entry into Canaan, its destruction, Joshua's curse on the rebuilder, and its flourishing again, but the historian forgot to mention any dates.

The girls' basketball team of Chapel Hill high school will play an independent team composed of high school graduates, tonight at eight o'clock in the little Tin Can.

MATINEE SHOWS TUXEDOED RIDER

By Otto Steinreich

A sight almost as strange as Washington Irving's Headless Horseman or the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse galloping through the night met the sight of interested onlookers in the dormitories of the lower quadrangle Saturday afternoon.

A gentleman completely attired, presumably for attending the law fraternities' tea-dance, was seen pacing a coal black steed with a white star on his forehead around the open ground in front of the dormitories.

The sight of a man dressed in a tuxedo astride an animal, which was chosen with singular good taste as it synchronized beautifully with the raiment of its rider, is an unusual enough occurrence without the fact that a drenching rain was falling during the entire time that the incident was taking place.

Perhaps the youth was merely exerting some of the much talked of individuality, but it was the general opinion of the spectators that inebriety was more likely the cause for the queer actions of an otherwise entirely conventional boy.

Illiteracy Committee Sponsors Radio Talks

The National Advisory Committee on illiteracy is conducting a radio program which began February 18 includes five speakers from that date to April 8.

The purpose of the program is to interest and enlist the public thoroughly in the campaign to blot out illiteracy. The hour for the speakers is at five-thirty for all except the concluding speaker who will make his address at nine-thirty p. m.

The first speaker on the program was Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, chairman of the executive committee, who broadcasted over WABC from New York. Next came Lorado Taft whose speech reached the public over WBBM from Chicago. Dr. John H. Finley will make an address next Monday over WABC and Alfred K. Stern's message March 23 will be heard from Chicago. Concluding the group of addresses will be one by Honorable Ray Lyman Wilbur, chairman of the National Advisory Committee, to be delivered from WMAL in Washington April 8.

"Proconian" Appears

The latest issue of the Proconian, local high school paper, has recently been published carrying seven full pages. Several new columns appeared in this edition: the first of a series of thumb-nail sketches, an open forum column entitled "Them's My Sentiments," and a general news column. This is the third issue of the paper that has come out this year.

National College Newspaper Association Plans To Expand

Several college press associations have discussed the possibilities of a national organization of college newspapers.

There are thirty college press associations operating in different sections of the United States. The services of these associations vary from round table discussions once a year to elaborate news services that continue throughout the year. News and editorial contests, exchange of sport write-ups and pictures, and the syndicating of articles written by prominent alumni members are examples of other activities.

During the past three years membership in press associations has increased to such an extent that now nearly every college newspaper is associated with one. At some colleges the student paper is a member of two or three associations. This illustrates the eagerness of editors and business managers to get together for the purpose of discussing mutual problems and to learn the most recent developments in their field of activity.

It is surprising to know that there is no national organization with whom the thirty regional associations may work in helping to spread the advancement of college papers. The result is that we find considerable duplication of effort and frequent over lapping of territories.

Thus far, college newspapers have shown the greatest interest in the formation of a national organization. Many of the state press associations include annuals, comics, and newspapers. Perhaps the plan for a national organization could be made to include all college publications. A federation of college press associations appeals to some while others believe the organization would be more practical if confined to newspapers.

In certain areas where there is more than one college press association it has been found difficult to maintain co-operation. If college papers may become members of more than one association it is sometimes doubtful whether there is enough variation in the activities of the associations to warrant membership. Those papers belonging to more than one association find the conventions occasionally conflict so that they cannot always take an active part in each organization. The writer knows of one area where college press associations seem to have reached the saturation point. The result is that the interest of the colleges in this area is divided so that no one of the four associations is particularly strong.

An ideal national organization would have the following advantages:

1. Membership representative of college papers throughout the United States and possibly Canada.

2. Duplication of work reduced.

3. Efficiency increased by allowing local associations more time at their conventions to deal with more specific and detail problems in the local areas.

4. Services greater than those being performed could be developed.

5. Research problems could be carried on successfully and the results made available to all colleges.

6. Organization consistent with the present improvements in college publications.

It would not be the object of the national organization to replace the existing college press associations. The most ambitious of the associations realize that it would be impossible to undertake all of the activities proposed and expect to carry them out successfully.

No detail plan of organization has been prepared. The possibilities of the organization will be considered from the standpoint of providing each of its members with a better means of co-operating and exchanging ideas so that the general advancement of college publications may be continued.—The Epsilog.

Term of Average College Prexy Is Only Five Years

Investigation by the Survey of Land Grant Colleges and Universities recently completed by the United States office of Education, department of the Interior, show that the average college president is fifty-five years old, married, and that he will not serve for more than five years.

That the actual length of service is short and that there is considerable turnover in the position is disclosed by the fact that 167 presidents served less than five years. The study also shows that seventy-six presidents have served between five and ten years. In connection with the brief tenure of college presidents, the report points out that permanent and constructive policies for the development of the institutions cannot be effectively pursued if frequent changes are made in their executives.

The land-grant colleges and universities number sixty-nine. They include some of the largest institutions of higher learning in the country. Each state, Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico, has a land-grant college (Massachusetts has two), partially supported by federal funds.

The oldest president of any of the land-grant colleges is seventy-four years of age, and the youngest thirty-five, according to the report. The medium age is fifty-five years, indicating that the heads of educational institutions in this country are to a large extent over middle age.

Bruce Barton Considers Going to College A Fad

sorts of courses and extra-curriculum activities does not mean mental training.

"The main objection to the present system of higher education is that too many men come out of college with no real culture nor fundamentally accurate knowledge of any one thing, but rather with a superficial, inaccurate knowledge of many things. Life is a detail, life is mastery. To stand out in such an existence, one must possess a capacity for taking pains, for lasting when others are tired and fall by the way.

"A most famous surgeon told me that surgery is 20 per cent cutting and 80 per cent sewing and tying knots. For years he spent several hours a day in his room practising knot tying until he could tie any sort of knot with two fingers. Every occupation is largely routine.

"I have an admiration for and interest in the coming generation. I do think, however, that educators are responsible for many people wasting a great deal of time. The college, like many a business, has overstepped its plant and management capacity. Educators have not yet had time to sit down and agree on what should really constitute a college education."

The botanical department supervised the planting of shrubbery on the campus back of the library last week, and this week will plant shrubbery around the new wing of the music building and also around Memorial hall.

Committee Favors Bill Of Consolidating All Three State Schools

vides for the present boards of trustees of the respective institutions to form the consolidated board of the University until the next General Assembly shall meet and name a board of one hundred trustees. A commission from the respective colleges and from the state at large to make a study and suggest details of working out the unification is also provided. It is this commission which is given the authority to employ experts in the fields of higher education by the present measures. Mr. Graham wishes to make their employment mandatory.

Under the terms of the bill, this commission would report to the executive body of the board of trustees, and if the report were approved in whole or in part, it would be submitted to the full consolidated board of trustees for adoption or modification.

Dr. Brooks pointed out that the present University of North Carolina has one hundred trustees, State College seventy-nine, with a total permissible of eighty-five, and N. C. C. W. twelve. Hence, the present University board of trustees could adopt the report regardless of whether the other boards desired it or not.

Several other plans of distributing the vote equally among the three institutions were presented and discussed, but none were declared satisfactory.

Explaining the position of the University administration, President Graham said:

"When the question of consolidation was first broached to me, I immediately found myself in a questioning attitude toward a matter involving traditions, loyalties, delicate relations, and ramifying so deeply and widely in the life and service of North Carolina. At Chapel Hill we have also tried to maintain an open mind with a view to the best interest of the State. Our position is that of an open mind with a question mark to the end that a thorough study is indispensable to the proposition.

"In line with that view, the administrative officers, the deans of all the schools, heads of all departments, and the advisory committee elected by the general faculty to shape University policy, have engaged in careful study of the question of consolidation. From their several studies, all are agreed there should be a thorough study by experts before any final consummation of the form of unification. Representing this view and expressing my own position, Mr. Chairman, I offer as a substitute for the next to the last sentence on section eight the following:

"It shall employ competent experts in the several pertinent fields of higher education in America. These experts shall take account of the experience of the several American States in the various forms of unification, whether consolidation, co-ordination, or other forms of unified guidance and control of higher education and shall study the circumstances and needs of higher education in North Carolina. They shall on the basis of their expert studies and scientific findings make their report and recommendation to the commission with regard to form, extent, procedure, and details of unified guidance and control."

After proposing this amendment, President Graham further stated, "When the experts, whose study is here made mandatory, the commission, and the responsible public body to which the report is to be made, find the best form of unified guidance and control, then the University of North Carolina stands ready, as it has stood for more than a century, to co-operate in any service that is for the best interest of the commonwealth."

Chairman Jeffress called on Josephus Daniels for an expression of opinion, and he observed that although he had been a member of the board of trustees of the University for a third of the century, he was speaking as a citizen of the State more interested in its educational policies than anything else.

The unification of the three institutions he declared to be as great a step forward as the establishment of the University State College, or N. C. C. W. "I sincerely believe the General Assembly can do nothing better for education," he said, "than to write the word 'union' in regard to these three institutions."

They still have Speer and Finkelstein, hurdlers, and Shepard, quarter-miler, all Conference champs, and what's more there are enough new stars to more than make up for the loss of Sandfifer. One of these is a sophomore high-jumper, Peel Rivers, who has been jumping six feet in an event in which the Generals didn't place in 1930.

North Carolina will make another strong argument. Barkley and Lowery, distance men; Captain Nims, quarter-miler; and Adkins, shot-putter, are gone from last year's place-winners, but there is still power in the Tar Heel fold. Farmer, Arnold and Bagby are Conference champs in the 60-yard dash, pole vault and high jump, respectively. Slusser, hurdler; Weil, quarter-miler; Baucom and Jensen, distance men; Ruble, vaulter; and Brown, weightman and broad jumper, are other potential point winners of ability.

Each day two names will be placed in this column. Each person whose name appears will be given a guest ticket to the Carolina Theatre.

PLANS PROGRESS ON DANCES FOR SPRING QUARTER

Grail, Co-Eds, Fraternities, and German Club to Direct Social Activity.

Following the end of the winter quarter's program of dances with the Grail last Saturday night, plans are progressing for the various dances to be given during the Spring quarter.

The Grail as usual will give three dances during the quarter, but the committee has not yet set the dates for these. Last quarter the first dance was on the evening of January 17, the second February 7, and the third February 28.

The co-eds have not decided on a date for the dance they will give in the Spring quarter. The dance for the fall quarter took place the last week in October, and the winter dance February 6.

In April, five fraternities will sponsor the Spring Festival, a set of dances on the order of the May Frolic which was given last year. The five fraternities which will give the Festival are Phi Gamma Delta, Phi Delta Theta, Pi Kappa Phi, A. T. O., and Pi Kappa Alpha. George Newman representing Pi Kappa Phi fraternity is chairman of committee in charge. Bill Bliss and Arthur Fleming are the representatives from Phi Gamma Delta, Baron Grier and Jones Pollock from A. T. O., Mosely Fonvielle and Tad McLaughlin from Phi Delta Theta, and Ward Thompson and Ed French from Pi Kappa Alpha.

The dates set for the 1931 May Frolic are May 8 and 9. The May Frolic is an annual affair staged by several fraternities on the campus. This year the seven fraternities who will sponsor the set are: Beta Theta Pi, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Kappa Sigma and Zeta Psi.

Arthur Sickles, Sigma Chi, is chairman of the dance committee. Serving with him are: Dail Holderness, D. K. E.; Willis Henderson, Sigma Nu; Tom Follin, Beta Theta Pi; John Jemison, Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Buck Snow, Zeta Psi; Clyde Dunn, Kappa Sigma.

Last year the May Frolic was held during the week-end of May 2 and 3.

This quarter the only dances given under the auspices of the German Club will be the finals, June 9, 10, 11. These will take place in Bynum gymnasium, and it is probable that Guy Lombardo will play for the set.

During the fall quarter, the German Club gave a set of five dances Friday and Saturday, November 28 and 29. Weidemeyer's orchestra from Huntington, West Virginia played. The mid-winter dances took place the Friday and Saturday, February 13 and 14, with Paul Graham's orchestra playing.

Reference Desks

In order to relieve congestion around the card catalogues in the library, two desks have been placed near them upon which students may do their reference work.

These desks were designed by Arthur C. Nash, formerly of Atwood and Nash, University architects, and bulit by the University buildings department.

Hampton Quartet To Sing Tonight Under Y Auspices

The Hampton negro quartette, of Hampton Institute, in Virginia, will present a program of negro spirituals in Gerrard hall tonight at eight-thirty. The quartette is coming to Chapel Hill under the auspices of the local Y. M. C. A. This quartette has presented several programs in Carolina during the last decade, and it is one of the most able and outstanding quartettes giving the fullest and richest interpretation of the pure negro spirituals. One member of the quartette, the bass, has sung in the group for 37 years. The program consists of approximately 25 spirituals.

Admission is free, and the public is cordially invited.

ONE-ACT SERIES COMPOSES NEXT PLAYMAKER BILL

First of Two Professional Groups Of Plays Presented Tonight In Theatre.

The first of the two groups of professional one-act plays being given in three-night production-class series will be presented this evening at 8:30 in the Playmakers Theatre.

The program will open with Hildegarde Flanner's Mansions, featuring Jo Norwood, Pat Lumpkin, and Everett Jess, and directed by Patty Jordan. It is the story of a sick boy's ambition to become an architect, which is shattered by his domineering aunt, who is very religious.

Whitner Bissell is directing and acting in The Constant Lover by St. John Hankin. The play is a comedy of a romantic youth who makes love to a new acquaintance, showing her the foolishness of convention and duty. The part of the acquaintance who becomes shocked at his frankness and who is won by duty is taken by Bess Jones Winburn.

The final offering on the program, Stanley Houghton's Fancy Free, is directed by Mary Aileen Ewart. This fantastic comedy of young society people who get mixed up in their efforts to find the new liberty has a cast composed of Lillian Hottenstein, Margaret Vale, Paul Carter, and John Sehon.

The last of the plays in the current program, coming tomorrow at the same time are: The Rising of the Moon, Cocaine and Suppressed Desires. Tickets are selling for fifty cents, and season coupons are also good for admission.

DEBATERS MEET ASBURY COLLEGE

Debaters from Asbury College, of Wilmore, Kentucky, will meet the Carolina debating team in the local high school auditorium, Tuesday night, March 10, at eight o'clock. The leading question will be: Resolved; That the Nations Should Adopt a Policy of Free Trade.

Groves Addresses Conference

Yesterday, March 5, Professor Ernest R. Groves, Research Professor in the Institute for Research in Social Science, addressed the Georgia Conference on Social Work, which is in session at Athens, Georgia. His subject was "Thinking and Working for the Child."

LABORATORY WILL BE PHOTOGRAPHED

Pictures To Be Used in New Sales Catalogue Will Be Taken In Engineering Labs.

Next week A. L. Pollard of Knoxville, Tennessee, will be here to take several pictures of the equipment in the electrical engineering apparatus room of Phillips hall. Mr. Pollard wishes to get these photos for a new sales catalogue which he is making for the Western Electrical Instruments Company for which he is sales representative.

Out of the hundreds of engineering schools that use Weston equipment, Pollard selected this University because it had the most modern equipment and the best arrangement. After a visit about three weeks ago he expressed a sincere delight with the system used here and the way the machinery was mounted in the laboratory.

Lately he went to the University of Virginia and took a large number of pictures at that school, but after a visit to the University engineering laboratories, he decided to make pictures here. "The arrangement of electrical apparatus in Phillips hall and the general lay-out make it much more convenient and easily handled," says Pollard.

When the sales representative is ready to photograph the instruments, a group of engineering students under the direction of a professor of that school will set up the machinery and pose with it as they would in the process of a regular lab class. The pictures will be taken with the machines in operation to give them an added effect of reality.

HARLAND LEAVES ON LECTURE TOUR

Dr. J. P. Harland, professor of Greek and Archaeology in the University, is scheduled by the Archaeological Institute of America to appear before several schools and societies as a lecturer. He will leave on this tour Monday and will be away for more than a week.

Professor Harland in the past has been engaged in extensive excavations and archaelogical work. The majority of this work has been done in Greece where many valuable finds were made. Among the relics and remains discovered during the progress of these activities were portions of pottery, vases, and various articles pertinent to the ancient Hellodic civilization. This research work was done in connection with the Archaeological Institute of America.

Dr. Harland will address college groups and scientific societies in the following cities on his itinerary: Pittsburg, Pa., Parkersburg, W. Va., Huntington, W. Va., Wittenburg College at Springfield, Ohio, and Miami University of Oxford, Ohio.

DEAN HOBBS ANNOUNCES VOTE ON ENTERTAINMENT

Dean A. W. Hobbs, head of the entertainment committee, announced yesterday that a list of possible attractions for the program of next year will be submitted to a student vote early in the spring quarter. He further stated that it would be to the advantage of the student to find out as much as possible about these so as to be able to give an intelligent vote.

FIFTEEN MEN IN DEBATE TRYOUTS

Ranking of Candidates and Tentative Designation of Trips Is Announced.

Results of the debate tryouts for the three Spring trips were announced yesterday. Two of the trips will be held during the holidays and one soon after. Fifteen men, the largest number ever to tryout, competed for these meets. The ranking and tentative allocation of opponents follows:

1. J. W. Slaughter, Northwestern; 2. E. E. Ericson, Texas; 3. E. L. Haywood, Northwestern; 4. McB. Fleming-Jones, Boston; 5. W. W. Speight, Boston; 6. J. W. Baley, Texas; 7. H. H. Hobgood, Alternate; 8. C. D. Wardlaw, Alternate.

The men who go to Northwestern will meet Asbury college at Wilmore, Kentucky, April 11, taking the negative side of the Free Trade question. On April 12th, they will discuss Free Trade with Cincinnati over radio station WLW. Western Reserve will be met on the Unemployment Insurance question, April 17th.

The team which meets Boston on March 16th will oppose Unemployment Insurance. March 19, New York University will be met over the radio, the Carolina team upholding the affirmative side of the same question. This trip will end with a meet with the University of Pennsylvania, March 1st.

The Texas trip also comes during the holidays. This will include Georgia Tech, on March 16th, when the University will uphold the negative of Unemployment Insurance. The University of Texas will be met March 19. Carolina will meet Tennessee at Knoxville on Free Trade, March 21st.

The next home meet will be with Asbury College, March 10. In this contest the Carolina team will support the affirmative of, Resolved, That the Nations should adopt a Policy of Free Trade.

COUNCIL REPORTS NEW SUSPENSIONS

A report of the student council for the month of February, 1931, shows that five students were put on probation, and two indefinitely suspended from the University.

Case No. 15—Mr. X, freshman, was indefinitely suspended from the University for violation of drinking probation.

Case No. 16—Mr. X, junior, was put on strict drinking probation until the end of spring quarter, 1931.

Cases No. 17 and 18—Four students in Manly dormitory were put on dormitory probation for disturbance in the dormitory.

Case No. 20—Mr. X, senior, was indefinitely suspended from the University for conviction in a case of theft of clothing.

Registration Notice

A notice from the dean's office stated that all Juniors and Seniors are to register with their respective deans during examinations for the spring quarter. Freshmen and sophomores are to register on Saturday, March 21.

Spring holidays officially begin noon, March 14, and end March 21. Juniors and seniors return March 23.

Playmakers Meet To Discuss Plans Of Possible Trips

Officials of the Carolina Playmakers met last night to discuss possible plans for going on a tour this year, but The Tar Heel went to press before the results of the meeting could be learned. Every year, the Playmakers have made three trips. These consist of a northern, southern, and western trip.

For three consecutive years, they have played in New York City. Year before last they went as far as Boston, where they were received by Governor Frank Allen at the Massachusetts State House. In Boston, they presented their bill for two successive nights in the Fine Arts Theatre. The Boston trip was one of the longest tours ever taken by the Playmakers.

The first northern tour was made in 1926, when they went to Washington and were received by President Coolidge in the White House. The following year, they went as far as New York City and Plainfield, New Jersey. Since 1927, the Playmakers have presented programs annually in the MacMillan Acadamic Theatre of Columbia University. In 1928, they reached New Haven and played in Professor Baker's theatre at Yale.

MacNIDER URGES ACTIVITY OF WILL

Dr. William deB. MacNider, of the school of medicine, speaking in chapel yesterday, said that the South needed to get some ideas of its own. Deploring mass thought, Dr. MacNider stated that the University has grown rapidly in the last few years and seems to be losing its individuality. He made reference to the book written by Will James, the well-known phychologist, entitled "The Will to Believe," and wished that someone in the South would write a sequel to this work called "The Will to Do." The advice that he gave the students was to put thought into operation by the use of will power. Louis Pasteur, the famous expert on the treatment of rabbies, was pointed out as an example of a man with an idea who had the will power to put his idea into operation.

Preparation Begun On French Contest

Dr. J. C. Lyons, of the French department of the University, is preparing the tests to be used in the state high school French contest March 13. A large number of schools have entered participants in the contest which is held annually under the joint auspices of the French department and the extension division of the University.

Each school sends its three best papers to the University, where they are graded by members of the faculty of the French department. A trophy cup is given to the school whose student submits the best paper. Since the contest was started in 1926, the cup has been won in turn by Raleigh, Davidson, Forest City, Lenoir, and Greensboro.

Infirmary List

The following people were on the sick list yesterday: J. S. Hartley, C. B. Avent, Sidney Brownstein, R. L. Bernhardt, Elinor Lane, John Way, S. G. Clark, Ida Currie, A. W. Kaufmann, and Robert Horney.

ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE ADDS QUARTET, DANCER

Kedroff Quartet and Angna Enters Scheduled on Program For Next Quarter.

The entertainment committee has two more programs to offer the students during the spring quarter. The first of these presentations will be the Kedroff Quartet, March 31, and the second, Angna Enters, an interpretative dancer, April 7.

The committee is at present trying to get Velma Kline, pianist, to play for another number, but it is not yet known whether there is enough money to do this with. All last quarter an attempt was being made by the committee to get the Ben Greet players here on the program, but no suitable date could be arranged, and the matter was finally dropped. Now, however, the players find that they will be in this section of the country, and since such earnest efforts were made to get them here they have agreed to come here March 14 under the auspices of the Playmakers. They would have come on the entertainment committee program but for the fact that the program is now closed.

The Kedroff Quartet is a Russian organization and has been prominent since 1897. Few nations can claim such wealth and beauty in folk music as Russia, and it was the beauty of this music and the idea of assembling and popularizing these melodies that inspired the organization of the quartet.

N. N. Kedroff started the group and in 1910 was joined by his brother G. N. Kedroff. The other two members, I. K. Denissoff and T. F. Kasakoff, joined in 1920, and these four have been singing together ever since. They are far famed in their own country and are favorites with the emperor who has given them many presents as tokens of his esteem. After the war they toured all the principal countries in Europe.

Angna Enters is a well known dancer, who gives her interpretation of modern dance forms of her own creation. She is not of the same type as Carola Goya, the Spanish dancer, since she does not give classical, authentic dances.

Her work has been praised here and abroad. One of her best known original interpretations is "Feline," a dance that portrays the sensuous actions of the cat. A New York reporter has said of it, "Instead of a woman dressed as a cat, there appeared a cat in the form of a woman."

She designed her own costuming and has had her creations copyrighted.

Harlan Speaks To Sociological Frat

Professor Rolvix Harlan of the University of Richmond spoke to the Alpha Kappa Delta sociological fraternity at their meeting last Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock on the third floor of Alumni building. His subject concerned the dynamic implication of sociology.

The fraternity will give their banquet Monday evening in the Carolina Inn at 6:15 o'clock. Deans Manning T. McCormick of the medical and law schools respectively, and Dr. J. F. Dashiell, of the psychology department, will be the speakers.

Another Investigation

We are informed that another Senatorial Committee will investigate North Carolina's elections. This time the cause is a petition filed by Mr. George Pritchard, one time congressman and at present merely a former congressman without a hope of coming back. Mr. Pritchard seeks to unseat Mr. Josiah W. Bailey of Raleigh, who became United States Senator from North Carolina Wednesday.

Shortly before the general election last November Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of another senatorial investigation committee, visited North Carolina to investigate certain election irregularities of the June primaries. Nye's committee found nothing which encouraged the Republicans in their folorn hope of capturing the state in the general elections.

Evidently someone wasn't satisfied, for now we have Mr. Pritchard's protest. Maybe something will be revealed by the new investigation which will place North Carolina election on a parity with those of other states. Perhaps a hundred thousand ballots will be found irregular and perhaps Mr. Pritchard and Mr. Jones, who has talked continually about the state's elections since becoming Congressmen, will have the satisfaction of seeing a Democratic Senator unseated. Yes, perhaps the legislature will solve the tax problem to the satisfaction of everyone.

National Issue Straddling

A European scanning our daily newspapers and our magazines would certainly get a great kick watching the two great political parties of this country playing with the prohibition issue like it was a concoction of super T. N. T. Both sides dare each other to run up and touch it then they both retreat and contemplate a while longer. The Democratic National Committee won't even advance, now—something might explode any minute. All Europe and a great many Americans are laughing at the efforts of the Parties to handle the situation, but it is a most delicate one to handle—one that takes as much tact and diplomacy as the age-old tariff question.

Be this as it may, we would like a very great deal to see something definite take form on one side or the other, with a party behind the issue strong enough to back up what they believe in or base their administration on. Straddling issues may get around the situation temporarily, but after so long a time the public at large gets tired of ambiguity in platforms and weak stances. We would like to see something definite take form.—O. W. D.

MOORE BRYSON

I've just come from the Chi O. house where I had a preview of the tea they are going to have this afternoon. I sat down there and bulled with "Dookey" Russell and Orville Culpepper so long that I haven't time in which to write this column. After I left I looked back and saw the girls leaving to go up town and get some more mints and peanuts.

Jack Ward (Smiler) introduced a new game at the law school dance. The object is to see how original one can be when helping lead the grand march. Jack won with little competition.

Speaking of Jack. He tells me that he has had several applicants for membership in the Smile Club. Anyone desiring to join, should send in a written application to this column or to President Ward. Be sure to state your qualifications. Such things as always being in a good humor on Monday morning, giving rah rah collegiate talks, going on Sunday School picnics, etc., assure you of becoming a full-fledged member.

I was introduced to a boy the other day and when he learned that I was a famous writer he said, "Well, I'm glad to know you for I thought that the person who wrote that column was some dried up little shrimp." I was delighted to find that he had changed his opinion but it worries me to think that this column should give such a mental picture of its author.

And just to prove that I am not dried up, here is a recipe which may be of use to Southerners. Four parts orange juice, two parts lemon juice, one part grenadine (you can get it at your grocer's or at Harry's) and four parts of what-have-you. Shake with cracked ice until icy cold and serve in anything you can find from paper cups up.

Mike Martin, the husky coal-mining, hog-joling law student, has done and went and done it. He says that the bonds were tied last November but he didn't give out cigars until Wednesday night.

I wonder what it is that they have on P. P. P. Peal which makes him blush so much when the kidders get after him at Patterson's. (Pritchard-Lloyd's to you freshmen.)

So they are to have bowling alleys in Graham Memorial. Evidently, my suggestion about davenports and fire-places didn't meet with the approval of the committee.

Chesterfield advertises, "Your eyes may fool you, but your taste tells the truth." Maybe so, but I thought that I knew the taste the other night but it certainly fooled me.

Will Yarborough, our worthy editor, holds sewing circle every morning at ten-thirty at the Carolina Confectionery. Quite a few of the cynics, near-cynics, and would-be cynics get together to discuss the futility of life over their dopes and cigarettes.

Gabriel McCall and Alfred Hamilton are planning on having their meals served in the dining room of the Pi Phi house.

* * *

Well, you little A.B. students get down to the last minute grind before exams, we law students are going to a movie.

Faculty Dictation

St. Stephen's College, a division of Columbia University, has thrown its hat into the educational ring by announcing that henceforth St. Stephen's will fit a separate curriculum to each individual student. While Harvard and Yale are wrangling over the social side of student life, St. Stephen's and Chicago University are going to bring out a new model of college curriculum. This college in Columbia is casting aside both the old theory of "curriculum for the average student" and the plan of permitting the student to choose his own courses of study. The faculty will have complete control.

The weakness in the Columbia plan lies in the method by which they propose to determine each student's individual needs. The idea of a faculty conference with each student to fashion the student's curriculum after considering his ability, cultural background, and intelligence as determined by psychological tests, assumes that the student has formulated some very definite conceptions as to his professional objective. In this age of complicated professional life with its multitude of different fields of endeavor, it is extremely hard for a young college undergraduate after one year of residence to single out definitely one field toward which he wishes to move. It is also doubtful whether any professor can justifiably make the choice for him. The freshman year does not bring out a student's true ability and reveal his potentialities. It marks a great period of transition in his life; surely the consequent confusion will not be aided in the end by having his mind made up for him, rather than by him.—Harvard Crimson.

More Leniency In Cuts

For the second year now honor students in liberal arts are enjoying the benefits in penalties for cutting classes, and now Beta Gamma Sigma, honorary society of the commerce school, is petitioning the administration to permit the better students in their school the same privilege. With its report advising the establishment of a more liberal attendance policy, the society has included a proper list of the advantages of "unlimited" cuts along with the disadvantages of the present system.

Many liberal educators of the day agree that close-bound restrictions on attendance discourage a true scholastic ability and lend truth to the charge that educational methods have become too mechanical. They ask, why shouldn't the student be allowed to dispose of his time in the way that he sees fit? President Scott probably had the matter of compulsory attendance in mind when, in a recent address, he expressed the theory that students should be given an increasing power of self-direction.

It is known that about as many faculty members as students, in proportion, resent the imposition of attendance requirements. It is also a known fact that many instructors merely make a pretense of returning absences to the registrar's office. One student who took about twenty-five cuts during the past semester found to his surprise that only three of them were recorded against his name. Such is the application of the system at present.

In the Beta Gamma Sigma report to the administration of the commerce school it is proposed that the privilege of "unlimited" cuts be given to students with a 1.5 or B record or better. This requirement is quite high enough to reward the industrious and low enough to be possible of attainment by the less industrious or talented.—Daily Northwestern.

Grading Profs

Should instructors be graded as well as students? Students at Rollins College, Winter Park, Florida, think so. And in addition to this rather unusual requirement, members of the student board which President Hamilton Holt appointed to study contents of courses would also eliminate hazing, and remove the tendency to overemphasize football at the institution.

A college degree, if members of the Florida college's board had their way, would mean little more than a certificate that might well be discarded. This, with the removal of the present class distinctions and their replacement by a junior and senior divisions, one of which was to study "the world we live in," religion, philosophy, citizenship, health, mental and physical, and the other being devoted to specialization in the course of the individual's choice—this was about all the students wanted in the way of amendments to the present system of doing things at Rollins.

Getting back again to the "grading" idea for faculty members, Rollins students would have the opportunity to scrutinize the work of professors from six angles: first, ability to put his subject across; second, personality; third, knowledge of the subject he teaches; fourth, personal interest in the student; fifth, personal interest in his subject; and sixth, value to the college.

With the shadow of finals already casting its pall on so many collegians and collegiennes on this campus, such an idea would be greeted with huzzas vociferous enough to set the native hills echoing for years to come. After all these months, Utopia at last! A chance to get back at the instructor. Vindication . . . revenge . . . and so thought succeeds thought, each more pleasant than the last.

Carolina Leads Entry List For Indoor Meet

Tar Heels Will Be Represented By Thirty Men; W. & L. To Have Twenty-Five.

MANY SCHOLASTIC TEAMS

Fifteen High and Preparatory Schools Will Compete; First Event at 3:30 Tomorrow.

Athletic authorities yesterday announced that they had received entries from sixteen Southern Conference teams, five non-Conference teams, twelve Conference and non-Conference freshman teams, and fifteen high and prep schools.

Carolina with thirty men has the greatest number of entries; W. & L. has twenty-five men entered; V. P. I. twenty-two men; Georgia Tech twenty-one men; Alabama fourteen; Tulane twelve; L. S. U. eleven; State nine; Duke eight; Universities of Virginia, Tennessee, South Carolina and Auburn three each; and Clemson and Mississippi A. & M. one each.

It is said that probably the most thrilling event of the whole meet will be the freshman three-quarter mile run. In this race Stout of the University of Tennessee, national interscholastic one mile champion; Miles of Duke University, outstanding freshman cross-country runner and distance star; Meade of the University, who holds the New Jersey state record for the mile and winner of the Cake Race last fall; and Groover also of the University will be pitted against each other.

The favorites in the freshman sixty yard dash are Abrahamson of Virginia, Wilson of Tulane, Joyce of Richmond College, Haliburt of Davidson, Turner of Guilford, Prochazka, Higby, and Ashkenas of the Tar Baby squad.

In the seventy yard high hurdles it is thought that the winner will be one of the following men: Antrim of Virginia, Joyce of Richmond College, Lyne of V. P. I., Almon of W. and L., Goodwin, Bonner, and Grlenn of the University.

Mosely of V. P. I., Newberry of W. & L., Joyce of Richmond College, Reid, Dockery, and Bullock of the University frosh team are rated at the top of the high jumpers.

Very few of the men are entered in more than one event, but some of the men are of such great importance to their teams that they have been entered in two and even three events.

This year finds an unusual number of entries from high and prep schools. There are 144 school-boys entered in seven events. The cream of the scholastic entrants in the sixty yard sprint are Tarrall of Oak Ridge, Gwinn of Woodberry Forest, Hancock of Bailey Military Academy, North Carolina State champion at this distance; Sizemore of High Point high school, and Sykes of Salisbury.

The scholastic thousand yard run, it is said, will probably furnish the stiffest competition, as there are many stars competing in this event. Dunaway took second place in the thousand yard run last year, and Hudson captured fourth; both boys are from Raleigh high school. Williams of High Point high school, state champion in the mile run, Cadman of Winston-Salem, Haley of Baylor School, and Coles of Boys' High will be up with the leaders.

In the high jump Barksdale of Charlotte, runner up and Abernathy of Greensboro, who captured third place, in the meet last year will fight it out for first place. Kelley of Boys' High, however, is generally thought to be an excellent jump-

ALL-STATE CAGE TEAM SELECTED

For better or for worse, we will make a stab at an all-state basketball team. The 1931 season probably was the most erratic season experienced in North Carolina in recent years. The best stars had several bad nights each, and it is difficult to select a group that will be generally acceptable. Our selection is as follows:

First Team

Mathis, forward	Davidson
Gammon, forward	State
Croson, center	Duke
Marpet, guard	Carolina
Shaw, guard	Duke

On our second team we prefer: Sandy Dameron, Carolina, center; Alexander, Carolina, and Clark, State, guards; Rogers, Duke, and Barnes, Wake Forest, forwards. Honorable mention goes to: Goodson, and Rusk, Davidson; Robertshaw, Duke; Edwards, Carolina; Morgan, State; Mills, Wake Forest.

CONFERENCE INDOOR GAMES TOMORROW

Chapel Hill is really fortunate to get the Southern Conference indoor games back here for the second year. Though this is only the second year of the indoor tournament it is becoming one of the most popular athletic events conducted by the Southern Conference.

Sixteen Conference colleges are sending their teams here to compete in the meet, and there are a large number of individual stars. Many of them already have been mentioned in the columns of the Daily Tar Heel.

The most outstanding thing of the whole carnival is the fact that Harold Osborne, "one-man track team," holder of the world's outdoor high jump record, and other marks of distinction on the track, will try to regain his indoor high jump title under official A. A. U. sanction.

We were talking to Track Coach Dale Ranson the other day about the indoor meet, and he brought up the subject that many of the students here do not understand why the indoor meet is not an event on the regular student pass book program.

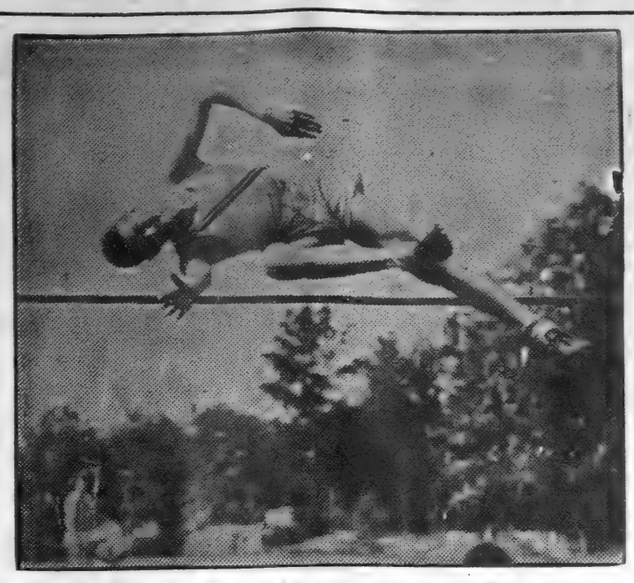
The indoor meet is not a Carolina event, but is a tournament of the Southern Conference held in Chapel Hill, just as the basketball tourney is held in Atlanta, the boxing tourney in Charlottesville, etc.

It is customary for an admission fee to be charged at all conference meets, and it is said that the admission charge to students here is substantially less than that at the other meets.

BASEBALL JUST AROUND THE CORNER

The Tar Heel baseball team is busy in its "spring training camp" down on Emerson field, and is rapidly rounding into shape. Little can be determined as yet as to what they will do this season, but they have several of last year's men around which to build a team, and the freshmen sent us some likely candidates.

As soon as the spring quarter gets underway, there will be a series of games at home with Cornell, Pennsylvania, Washington and Lee, Penn State and Princeton, and students will get a chance to see some good baseball as these teams are among the best in their sections.



NO WRESTLING TOURNAMENT

The Tar Heel wrestlers were deprived of their chance to win or at least make an impressive showing in the conference, when the tournament was cancelled yesterday because of the lack of teams entering.

They had an exceptionally good season, and the grapplers are very disappointed over the fact that they will not get to compete for the crown.

They at least have a claim to the crown, however, along with W. and L. and V. M. I., since none of these teams have lost a meet.

TO DEFEND RECORD

George Bagby, Carolina, who tied with Bostick of South Carolina for the Southern Conference indoor high jump record last year at 5 feet 11 1-2 inches, will compete in the games tomorrow to defend this record.

1929 GRID TEAM TO ASSEMBLE IN MONOGRAM GAME

Many of the Stars from Carolina's Famous 346-Point Team Will Be in Action Tomorrow.

The Monogram-Rookie game, which will close winter gridiron practice at Carolina tomorrow, will show such Tar Heel grid luminaries as Nash, Magner, House, Lipscomb, Sapp and Farris running their last game together, and it will recall vivid memories of Carolina's football glory of 1929.

The game will be played in Kenan Stadium and will start at 2 o'clock.

Off that great team the Monograms will present intact that famous center trio of Lipscomb, center, and Captain Farris and Fysal, guards, along with such driving ball carriers as Nash, Magner and House.

There'll be new tackles, Underwood and Hodges as lettermen from last year, and new ends, Sapp as an All-State product of 1928 and Walker from 1930. At that, Saturday will show the famous 346-point machine about as near assembled as it will ever be again.

An interesting game should be in store. The Rookies are going to be able to muster a heavy and defensive line, on the basis of showing in winter practice games.

It will probably show Frankel and Brandt, ends; Strickland or Smith and Crane, tackles; Barclay and Shore, guards; and McIver, center. Whatever its shortcomings on offensive blocking, such a line will stop all manner of heavy charges.

The results will undoubtedly be to drive the Monograms to a wide-open type of offensive, the sort of thing in which Magner, Nash and House and the others long excelled. Then the pass defense of such Rookie backs as Ferebee, quarter; Phipps and Weisker, halfbacks, and Lassiter, fullback, will be called into play and there should be thrill on thrill.

VETERANS IN FOR HARD GO AGAINST ROOKIE GRIDDERS

Veterans Have Edge By Virtue Of Decided Victories In Past Years.

ROOKIES HAVE STARS

Ray Farris, Magner, Nash, Sapp, Stellar Backs of 1930 and Other Years, to Perform.

Winter football season will come to a close here Saturday afternoon when the Monogram wearers meet the Rookies in their annual battle. On the basis of past games the Monograms are doped to win, having a decided edge in former years.

Last year the veterans of Carolina's 346 point team ran wild to smother the Rookies 45-6. Seven times veteran backfield aces crashed through the fighting Rookie line for touchdowns while the Fledglings scored their only points late in the game when Jimmy Moore, quarterback, slipped away on a brilliant run. Ray Farris, Ned Lipscomb, Strud Nash, Yank Spaulding, Chuck Erickson, and Jim Magner led the assault for the Monogram wearers last year, while June Underwood and Frank Smith, tackles, Jimmy Moore, George Houston, and Stuart Chandler backs, were the most consistent performers for the Rookies.

In 1929 the Rookies, built around a Southern Championship freshman team and boasting such luminaries as Johnny Branch, Rip Slusser, and Red Gilbreath, were doped to give the veterans plenty of trouble, but they found the veteran line too strong and went down by a score of 25-6. That year found the Monogram men led by Captain Harry Schwartz, Ray Farris, Shine Howard, Jim Magner, and Phil Jackson. Jackson was the big ground gainer, breaking away for repeated gains, scoring two touchdowns himself, and passing to Pete Wyrick for another score. The Monograms succeeded in bottling up the elusive Johnny Branch, and the Rookies' were unable to score until late in the game when three successive passes from Branch to Shields Tabb netted a touchdown.

This year the Monogram men will be led by Strud Nash, Jim Magner, and other stars of past seasons. Ray Farris, captain of

Conference Wrestling Tournament Called Off

Only Three Teams Were Left to Compete After V. P. I. and Duke Withdrew.

3 TEAMS ARE UNDEFEATED

Generals Have Best Claim to Title, Having No Losses and No Ties.

The Southern Conference wrestling tournament which was scheduled to take place at Lexington, Virginia this week end has been called off. The withdrawal of V. P. I. and Duke left only three teams to compete for the title, and Conference officials decided to cancel the meet.

The V. P. I. Gobblers withdrew last week when it was learned that an injury to Captain Colby Graves, brilliant 126 pounder would keep him out of competition. Graves was Conference champion in the 118 pound class last year and has a victory over Captain Fred Stallings of Carolina to his credit this year.

Three teams brought their 1931 season to a close undefeated in the South last week and have claims to the Southern Conference championship. Carolina, V. M. I., and Washington and Lee are the undefeated teams, but Carolina and V. M. I. wrestled to a tie here last Saturday, leaving the Generals with the best claim to the title.

Four Tar Heels made their last mat appearance here when they finished their wrestling careers against the V. M. I. Cadets last Saturday. Those men are: Captain Fred Stallings, Mayne Albright, Marion Cowper, and Fred Ferguson. The first string men who will return next year are: Harry Tsumas, Pete Usher, Don Conklin, and Percy Idol. Tsumas and Usher will be serving their last year while Idol and Conklin will be juniors. Conklin was undefeated in six matches this year and is yet to be beaten in intercollegiate wrestling.

The Carolina grapplers finished the season with five victories and one loss. The only loss came at the hands of the strong Navy team in the second meet of the season, while the Tar Heels claim victories over Princeton, V. P. I., Davidson, State and Duke. The final match of the season ended in a 12-12 tie against the V. M. I. Cadets who have not been beaten in the South for the past three seasons. The Tar Heels were handicapped in their last bout through the absence of Don Conklin, 145 pounder, who was kept out of the meet with an arm injury.

YALE ABOLISHES MID-TERM EXAMS

This year's mid-term examinations will be the last to be given at Yale University, according to an announcement by Clarence W. Mendell, dean of Yale liberal arts college, after adoption by the faculty and the Yale corporation.

Beginning next fall a student will be required to complete successfully each previous year's work before enrolling for another term. Failure in any year will necessitate a student taking an entrance examination in the fall previous to matriculating.

Each class will have three two-week reading periods during the year, one before each examination period, which will take the place of the customary mid-term tests.

Asbury College at Wilmore, Kentucky, is another institution to adopt a new system of final examinations. No schedule will be arranged and all classes will meet regularly through the usual examination week. Teachers will arrange their own semester quizzes, and those who do not desire to give finals will continue the regular class sessions.

American University, Washington, D. C., has initiated a new method of grading by which the students will be given only a passing or failing designation. The change was made recently in the hope that students will place emphasis upon the acquisition of knowledge and ability to think rather than on grades. Classroom grades on examinations and written work will be either "satisfactory" or "unsatisfactory."

Another institution in which student sentiment against the usual grading system is forming is Pomona College, California, where the campus newspaper and student leaders are leading a movement against the practice. A quotation from the Pomona Student Life carries the spirit of the reaction, "College students do not have to be told that they should study more. Collegians are on their own; whether they study or not depends upon themselves. Admittedly, each student is after the greatest amount of learning which can be crowded into four years. Let him study and educate himself in his own way. Let us call a halt to the herding of college students into separate rooms each with a different mark."

"American" Will Be Language of Future, Untermeyer States

An address in which "American" is discussed as the language of the future is one of the offerings of the lecture course of North Carolina College for the month of March, when Louis Untermeyer, poet, critic, essayist and anthologist comes to Aycock auditorium for a treatment of the subject "New Language for the New Generation." Mr. Untermeyer will speak at the college Thursday, March 19.

The speaker is well known as a designer and manufacturing jeweler, a combination of poetical genius and practical business man. His works in verse include "Challenge," "Roast Leviathan," "These Times," "The New Adam," Yesterday and Today," and "The Burning Bush."

In his lecture to be given at the college, the poet is said to make a searching resume of the many departures and changes since the New England school. He attempts to show by teaching and example that the heightened speeds and vigorous rhythms of the present generation will create a new literature and a new language, correspondingly heightened, vigorous.

Bread cast on the waters will return again, and this is equally true of your dough.—Schenectady Gazette.

Senior Meeting

The president of the senior class, Pat Patterson, announces that there will be a very important call meeting of the class in 103 Bingham hall at ten-thirty this morning.

It is imperative that all members be present because the matter of the gift to be presented to the University by the class of 1931 will be discussed and decided on. All members are urged to attend.

Commerce Freshmen

Dean Carroll requests that all freshmen in the school of commerce meet him at chapel period this morning in 204 Bingham hall.

Senior Interviews

H. T. Carmichael, representative of W. T. Grant Company, is in Chapel Hill today to interview seniors who are interested in becoming connected with that company. All who wish to make appointments with him are requested to see Henry Johnston, Jr., in 204 South building.

Chapel Speaker

Dr. Collier Cobb, head of the geology department, is to speak to the sophomores in chapel this morning on "Reminiscences of Chapel Hill."

Cercle Francais

The Cercle Francais will hold its monthly meeting in the Episcopal Parish House this evening at seven-thirty.

Tau Kappa Alpha

The local chapter of the Tau Kappa Alpha, national debating fraternity, will have a picture taken in front of the law building today at ten-thirty o'clock for the Yackety Yack.

the great team of 1929 and Odell Sapp, who finished up his career in 1928, will return to action once again and will add great strength to the Monograms. Both have been coaching here since their graduation.

The Rookies Gus McIver, George Barclay, Strickland, and Crane in the line should give the veteran backfield stars plenty to worry about while such men as Weisker, Anucauskas, and Phipps constitute one of the strongest backfield arrays ever presented by a rookie team.

element detached, there would be every opportunity for a great improvement in the scheme of things, even at Rollins College. Nevertheless, leaders of thought and university students everywhere will await with interest the action of Professor John Dewey and associates when they submit their report on the matter, investigation of which opens Friday.

Modern colleges can stand a lot of changes before they are in prime condition to serve the youth of today—few will deny this. But will the plan for Rollins students solve the problem. Let us hope so. Still . . . we wonder.—Daily Illini.

Track Meet Tickets

The price of student admission set by the athletic association for the Southern Conference Indoor Track meet tomorrow night will be fifty cents with the student pass-books. Reserve seats and box seats may be secured at the Book Exchange and the Students' Supply store for one dollar and one-fifty respectively.

Tar Heel Sports Writers Select All-American Intramural Quintets

Northwestern, Oglethorpe, Iowa, Wisconsin, Oklahoma A. & M., Davidson, Carolina, N. Y. U., and Detroit Place Men.

Three 1931 all-American intramural basketball teams, representative of the best cage talent in fifty American universities and colleges were picked last night by the sports staff of the Daily Tar Heel. In the selection of the three teams, every large educational institution in the country conducting an intramural sports program was surveyed and the most formidable basketeers selected to play on the mythical cage quintet.

On the first team, Northwestern, Kansas, Iowa, Oklahoma A. & M., and Oglethorpe secured men. With the addition of North Carolina, the second team includes practically the same institutions. Oglethorpe, Davidson, N. Y. U., Wisconsin and Detroit are represented on the third string.

In the selection of the fifteen men, a tedious task when they are to be chosen from among such a large number of prospects, operatives on each of the above campus were required to report at intervals the progress of each prospective man.

The teams:

First Team

Forward: Perlestein, Phi Pi Psi, Northwestern; forward: Cooper, Delta Sigma Lambda, U. Kansas; center: Glorer, Campus Cleaners, Oklahoma A. & M.; guard: Oberlin, Team "C," Iowa U.; guard: All-American, Oglethorpe.

Second Team

Dr. Noble Tells Of Village's Growth

The Chapel Hill Rotary Club heard Dr. M. C. S. Noble at the weekly meeting in the Carolina Inn Wednesday evening.

Dr. Noble spoke on the growth of Chapel Hill and other changes that have taken place within the last twenty years. He mentioned the increases in the number of buildings in the community, and the fact that none of the streets were paved, whereas now most of them are. He contrasted, also, the roads of today and of twenty years ago, recalling that it used to take two hours to go to Raleigh while now the trip takes less than an hour, and it is possible to go to any point in the state in a day when it used to require three or four.

Oglethorpe To Use New Two Year Plan

The board of directors of Oglethorpe University have approved and the officials of the University have definitely decided to install the educational system which Dr. Jacobs outlined to the student body early last week. The system will go into effect with the class entering next fall.

Dr. Jacobs' proposal in outline to the student body is to divide the university into junior and senior colleges, making it possible for a student to graduate with a degree within two years. At present the system is used in only four educational institutions in the United States, although a somewhat similar system is in use in England and other European countries.

The system was designed primarily to reduce superficiality in American education and at the same time to abolish the dishonest taking of degrees. Its purpose is also to make it possible for a student to learn at his actual mental pace, and not to make students of varied mental abilities lockstep through four years of college work.

Under this system the student will be forced to take examinations under a board of regents, the members of which will give the student a general examination.

Hobbs Announces Eligibility Rules

In regard to registration for the spring quarter, Dean Hobbs of the liberal arts school said, "To be eligible to register for the spring quarter a freshman who has had two quarters residence in the University must have passed two courses. He must pass at least five to be eligible to return next fall. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors who have been in residence during the fall and winter quarters must pass four courses to register in the spring, and seven for the year to register next year."

Concerning athletics, he further stated, "To be eligible for varsity athletics next year, a freshman this year must pass seven courses. That is, he must have sophomore standing before he is eligible for varsity athletics."

Carolina Leads Entry List For Indoor Meet

er and he may beat the two favorites.

Tarrall of Oak Ridge, Willingham of Baylor School, and Sizemore of High Point are the most likely contenders in the shot put.

Tech High of Atlanta, winner of the race last year, Bailey Military Academy, and Wilmington are favored in the one mile relay.

Brittain of Bailey Military Academy, and Thrash of Boys' High are considered the best in both the seventy yard high and low hurdles. Ray of Oak Ridge in the tall timbers, and Hughes of Baylor School in the low hurdles are also ranked among the best of the scholastic hurdlers.

The meet will commence at three-thirty when the freshman high jumpers hop into action. The event following this one is the scholastic high jump which will start at four o'clock. These less interesting events will go on first so that the persons who are attending the Monogram-Rookie game will be able to arrive at the Tin Can in time for the races.

Standard Oil Men To Visit Campus

Two representatives of the Standard Oil Company of New York are to be in Chapel Hill next Wednesday to interview seniors who are interested in becoming connected with that organization.

Henry Johnston, Jr., of the vocational department of the University, has requested that all seniors who wish to make appointments with these men see him at his office in 204 South building as soon as possible.

Seniors who are interested, not in employment with this company, but in the educational value which may be derived from the group talks which will be given by the representatives, are also asked to see Mr. Johnston.

FRENCH COURSES TO BE GIVEN ON EUROPEAN TOUR

Extension Division Study Trip, Under Direction of J. A. Downs, to Start June 13.

Plans for the fourth annual study tour to France under the auspices of the University extension division have just been announced by J. A. Downs, director of the tour. The trip is scheduled for the period between June 13 and August 31.

Tours were conducted in the summers of 1927, 1928, 1929, and 1930 under the direction of the University of North Carolina, and the travelers have in every case been well pleased. The tour not only offers a chance of study in France but also side trips to Italy and other European countries.

The touring party will arrive in Paris June 23 where they will remain to see the city until June 28. At that time residence will be taken up in Grenoble, France. The students will remain in Grenoble until the first of August to study at the Unisersite de Grenoble under the directions of Professor Downs. The study is not obligatory, and any one may or may not attend.

Professor Downs has outlined two courses which he will give on the tour. The first is a course in French composition and conversation with the tuition taken from the total tour expense. This course will be open to everyone in the party who desires a better speaking knowledge of the French language. The second course is one

DAILY TAR HEEL HAS FAIR GUEST

Fashion Editor of "College Humor" Visits Campus on Good Will Tour.

The appearance of Miss Frances Lee, fashion editor of College Humor, created quite a stir among the staff members of three campus publications yesterday afternoon. Miss Lee is on a good will tour of the college campuses of the country, picking up criticism of her magazine and gathering information about the various schools.

Arriving in the Daily Tar Heel office, she was introduced to Editor Will Yarborough, to Clyde Dunn, editor of the Yackety Yack, and to Kermit Wheary, editor of the Buccaneer. Coming unexpectedly through the window of the office, Jack Dungan, managing editor of the paper, almost fell into her lap and was then introduced also.

Miss Lee was principally interested in finding out what departments of College Humor are particularly interesting to students. Having secured this information, she asked questions concerning college life on this campus and took down the names and qualifications of several men who will possibly be eligible for the College Humor hall of fame, "Interesting Undergraduates." In addition, she was informed of several of the prominent faculty members here. It is possible that some University alumnus will be asked to write an article on the University for publication in the regular series of stories dealing with American colleges which the magazine

Playmakers Will Conclude Studio Programs Tonight

The Carolina Playmakers' first annual series of public studio productions will be brought to a close this evening at 8:30 o'clock with three professional short plays.

One of Lady Gregory's most heartfelt studies of fellowship psychology, The Rising of the Moon, has been chosen to be presented. The play is directed by Shirley Carter. Its policeman scapegrace episode takes place between Everett Jess and Ernest Deans, who were featured in East Lynne. Matthew Houghton and Shirley Carter comprise the supporting cast.

Marion Tatum and Joe Fox, who did much to make Cloey a success last autumn, are back again, this time in Cocaine, by Pendleton King. The scene of the play is an attic bedroom between Grand Street and the Bowery, and the personnel consists of a dope fiend and a lady of the pavements.

Suppressed Desires, the inevitable satire that Susan Glaspell made to take a poke at Freud, serves as a medium for the return of the stars of Anthony Buttita's Playthings, Eve Brickman and Whit Bissell. The important role of the subconscious pervert is taken by Betty Jones.

Admittance this evening will be by season tickets or fifty cents.

IRISH LEADER TO VISIT UNIVERSITY

Dr. George Russell, poet, painter, and expert on rural civilization, will visit Chapel Hill and the University on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 10 and 11. He is to deliver a public address in Raleigh on the evening of March 9. The place, time and subject will be announced later.

Dr. Russell, who in his writing is known as "A. E." has been a great leader in the formation of the Irish Free State and in developing the rural life in that state. He has been brought to America by a committee in New York and is being sent throughout the nation on a lecture tour to give his views on rural organization to the American people.

A committee of welcome, headed by Dr. Clarence Poe of Raleigh, and of which President Frank Graham is a member, will receive him in Raleigh.

Astronomy Course Is New Elective

Dr. Karl H. Fussler, of the physics department, stated yesterday that Astronomy 14 has been changed from a freshman-sophomore elective to a junior-senior elective. This is a course in historical and descriptive astronomy, and includes a considerable amount of observation with the telescope.

Any junior or senior who desires to take this course is requested by Dr. Fussler to see him during examinations, since the small size of the lecture room will necessitate a limitation on the number of students.

Infirmary List

Only a few members of the student body were on the sick list yesterday. Those were as follows: John Way, R. L. Barnhardt, A. W. Kaufmann, Robert Horney, M. C. Cameron, J. L. Hodges, F. G. Wolke, Sidney Brownstein, Jack Thompson, and J. M. Cox.

YOUNGEST OF FAMOUS CHURCHILLS CLOSES ENTERTAINMENT PROGRAM

Descendant of Distinguished Line of British Statesmen Has Already Acquired Outstanding Recognition in Political Field.

The directors of the student entertainment committee have arranged to have as a speaker on the entertainment program this quarter Randolph Churchill, son of the famous English statesman and former Chancellor of the Exchequer, Winston Churchill.

Decidedly conservative, Randolph Churchill has distinguished himself in England by his smashing attacks against the proposed Anglo-Egyptian treaty. Although he is only nineteen years of age(he has impressed the English people greatly by his stirring opinions and the dashing manner with which he presents them to his audience.

Correspondents of the American press have given him such high praise that a tour was arranged, beginning at about the first of this month. He apologizes for his age, but never for his opinions. Always his views do not meet with agreement, but that only makes them more interesting.

Coming from a long line of distinguished English statesmen, Randolph Churchill seems capable of upholding the family prestige and even surpassing it. He clings firmly to the policies of the Constitutional party in England, and there are many who predict that he possesses the force that will rally the youth of that country to the aid of conservative group.

His grandfather, Lord Randolph Churchill (1849-1895), was the third son of John, seventh Duke of Marlborough, born in Blenheim Palace. Entering Parliament, he early made his mark. Not content to accept policies and parties as he found them, he formed what was then known as the "Fourth Party" Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, Sir John Gorst, and Arthur Balfour being the others, all young Conservatives, which in these days would be called a "Ginger Group." By 1878 he had aroused the Conservative Party.

In 1884 the struggle between "Stationary" and "Progressive" Conservatism ended in favor of the latter. By 1885 he was in the position to formulate definitely the policy of "Progressive Conservatism" which was known as "Tory Democracy" and challenged the claim of the Liberals to be the champions of the masses. In 1886 he was Chancellor of the Exchequer and leader of the House of Commons. Lord Randolph was linked to the United States by his marriage to Jennie, daughter of Leonard Jerome, of New York.

The Right Honorable Winston Spencer Churchill, P. C., C. H., holds a unique position among the statesmen of England. Author and painter in his spare moments, he has held almost every first rank administrative post in many British cabinets during the past twenty-five years. Chancellor of the Exchequer, Secretary for War and Air, Home Secretary, Colonial Secretary, and First Lord of the Admiralty. The readiness of the Navy, almost pre-readiness, at the outbreak of the great war won national gratitude for Mr. Churchill, for on the declaration of war August 4, 1914, the fleet was found "ready" at their war stations; there had to be no hasty mobilization. Brilliant, daring, and farseeing, his actions have, if not at the moment, in after years almost invariably received the stamp of approval and justification.

Now to America comes the second Randolph Churchill, who has charm, youth and eloquence, and possesses the gift of oratory in which his father and grandfather shone. Immediately following one of his addresses at Oxford University, a cable was sent to the New York Times, which said: "Except that he was more restrained in his speech than his impetuous

Sir Philip Greet Says Talkies Will Not Replace Stage Plays

That the talking pictures will never replace the legitimate stage or interfere with the popularity of play presentation, is the opinion of Sir Philip Ben Greet, 72 year old English actor, who will appear in Chapel Hill April 14, given in an interview with the University of Iowa Iowanian.

"The talkies have opened up a new field of remarkable entertainment, especially for people who do not approve of, or are unable to witness stage performances," Sir Philip said. For himself, he prefers silent pictures. "If all the pictures were like Abraham Lincoln, I would soon become a film fan," he said.

Praises Speech Schools

Speech schools in universities are a wonderful thing, Sir Philip believes. He stresses the importance of speaking English properly. "We mall the English language," he stated, "and speech departments in schools can correct this fault." Confidence, poise, and assurance are developed through the study of speech, even though the student does not intend to become an actor. Sir Philip says that the ability to act is essential for a successful stage career. "There is a very poor chance for the incompetent actor. He is nothing but a fluke if he gets a part in a play," he believes.

Actor Compares Audiences

The difference between American and English audiences, Sir Philip said, is that Americans laugh at the stage business, and the Englishmen laugh at dialogue. The audiences are equally appreciative of Shakespeare. Sir Philip says, "The play is the thing!—not the characters, but the plot." He seldom looks at a program when he attends the theatre.

Sir Philip has been on the stage for fifty-one years, playing various parts in Shakespeare and some modern plays. Last summer his company presented Diplomacy, Lillies of the Field, Hay Fever, Outward Bound, and She Stoops to Conquer, among their modern plays.

After a tour through the South, the middle west and the New England states, Sir Philip plans to return to England in June.

Valuable Musical Instrument Taken Out Of Dormitory

Perhaps the man who entered Battle dormitory last Tuesday night and stole a violin from the room of a student did not know that the instrument's value to its owner is practically beyond mere price. It is more precious to him from the standpoint of tradition, intimate association, and age than from that of actual cash.

Tracing the history of the violin back the owner stated that it had been in his family for over a hundred years. It is a Stanier instrument made in Absan, Germany, and dated 1684. The owner's great-grandfather was a Norwegian seaman, and captained a tramp boat all over the northern Atlantic. On one of his voyages he obtained the instrument from a sailor who was unaware of its value. When the family moved from Norway to America, the violin was brought along, and it was given to its present owner by his grandmother four years ago.

The owner is trying to trace his instrument through the aid of the Y. M. C. A. and the student council. If any student should discover anything concerning its whereabouts, the owner would be very grateful if that person would report it to the "Y" director. The violin was taken after nine o'clock Tuesday night.

COLLIER COBB TO SPEAK IN RALEIGH

Dr. Collier Cobb, head of the department of Geology at the University, will give an illustrated lecture at Saint Mary's school in Raleigh this evening at eight-thirty o'clock. Mr. Cobb has been a member of the University faculty for thirty-nine years. This will be the first time for many years that he has addressed groups in Saint Mary's school, as the last time was in 1879.

The subject of Dr. Cobb's talk will be "Caribbean Lands." He will supplement his talk with numerous pictures illustrative of the subject he is to discuss. He will explain many interesting phases of the geological formations in the Caribbean regions.

Lawrence Receives Bonus Applications

Congress passed on February twenty-seventh an act known as the soldier's bonus which enables ex-service men of the World War to borrow up to fifty per cent of the amount of their service.

George Lawrence, superintendent of public welfare, is service officer of the local post of the American Legion under whose auspices the bonus is to be distributed; he announces that many applications have already come in. Last Saturday twenty applications were filed, exhausting the supply of blanks. The demand was so great Monday that 500 blanks were printed locally. Yesterday a total of seventy-five applications for men in Orange County were filed.

In addition to those applications filled out here, they are also filled out by the postmasters in Carrboro and Hillsboro.

Paul H. Robinson, commander of the local post of the American Legion, has received twenty-five applications and it is estimated that should all the service men apply for their bonus the maximum amount received by them would exceed $200,000.

HUMAN RELATIONS INSTITUTE GIVEN $500 BY SENIORS

Gifts From Phelps-Stokes Foundation and Senior Class Make Institute Possible.

SESSIONS TO BEGIN MAY 9

Yesterday, at chapel period, the senior class decided to give as its gift to the University $500 to complete the necessary budget of the Human Relations Institute. President Pat Patterson presided at the meeting. Noah Goodridge, chairman of the gift committee, made the report of the committee, which had unanimously decided that the class' gift would be in the nature of a donation to the Institute.

R. B. House, executive secretary, made a statement to the effect that the University was whole-heartedly in favor of the Institute and has the intention of perpetuating it as part of the program of the University.

Beverly Moore, chairman of the Institute, spoke during the meeting and stated his hope that the senior class would back the Institute in spirit as well as financially.

The Phelps-Stokes Foundation has granted the Institute $500 to further its program, and now the senior class has also voted to donate $500, to continue the program of the Institute. There could have been no program this year without this timely assistance.

The University Y. M. C. A. held an Institute on Human Relations, from March 20 through March 25, 1927. The local

MERGER BILL IS PASSED IN HOUSE

Plan to Consolidate Three State Institutions Must Gain Approval of Senate.

One of the bills advocated by Governor Gardner in his program of State government reform was passed yesterday in the House of the state Legislature without a dissenting vote. This bill is the one that provides for merging the three state supported institutions into the University of North Carolina. This plan will go into effect at the beginning of the next school year.

Although the University, State College, and N. C. C. W. will be combined into one university, the three will continue to operate as separate plants and under separate managements, retaining individual endowments and loan funds.

The plan is to have the universities operate under a consolidated board of trustees until 1933, when a single board of 100 members with ten women will be named. Representative Jeffress from Guilford County said that it was a significant forward step in higher education.

From the woman's point of view, according to Mrs. Mebane, it seemed an advantage, since it would enable them to attend a woman's college and still attend and get a degree from the University of North Carolina.

The bill will in all probability be introduced into the Senate soon in order that that section of the Legislature may vote for or against the measure. As there have been no indications of any objection from that body, there is no reason why it should not be passed and put into effect.

A Typical Democratic Gathering

The meeting in Washington of the Democratic national Committee turned out about as expected. Despite reassuring statements of former presidential candidate Al Smith and other party leaders, Chairman John J. Raskob, who is trying to weld a group of independent political units into a national party, brought the liquor question before the committee. And about as expected Southern Democrats, most of whom are members of congress got their chance to rave about saving the home.

As we see it, Mr. Raskob merely suggested a platform to the committee with the advice that they go home and study it while not campaigning for an office. Instead we have a veritable blow-up. North Carolina's national committeeman, Senator Morrison, and Senator Joe Robinson, Democratic Senate floor leader, made speeches. Just what they were driving at is hard to divine. But they said plenty for home consumption.

Now both Mr. Morrison and Mr. Robinson could have saved their breath. Everyone in North Carolina is familiar with Morrison's stand on prohibition. He believes as do all other public officials in this state that the Democratic party is dry. Senator Robinson strayed a little from the dry and narrow in 1928 but last spring he went back to the bone dry side of the political fence.

And Mr. Raskob's wet pronouncements have been broadcast so often by the Republican party and its subsidiaries, the Anti-saloon league, the Hoovercrats (whatever they are), and other organizations that no one learned anything new.

The Democrats would do well to leave such controversial questions alone for the time being and concentrate their efforts on building a national party that will have an even break in the next general election. At least let the prohibition question rest a while, especially since the discussions lead to nothing.

A Bit Controversial

Of course Al Smith is much more of a politician than we are and probably knows a great deal more about choosing issues, but in spite of this we cannot help from disagreeing with him on one important matter. That matter is of course whether prohibition should be made an issue in the presidential campaign of 1932. We also disagree with Mr. Smith when he says that prohibition has "got to be an issue" in 1932.

Prohibition is a question on which there is seemingly little unanimity of opinion. There are a great number of different opinions regarding the most advisable course on this subject, and the advocates of each opinion show no likelihood of assenting to a program different from their own. If the Democratic party assumes a definite policy regarding prohibition it will certainly lose a great many voters who absolutely refuse to accede to any settlement of prohibition differing from their own idea.

On the other hand, if the Democratic party does not take a definite stand on prohibition, it will in all probability lose few votes on this issue. So Democrats, if you have ever "straddled" an issue straddle this one!—J. C. S.

Mahatma Gandhi

Mahatma Gandhi has scored another victory for India. The concessions made by Great Britain are not great, but they are concessions. England has again felt the weight of Gandhi's power and influence, and the fight for Indian independence has advanced another step, without violence and revolution. Gandhi's policy of passive resistance is accomplishing infinitely more toward Indian independence than is possible by active revolt, and without loss of life.

Mahatma Gandhi, little, wizened figure that he is, stands out in the world today as the most powerful single personage of modern times. Over two hundred million people follow him with implicit trust. Mussolini is dwarfed in comparison with this little man, and where Mussolini is violent, stern, ruling with an iron hand, Gandhi is peaceable, kindly, and gentle. The source of Mussolini's power is force, but Gandhi's power comes from the love and admiration his people have for him.

England does well to respect Gandhi.—H. B.

Mrs. Lee, Spencer hall hostess, thinks the new inter-floor telephone system there is "just the finest thing," but the big stocking and blonde dealers on the campus think that a particular feature of it is a nuisance. While Mr. H. was talking to Miss W. one night last week, the telephone connection was cut at ten-thirty before he had a chance to ask her for a date. Curses!

The more-or-less metropolitan publications are beginning to recognize the versatility of North Carolina: You remember what Time had to say about Bobby Carmichael's Christmas card idea; Collier's has noted the fact that the smallest daily paper in the world is the Tryon Daily Bulletin; Howard Brubaker, in the New Yorker, mentioned our Senator Cam Morrison and the McNinch-power commission case in his column "Of All Things," and recently, upon hearing of the controversy over the proper way of eating corn pone and potlikker that Oscar Coffin, the University "journalism department," was called upon to settle, he wrote, "It is pleasant to know that the quaint old custom of eating has not completely disappeared." Now if some University campus man —and offhand we nominate John Lang—should get his name and picture in the College Humor celebrity section, the glory that will be ours!

The professors who teach eight-thirty classes have asked this department to call the attention of the students to this statement in George Washington's Rules of Civility, a copy of which is being given each freshman by the dean's office: "Sleep not when others speak." The students refer the professors to this one: "Be not tedious in discourse."

churches and all campus organizations also assisted and cooperated in the program. The University gave over a full hour in the middle of each day for a convocation.

The Institute program opened Sunday morning, March 20, with visiting Institute speakers in four different churches at eleven o'clock. Sunday evening, a union service and public mass meeting was held, with a special address delivered by Dr. Herbert A. Gibbons, of Princeton, N. J. Throughout the five days following, two or more public addresses were made, a total of twenty-one addresses being delivered during the six-day program.

The most prominent parts of the program were the classroom seminars on Human Relation topics. The visiting leaders conducted the seminars in the classrooms. There were a total of sixty-one different seminars during the week. In addition to the addresses and seminars, there was a large public forum at the close of each day. Extensive opportunity was given to students and faculty members for personal and group interviews with the leaders.

The program of the Institute proper closed Friday night, March 25, although one of the most interesting numbers in the entire program came on Monday night, when the negro quartet from Hampton Institute rendered a group of negro spirituals to an audience of more than 2000 students, faculty, and local people.

The Human Relations Institute has a program every four years. The officers of the Institute are: Beverly Moore, chairman; Harry F. Comer, secretary. The student members are: Ed Hamer, Clyde Dunn, Pat Patterson, Joe Eagles, Noah Goodridge, Jack Dungan, Will Yarborough, R. C. Greene, John Lang, and Mayne Albright. The faculty members of the Institute are: President Graham, F. F. Bradshaw, R. B. House, D. D. Carroll, H. W. Odum, K. C. Frazier, E. W. Knight, H. D. Meyer, T. J. Woofter, Jr., and W. D. Moss.

The program of the institute this year will start May 3 and will continue through May 9. The Weil lectures will be part of the program. Dr. Harold J. Laski, professor of political science at the London School of Economics, in London, England, will deliver three addresses during the program. His subjects will be: "The Crisis in the Modern State," "The Place of Administration in the Modern State," and "The Expert in Democracy."

For the program this year, the following men have been approached on the subject of international relations: James Brown Scott, William Vance McMurray, Stephen P. Duggan, ator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, Senator George Moses of Massachusetts, Senator William Borah of Idaho, John Dewey, and Nicholas Murray Butler.

On the subject of industrial relations, the officers of the Institute hope to have the following men speak during the program: Owen D. Young, Ralph W. Sockman, Raymond Fosdick, Norman Thomas, Henry Dennison, Stewart Chase, Fred Myers, E. M. Patterson, Stewart W. Cramer, Daniell Willard, and John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

Dr. Will Alexander, Jesse Jones, R. R. Moton, Mordecai Johnson, and K. T. Paul have been asked to speak on the subject of inter-racial relations.

FRENCH COURSES TO BE GIVEN ON EUROPEAN TOUR

of French literature in which the main literary movements in the history of France will be briefly outlined in sixty hours' study.

The latter course will carry a tuition of twenty dollars and those taking it will be required to attend lectures of French literature given at the Universite de Grenoble. These will be delivered in French. For both the courses a prerequisite of two years college French is required. One course credit for either French 5 or French 7 will be given by the University extension department to those students who complete the requirements of one of these courses. Credit for two courses will not be given to one student, even though he take both classes.

For those persons who do not desire to take either class a special tour has been outlined. The director has gladly consented to organize trips to such places as: The French Riviera, visiting Nice, Arles, Cannes, Monte Carlo, etc.; the Chateau country, visiting Tour, Blois, Orleans, Chambord, Chenonceaux; and to southern France, visiting Nimes, Arles, Avignon, and going even as far as Carcassonne. The cost of such trips is not included in the fixed price of the tour.

For the benefit of persons wishing to travel more extensively during the summer a side trip to Italy is planned. The party is to leave Grenoble July 19; visit Genoa, Turin, Rome, Pisa, Naples, Florence, Venice, Milan, Geneva, and join the main group at Montreux. The expense of this Italian extension is $135.

From Montreux the whole party will travel into Germany and Holland. After visiting Holland the group separates, one part sailing back to New York and the other going to England before setting sail on the homeward journey.

Students and others who desire full information may obtain it from J. A. Downs in room 315 Murphey.

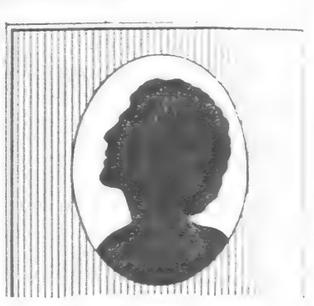
runs. An article on some other phase of University life will probably be written by some professor or student, as a result of Miss Lee's visit here.

Among the interesting things that Miss Lee is doing on her tour of the country is collecting a glossary of popular terms used in the different colleges. So far, Miss Lee has visited schools in Illinois, Indiana, Virginia, and comes here from Duke, where she spent two days. She found the Duke buildings "wonderful" and declared that Duke students were unusually proud of their school. "The University of Virginia," she said, "is one of the most unusual schools I have visited."

After only an hour or two in Chapel Hill, Miss Lee said she was extremely impressed with the University, especially with the list of famous people on its faculty, the records of its students in athletics, its scholastic attainment, and its age and traditions.

Among the collegiate phrases, which she thought might be of interest to students here were these: "borass" (in Carolina slang, "bull shooting"); "perch, muff, smooch" (all about dating); "a cute looking Annie, Dolly, Jane" (referring to girls); "gummy" (griping); and "sticking out your neck" (well-known to Carolina students). Along with these, Miss Lee put down the expression, "to shine," common to this campus.



Following her interview with the editors, Miss Lee was taken on a tour of the campus by Clyde Dunn. He was assisted by Yarborough and Dungan. She immediately fell into the spirit of things, saying, when she was told about the arboretum, "Shall we see that this afternoon or tonight?"

"What is more pleasant than a cold bath before breakfast?" asks a writer. The answer is: No cold bath before breakfast

Stage Set For Dixie Indoor Meet Today

Dopesters Give Tulane And W. & L. Edge To Win

Games Are Drawing Fifty Teams and 380 Track Aspirants; Conference Competition to Begin at Seven O'clock.

CROWDS SWARM CAMPUS

Non-Conference and Scholastic Divisions to Run Off Events at Three-Thirty.

(By Otto Steinreich)

With the stage set for the second annual Southern Conference Indoor Track meet, trackmen from every state except Florida and Kentucky poured into Chapel Hill yesterday by train, plane, and car. The Tin Can, the site where 1931 Southern Conference track history will be made, has been equipped with extra ceiling lights and flood lights over the jumping and vaulting pits. Pennants from the various institutions represented are draped over the walls of the structure.

Dopesters have picked either Tulane or Washington and Lee as the winner of the meet, but due to the number of stars on many of the teams one guess as to who the winner will be is as good as another. Many believe that the points will be distributed among a number of teams and that no aggregation will have a wide margin in points over any other.

Individual medals will be awarded to the first three place winners in each event. First place winners medals will be awarded to each of the four members of the winning relay team. A permanent team plaque and a challenge cup will go to the winner of the Conference division.

Washington and Lee, North Carolina, and Augusta Military Academy are the champions in the Conference, freshman, and scholastic divisions, respectively. The indoor Conference records which the big field will attempt to shatter tonight are as follows:

60-yard dash: Farmer, North Carolina, 6.4 seconds.

440-yard dash: Shepard, Washington and Lee, 55.8 seconds.

880-yard run: Linzey, Maryland, 2 minutes 2 seconds.

Two mile run: Young, Georgia, 9 minutes 37 2-3 seconds.

60-yard high hurdles: Speer, W. and L., 7.8 seconds.

60-yard low hurdles: Finkelstein, Washington and Lee, 7 seconds.

High jump: Bagby, North Carolina, and Bostick, South Carolina, 5 feet 11 1-8.

One mile run: Wells, Tulane, 4 minutes 37.4 seconds.

Shot put: McDonald, Maryland, 42 feet 10 1-2 inches.

Broad jump: Hamm, Georgia Tech, 22 feet 7 inches.

Pole vault: Arnold, North Carolina, 12 feet 7 1-2 inches.

One mile relay: Washington and Lee, 3 minutes 37.4 seconds.

Carolina's entries are: Farmer, Drane, Slusser, Geiger, and Marland in the sixty yard dash; Davis, Stafford, Eagan, and Smith in the seventy yard high hurdles; Slusser, Davis, Geiger, Erickson, and Stafford in the seventy yard low hurdles; Weil, Brock, Smith, Garrett, and Drane in the quarter mile run; Jensen, Jones, Garrett, Watkins, and Brock in the half mile run; Jensen and Jones in the mile run; Baucom, Cordle, Hubbard, and Pratt in the two mile run; Bagby, Stafford, Hamlet, Owens, Howard, and Newland in the high jump; Brown in the shot put; Brown, Stafford, and Arnold in the broad jump; Arnold, and Ruble in the pole vault; the

MONOGRAM MEN COMBAT ROOKIE GRIDDERS TODAY

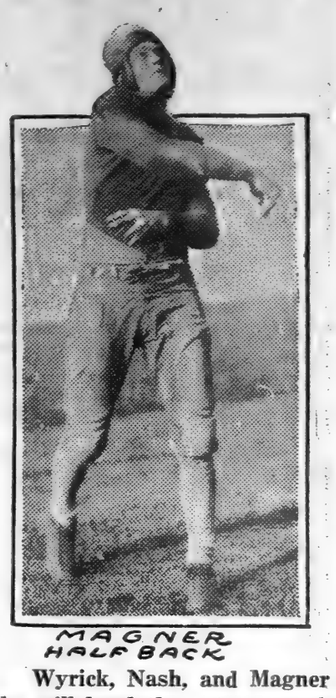
Stars of Past Years to Don Moleskins for Annual Football Battle; Veterans Favored

At two o'clock this afternoon the Monogram wearers, veterans of many past battles, will meet an aspiring bunch of newcomers in the final game of the winter football season. The Rookies were defeated last year 45-6.

The leader of that 1929 squad will be on hand again to lead the Monograms against their annual opponents. Ray Farris, freshman football coach, will don his moleskins again and is expected to be at his old position at left guard when the opening whistle sounds. Another freshman coach, Odell Sapp, who starred at end back in 1928, will be seen in action again.

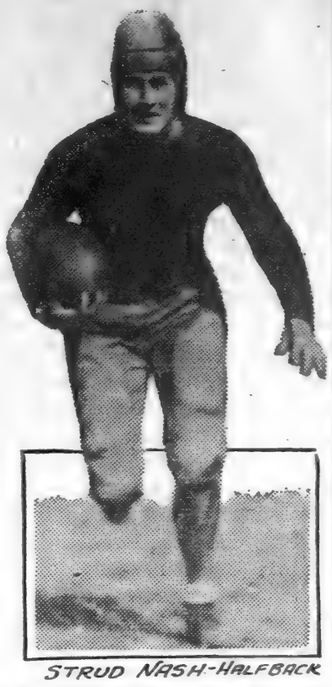
The Monogram backfield will probably consist of Pete Wyrick, Jim Magner, Chuck Erickson, and Henry House, all of whom have finished their intercollegiate careers. Magner and Erickson have been coaching during the winter season. In the line the Monograms will have Ned Lipscomb at center with Farris on one side and either Bob Blackwood, Herb Newcombe, or Ellis Fysal on the other.

George Thompson is scheduled to start at one of the tackles with June Underwood or Harry Hodges at the other. Aubrey Parsley will probably pair with Sapp on the flanks although Erwin Walker, sophomore star, may get the call at either end.



The Rookies will find most of their strength among the graduates from last fall's freshman team. Norman Hackney, Weisker, and John Phipps, halfbacks, will bear the brunt of the Fledgling's attack along with Bill Croom and George Houston, varsity reserves last fall, and either Charles Woollen or Walter Jones will handle the quarterback assignment.

The Rookies will present a strong line built around Frank Smith and Matt Strickland at tackles. Gus McIver, star guard of last year's freshman squad, has been converted into a center and will probably start at this position, although Redding may see action as his alternate. The guards will likely be picked from Caldwell, Sam Eanes, and Tony Oliverio, while Frankel, freshman star, will probably hold down one end with either Brandt or Zeke Cozart at the other.



The probable starting line-ups follow:

Monograms	Pos.	Rookies
Sapp	L. E.	Cozart
Underwood or Hodges	L. T.	Smith
Farris	L. G.	Caldwell
Lipscomb	C.	McIver
Newcombe or Blackwood	R. G.	Oliverio or Eanes
Thompson	R. T.	Strickland or Adkins
Parsley	R. E.	Frankel or Brandt
Wyrick	Q. B.	Woollen or Jones
Magner	L. H.	Hackney
Erickson	R. H.	Phipps
House	F. B.	Houston

THREE BACKS WHO WILL LEAD MONOGRAM ASSAULT

Wyrick, Nash, and Magner are but three of the brilliant grid stars of 1930 and past years who will head the veteran ranks in the annual Monogram-Rookie game in Kenan stadium this afternoon. The trio above had a large share of responsibility in the Monogram 45-6 victory last year and again dons the moleskins to attempt a win over the fledgings.

DOPING 'EM OUT

BOB BETTS

North Carolina should have, barring accidents, the strongest tennis team in the South this year. Tulane, led by Cliff Sutter, had formerly the best netmen in the Conference, but Sutter is gone now.

The Tar Heels have two of the most sensational sophomore tennis players to be found anywhere in the country. Bryant Grant, National Clay Court champion, has been hailed as a second "Little Bill" Johnson. Grant is fast, accurate, dynamic, and calm at all times. His short statue does not hinder him much, if at all. He is a human dynamo. The Tar Heel star ranks tenth in the National rating. Wilmer Hines, the tall South Carolinian, is the second tennis "find" on the team. Hines has a fine build for a tennis player. His height enables him to get shots that a shorter man could not reach. Hines also has stamina and endurance. The South Carolina boy is the National Junior Champion and ranks 32nd in the National rating.

Coach Kenfield has four veterans from last year's team back this season. Captain "Sonny" Graham, Ed Yeomans, former state champion, "Hinky" Hendlin, present state champion, and Phil Liskin, are holdovers from 1930. Yeomans and Hendlin are fast, hard-serving players. In addition to these men there are Lenoir Wright and Abels from last year's freshman team. These two boys round out the strongest freshman tennis team the Tar Heels have ever had.

Carolina certainly needs a strong net team, as they are meeting some of the best tennis teams in the East this spring. In addition to state and conference teams, Carolina meets Harvard, Yale, Brown, N. Y. U., and Princeton. There is also a possibility that a match will be arranged with the Davis Cup squad when they come to Pinehurst in early April. Carolina ought to make a nice showing against them.

THREE CAVALIER RING CHAMPS TO FIGHT NEXT YEAR

Three of the four Virginia boxers who won individual championships in the fifth Southern Conference boxing tournament will be eligible for competition next year.

Captain Robert Rainey of Oklahoma City, Okla., is the only one of the victorious quartette who has completed his three years of varsity competition. Rainey has been twice titleholder in the welterweight class.

Bobby Goldstein of Washington, D. C., featherweight; Doug Myers of Petersburg, Va., middleweight; and Fenton Gentry light-heavy-weight will all be eligible to defend their championships during the season of 1932.

Of the three men who helped make up the victorious seven, but who did not get into the finals only Welford Smith of Richmond, Va., lightweight, will be barred from boxing next winter. Jack Paul of Watertown, Fla., bantamweight, and Herbert Bryant of Alexandria, Va., heavyweight, have two more years of varsity competition before them.

ALPHA PSI DELTA HEARS REPORT ON BRAIN FUNCTIONS

The local chapter of Alpha Psi Delta, national Psychology fraternity, held its meeting in New West building Thursday evening at seven-thirty o'clock. The subject of the meeting was a discussion of experimental work being performed in the department of Psychology, and several talks by members of the society.

A symposium of the experimental research work that is being done by J. W. Lasley on "The Functions of the Brain" was heard, to-gether with some papers on the same subject. Dr. H. W. Crane, of the department of Psychology, presented a paper on this topic. Brief talks were also given by Dr. L. M. Brooks, Dr. M. L. Goudge, and Miss Mabel Bacon. After the various matters for consideration had been discussed, refreshments were served to the members.

The officers of Alpha Psi Delta are Mr. H. M. de Wyck, president; Mr. A. G. Bayroff, vice-president; and Miss Mabel Bacon, secretary and treasurer.

Why we spend $2,000,000 to put CAMEL cigarettes in the new HUMIDOR PACK

WE have been in the tobacco business a long time down here at Winston-Salem and we take a lot of pride in the quality of the cigarettes we make.

While we have spent a good many million dollars advertising Camels, we've always held to the old fashioned idea that the thing that really counts is what we put into our cigarette and not what we say about it.

If we know anything about tobacco, and we think we do, Camels contain the choicest Turkish and the mellowest, ripest domestic leaves that money can buy.

In fact we have every reason to be proud of the quality of Camels as they come from the factory, but the remark of an old friend of ours from Denver some time ago emphasized a point that has been the problem of the cigarette industry for years.

As he inhaled the smoke from a Camel we gave him in our offices one morning, he sighed with very evident enjoyment and then asked jokingly, "What is this, a special blend reserved for Camel executives?"

"Certainly not," we told him. "This package of Camels was bought at the corner store this morning."

"Well," he said, "I've been a dyed in the wool Camel smoker for a good many years, but upon my soul I never got a cigarette as good as this in Denver. If you would give the rest of the world the kind of Camels you sell here in Winston-Salem, you ought to have all the cigarette business there is."

THAT statement simply emphasized again the cigarette industry's most important problem. The more we thought about it, the surer we were that he was dead right, and that somehow, something must be done.

Denver wasn't getting a fair break. Neither in fact was any other town. The only people who really knew how good Camels could be, were the folks right here in Winston-Salem.

That was due to a factor no cigarette manufacturer had ever been able to control.

Naturally there is no difference whatever in the quality of the tobacco in Camels, whether you buy them in Winston-Salem, Denver or Timbuctoo. But up to now there has been a very real difference in the condition of the cigarettes by the time they reached the smoker.

The flavor and mildness of fine tobacco depend upon the retention of its natural, not added, moisture content which is prime at about ten per cent.

In spite of our great pains always to make sure Camels left the factory with just the right amount of natural moisture, no cigarette package had ever yet been designed that could prevent that precious moisture from drying out.

THERE are three things about a cigarette that can sting the tongue and unkindly burn the throat.

(1) Cheap tobaccos.

(2) Particles of peppery dust left in the tobacco because of inefficient cleaning methods.

(3) A parched dry condition of the tobacco due to loss of natural moisture by overheating or evaporation.

Always certain of the quality of our tobaccos we had already made Camel a "dustless" cigarette by the use of a specially designed vacuum cleaning apparatus exclusive with our factory.

Now, if we could perfect a package that would actually act as a humidor and retain the natural moisture content, then Yuma, Arizona, could enjoy Camels as much as we do here at Winston-Salem.

We knew what we wanted. We tried many things. We asked the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory to help us.

After many experiments and humidity tests covering all methods of packing cigarettes came the detailed report of which this is the net:

(A) No existing cigarette package, including those wrapped in glassine paper or ordinary cellophane, gives anything like adequate protection against evaporation.

(B) All cigarettes so packed tend to dry out rapidly from the day they are released from the factory.

(C) Only a waterproof material with a specially devised air-tight seal could give the desired protection.

(D) This measure, while costly, could be relied on to keep Camels in prime condition for at least three months in any climate.

If you have a technical bent, the graph below made by the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory will show you the exact results of their exhaustive study.

Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory chart above graphically shows you that only the Camel Humidor Pack delivers cigarettes to you in prime condition

YOU may be sure we gave this report a lot of careful study. We checked it and re-checked it and then we went ahead. We tried this device and that. At last we met success. The air-tight wrapping involved the designing of special processes, special machines.

That costs a lot of money, more than $2,000,000 the first year, but after you have tried Camels packed this modern new way we are sure you will agree it is a fine investment.

For some time now every Camel that has left our factory has gone out in this new Humidor Pack.

We have said nothing about it until now, to make sure your dealer would be able to supply you when the good news came out.

Camel smokers of course have already discovered that their favorite cigarette is better and milder now than ever before.

If you aren't a Camel smoker, try them just to see what a difference there really is between harsh, dried out tobacco and a properly conditioned cigarette.

You can feel the difference, you can hear the difference and you certainly can taste the difference.

Of course we're prejudiced.

We always have believed that Camel is the world's best cigarette.

Now we know it.

Just treat yourself to Camels in the new Humidor Pack and see if you don't agree.

JOHNNY HAMP TO PLAY FOR JUNIOR AND SENIOR BALL

Elaborate Plans Made for Joint Dance to Be Given in Tin Can April 24-25.

Contrary to the usual custom in the past of holding two separate dances, the Junior and Senior classes have decided to combine the class dances as the Junior-Senior Ball, which will occur on April 24-25.

The committees in charge of the arrangements for the affair have secured Johnny Hamp and his "Kentucky Serenaders" to furnish the music for the occasion. Hamp's orchestra, which is considered one of the leading ten orchestras in the country, is very popular in this section of the country.

The first of these two dances will be the Junior Prom and is to occur in the Tin Can Friday, April 24, from nine till one o'clock. The annual Senior Ball, will take place in the Tin Can between the hours of nine and twelve the following night.

Representatives of the Junior class on the executive committee in charge of all arrangements are: Theron Brown, president of the class, Jack Dungan, Jack Farris, John Phil Cooper, and Steve Lynch. Those from the Senior class are Pat Patterson, president of the class, John Idol, Cliff Baucom, William Cooper, and K. C. Ramsay.

According to plans now under consideration the color scheme or motif for the decorations will be predominantly black and white. There will be a large crystal ball with reflecting surfaces in the center of the room. In all of the appointments, elaborate formality will be emphasized.

Many patronesses from various parts of the state are expected to attend this ball. No one who is not a member of either the Junior or the Senior class will be admitted as it is strictly a class function. Two bids will be given to each member of the class, one for himself and one for a guest.

RECTOR, MERRITT ARE CHOSEN FOR DEBATE CONTEST

Beatty Rector and W. D. Merritt were chosen to represent the University in the debate with Asbury College, of Wilmore, Kentucky, Tuesday in the Chapel Hill high school auditorium. The subject is Resolved: That the Nations of the World Should Adopt a Policy of Free Trade. Carolina will uphold the affirmative.

The Proconian Club, forensic group in the local high school, has invited the debaters to hold this contest in their auditorium since the date of the debate is the night before final examinations.

The decision will be by shift of audience vote. Asbury College is one of the schools to which the University is sending a team in April.

Alpha Kappa Delta Banquet

Alpha Kappa Delta, sociological fraternity will give their initial banquet Monday evening in the Carolina Inn at six-fifteen o'clock. Dean I. H. Manning and Dean C. T. McCormick, of the medical and law schools respectively, and Dr. J. F. Dashiell, of the psychology department, will be the speakers.

Examination Schedule for Winter Quarter

LASKI WILL GIVE WEIL LECTURES

London Professor to Speak in Connection With Human Relations Institute.

Harold J. Laski, professor of political science at the London School of Economics, London, England will deliver the Weil lectures for 1931, May 7, 8, and 9, on the general subject "Democracy and Administration."

The Weil lecture committee has pooled its 1931 lecture funds and speaker with the Human Relations Institute program which act is equivalent to matching the gifts from the Senior class and the Phelps-Stokes Foundation. The lecture will be a definite part of the Institute.

Harold J. Laski was born in Manchester, England, in 1893. His educational activities have included positions as lecturer at McGill University from 1914 to 1916 and at Harvard from 1916 to 1920, vice-chairman of the British Institute of Adult Education, member of council of the Institute of Public Administration, and lecturer on political science at Magdalene College, Cambridge, from 1922 to 1923. Professor Laski has been connected with the London School of Economics since 1920 and has been professor of political science at the University of London since 1926.

Among the works of which he is author are: The Problem of Sovereignity (1917), Authority in the Modern State (1919), Political Thought from Locke to Bentham (1920), Foundations of Sovereignity (1921), Letters of Burke (ed. 1922), The Defense of Liberty Against Tyrants (1924), Autobiography of J. S. Mill (ed. 1924), A Grammar of Politics (1925), Communism (1927).

Professor Laski has also written many articles which have appeared in New Republic, Harvard Law Review, the Nation, Manchester Guardian, and other magazines.

The lectures which he will deliver here, under the general head "Democracy and Administration,' will be on the specific topics "The Crisis in the Modern State," "The Place of Administration in the Modern State," and "The Expert in Democracy."

DELTA SIGMA PI GIVES BANQUET

Duke Professor Is Speaker at Joint Meeting of Two Chapters.

At a joint banquet of the University and N. C. State chapters of Delta Sigma Pi, professional commerce fraternity, given in the Carolina Inn Friday night, Dr. Charles B. Elwood, professor of sociology at Duke University, was principal speaker.

Dr. Elwood took as his topic "The Business Man and Social Problems," pointing out the need for business men to establish a code of ethics similar to those which have grown up in other professionalized field. The speaker then undertook to show how this code can more easily and more effectively be developed in a college fraternity than in any other organization. He also demonstrated that business men have become rather lax in their governmental responsibilities.

President Frank P. Graham, Dean Brown of the school of commerce at State, Dean D. D. Carroll of the University school of commerce, and Dr. C. C. Taylor of N. C. State graduate school were among the guests attending the banquet.

Extension Division Will Conduct Tour

The extension division of the University, in cooperation with the geology department, will conduct a sixty day motor tour to the west coast this summer, starting from Chapel Hill June 7.

The trip will cover more than 9000 miles and will take the travelers through twenty states. Six of the most important national parks will be included in the itinerary and Pike's Peak, Mt. Lassen—the only active volcano in the United States and other places of geological interest will be visited.

J. B. Whitener, superintendent of schools at Maiden, will be manager of the tour.

Sociology Eleven

In response to many requests from students, Dr. E. R. Groves will give the course, sociology eleven, on marriage and the family next quarter. The course will be open to men seniors only, and is scheduled for twelve every day.

LIBRARY EXHIBITS RARE EDITIONS OF THOREAU'S WORKS

Dr. Adams' Collection of Essayist's Books Displayed for Literature Class.

The books now on exhibition in the entrance of the University library are first editions of the works of Henry D. Thoreau and are being displayed for the American literature class, English 59. These are a part of a collection of four hundred books by or pertaining to Thoreau, which Dr. Raymond Adams of the English department has gathered during the past seven years.

The display consists of ten first editions of Thoreau, and one book from Thoreau's library contains his signature. Included in the collection are two of the rarest books in American literature—the first edition of A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers, published in 1849, and a first edition of Walden, published in 1854.

Two recent books, Sir Walter Raleigh, and The Service, published since 1900, represent essays discovered among manuscripts of lectures delivered by Thoreau.

The book containing Thoreau's signature was his mineralogy textbook which he gave to Ralph Waldo Emerson's daughter, Ellen. The book was given to Mr. Adams last summer by Raymond Emerson, grandson of the Concord author.

Other first editions of Thoreau's works which are on display are: Excursions, 1863; Poems of Nature, 1895; Letters to Various Persons, 1865; The Maine Woods, 1864; Cape Cod, 1865; A Yankee in Canada, with Anti-Slavery and Reform Papers, 1866.

Mr. Adams stated that he saw the first edition of Walden, which he now owns, advertised in a book dealers catalog less than five years ago for $6. This edition now sells anywhere from $100 to $500. The edition of Excursions was bought from a dealer for $3 who failed to realize the recent increase in value of first editions of Thoreau's works. This is the second copy of Excursions owned by Mr. Adams, and is interesting to North Carolinians because the book once belonged to a sea captain who wrote a note on one of the pages telling of having seen certain diving birds in Newbern which Thoreau mentions having seen in Massachusetts.

Mr. Adams has one of the 1862 copies of A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers which is as rare as a first edition. This is a first edition with a new title page and is one of the seven hundred copies returned to Thoreau unsold. After his death, these books were rebought by the publishers and reissued in 1862.

Charity Show

The attraction at the Carolina theatre this afternoon will be Lupe Velez in the movie version of "The Storm." This production, it is claimed, shows the Mexican star at her best.

The presentation this afternoon will start at two-thirty with a cartoon comedy and a travelogue which will be followed by the feature. The proceeds of the show will be to aid theological students.

Wilkinson Honored

John Wilkinson was named yesterday by Ransom Whittenton, retiring president of the Philanthropic Assembly, to membership for the year 1931-32 on the University debate council.

Wilkinson is known as a foremost debater, having represented the University on numerous occasions in this field of activity. This appointment comes as a climax to his forensic career here.

ONE ACT PLAYS WILL BE GIVEN BY PLAYMAKERS

Organization's Work of Quarter Will End With Performance Tomorrow.

The Carolina Playmakers will give a program of plays Monday night, one of which is a locally written play, and the others are professional plays. The performance will not be open to the general public.

Immoral Holly, written by Closs Peace in the playwriting course in English, is the first number. The plays directed by the author. The cast consists of: Holly, Closs Peace; Ceely, Adelaide Reed; Alice, Bess Winburn; and Mrs. Strong, Margaret Vale. The scene of the play is Holly's room in a girl's school.

A Proposal Under Difficulties, written by John Kendrick Bangs, is the first of the professional plays to be presented. The cast consists of: Robert Yardsley, Warren Stumpf; Jack Barlow, Robert Novins; Dorothy Andrews, Rebecca Daniel; and Jennie O'Brien, Marie Hamrick. The play is directed by Lubin Leggette.

The Chased Lady is the next play. It was written by Ruth Welty. Adelaide Reed takes the part of Miss Plunkett, a secretary. Herbert Breslin, a publicity agent, is played by Gilbert Stamper, and Janet Browne plays the part of Dawn O'Day, a movie star. The play is directed by Carl Dennis.

Anton Tchekoff's play, The Boor, is the next number on the program. Helen Ivanova Popov is played by Janet Browne. Hale Yokely plays the part of Grigori Stepanovitch Smirov, and the part of Luka is played by G. L. Van Echop. William Dike directs the play.

The last play, Helena's Husband, by Philip Moeller, is a satire on the Helen of Troy story. Bess Jones Winburn directs the play. The cast is composed of: Helen, queen of Sparta, Alice Walker; Tsumu, the slave. Ellen Stewart; Menelaus, the King, Theodore Herman; Analytikos, the king's librarian, Charles Keener; and Paris, a shepherd, Bob Reid.

Smiths Will Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary

Captain and Mrs. F. C. Smith, 146 West Franklin street, will celebrate their Golden Wedding Anniversary next Sunday afternoon from three to six o'clock. All friends are invited, but no invitations are being sent out in town.

Garden Club

The Garden Club will meet in Davie hall Monday night at eight o'clock. The program for the meeting will consist of a speech by T. W. Brown on "The Care of Trees and Shrubbery."

ELLIS AND STARK TO SPEAK BEFORE STATE REALTORS

Annual Real Estate Institute Will Be Held Here Monday and Tuesday.

Various phases of the real estate business will be studied at the second annual Real Estate Institute, which will convene at the University tomorrow and Tuesday.

Local arrangements are being made by Morgan F. Vining, of the University extension division, who is planning for a good sized attendance of realtors from all sections of the State.

The principal speakers at the two-day session will be Guy W. Ellis, of Detroit, and Paul E. Stark, of Madison, Wisconsin, both prominent in the real estate field. Mr. Ellis is a former president of the Michigan Real Estate Board and for three years served as a member of the executive committee of the home builders and subdividers' division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. He is also a member of the advisory council of the American Real Estate Institute. He is president of the Guy W. Ellis Real Estate Company, and has been in the real estate business in Detroit for 14 years.

Mr. Stark has served as first vice-president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards and was chairman of the committee on real estate education for a number of years. He has acted as president and secretary of both the Madison Real Estate Board and the Wisconsin Association of Real Estate Brokers. He is president of the Paul E. Stark Company, of Madison.

The convention here will deal with various phases of the real estate business, including such topics as principles of urban land values, advantages of a real estate investment, merchandise methods as applied to the sale of real estate and others.

FOURTEEN SCOUT EXECUTIVES MEET IN SEMINAR HERE

Fourteen Boy Scout executives were in Chapel Hill Thursday, Friday, and Saturday for the Boy Scout seminar held in the seminar room of the psychology building. There were five different meetings, each of three hours' duration.

At the first meeting Thursday night, W. F. Prouty, of the geology department, spoke on "Geology," and D. L. Fouts, Scout executive, on "Cubbing."

On Friday morning the executives heard M. R. Trabue, of the education department, on "Tests and Measurements," and H. F. Comer, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., on "The Youth Movement.'" "Ornothology" was the subject taken by J. M. Valentine, of the zoology department, for the seminar Friday afternoon, while Executive Stuckey spoke on "District Organization."

"The Negro," by Guy Johnson, of the department of social science, and "Bulletin Service," by Executive Shieles, were the topics at the Friday night meeting. After H. D. Wolf, of the economics and commerce department, gave a talk Saturday morning on "Labor Problems," some business matters were taken up and the meeting adjourned.

Gifts and Donors

The senior class voted Friday to donate five hundred dollars of its class gift fund to the Human Relations Institute. This action is new in the field of class gifts to the University. About the campus and in some of the buildings we notice objects which have been donated by classes in the past. None of these are of great value in themselves but they all blend with the University to increase the value of the University.

So this gift of the present senior class will go towards increasing the value of the University. There will be no object made of concrete which the seniors may later behold as their gift to the University. Nor will they point with pride to "our gift" and say, "that is the donation of the class of 1931." Instead the seniors prefer to enable the Human Relations Institute to bring a group of authorities in certain fields of human relations to the University.

And by so doing they have given the University a gift, the value of which will not become apparent for years, maybe generations. But such a gathering as the Human Relations Institute will bring to the University cannot fail to produce results of a very definite nature in the future. The value of the Institute will reflect itself in the thought of the state and South of the years to come.

We haven't any really constructive suggestions for the cure of our national tendencies to leave the narrow path, but sometimes we think that an amplifier for the voice of conscience wouldn't do any harm.—Boston Herald.

OPEN FORUM

Editor The Daily Tar Heel:

Last week a Canadian paper was indefinitely suspended from a Canadian campus for its active interest in Atheism and its growing significance on the college campus in the Americas.

A sinister and criminal import is thereby attached to a code and creed of tremendous importance in the future of a mechanical and scientific world. Be it contrary to the beliefs of the majority or not, and be it wrong in the minds of subjects of deism or not, Atheism is not and shall not be criminal.

The right of a faith—and a faith Atheism is—is given to all mankind. The mere absence of a controlling deity in that faith cannot lessen its importance or sincerity to its possessor. Cannot one, in self-reliance, in a sort of spiritual self-sufficiency, find a social doctrine comparable to the so-called universal Christianity? Can he not, in his indulgence in and subservience to this doctrine, be comparable in rightousness and character to him of merely another faith of not one bit more actual right than his own.

We live in an age of fact; the progress of our world, of our lives is based on fact. The whole system of society is material, factual. Should an active, factual living-precept be categoried and set down as criminal?

Atheism does not lack its spiritual aspects; it is a spiritual belief. Though lacking a god—a specific, controlling deity—it bears a spiritual support in the profound faith in the doctrine of human right—of social obligation — of progressive ambition. It is not a creed of God for man; it is a creed of Man for his fellow-men.

Quite sincerely,
A. T. H.

At The Carolina

The Carolina theatre brings for this week's selection of shows a group which begins with "Cimarron," directed by Wesley Ruggles, tomorrow afternoon. This picture, taken from Edna Ferber's best-seller, is acclaimed by many to be the best production of western life ever to appear on the screen. Ruggles made himself famous several years ago while he was directing Charlie Chaplin, and since that time some of his most successful talkies have been "Street Girl," "Condemned," "Honey," and "The Sea Bat."

Tuesday, Virginia Cherrill will make her second screen appearance as a college co-ed in "Girls Demand Excitement," wherein she upholds the rights of the girls in the school, with John Wayne leading the opposing boys. Wayne himself is a comparatively newcomer to the talking screen. His best roles have been those in "The Big Trail" and "Breck Coleman." Marguerite Churchill destined for stardom, according to the Fox officials, is the third member of the featured trio.

The theatre presents Wednesday, Otis Skinner in his debut in sound pictures, "Kismet." This role that brought him his greatest theatrical triumph has been repeated on the talking screen by the First National Studio. The original play, written by Edward Knoblock, was first produced in this country in 1911 at the Knickerbocker Theatre. Since that time it has also achieved an outstanding success in London. The Modern Language Show to be given at 11:00 p. m. will be "Der Blaue Engel," starring Emil Jannings, and Marlene Deitrich.

Charles Farrell, with his new leading lady, Elissa Landi, appears Thursday in "Body and Soul," in which Miss Landi is making her American screen debut, "Body and Soul," which was adapted from the stage play "Squadrons," shows the complications of a sensational nature which follow the arrest of a young American officer in the R. F. C. during the World War, when he is accused of being in league as well as in love with a woman spy. Farrell will be remembered for his famous roles in "7th Heaven," "Street Angel," "Sunny Side Up," and "High Society Blues," in all of which Janet Gaynor played opposite him.

"Divorce Among Friends" Friday brings Irene Delroy and Lew Cody in an interesting comedy drama of modern married life. It is a story in which two young wives, after having daily squabbles with their husbands, decide to exchange with each other. The cast includes Edward Martindel and Margaret Seddon. Roy Del Ruth is the director.

As the last production of the week, Walter Huston, in the leading role of a prison warden, will appear in "The Criminal Code," one of Broadway's smash stage hits. Although Huston has for sometime been one of the highlights on the New York stage, it was only recently that he made his debut on the screen. Other stars in the romantic drama are Constance Cummings, who plays opposite Phillips Holmes. Boris Karloff, Mary Doran, Arthur Hoyt, Ethel Wales, DeWitt Jennings, Paul Porcasi, Nicolas Soussanin, and John Sheehan are some of the other prominents.

With Contemporaries

Napoleon, Meet Brother Capone

War heroes we have always had, men whose feats in battle and conquest placed them apart as figures to be idolized—Alexanders, Napoleons, Washingtons, and Fochs. In their day, escapades of bandits of the Jesse James type held thrills for youthful hearts. But no longer can the picture of George Washington retain its sacred place on the wall, or the book of Jesse James recline peacefully on our desk. Instead we will frame the picture of the sublime countenance of Al Capone, and read the exploits of a new hero, Jack "Legs" Diamond.

A moving picture in a downtown theatre this week allegedly bares some of the awful truths of gangland life, behavior, and problems. It is an excellent picture — well directed, and equally as well acted. But instead of arousing one to indignation toward the activities of the underworld, it glorfies the gangster.

In spite of the obvious attempts made throughout the picture to point a moral, the sympathy of the viewer is directed to the hero; a handsome young man who heads the organized rackets of the city. His ultimate death is undoubtedly an attempt to show this moral—that finally the gangster must pay the penalty of death for his sins. But it is unconvincing. The gang leader is portrayed so sympathetically, the life he leads is so intensely exciting, that one unconsciously hopes that he will come through all his encounters unscathed. That he doesn't, makes no difference, you still wish he had.

But this movie, or other movies, alone cannot be blamed for the glorifying of the gangster. The press has also played its part in picturing the loyalty of the gangster to his gang, and the virtues of the underworld code. The racketeer's life has been shown as dramatic and exciting.

But it must be remembered that the gang hero's life is quite like the war hero's in one respect—the end is gained by murder and rapine. So after all, it might not be so incongruous as it seems to hang the picture of Scarface Al Capone beside that of Napoleon Bonaparte in the gallery of world heroes.—Oregon Emerald.

Strictly Dishonorable

Chicago presents a play under the auspices of the Republican Party which has for so many years past provided the country with entertainment. Today's performance is considered by some to be a boisterous farce, by others a grim tragedy presenting the human race gravitating toward oblivion. However, the majority opinion appears to be that it is a melodrama, lurid and sensational, but lacking the grandeur and universal of genuine tragedy.

The play is one of the type known as "problem plays," here representing the evils arising in a democratic republic when mass control passes into the hands of unscrupulous and private-minded individuals. Ably creating an illusion of reality as clever and unprincipled politicians. William Hale Thompson and John H. Lyle act the leading roles. A certain A. Capone is rumored to be the producer of this bit of modern satire, and Mr. Capone, it is said, has taken great care that every detail of the production shall be perfect.

The plot is woven about the figures of Thompson and Lyle, bitter political enemies, both of whom are trying to win political control of the city. As the last act closes, the victor is being congratulated by his opponent, and with a great prideful gesture he points to the national flags unfurled in his honor from every window. An irreprsssible tear drops from his eye as his followers march to the ordered beat of machine gun fire over the dead bodies of the civil population. Unfortunately it is not yet known to which actor the role of victor has been assigned, for Mr. Capone, who possesses the only manuscript of the play, cannot be reached at his home.—Harvard Crimson.

Tar Heels Win Conference Indoor Games

Walk Away With Annual Tournament, Varsity And Freshmen Winning Titles

EIGHT RECORDS FALL IN GAMES

Tar Heel Varsity Runs Up Total of 37.2 Points; W. and L. Nearest Competitor.

OSBORNE FALLS SHORT OF HIGH JUMP RECORD

Weil, Ruble, Jensen, and Relay Team Were Tar Heels Setting New Records.

By K. C. Ramsay

Carolina's great track teams last night at the Tin Can further demonstrated their prowess on the hardwood and cinder paths by winning both the varsity conference games and the freshman meet. The varsity team, predicted as only a third rate choice for the title, won the meet with a 37.2 score.

The varsity conference teams broke eight of the twelve records set up last year. Raymond Ruble set a new pole vault record at 12 feet 11¾ inches, Lionel Weil established a new 440-yard dash record of 54.2 seconds, and Jensen broke the one-mile run record with a time of 4:29 for new individual records set up by Carolina men.

The Carolina relay team established a new mile relay record in one of the most spectacular events of the meet. The time was 3:38.6, and the members of the Carolina team were: Jensen, Marland, Weil, and Drane.

Charlie Farmer, holder of the Conference indoor 60-yard dash record, qualified for the finals, but in the qualifying heat pulled a weak leg muscle and was unable to run in the finals. His 1930 record of 6.4 seconds, however, was not equalled last night.

The Conference teams placed as follows: Carolina first with 37.2 points; Washington and Lee, 18.7; Alabama, 15.6; Duke, 10; Georgia, 10; L. S. U., 9.1; Tulane, 7.6; Auburn, 5; N. C. State, 5; Virginia, 4.5; Clemson, 3; Georgia Tech, 3; V. P. I., 2.2; South Carolina, 0.1.

The Carolina freshmen won the freshman games with a final score of 25.17 points. Their nearest competitor was Washington and Lee University which tallied nine. The other teams registered in the following order: Duke and Virginia tied for third place, Richmond University, fifth, and V. P. I., sixth.

Osborne Fails

Harold Osborne, holder of the world's outdoor high jump record at 6 feet 8 1-4 inches, tried last night in an exhibition jump to regain the world's indoor title which he lost recently to Spitz of New York University. He went over the bar at 6 feet 5, but failed to make 6 feet 7, the world's record.

Varsity Conference Summary

High jump:

Bagby (N. C.) 5' 10 1-4"; Johnson (Virginia), Rivers (W. & L.) 5' 9"; Stafford (N. C.); Bostick (S. C.); de Coligny (Tulane); Clagett (V. P. I.); Cook (W. & L.); Curtis (W. & L.); Turner (V. P. I.); Bowman (L. S. U.); Hamlet (N. C.); Baker (Alabama), 5' 8".

Pole Vault: Ruble (N. C.); Arnold (N. C.); Reigels (Alabama) and Zimmermann (Tulane) tied for third. Height: 12' 11 3-4", new record. Old record, 12' 7 1-4".

One mile run: Jensen (N. C.); Lineberger (Clemson); Lauck (Virginia); Jones (N. C.).

Strikes And Spares

The fourth annual duck pin tournament held in the nation's Capital this year closed last Saturday with many new records established.

Gold medals, loving cups, and $10,000 in cash prizes were the winners. Miss Lorraine Gulli, world's champion women's singles, of Washington, D. C., who has played several exhibition matches in Durham, bowled three splendid games of 125, 113, and 119 for her first three games in the tournament. The new world champions and their records will be announced from Washington this week.

Chi Phi's increased their margin of leadership in the "Frat" League by winning all three games in their match with Pi Kappa Alpha last week.

Benoit, Chi Phi, bowled another brilliant set in 111, 115, and 117 for a total of 343 pins, and continues to be the highest individual bowler in the league.

Woerner, Pi Kappa Alpha, one of the league's best bowlers, lived up to his reputation by bowling three splendid games of 119, 80, and 111 for a total of 310 pins.

Pi Kappa Phi's won all three games in their match with Zeta Psi by excellent bowling on the part of every Pi Kappa Phi bowler.

All other matches of the "Frat" League will be played at a later date.

Durham City Ten Pin League has been a close, exciting race for first place position all season. It seems to be between Motor Bearings and West Durham teams. Neither team gained on the other in last week's matches as both teams won all games played.

MORE THAN 100 GUESTS ATTEND ANNUAL BANQUET

More than one hundred athletes, officials, and newsmen were guests at the annual winter football banquet.

Officials of last night's indoor conference meet were guests of the football squad.

Coach Chuck Collins was toast master, but not the usual type of presiding-officer. He sat at the head of the table, but only once did he take the floor, and then to make the brief announcement that there would be no speeches, but that the group would adjourn to the Tin Can immediately after dining to attend the track meet.

Suitt, Motor Bearings, and Cable, West Durham, carried away all individual honors for last week—Suitt rolling 217 for highest single game and Cable bowling a grand total of 624 for the highest set.

The Durham Ice Cream Company won two games from the Durham Public Service Company and strengthened its hold on second place standing. Charley Clark starred for Durham Public Service by rolling three fine games of 103, 110, and 111.

Monogram Gridders Win Over Rookies In Annual Game At Stadium, 32-6

Magner-Nash Running Combination, Supported by Erickson, Chandler, House and Wyrick, Too Good for Rookies—Sapp and Farris Star—Smith, Strickland, Brandt Best for Losers.

The Monograms and the Rookies staged their annual grid war at Carolina yesterday afternoon and once more as they have done every year since 1928, the "old heads" came off the winners. The game ended winter football practice.

The score was 32-6, and their superiority was unquestioned, inasmuch as they made 22 first downs, on a smart running attack interspersing passes and straight football, while holding the Rookies to 5, all in the first half.

Smith and Strickland, tackles, and Brandt, end, were powers in the Rookie line, but there were too many weak spots. Fight hard and gamely as they might, the ambitious Rookies couldn't stem the driving attack the experienced Monograms unleashed.

Magner and Nash, star graduated halfbacks, led the charge, ably supported by Erickson, Chandler, House and Wyrick.

Farris and Sapp quit the coaches bench to play fine games, and Sapp revived old memories when he stepped free and took one of Magner's heaves for a touchdown.

Lipscomb and Underwood were going great in the line too, and even old "K. O." Warren, the pugilist, came back to Alma Mater to espouse the Monogram cause from a tackle post.

The Magner-Nash starting outfit struck swiftly and had a score inside two minutes. Wyrick recovered a fumble, took a 17-yard pass from Magner, Nash hit tackle three times for 17 yards and a touchdown.

A new team came in and Chandler threw Erickson a 30-yard pass for the second quarter touchdown.

The Magner-Nash outfit came back to the third quarter to score twice more. House drove the first across after a 65-yard march, featured by passes Magner to Nash and Sapp, a run or so by Nash, and a series of hard drives by

Unnecessary Alarms Are Costly To Fire Department, Says Chief

"Don't send in unnecessary alarms" was the plea made by Chief John Foister, head of the local fire department yesterday morning. He is referring to the numerous alarms which people send in every year about this time for grass fires which they themselves have started.

It is estimated that every time the fire truck leaves the station it costs the city at least twenty-five dollars, not to speak of the trouble that is placed upon the volunteer firemen who work in the stores in the village. There is no objection provided there is a real need for the truck to go out, but when it is no more than a grass fire which could easily be handled by one man, there is hardly a need for this expense and trouble.

Chief Foister suggests that those people who desire to burn the brush and dead grass around their houses in their spring cleaning should notify the fire department the day before, and that they would be glad to send a man out to supervise the work. The best time to burn brushwood is in the morning so that it will cool before nightfall, and as this time is most convenient for one of the firemen to come out it is advised that this time be the one chosen for the burning.

Co-operation between the villagers and the department are needed and it is thought that this will be the best way to arrive at a satisfactory solution to the problem.

As a last injunction Chief Foister said, "Do not fail to notify the department the day before if it is thought that there will be any danger incurred when the burning is done and we will be only too glad to send a man out to see that no conflagration results. In this way the fire department will know where this fire is and if any of the neighbors send in an alarm the truck will not go out since they know that were it necessary the fireman on the job would notify them."

ALL-CAMPUS CAGE TEAM IS SELECTED

Honor Roll of Ten Players From Each League Chosen on Mythical Quintet.

The selection of the annual intramural all-campus basketball team proved to be too big a job for the officials of the intramural department and instead of the usual team being selected an honor roll of ten players from each league was chosen. In the opinion of the league officials, the honor roll consists of the ten best players in each league.

Fourteen teams are represented on the official selection. In the dormitory league Best House led the way, placing three men. The Question Marks placed two men on the dormitory honor roll, which the Ranson House, New Dorms, Ruffin, Graham, and Mangum had one man each.

In the fraternity league seven teams are represented with the Sigma Zeta's, Phi Delt's, and Kappa Alpha's placing two men each. The Kappa Sig's, Pi Kappa Phi's, A. T. O.'s, and Sigma Ep's each placed one man on the all star selection.

Clayton Purser, Sigma Zeta center, and Joe Eagles, Kappa Sig star, were the only representatives of last year's all-campus team to win a place on the 1931 honor roll. Purser, all-campus football and basketball star for the last two years, received a place on the all-campus selection last year, while Eagles received an honorable mention.

The committee selecting the all-star honor roll was composed of officials of the intramural department, headed by Wallace Shelton, assistant director.

The honor roll is as follows:

DORMITORY LEAGUE

Player	Team
Gaddy	Mangum

INAUGURATION OF GRAHAM PLANNED FOR OCTOBER 12

Board Decides on University Day as Time for Formal Ceremonies.

At their meeting March 20 the University trustees decided that the formal inauguration of President Frank Porter Graham will be held on October 12, 1931, "University Day."

At the same meeting of the trustees arrangements were made to institute the new library school next September, which is founded on a gift from the Carnegie Corporation, accepted in June, 1929. Dr. L. R. Wilson, University librarian, will be director, while Donald Coney, will be assistant director and professor of library science. The other members of the staff are Susan Grey Akers, Ph. D., Nora Beust, and Robert B. Downs.

A recommendation was made by Dean C. T. McCormick of the University's law school, that three years' college work be required before entering the law school. A committee consisting of H. E. Stacy, A. H. Graham, and W. D. Merritt was appointed to investigate and report at the June meeting of the board of trustees.

Among those present at the meeting were Josephus Daniels, who presided; President Frank P. Graham, R. B. House, executive secretary; Charles T. Woollen, business manager of the University; Charles Whedbee, A. T. Allen, Walter Murphy, James S. Manning, John S. Hill, Leslie Weil, A. B. Andrews, and H. M. London.

PHILLIPS RUSSELL TO LECTURE HERE

Prominent Author Will Conduct Conference in Fine Points Of Writing.

Dr. George R. Coffman, head of the English department, yesterday announced that Phillips Russell, prominent biographer, novelist, and short story writer, will act as visiting author at the University during the spring quarter.

Mr. Russell will conduct a conference at which he will explain the fine points of writing. He will not discuss only literary writing, but will show the correct technique and methods for writing anything from a business letter to a short story.

Phillips Russell is a native of North Carolina and has been residing in Chapel Hill for the past few months. Mr. Russell is perhaps best known for his biographies. His life of Benjamin Franklin, Benjamin Franklin, the First Civilized American, the most popular of his works, was met with widespread approval. His other two biographies, John Paul Jones, Man of Action, and Emerson, the Wisest American have also been very well received.

In addition to his biographies, Mr. Russell has written The Fumbler and Red Tiger, a book of travel sketches. The visiting author has had quite a few of his stories printed in O'Brien's anthology of short stories which is published every year and is supposed to represent the best short stories of the current year.

Mr. Russell is a frequent contributor to the American

O'Neil and Masters Visit University

George O'Neil, noted poet, who has just finished a life of Keats, is spending some time in Chapel Hill. He arrived a few days ago and plans to remain for several weeks.

Another prominent visitor to the University was Edgar Lee Masters, author of Spoon River Anthology and a much discussed biography of Abraham Lincoln, who spent a short while here Saturday, coming over from Greensboro with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Douglas.

N. C. C. W. ORGAN HEAD WILL PLAY ON GUEST SERIES

Professor George M. Thompson Will Give Concert Tomorrow Night.

Professor George M. Thompson, head of the organ department at N. C. C. W. in Greensboro, will give the second concert of the guest series in the music building tomorrow night at 8:15.

Beginning his musical training at Beaver College, Beaver, Pa., he followed up this work later under Charles N. Boyd of the Pittsburgh Musical Institute, and Harvey B. Gaul of the same city.

At the age of fourteen he secured his first church position in East Liverpool, Ohio, and was called to the Ben Avon U. P. Church of Pittsburgh. His early career was partially broken by the World War, in which he served as a member of the Coast Artillery. Immediately following the Armistice he went to Chicago to become for three years a student of the celebrated Clarence Eddy, so-called dean of American organists.

Since 1922 Professor Thompson has gone annually to Paris to study organ under Joseph Bonnet, famous organist of the church of St. Eustache. In the spring of 1923, Mr. Thompson became connected with the North Carolina College, at Greensboro, as head of the organ department, which position he has held since that time. His annual series of Historical Organ Recitals at that school has attracted national attention.

Miss Ione Cates Dies in Washington

Miss Ione Cates, well-known throughout the state by former University students as the manager of the University Cafeteria in Chapel Hill, died in Washington, D. C. last Thursday.

Miss Cates was the daughter of H. M. Cates, prominent citizen of Graham. The funeral services took place at Phillips' Chapel in Alamance county Saturday afternoon.

The cafeteria of which Miss Cates was proprietor, as well as personal manager, has since become the Friendly Cafeteria. After building up a thriving business and an excellent clientele by her efficient management she went to Greensboro to become a teacher in the public schools.

Yackety Yack Staff

There will be an important meeting of the Yackety Yack business staff this afternoon at two o'clock. All members must be present.

FRATERNITY ROW HAS ANNUAL FIRE

Deserted T. E. P. House is Spectacular Blaze But Spectators Are Few.

The Chapel Hill Fire Department spent a busy time Sunday night fighting numerous fires in the vicinity. At least three broke out, two of which were alarmed and the other was easily put out by the smaller engine when a chimney fire was phoned in to the fire house. This small fire occurred about 1:15 in the morning.

Unfortunately both the other fires, which were rather severe, apparently were discovered at the same time since both alarms came in simultaneously. These two alarms were sent in about five o'clock in the morning just before daybreak.

The fire at the deserted Tau Epsilon Phi house on the end of old fraternity row, had gained considerable headway before the fire department arrived on the scene, and since there was the fire at the Alpha Kappa Kappa house at 206 Cameron Avenue, the endeavors of the department were divided.

The front of the Alpha Kappa Kappa house was burned from the front door up to the windows on the second floor. The fire there began in the laundry which was deposited near the door awaiting the arrival of the laundry truck. The cause of the conflagration was not determined. The extent of the damage done was not great and after this fire was subdued the entire force centered its activity on the more imposing blaze which was raging in the T. E. P. house.

Due to the extremely late hour at which the fires happened and the severe cold, few of our devotees of the livid monster appeared to cheer the battling firemen on. Practically the whole roof and the greater part of the second floor were razed, and the fighters had to break in several windows to obtain entrance from the outside. Since no one was living in the building, Chief John Foister was at a loss to determine the cause of the breaking out of the fire.

The historic old fraternity row is fast disappearing now that most of the fraternities are building houses in the various courts and separately along the streets of the village. After the fraternities move into new homes it is not long before the house becomes rather dilapidated and invariably a fire breaks out in them. There is now only one house that does not boast of having had at least one fire. This great habit was started in 1918 when the Sigma Nu house had a large fire which completely destroyed the building. Since that time the houses along the row have gradually been depleted until only two remain standing.

Colds and Measles

The infirmary has been treating cases of German measles and colds which are reported to be not exceptionally dangerous. The following students were on the infirmary list yesterday: D. L. Potter, B. B. Frazer, M. L. Cannon, Jr., J. W. Stallings, Jr., R. L. Bernhardt, James Griffith, R. A. Reid, George Malone, A. L. Jacobs, U. L. Spence, W. T. Davis, Jr., R. H. Carmichael, M. H. Dunn, and Thomas S. Bennett.

CARR BUILDING IS BEING RENOVATED

Work on Memorial Bell Tower Is Also Progressing Rapidly.

Rooms in Carr dormitory will not be open for occupancy until about June 15 due to extensive repairs and renovations. Work was begun about March 15 near the beginning of the spring holidays. All rooms were vacated in order to enable the remodeling to be done thoroughly.

The building is to undergo a complete overhauling both externally and internally. The exterior is now being cleaned and repaired, while the necessary scaffoldings are already rising to aid in the repairs.

It is planned to change the present interior arrangements only slightly. There will be a few more rooms and those already in use are to be put in much better condition. The lavatories and other arrangements will be completely modernized also. By this slight increase in the number of rooms the number of students that can be accommodated will be raised correspondingly.

Workmen are giving the roof a close inspection, removing and replacing faulty sections. Many of the window frames, also, are being removed to give way to newer ones.

It is expected by the buildings department that rooms in Carr building will be available for students in the summer school.

Work on the Morehead-Patterson Memorial Tower is progressing steadily. The framework and scaffolding for the projected one hundred and seventy-five foot structure has already been reared to the height of one hundred and sixty feet. The main sections of the foundation are now being put in.

This tower is to be composed of brick and limestone covering structural steel. Beside the bells and chimes there will be a large clock facing four directions and a powerful airplane beacon topping the tower. Work on the project is being pushed as rapidly as possible.

KEDROFF QUARTET APPEAR MARCH 31

The fourth of the series of entertainments offered by the Student Entertainment Committee will be presented Tuesday, March 31, at eight-thirty in Memorial hall. The Kedroff Quartet will be the next featured program on the entire year's presentations and the first one on this quarter's.

The Kedroff Quartet is a Russian organization and has been prominent since 1897. Few nations can claim such wealth and beauty in folk music as Russia, and it is this beauty of music and the idea of assembling and popularizing these melodies that inspired this organization.

Phi Sigma Kappa announces the pledging of Charles I. Nichols of Medford, Massachusetts.

Staff Pictures

All staffs of the Daily Tar Heel, the Yackety Yack, and the Buccaneer are requested to meet in their respective offices tonight at seven o'clock in order that flashlight photographs may be taken.

Societies Will Hear Inaugural Speeches

The Di Senate will meet tonight in its first session of the quarter to hear the inaugural address of President K. C. Ramsey. Committees for the quarter will be appointed at this time.

Egbert Haywood, newly-elected speaker of the Phi Assembly, will also give his inaugural address at the first meeting of that society. The first bill on the calendar for discussion is on the subject: That the consolidation of the hundred counties of the state into approximately one half that number would be for the best interests of North Carolina.

TRABUE TO TAKE UP PROBLEM OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Head of Educational Research Bureau Receives Position with Minnesota Institutes.

Dr. Marion R. Trabue, head of the educational research in the school of education at the University, has left with his family for Minneapolis. There at the University of Minnesota he will employ his year's leave of absence, which has been given him by the executive committee of the trustees, as executive of the committee on diagnosis and training in the Institute for Unemployment research.

This Institute has grown out of the combined activities of the Tri-City labor stabilization committee, established last fall by the city governments and the civic clubs of Minneapolis, St. Paul, and Duluth and of the Employment Stabilization Institute organized last spring at the University of Minnesota. The Rockefeller and Carnegie foundations have provided funds for the conducting of the necessary research and demonstration work.

The object of this work is to reduce both technological and periodic unemployment by figuring out the changes needed in the social machinery. This type of work is very similar to that which was done by Dr. Trabue when he was engaged at Columbia University and in the United States Army before coming to North Carolina.

As chief psychological examiner at Camp Taylor and at Camp Grant during the war, he directed the mental examinations given more than a hundred thousand recruits and officers. During the last few months of the year 1918, Dr. Trabue did a large amount of research work as a special representative of the War Department's committee of classification of personnel at various trade test stations and flying fields. For the three years just before coming to North Carolina in 1922, he was in charge of the placement of officers at Teachers College, Columbia University.

Since coming to Chapel Hill as professor of educational administration, he has given much of his time to instructional and curricular problems in the public schools, with special attention to the elementary schools.

Shrubbery Planted

The botanical department has just completed the planting of shrubbery around Memorial hall, and this week will do the same for the music building.

DRAMA FESTIVAL WILL BE STAGED DURING WEEK-END

Tournament Also To Be Conducted by Dramatic Association Friday and Saturday.

The eighth annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association and the state dramatic tournament will take place Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, March 26, 27, and 28, in the Playmakers theatre. The purpose of the Carolina Dramatic Association is to encourage dramatic art in the school and communities of North Carolina; to meet the need for constructive recreation; to promote the production of plays, pageants, and festivals; and to stimulate interest in the making of a native drama.

The executive committee of the association is composed of: Paul Green, honorary president; Professor Frederick H. Koch, president ex officio, director of the Carolina Playmakers; R. C. Robinson, president, director of the Wayne Community Players, of Goldsboro; Ethel Rea, vice-president, director of the Dramatic Art Class, in Charlotte; Irene Fussler, secretary-treasurer; R. M. Grumman, director of the University extension division; Samuel Selden, associate director of the Carolina Playmakers; Ralph Westerman, bsuiness manager of the Carolina Playmakers; Mrs. Herbert Harris, the Woman's Club of Seaboard; Kate Hall, director of the Little Theatre in Greensboro; Elba Henninger, director of the Greensboro College Players; Pearl Setzer, director of the Lenoir-Rhyne Playmakers; P. G. Gallop, director of the Whiteville high school dramatic club; and W. R. Wunsch, director of the Asheville senior high school players.

In connection with the festival, contests in play production, in play writing, and in other dramatic arts, will be held. The club winning the state championship in each of several classifications will be awarded a plaque bearing the signet of the Carolina Dramatic Association. The winners of the special contests will be awarded complete sets of Carolina Folk-Plays.

Towns and cities which will be represented at the festival are: Albemarle, Asheville,

FULLER MAY SUE MEMPHIS POLICE

Henry R. Fuller, who is spending a few days in Chapel Hill with his family, is considering taking action against the police officers of Memphis, Tennessee, who caused him to be locked up in the Memphis jail a few weeks ago when he inquired at the police station as to the whereabouts of communistic headquarters. Competant lawyers have advised him that he has good cause for action on the score of false arrest and imprisonment, and the American Civil Liberties Union has offered to provide counsel and to bear the cost of the suit.

Mr. Fuller is a text-book representative of the Houghton-Mifflin Company, and the officials of that company have assured him of their vigorous support. Persons at various Southern institutions where he has sold text books are said to have written Houghton-Mifflin urging that some action be taken.

Disposition of the Graham Memorial

As work progresses on the Graham Memorial the question arises naturally as to its disposition. When first acquainted with the structure, then uncompleted, we were led to believe that ultimately it would become a union with all student activities centered there. However, since the announcement of the gift which has made possible the structure's completion, nothing has been said as to its purposes.

The need for a student union building which could house all student activities has been apparent for quite a while now. In fact for years it has been understood that some day it would be possible to quarter all activities close enough together to provide some unity in the extra-curricular work of the students. As matters now stand there is not a student enterprise here which is not cramped in its work because of the lack of quarters. The publications in particular have been handicapped and students connected with them have looked for the day when more suitable quarters would be available.

Rumors have been circulated which indicated that the building will not be used for student activities but will be dedicated to the use of committees. These rumors have not been verified and no student seems to know just what the purpose of the Memorial is to be. An official announcement of its purposes will serve to clarify matters and will serve to focus student attention on the structure.

State Timber Production

It seems to us that North Carolina is missing a wonderful chance to get ahead of the other states of the nation in the production of timber as a crop. Europeans never fail to marvel at the waste we Americans allow of land and timber. They make these observations traveling through the Middle West. What they would say about our wastefulness by traveling through the South Atlantic states would probably be well worth listening to.

The fact remains that North Carolina's agricultural products require only a comparatively small area of land for their production, and the balance of the land is being wasted in nine cases out of ten. Why this waste is being allowed is more than we can see. When one of Canada's main money crops is her timber, and North Carolina can grow timber of the same quality four times as rapidly—with practically no effort at the production of it in the case of the latter, the intelligence and the far-sightedness of the state is compared rather unfavorably. Quite naturally, though, Carolina's farmers are not willing to invest in a crop at the present time which will not benefit their incomes for eight or ten years. Hence, the state and the nation loses.

This great potential wealth which is present in the South especially at this time will be recognized within the next few years and made use of to a great extent. An intelligent state forest reserve program and subsidies for timber producers would gain North Carolina a tremendous income within a decade. Whether she wants it or not remains to be seen.—O.W.D.

Call Off Your Boys!

To the Editor:

An agreement between Chapel Hill merchants and University officials to settle the matter of continuance of dormitory service rooms and other University agencies between themselves induced the committee to whom the Hatchett bill was referred to make an unfavorable report.

The fact that such procedure was not resorted to in the first instance is regrettable. A self help student body felt that down town merchants took the attitude that the University existed for their benefit, and a move on their part to directly deprive twenty-six self help men of work, as well as to destroy a system of control and supervision of dormitory life that was the result of much work and years of study on the part of the University, justly aroused opposition on the part of students.

Nor did it stop there. The merchants as a whole have been accused of selfishness and greed, accompanied with threats to cease patronizing them. Such criticism is unfair, and such reaction unwarranted.

It is easy to see a mistake once it is made. Had the merchants understood just what the service rooms mean to self help men and dormitory life they probably would never have carried the matter to the legislature. And once the matter was before the legislature it was not pushed by the merchants in the manner attributed to them. Chapel Hill merchants, with few exceptions, have a spirit of co-operation with the University and their attitude has been misunderstood.

Thus, we, the managers of the dormitory service rooms, appeal to the student body to cease unjust criticism, and to give their whole hearted support and patronage to the Chapel Hill merchants who are, and have always been, willing to co-operate with the University in perfecting a plan for the control and supervision of student life in the dormitories.

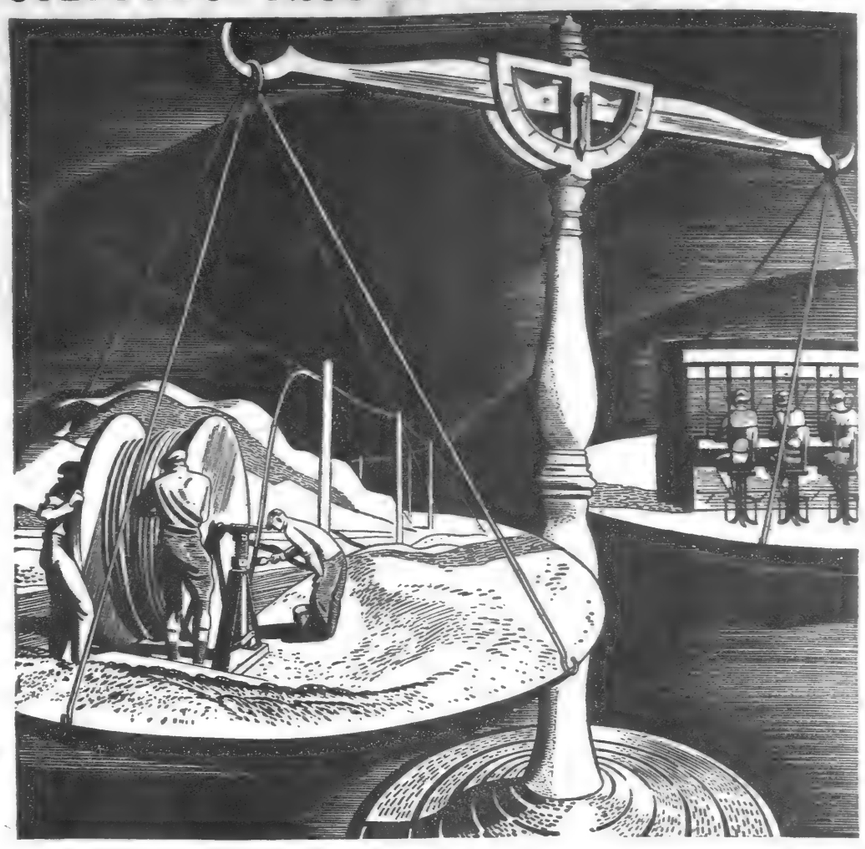
Is Prohibition Here?

As regularly as February 11 comes round, Thomas A. Edison is interviewed on such subjects as national government and prohibition.

Grand old figure that he is, the octogenerian inventor would do better to confine his remarks to subjects on which he is an authority, even if he does disappoint a few reporters lacking in ingenuity.

It is well meaning individuals like Inventor Edison who do so much harm on this question of prohibition. Yes, they say blithely, prohibition has arrived, and isn't it grand?



It would be a little more in point for drys who really favor the cause of temperance to admit that enforcement is lax and to plead for giving the eighteenth amendment a real trial. If the Volstead act is weak, a genuine attempt to enforce it will expose such faults as may lead to revision and strengthened status for prohibition.

Edison's belief that prohibition is "succeeding" is probably sincere, but it is safe to say that at his laboratories at East Orange, N. J., or Ft. Myers, Fla., the venerable scientist has not encountered any bootleggers or enforcement officers.

Closed eyes and a firm belief in fairy tales may convince drys that prohibition is rapidly succeeding. They are like the small boy who wouldn't believe his more sophisticated, less idealistic older brother that the school

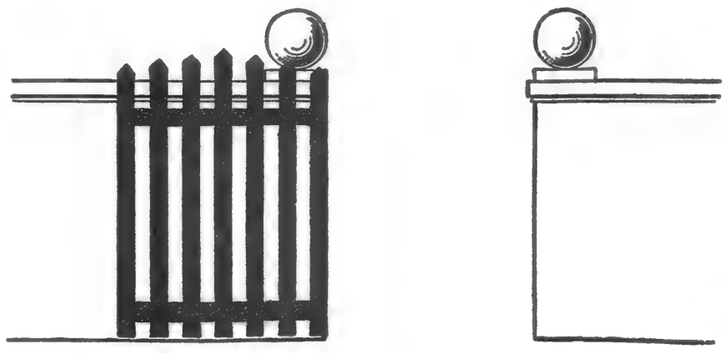
Striking a balance for a $4,000,000,000 industry



"On a large scale" describes accounting in the Bell System, whose properties cost more than $4,000,000,000.

On the outgo side are, for example, four or five hundred million dollars annually for new construction; vast sums for keeping telephone equipment in good order; a payroll running into hundreds of millions a year. Under income are such diverse items as a few cents for a local telephone call, or thirty dollars and upward for a call to a city across the Atlantic.

The men responsible for this phase of the telephone business have worked out scientific methods of control—but their effort to refine old practices and devise new ones goes on. The opportunity is there!

Tar Heel Team To Open Baseball Season Monday

CORNELL CARDED FOR TWO GAMES WITH TAR HEELS

Coach Ashmore Must Build Team from Much Green Material; Seven Veterans Out.

ONE REGULAR IN INFIELD

Captain Burgess Whitehead Will Be at Shortstop; Many Good Catchers.

IT'S only six more days of practice before the Tar Heel baseball team opens their schedule with Cornell next Monday. This year there will be another two game series with the northerners, the first game to be played March 30 and the final the following day. Last year the Tar Heels captured the opener, 3-2, but dropped the second contest, 10-8.

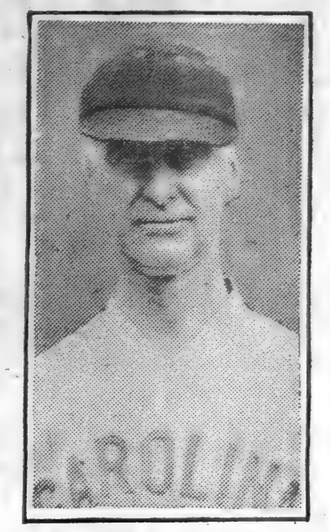
Graduation has greatly weakened Carolina's chances for a championship club, the Tar Heels having lost Captain Jimmy Maus, catcher; Nap Lufty, third baseman; Marshall Rand, second baseman; Phil Jackson and Billy Brown, first basemen; Phil Sher, outfielder; and Auburn Wright and Frank Fleming, pitchers. However, Coach Ashmore will have seven letter men around which to build a club, and this septet will be supported by eleven veterans and members of last year's freshman squad.

For his outfield Coach Ashmore will have two letter men, Branch Paxton and Cloyd Blythe, and Clyde McKinney and Lew Whitehead. All of these men are terrific hitters, with Whitehead showing perhaps the best form.

The infield problem is giving Coach Ashmore almost as much worry as the pitchers. There will be only one veteran, Captain Burgess Whitehead at short stop. The rest of the infield will be made up of sophomores. Jim Dixon will hold down the initial bag; "Smokey" Ferebee will cover second base with Pete Wyrick and Paul Dunlap in reserve. Billy Powell, another soph, seems to have the post position at third base.

The catching staff is one of the strongest in years. "Piggy" Potter will be first string, while Jim Peacock and Pat Pattisoll will battle for the reserve post.

Coach Ashmore will have plenty of pitchers to choose from for a first string staff. There are three letter men, Cecil Longest, Archie Shields, and Paul Edwards. In addition there are Jim Griffith, Sam Scarboro, and Jim McNeil of last year's frosh team.



OVER MILLION LETTERS WRITTEN FOR CONTEST

Over one million letters were received recently in answer to the national one week's advertising campaign put on by the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company in connection with the new cellophane wrapping for Camel cigarettes. It is estimated that it will take the officials of the contest several weeks to read all the entries and select winners.

CAPTAIN AND COACH

BURGESS WHITEHEAD

The Tar Heels will have a baseball team which is composed largely of rookies, but they will also have a captain who has made for himself an imposing record during his two years on the varsity, and a coach who has turned out many teams that stand well above the average.

Captain Whitehead will be on the job at short stop and Coach Ashmore will be sitting on the bench directing the outfit when the team opens the season next Monday against Cornell University.

FORMER CINDER STARS WILL RUN HERE SATURDAY

Galen Elliott and Johnny Henderson to Race in Two Mile Exhibition.

VARSITY, FROSH MEETS

Varsity to Compete With Presbyterian College; Frosh vs. Charlotte High.

When the flying Tar Heels, Southern Conference track champions last year, open their outdoor season here Saturday with the strong Presbyterian College, two of Carolina's greatest cindermen will be seen in action again. Galen Elliott and Johnny Henderson, former distance stars will run in an exhibition two mile event as an added attraction to a program that will see four strong teams in action. The Carolina freshmen will meet Charlotte High School in their first outdoor appearance of the season at the same time.

Johnny Henderson, track captain in 1929, holds the University record for the two mile run with a time of 9:38.2. This mark is the best ever recorded in the South although Hoyt Pritchett, another Carolina star, holds the Southern Conference record with a time of 9:47. In addition to leading the 1929 track team, Henderson was also captain of the Southern championship cross country team of 1928 and stands out as one of the greatest of Carolina's great distance runners.

Galen Elliott, who will run against Henderson Saturday, holds the Southern Conference record for the mile with a time of 4:21.2. Elliott won the mile at the Southern Conference meet three successive years and was an All-American runner in 1926, his sophomore year. Elliott performed brilliantly in all distances from the half mile to the five mile run, winning the Southern Conference cross country run twice in addition to turning in brilliant performances in other events.

FIRST FRESHMAN DIAMOND DRILLS SET FOR TODAY

Freshman baseball practice will get under way today on the freshman athletic field according to an announcement made yesterday afternoon by Coach Bill Cerney. Candidates for the team should report to the Emerson field storeroom for equipment. The hour for practice has been set for four o'clock.

The season opens March 30 here with the Wardlaw Preparatory School.

PITTSBURG UNIVERSITY HOUSED IN ONE BUILDING

A new forty-story class room building and dormitory combined is now nearing completion at the University of Pittsburgh, which now has an enrollment of more than 13,000 students.

This new structure is to take the place of the old time vine-clustered campus.

Sports Writers

All members of the sports staff of the Daily Tar Heel who intend to remain on the staff during the spring quarter should drop by the office in Alumni building this afternoon between one-thirty and three. Beats for the quarter will be assigned at this time.

Any one wishing to join the staff should see the sports editor at this time also.

All Campus Party Is Here

It is neither a fraternity nor a non-fraternity organization. It proposes to give Carolina a 100% government.

Headed by a representative committee merely to direct the policies of the group, the All-Campus party is fighting to hold the University student body together. The All-Campus party has entered the political field to preserve here the traditions of harmony and unity which now characterizes this campus.

Campus Officers Should Be Selected Only On The Basis Of Efficiency

In a spirit of absolute harmony the non-fraternity men of the campus have joined hands with the fraternity men and are selecting a non-partisan list of candidates on the sole basis of efficiency, integrity, and years of service to the campus.

The All-Campus Party Stands For Clean Politics And Fair Play For All

Desiring such fair play, the All-Campus party is drawing up a list ofcandidates and has already endorsed, and intends to nominate non-fraternity men for such major positions as: the vice-presidency of the student body, the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel, the presidency of the senior class, the presidency of the Y. M. C. A., and the editorship of the Carolina Magazine.

The All-Campus Party Does Not Undemocratically Close Its Doors To Any Citizen Of The Campus

Our meetings are always open to the sane, fair-minded, and logical men of the University who are cordially invited to attend the meetings and support the principles of the All-Campus party.

Chapel Exercises

A notice issued from Dean F. F. Bradshaw's office yesterday stated that there will be no regular chapel exercises on Thursday and Friday during the spring quarter. The two sections of freshman chapel will meet only once a week each, on Monday and Tuesday respectively. Sophomore chapel has been changed from Friday to Wednesday.

A second part of this notice said that freshmen who have heretofore had six chapel cuts per quarter will now have only three, and sophomores four.

Any men who did not receive chapel seats during registration are requested to go by 204 South building immediately and do so.

EMORY DEBATERS TO APPEAR HERE

The Carolina debaters will meet Emory University representatives in Gerrard hall at eight-thirty Friday night on the subject, Resolved: That the nations should adopt a policy of free trade. The Emory team will uphold the affirmative side of the question while the negative will be taken by the Carolina debaters.

The men representing the Georgia institution are William Woodruff, who is a senior in law, and Alfred Rufty, a freshman in law. The men composing the team for Carolina are C. D. Wardlaw and Hamilton Hobgood. J. A. Wilkinson, may take Hobgood's place as Hobgood has experienced some sinus trouble lately.

CHEMICAL SOCIETY TO MEET THURSDAY NIGHT

The North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society will conduct its regular winter meeting in Venable hall at eight o'clock Thursday evening, March 26. A supper at the Carolina Inn for the members of the society attending the meeting will precede the meeting in the chemistry building.

Dr. Colin G. Fink, head of the division of electrochemistry of the department of chemical engineering at Columbia University, will speak before the meeting on the subject of "The Restoration of Ancient Bronzes." Dr. Fink, who is one of the foremost men in the field of electrochemistry, will discuss his methods for restoring ancient bronzes by electrochemical means.

Santa Claus was really only the janitor.

It wasn't enough to pass even a nation-wide law. If prohibition is to succeed there must be genuine enforcement and a program of sensible, non-moralizing education like that which aided the passing of the eighteenth amendment. If those who translate their good wishes for prohibition into reality—for them—continue, the nation may one of these days have to decide that a good law poorly enforced is worse than no law at all and ignore the prohibitory statutes. —Daily Iowan.

Smoke a FRESH Cigarette!

Cigarettes in prime condition have a moisture content of about 10%. It will be seen by the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory Chart that cigarettes in the ordinary wrapped package lose more than half of their total moisture in thirty days and that only the Camel Humidor Pack delivers cigarettes to you in prime condition

THE whole country is talking about the throat-easy mildness and the prime freshness of Camel Cigarettes in the new Humidor Pack.

The above chart prepared by the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory tells you why.

Please examine it carefully. It is an unfailing guide to cigarette selection and enjoyment.

As you can quickly see by the three upper curves on this interesting chart, cigarettes that lack the protection of the Humidor Pack lose their moisture rapidly from the day they are manufactured.

And day by day as this moisture disappears, the smoke from these cigarettes becomes harsher, hotter, more unkind to the smoker's throat.

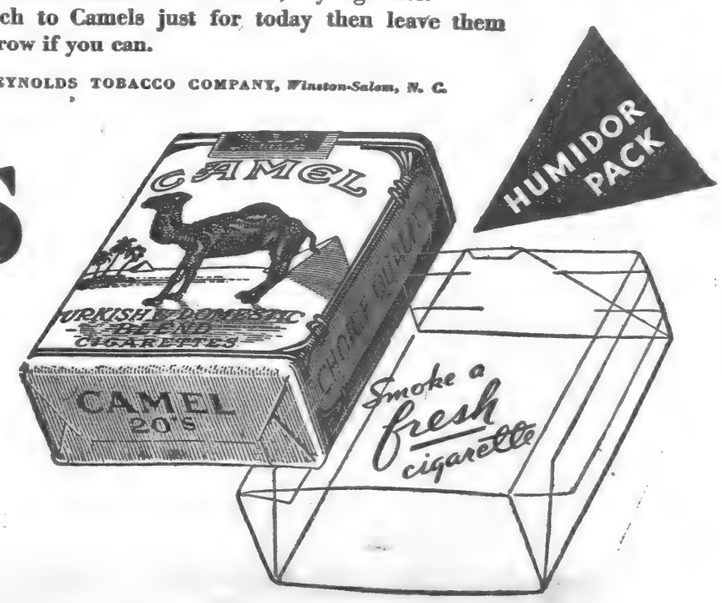
Not so with Camels!

The Humidor Pack is moisture proof and sealed air-tight at every point. It protects the rich, flavorful aroma of the choice Turkish and Domestic tobaccos of which Camels are blended.

Make these tests yourself

It is so easy to tell the difference between parched dry cigarettes and fresh prime Camels that it is no wonder everybody is reaching for a fresh cigarette today.

Your fingers identify stale, dried-out tobaccos at once. While a Camel is flexible and pliant.



Your ears can tell the difference too. For a dust-dry cigarette crackles under pressure.

But the real test is taste and there is simply no comparison between the rich mildness of a Camel and the hot, brackish smoke from a stale, dry cigarette.

Switch to Camels just for today then leave them tomorrow if you can.

R. J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO COMPANY, Winston-Salem, N. C.

CAMELS

Artificial heat in houses and apartments soon dries the moisture out of cigarettes wrapped the old fashioned way. It is the mark of a considerate hostess, by means of the Humidor Pack, to "Serve a fresh cigarette." Buy Camels by the carton—this cigarette will remain fresh in your home and office.

NOMINATION AND ELECTION DATES SET BY COUNCIL

Class Officers To Be Nominated Thursday and Campus Officers Friday; Election Tuesday.

At a meeting of the student council, the dates for the nominations and elections of the various campus officers were set.

The freshmen will meet to nominate rising sophomore officers, Thursday night, at 7:30, in Gerrard hall. The meeting will be presided over by Ike Minor, president of the class. Sophomores will meet to nominate officers for the rising junior class, Thursday night, at 7:30, in Bingham Hall. Dave Henry will preside over the meeting. Juniors will meet to nominate the rising senior officers, Thursday night, 7:30 in Murphey hall. Theron Brown will be in charge of the meeting. Men from each class will be nominated for the following offices in the respective rising classes: president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and the representative on the student council.

Friday at chapel period in Gerrard hall, nominations for the campus officers will be made. Nominations for the following offices will be made: president of the student body, president of the Y, vice-president of the Y, secretary of the Y, treasurer of the Y, editor of the Daily Tar Heel, editor of the Yackety-Yack, editor of the Buccaneer, editor of the Carolina Magazine, president and vice-president of the Athletic Association, one representative on the P. U. Board from the rising senior class, one representative from the rising junior class, and one repesentative at large, and two representatives at large on the debate council.

The candidates for the presidency of the student body will speak to the students, Monday morning, at Chapel period, in Memorial Hall. The election of all officers will be Tuesday, March 31, in the Y. The polls will be open from nine o'clock to five o'clock.

Y WILL SEND DEPUTATION TEAM TO NEARBY TOWNS

The deputations team of the local Y. M. C. A. has definitely decided to make trips to Greenville, Roanoke Rapids, and Rocky Mount. The date for these trips has not been decided, but all three must be made before May 10. The team will present a three-day program of talks and music at each city, and will be under the auspices of the high schools in the respective cities.

BRADSHAW ADDRESSES FRESHMEN IN CHAPEL

Dean F. F. Bradshaw, speaking to the freshmen at chapel period yesterday, discussed the advantages of universities and colleges. "The greatest thing that students obtain from college is not the knowledge of math, English, and other academic subjects, but is the personal likes and dislikes that the students cultivate at college," said Dean Bradshaw.

Debate Squad

A short but important meeting of the debate squad will be held in 201 Murphey hall Thursday night at seven-thirty. All members are requested to be present.

Hall of Fame

The editor of the Daily Tar Heel has been informed that College Humor has selected Pictures of Mayne Albright and Jack Dungan which are to be run in the September Hall of Fame section of the magazine.

The campus was recently visited by Miss Frances Lee, society and fashion editor of the publication, who was making a tour of eastern and southern colleges.

Beck To Speak On N. Y. Stock Exchange

Cameron Beck, director of the personnel department of the New York Stock Exchange, will speak in Gerrard hall at the regular chapel exercises this morning.

In his work with the Stock Exchange, Mr. Beck supervises the employment and training of a large number of men among whom are many college graduates. He will speak on some phase of his experience in personnel management with the Stock Exchange.

Mr. Beck is being brought here by the office of the dean of students and through the courtesy of Mr. Henry Dwine, director of public relations at Duke University where Beck is scheduled for talks later in the day.

ANNOUNCE PLANS FOR NEXT ANNUAL DRAMA FESTIVAL

Delegations from Ohio State to Hear Prominent Guest Speakers.

The program for the eighth annual Festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association and the State Dramatic Tournament, which are to be staged here on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, was announced yesterday.

Among the speakers from outside the State scheduled for addresses are Barrett Clark, New York dramatic critic; Lynn Riggs, Oklahoma playwright, and Harry Davis, director of the Town Theatre of Columbia, S. C.

Colleges, high schools and community clubs from all sections of the State will send dramatic clubs to compete for State titles in the Tournament. Many of the plays have been written and produced by the students. President Frank Graham will make the awards at the closing session Saturday night.

The opening feature will be a preliminary play contest between Mars Hill College and the Reid Players of Reidsville at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

A contest in original plays between the Seaboard Woman's Club and Mars Hill College, and the final contest of play production between the Rocky Mount Little Theatre Guild and the winner of the afternoon preliminary, representing the community clubs and junior colleges, will be staged Thursday night beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

Friday's session will open at 10 o'clock with an address by Professor Frederick H. Koch on "Our Local Theatres." After that will come a conference of directors and students with discussions on dramatics and other stage topics, to be followed by

N. Y. U. DAILY NEWS PRESENTS EDITORS' VIEWS ON R. O. T. C.

Daily Tar Heel Managing Editor Is Among Those Quoted in Article Giving Results of National Survey Among College Editors.

"Along with the rest of the important nations of the world, this country is entirely too militaristic," Jack Dungan, managing editor of the Daily Tar Heel is quoted in the New York University Daily News. The rest of the article, which is a survey of the popularity of the R. O. T. C. system among college editors, is reprinted below:

Today military training in the R. O. T. C. is compulsory at ninety colleges and universities in the United States with a total enrollment of 75,441. It is elective at thirty-six institutions with a total registration of 11,295.

To determine the concensus among editors of student newspapers regarding the popularity of the R. O. T. C. system and its bearing upon the movement for world peace, the writer with the cooperation of the New York University Daily News requested the editors of thirty-nine leading college newspapers to indicate their opinions and the general campus attitudes on this question. Twenty-five editors responded. Drill is compulsory at seven of the institutions represented and optional at twelve. Six have no drill.

Four Questions Suggested

The following questions were suggested, not so much for specific answers, since each editor was urged to reply freely, but rather to indicate the type of information desired:

"If there is a R. O. T. C. unit at your school, is it popular? Are you personally in favor of the system? Is there a militaristic spirit on your campus or encouraged by the faculty? Do you think colleges generally are too pacifistic or too militaristic?"

Answers Fall Into Groups

The replying editors fell into four groups: three who unqualifiedly approve of the R. O. T. C.; four who are non-committal about it; nine who are opposed only to compulsory military training; and nine who object to agitation in recent years to make R. O. T. C. optional with Physical Education or to institute a system combining the two, which he himself favors. He finds "no particular militaristic spirit on the campus among students or faculty" and does not think it advisable for "colleges to go to extremes with regard to pacifism of militarism" because "it is essential and valuable for college students to become at least basically familiar with military tactics, especially as long as the European countries continue their present state of unrest."

The editor of the University of Cincinnati's Bearcat is "not in favor of the militaristic machine" and believes colleges permitting compulsory military training are "too militaristic."

Not Installed at Brown

There has never been any agitation for the establishment of an R. O. T. C. unit at Brown, writes The Daily Herald's editor who is opposed "to the introduction of militarism in educational circles unless it be placed on a thoroughly optional basis." He believes the "vast majority" of colleges are pacifistic, "but neither too much nor too little so," and notices at Brown "a decided apathy of interest" on this question.

Dungan Quoted

"Along with the rest of the important nations of the world," the managing editor of the North Carolina Daily Tar Heel maintains, "this country is entirely too militaristic." He sees no apparent movement toward pacifism or militarism at North Carolina, which has had no R. O. T. C. unit since the World War, but observes "from what

Kedroff Quartet Now Acclaimed On Both Sides Of The Atlantic

The Kedroff Quartet, distinguished ensemble of Russian singers, which will appear in Memorial hall in a concert March 31 under the auspices of the student entertainment committee, is making its fourth triumphant tour of the United States and Canada this year. This unique organization, composed entirely of accomplished musicians and singers came to America for the first time in January 1928. In three seasons before the American public, filling over 190 concert engagements, the Kedroff Quartet has won a triumph which rivals their conquest of the music world of Europe.

Besides the musical perfection of this quartet, their sincerity and intensity of expression, these four masters have achieved remarkable success in popularizing and in keeping alive Russian vocal music in all its forms. The Kedroffs have made it possible for us to hear these old folk songs, used by eminent composers, in their original form.

Professor N. Kedroff, who is considered as one of the outstanding authorities on Russian folk and church music, has spent years in research work and in collecting and harmonizing these treasures of the Slavs, keeping intact their original style, beauty, and spirit.

The quartet was honored by the French Government with an invitation to participate in the ceremony of laying the cornerstone of the memorial to Marshall Foch to be erected in Metz. The singers have also received many medals from this same government when they celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of their founding.

The late Czar Nicholas II was fond of the singing of the Kedroff Quartet, and often invited them to his intimate evenings in the palace. The Queen of the Belgians and also the Queen of Spain were very fond of hearing the singers, as is King George of England.

These unusually fine artists have received numerous compliments and favorable press reports in practically all of the prominent papers in the country. The New York Telegram commenting on their last New York appearance says: "The four scholarly gentlemen merely polished the golden table they have erected for themselves in America's music records."

Tar Heel Reporters

The following reporters are required to report to the news editor this afternoon between one-thirty and two o'clock: Mary Buie, E. M. Spruill, Frank Hawley, McBride Fleming-Jones, Charles Poe, L. L. Pegram, Alex Andrews, Jack Riley, and F. W. Ashley.

Koch Editing Book Of Carolina Plays

Professor Frederick H. Koch is now editing the fourth volume of Carolina plays which will be published soon by Samuel French. The first three volumes of the plays were published by the Henry Holt Publishing Co. Between 8,000 and 9,000 copies of the plays have been sold since they were published, and the plays have been produced extensively all over the United States.

Some of the plays which will be considered for publication are: Magnolia's Man, by Gertrude Wilson Coffin; Cloey and Blackwater, by Loretto Carroll Bailey; Companion Maggy, by Helen Dortch; The Lie, by Wilkinson O'Connell; Ever' Snitch, by Irene Fussler; The New Moon, by Telfaire Peet; and Third Night by Thomas Clayton Wolfe. All of these plays were written in Professor Koch's class in playwriting.

NEWSPAPER MEN TO CONVENE HERE

Annual Meeting of College Publicity Association Will Take Place in April.

This year the annual meeting of the American College Publicity association is to take place in Chapel Hill. The program for the convention will begin Wednesday evening April 22, and continue through Saturday, April 25. This organization is made up of the publicity directors of the various colleges and universities in the country.

As a part of their entertainment, the delegates to the convention will be shown over the Duke and Carolina campi and will, through the courtesy of E. Carrington Smith, at all times have free access to the Carolina theatre. At twilight Thursday evening Duke University will be host to the convention at a southern barbecue and brunswick stew supper.

Coach R. A. Fetzer of the University and Coach Wallace Wade of Duke will give their views of the good and bad features of college sports publicity. Both coaches will discuss the question: "Are College Sports Overemphasized?"

Some of the prominent men who will speak at the convention are: Earl Reed Silvers, of Rutgers university; Harold Ellis, of the university of California; Frank Wright, of the university of Florida; Frank R. Elliott of Indiana university; Miss Edith Johnson, of Wellesley; Robert W. Madry, of the University; L. C. Boochever, of Cornell university; H. L. Herbert, of the university of Pennsylvania; Nathaniel Sherman, of Yale university, Don M. Cresswell, of Penn State; Miss Katherine Rochmis, of Hunter college; Josef F. Wright, of the university of Illinois; Henry R. Dwire, of Duke university; Miss Lillina Gardner, of New Jersey college for Women; James Pollard, Ohio State university; Hector Perrier, New York university.

TRUSTEES NAME J. GROVER BEARD PHARMACY DEAN

Former President of Association Of Pharmacy Colleges Takes Howell's Place.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the University trustees held in Chapel Hill on March 19, J. Grover Beard, on recommendation of President Frank P. Graham, was made permanent dean of the pharmacy school, succeeding the late Vernon Howell.

Professor Beard graduated from the University school of pharmacy in 1909, winning the Bradham prize for highest scholastic honors in his class. Because of his fine record he was offered a place as instructor the year following his graduation, and since that time has served continually as a member of its faculty.

Paralleling his duties in the school of pharmacy, Mr. Beard has served for nineteen years as secretary-treasurer of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association. His work with the druggists of this state has been an important factor in the close relationship which today exists between the profession and the school of pharmacy.

Last June he was awarded the honorary degree of master of pharmacy by the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, in point of enrollment the largest college of pharmacy in America. Also last year Mr. Beard served as president of the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy, and is this year in office as first vice-president of the American Pharmaceutical Association. In addition to these honors he is president of the National Conference of Pharmaceutical Association Secretaries for the present year.

J. C. Bynum Plans Geological Tour

Professor J. C. Bynum, of the geology department of the University, who has been on leave in order to take up studies at Clark University, returned to Chapel Hill recently and announced his intentions of going on a geographical exploration tour early next month.

He will sail from New York with a number of other students from Clark University. The party will first go to Cuba and then to northern South America. They will penetrate into the depths of Panama, and on the return trip will make a brief stay in Porto Rico. The tour will last six or eight weeks.

FORMER PLAYMAKERS WORK ON BROADWAY

Several former Playmakers are now in New York engaged in dramatic work in various forms. Among these, Howard Bailey is acting in Lynn Riggs' play, Green Grow the Lilacs. Bill Atlee is acting in radio drama connected with the Columbia Broadcasting System, and Al Kahn is acting in Five Stars Final. One of the former Playmakers, P. L. Elmore, is directing Mary Nash in A Divorced Woman.

Miss Herring in Baltimore

Miss Harriet L. Herring of the local institute for research in social science is in Baltimore where she is securing material for her forthcoming book, The Textile Industry in the South.

For Here-Boy Understands

We remained in Chapel Hill during the recent holiday and watched the local dogs chase the local squirrels. The sad plight of one dog—we do not know his name, so we call him Here-Boy—interested us. He is a large frolicsome fellow with black curly hair and large, jovial eyes. He spent whole afternoons chasing squirrels, but he never caught one.

We used to watch him for hours at a time as he unsuccessfully tried every strategem in the dog's repertory for catching squirrels. Sometimes, he would sit on the grass and gaze dreamily at a passing cloud as though the thought of chasing squirrels was the furthest thing from his mind. Then, when a squirrel appeared within striking distance, he would suddenly awake from his pseudo-indifference, and bound hopefully after the startled squirrel. But the squirrel would always reach a helpful tree in time, and Here-Boy would be left gazing mournfully aloft at his prey perched safely beyond his reach. He would then approach us, receive a few sympathetic pats on the head, and try again.

And by the end of the vacation, a deep and understanding sympathy had grown up between us. For with the coming of spring had come a primordial urge in us also to chase squirrels. Several times we were sorely tempted to forget ourselves and chase a squirrel across the green. Not that we wanted to catch one. We would not know what to do with it if we did. We just wanted to chase one. But Custom, Convention, and the Ways of Society had bound us too tightly in their grasp. They had decreed that a man of twenty-one had no business chasing squirrels—even in the springtime. And we could do nothing but obey.

We never told anyone that we felt like chasing squirrels. We knew they would not understand. But when we tell Here-Boy in dog language of our desire, he wags his tail and yawns in sympathy. For Here-Boy understands.—P. L.

More Applause

Sometime age the Daily Tar Heel applauded the unknown donor of the Graham Memorial Building completion fund as a great benefactor of the University. It seemed at last that—through the generosity of this loyal alumnus—the fitting memorial to one of Carolina's best loved sons would be completed and that it would soon be in condition for utilization as a community recreation center. The grant of the donor was contingent upon the raising of a like sum by the University.

The facts as outlined above are those with which the public is familiar. However, we understand that there is a later development in the story of the grant which few people know about. It is reported that when the donor was informed of the failure of the University to raise the additional amount he himself supplemented the grant, relieving the University of the burden of supplying funds and guaranteeing the building's completion.

We have already praised the donor for his action, but the fragment of the story of the grant which has just come to us calls for more and greater applause.—B. M.

Faculty Censorship

The matter of censorship of student publications is constantly recurring in the pages of the undergraduate press. The most recent reappearance of the problem is in the University of Washington humorous magazine, whose editors have been placed on probation; the publication will probably hereafter be censored.

"Faculty censorship," the Stanford Daily says in commenting on the Washington incident, "is not necessary and almost never justified . . . a few words of advice often can be of great aid to student editors, but censorship is seldom productive of beneficial results."

The Stanford editors, it appears, are hardly seeing beyond their own problems; they do not want censorship, and their argument is overweighted with that consideration. It has been our experience that censorship often is justified, if not indeed necessary. In college comic magazines particularly there is a general tendency towards jokes whose flavor depends upon sexual suggestion worthy of the lowest of professional publications which pander to the burlesque-house trade or upon alcoholism, student cheating, and more general subversive attitudes whose end result is a ridicule of the so-called intellectual life in college.

Insofar as this is true and five minutes with that triumphant anthology College Humor, will prove its faithfulness to fact, censorship is justified and the Stanford Daily's comment worthless.

It is doubtful, further, if a "few words of advice" will ever do much good. Certainly there has been a sufficiency of comment from all sides, and the editors have done little if anything to change the character of their publications. An example of a more effective consorship is the refusal of women students at the University of Chicago this fall to sell copies of the Phoenix, undergraduate comic monthly, following publication in the magazine of a story the clubs considered unfit for printing. Since the women distribute about nine-tenths of the magazines printed and probably buy at least half of them, the importance of the boycott is evident. The editors of the monthly were forced to capitulate, as they never would have if merely "advised."

More truthful to the fact is the Stanford Daily's statement that "censorship is seldom productive of beneficial results." It is unfortunately true that censorship breeds little more than an accentuation of the evil, for it forces the editor to be canny with his filth; in fact definitely challenges him to do so.

But the final evil of censorship is not that it is ineffective, though it is certainly not so effective as a student boycott, but that it destroys the vitality of the publication. An incidence is the campaign of the uncensored Stanford Chaparral to end the intolerable situation which followed upon the appointment of Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of the university, to President Hoover's cabinet. Secretary Wilbur continued to act as President of the university after he had taken over his secretarial duties; every minor matter which ordinarily required the president's signature or approval continued to be sent to him at Washington, and he continued to draw the presidential salary. The Chaparral was chiefly responsible for his resignation from the presidency and the appointment of an acting president in his stead. Editorials in the Daily and a series of satirical cartoons in Chapdrral were the direct source of the much-needed change; censored, the publications could not possibly have corrected the evil.

It is in this that the great fault of censorship lies; it does not limit itself to the quashing of suggestive jokes; it extends to criticism of all vested authority and hence removes one of the first functions of an articulate student press. A student publication which cannot criticize has no excuse for existence.

The whole question is one which it not likely to be immediately settled. But at least it is evident that censorship is only partially effective, and is in itself an evil rather larger than that which it attempts to correct. It remains true, however, that college would be a more self-respecting institution if its student journalists were less rowdy and its students magazines less parallel to Captain Billy and Smokehouse. It is perhaps in the direction of the student boycott that the remedy lies.—Daily Cardinal.

College Dailies

The college daily, that much discussed medium of campus expression, appears to have finally come into its own. A nation-wide study which has been made reveals the interesting fact that 38 colleges and universities have daily newspapers, managed almost entirely by students and with a circulation of 182,417.

In addition to these papers, more than 60 colleges boast of publications which appear two or three times a week and about 400 other institutions have weekly newspapers.

The important thing about the survey mentioned is its revelation of the place which the college paper enjoys in the life of the campus.

It is regarded as something more than an "activity." It has become a rather necessary part of its respective institution. Accordingly, salaries of editors and business managers of the publications run as high as $2,000 a year.

Furthermore, the general practice seems to be one which permits the editors to largely control their respective sheets. The majority of educators have recognized the value of a candid and critical editorial column in the campus paper and hence "freedom of the press," is becoming increasingly prevalent.

"There is nothing, apparently," says the study "that arouses so much resentment among students as the idea that the faculty controls, censors, or in any way directs the editorial or business policy of student publications. Students evidently are perfectly willing to have administration, faculty or alumni control of their athletics, but any such control of their publications is deeply resented."

Apropos of all this, is the decline in the number of college editors who are being "thrown out" because of unseemingly and recalcitrant utterances. This may be due to a corresponding abatement in editorial "independence" and fortitude. We are inclined to believe, however, that college editors have begun to realize their responsibility more fully. Freedom from administrative pryings has brought about a more conscientious performance of duties.—Syracuse Daily Orange.

Presidential Elections Should Be Altered

Alfred E. Smith has suggested that the president of the United States be elected in September instead of November. He argues that with modern transportation facilities and speed in election procedure the time elapsing between nomination and election and between election and inauguration is too long.

A shorter campaign, he asserts, will be of benefit to candidates in that it will not time them out as much as at present, and public interest will not drop after hearing repeated speeches on the same subjects. March 4 is the traditional inauguration date, but there is no reason that a president should wait a half-year before taking office. Smith advocates that January 4 be the date for the inaugural procedure.

The horse and buggy day is gone, and it doesn't take a month for the electoral college to gather, and several more for the president to reach Washington. Business has been speeded up in the last twenty years, and politics should be.

Senates, congresses and legislatures today find themselves overburdened with the mass of legislation that confronts them. And it is only because their methods are antiquated.—Daily Californian.

Athletic Council Disqualifies Whitehead

BASEBALL TEAM LOSES VETERAN INFIELD CAPTAIN

Decision Reached after Investigating Charge of Professional Contract with Rochester.

Coach Jim Ashmore's infield problems at Carolina became magnified and intensified to the nth degree today when it was learned that the Athletic Council, after considering all the evidence in the case of Burgess Whitehead, star shortstop, decided that the Carolina captain was ineligible for further college competition.

Whitehead was charged with having signed a professional contract with Rochester, which automatically would have rendered him ineligible. The Rochester Club president wrote that, due to a misunderstanding between their agent and Whitehead, they did not consider that they had any agreement with the Tar Heel star, and that any agreement there might have been was considered null and void. The Athletic Council, however, decided that there was enough evidence that Whitehead had violated the letter of the eligibility rule, and proclaimed the Tar Heel captain ineligible.

This means that Coach Ashmore must build an entirely new infield before Carolina opens with a brace of games against Cornell here next Monday and Tuesday, for graduation had already cut down such stars from last year as Lufty, third baseman; Rand, second baseman; Jackson, first and second baseman; Brown, first baseman; and Captain Maus, catcher.

Leonard, a reserve, and Ferebee, a sophomore, have been shifted to short. Both are good fielders, but neither is large enough to be a heavy hitter. Pete Wyrick, an old football star but new to baseball, is looking best at second. Two sophomores, McCaskill and Powell, are having it out for third, and Paul Dunlap, a hard-hitting intramural product, is looking best at first.

There are several seasoned outfielders, but only Cloyd Blythe, left handed hitter and letterman, has reached his hitting stride. Other old men who are making bids for garden posts include Henry House, Obie Davis, Clyde McKinney, and Branch Paxton, while the sophomores include Croom, Daniel, Peacock and Dixon.

Piggy Potter, understudy last year to Captain Maus, looks the best of the catchers, but Pattisol, a soph, is looking up too. Paul Edwards, John Shields and Cecil Longest are three right-handed pitchers of promise from last year's club. Griffith and Scarboro are looking the best of the sophomores.

CHICAGO UNIVERSITY MAY TRY NEW CLASS SYSTEM

Students of the University of Chicago have been aroused recently by the rumor that the present system of classes will be abolished. According to the new plan, the words freshman, sophomore, junior and senior will be taken from the college vocabulary, and the student will be allowed to travel on his path of learning as swiftly as he desires. There will be no restrictions as to what certain students must take, instead the courses will be open to all students in the university.

FOLGER DIES IN SOUTH AMERICA

Peritonis Claims Former Tar Heel Grid Star and Three-Letter Man.

Bill Folger, one of Carolina's greatest football players, died of peritonitis Sunday in Buenos Aires, Argentina. Death followed an operation for appendicitis.

Folger was an all-round athlete while in school here, but he accomplished one great feat that has immortalized him in the hearts of Carolina football fans. On Thanksgiving day 1916 in Richmond, Virginia, Folger broke loose against Virginia to gallop forty yards for the only touchdown of the day and give Carolina its first victory over the Virginians in several years. The Cavaliers were able to hold the Tar Heel star throughout the remainder of the game, but on that play there was no stopping him.

Folger did not confine his activities to football, but starred also in baseball and track. As a centerfielder in 1917 Folger playing before a home town crowd in Columbia, South Carolina, hit a home run over the center field fence that stands as the longest drive ever made in the Iodine state capital.

Folger came to Carolina from The Citadel and studied law here before entering the Pulitzer school of journalism in New York. He later went to Mexico City with the United Press and was made manager of the bureau there. He was then shifted to Lima, Peru and later to Buenos Aires, Argentina, where he was again made manager of the bureau.

INDIANA ALSO HAS BUDGET TROUBLES

The University has not been alone in its problem of state funds. A recent attempt of the Indiana state legislature to reduce the appropriations of the University of Indiana was defeated on March 2 by a vote of sixty-six to thirteen.

An amendment for reducing the appropriations by $75,000 was made by Earl Crawford to the legislature, but was finally defeated.

When the amendment was first proposed, the representatives of Indiana university, Purdue, Indiana state teachers college at Terre Haute, and Ball teachers college at Muncie met and arranged to present arguments to the various members of the legislature. This movement evidently had a splendid effect for when a vote was taken the bill was defeated by a majority of sixty-six to thirteen.

They have put up a monument in Vienna over the grave of the man who invented the postcard, and we do hope that his career was of the kind that would justify the inscription: "Having a Fine Time. Wish You Were Here."—Boston Herald.

ROOKIES DEFEAT REGULARS 3-2 IN PRACTICE MATCH

Dunlap Hits Homer With House On Base for Regulars Only Scores.

The worm turned yesterday when the Rookies took a four inning practice game, 3-2, at Emerson Field.

George Hinton, hurling for the Rookies, blanked the Regulars with one hit. "Red" Merritt taking up the burden allowed the Regulars their only runs in the last session, when Dunlap poled out a homer with House on base.

The Rookies squeezed over the winning marker in the last frame when John Peacock, who drove in all the runs, singled through second to score White.

Robbie Pattisall, Rookie catcher, started a rally in the second inning when he advanced to second on Leonard's two base error. Hinton walked, and Peacock scored both with a long double to right.

It wasn't until the fourth inning that the Regulars evened up the count. House walked and Paul Dunlap lined one high and far to the right center field fence for a round trip, scoring House before him.

White, rookie first baseman, supplied the fielding gem of the day when he speared Blythe's bid for a base hit.

The box score:

Regulars (2)	AB	R	H	E
Croom, lf	2	0	1	0
House, cf	1	1	0	0
Dunlap, 1b	2	1	1	0

Summary: Two base hits: Moore, Peacock; home run: Dunlap; stolen bases: Croom, House; hit by pitcher: Longest (Davis).

Infirmary List

The German measles epidemic seems to show no signs of abating as there was a larger number of students on the sick list than there was yesterday. The sick list for yesterday is as follows: John Entwistle, D. L. Potter, James Griffith, J. W. Stallings, R. H. Carmichael, R. L. Bernhardt, F. G. Dellinger, B. B. Frazer, Thomas S. Bennett, E. C. McInnis, U. L. Spense, M. H. Dunn, R. A. Reid, H. R. Baker, P. R. Brown, and George R. Little.

FENCERS WIN IN NORTHERN TRIP

The Carolina fencers opened their regular season last week with wins over Virginia Military Institute, Lehigh, Lafayette, Rutgers, and St. Johns. V. M. I. was turned back as a starter, 5-4, then in the north, the Tar Heels beat Lehigh, 7-2, Lafayette, 6-3, Rutgers, 6-3, and St. Johns, 5-4. St. Johns had previously defeated New York University, Columbia, and Dartmouth.

Hinkey Hendlin, one-time Clemens medal winner, led the Carolina fencers, winning fourteen out of fifteen matches. His only loss was to Freese of St. Johns, who went to the finals of the intercollegiates last year, and who defeated him two to one. Of the other Tar Heels, Digby Wardlaw won seven while losing six, Fred Wardlaw won seven and lost seven, and alternate Lynch won one and lost two.

The Tar Heel foilsmen, their prestige increased considerably as a result, are preparing now to defend their southern paper title in a triangular meet here this week-end with V. M. I. and the college of Charleston. Team matches will be run off in the Tin Can Friday afternoon at three o'clock, and individual matches Saturday afternoon at three o'clock.

The FAVORITE tobacco of the Dartmouth man is . . .

IF you want to know the Dartmouth man's favorite tobacco, watch him as he loads his pipe between classes in front of Dartmouth Row. Watch him as he strolls along Wheelock Street and pulls the familiar blue tin of Edgeworth out of his pocket.

A pipe and Edgeworth—this is the smoking combination that has won the college man. Harvard, Cornell, Michigan, Stanford, Illinois . . . all agree with Dartmouth. Natural merit has made Edgeworth the favorite smoking tobacco in America's leading colleges and universities.

College men everywhere respond to the appeal of pipes packed with cool, slow-burning Edgeworth. Be guided by their choice; try Edgeworth yourself. Taste its rich natural savor that is enhanced immeasurably by Edgeworth's distinctive "eleventh process." You will find Edgeworth at your nearest tobacco shop—15¢ the tin. It's a treat. Just the dish to satisfy that touch of bedtime hunger. And so easy to digest, you'll sleep like a log.

Kellogg's Corn Flakes are delicious for breakfast, lunch, any time and anywhere. Ask for them at your fraternity eating house or the college dining-hall.

Kellogg's
CORN FLAKES

You'll enjoy Kellogg's Slumber Music, broadcast over WJZ and associated stations of the N. B. C. every Sunday evening at 10.30 E. S. T. Also KFI Los Angeles, KOMO Seattle at 10.00, and KOA Denver at 10.30.

The most popular cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include ALL-BRAN, PEP Bran Flakes, Rice Krispies, Wheat Krumbles, and Kellogg's WHOLE WHEAT Biscuit. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee—the coffee that lets you sleep.

The Campus Calendar

French Talkie

The modern language attraction for this week at the Carolina is Cherie, an all-French talkie with a foreign cast. Marguerite Moreno plays the lead. The feature comes Wednesday night at eleven o'clock, shortly after the last showing of the day's production.

Community Club

The meeting of the music department of the community club which was scheduled for tonight in the music building has been postponed until April 8, because of the organ recital.

Organ Concert

The music department of the University announces that Professor George M. Thompson of the organ department at N. C. C. W. will give the second concert of the guest series in the music building tonight at eight-fifteen.

Baseball Managers

Any freshmen interested in trying out for freshman baseball managerships will report to Art Sickles at Emerson Field this afternoon at three o'clock.

Sophomore Chapel

Chapel exercises will be held this morning for all sophomores except those especially excused.

Playmaker Reading

Lamar Stringfield's first opera, Mountain Song, will be read Sunday night in the Playmaker Theatre. It is a story of moonshiners, and the scene is laid in the mountains of North Carolina.

Electrical Equipment To Be Shipped By Air

Through the sky, over the wooly heads of cannibals in Papua, British New Guinea, will soon soar three airplanes bearing electrical equipment produced by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, and bound for the interior, 32 miles from the coast.

Two steel bucket-dredges for use in obtaining gold from the much in river bottoms, eighteen motors, switching equipment, transformers, and a hydro-electric power plant, possessing a total weight of over 3,000 tons, will be freighted over mountain ranges two miles high by the huge planes, each of which is capable of flying with loads of three and one-half tons.

The dredge will operate on a river, bringing sand and muck, gathered from the bed, to the surface by means of an endless chain of buckets. After the buckets are filled, the contents are dumped into a perforated cylinder for screening. In this operation, the material is graded according to size and is later examined for gold. The entire process is motorized and controlled by Westinghouse apparatus.

Mining materials used in this far away gold field, where authentic cannibals still roam through the jungle, have been flown to the site of operations. Trucks, tractors, building materials and even 1,000 pounds of beer per week, have been transferred safely from the coast to the gold fields in the interior.

Flying these materials and supplies to their destination is the most efficient mode of transportation open to the Bulolo Gold Dredging company. The interior of British New Guinea is almost impassable not only because of dense jungle growth and mountain ranges, but also because of the fact that the rivers are scarcely navigable. Most of the interior is unexplored territory inhabited by man-eating savages.

ANNOUNCE PLANS FOR NEXT ANNUAL DRAMA FESTIVAL

addresses by Harry Davis and Lynn Riggs.

The preliminary contest of the Eastern city high schools between the Lumberton High School and the Chas. L. Coon High School of Wilson will take place at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, to be followed by an original play presentation by the Seaboard County High School.

At 4 o'clock will come the final play production contest of the county high schools, between the Paw Creek Dramatic Club and the Hallsboro High School.

At 7:30 o'clock will come the original play contest of the city schools, with Asheville City High School and the R. J. Reynolds High School of Winston-Salem competing.

At 9 o'clock will be held the final contest in play production for the city high schools, with the Asheville City High School and the winner of the afternoon contest competing.

A business session of the Association will open the program at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. At 11 o'clock there will be presented from Station WBT, Charlotte, a "Radio Drama" directed by Dwight Mathis, director of the Tar Heel Dramatists.

There will follow a talk on "Five-and-Ten-Cent Scenery" by Samuel Selden, technical director of the Carolina Playmakers. Barrett Clark's address on "Broadway Tomorrow," will close the morning session.

A demonstration performance by St. Augustine's College For Negroes, of Raleigh; a costume review, the presentation of an original play by Kneale Morgan, Asheville; a guest performance of the Playmakers, and a folk dancing demonstration, directed by Miss Gladys Angel of the University, will comprise the afternoon program.

The directors' supper will be given at the Carolina Inn at 6 o'clock Saturday night. At 7:30 the final contest in play production of the senior colleges and Little Theatres will be held, with Wake Forest, Lenoir-Rhyne, Duke and the Charlotte Drama League offering the competition.

As the closing feature Professor Koch will announce the winners of all the contests, and President Graham will make the awards.

N. Y. U. DAILY NEWS PRESENTS EDITORS' VIEWS ON R. O. T. C.

little knowledge we have of colleges in the middle and far West that "the institutions of higher learning in these sections have very militant faculties and student-unions."

At thirteen of the twenty-five institutions represented in this survey there is or recently has been agitation of one form or another, ranging from an occasional editorial at Colgate to a petition signed by 1500 students at Iowa, against militarism in education. Seven editors requested the data revealed in this survey.

Eight editors reported definite pacifistic inclinations among their faculties whereas three indicated faculty approval of the R. O. T. C. system. And ten evidenced their concern with the influence of the R. O. T. C. system in endangering world peace through helping to keep militaristic agitation alive.

Finally, the replies indicate an overwhelming opposition among college editors to compulsory military training and a formidable objection to military training even when elective.

The attitude of Congress on the bonus is that 4,000,000 votes can't be wrong.—Dallas News.

Forty-Seven Basketball Teams Competed For Campus Honors

Three Hundred and Fifty Men Took Part in Annual Race—Dormitory Team Captured Title for Third Successive Year—Final Standings of Clubs Announced.

The Question Marks reign supreme in campus basketball, having defeated the Kappa Alpha's, fraternity champions, to keep the campus title in the dormitory league for the third successive year. Aycock won the campus title last year and Carr year before last.

According to officials the past season was one of the most successful seasons in the history of intramural basketball. Forty-seven teams and over 350 men participated in intramural basketball this year.

John Peacock, Phi Delt star, gathered thirteen points in the play-offs to bring his total for the season up to 106 points and top both leagues in individual scoring. Dunlap, Best House center, topped the dormitory league with eighty-six points, while Dixon, of the Pi Kap's took third place honors with seventy- nine points. The players scoring seventy or more points for the season follows:

Players and Team	Points
Peacock, Phi Delta Theta	106
Dunlap, Best House	86
Dixon, Pi Kappa Phi	79
Purser, Sigma Zeta	78
Crouch, Best House	76
Barnwell, Question Marks	74
Blackwood, Sigma Epsilon	73
Wells, Kappa Alpha	73
Feit, Sigma Zeta	72
Eagles, Kappa Sigma	72
Dewey, Phi Gamma Delta	71
Royster, Ruffin	70

In team scoring the Kappa Alpha's topped both leagues, scoring forty-two points in the play-offs to bring their total for the season up to 290, thirty-five points more than their nearest opponent. The Phi Delta Theta's took second place honors with 254 points in ten games, scoring seventy points in the play-offs. The teams scoring more than 225 points are as follows:

Team	Games	Points
Kappa Alpha	9	290
Ruffin	10	256
Phi Delta Theta	10	254
A. T. O.	7	249
Mangum	10	244
Best House	8	241
Sigma Zeta	8	230

Francis, Lewis star, scored forty-six points against Carr to top the individual scoring. Council, Beta Theta Pi, was his nearest rival, scoring thirty-nine points in the Beta's 82-14 win over the Pika's. Umstead, New Dorms, and Peacock, Phi Delt star, took third place with twenty-nine points.

Beta Theta Pi set a new record for the past four years, at least according to Wallace Shelton, assistant director of the intramural department, scoring eighty-two points against the Pika's. The Independents, with seventy-five, and Lewis, with seventy, followed in order.

The official standings as released by the intramural department are as follows:

DANIELS, GRAHAM WILL APPEAR ON DINNER PROGRAM

Publicity Association Banquet And Dance, April 24, Will Be Important Convention Event.

One of the outstanding features of the meeting of the American College Publicity Association, which will convene here April 23, 24 and 25, will be the annual convention banquet and dance, a formal affair which will be given at the Carolina Inn on Friday evening, April 24.

The banquet will be the highlight of the three-day sessions and according to plans, it will be a brilliant social event. In addition to the delegates, a few outsiders will be invited.

Speakers at the banquet will be Josephus Daniels, Raleigh newspaper publisher and Secretary of the Navy in the Wilson Cabinet, and President Frank P. Graham of the University. Robert M. Madry, director of the University News Bureau, who is convention secretary, will be toastmaster.

A special feature of the banquet will be a sketch consisting of take-offs on the convention. This is being worked up by the New York delegation.

The Carolina Buccaneers, one of the best student orchestras turned out here in recent years, will play at both the banquet and dance. The banquet will begin at 7 o'clock and the dance at 9:30.

Indications are that around one hundred delegates, publicity directors of leading colleges and universities all over the country, will attend the convention. California is sending a delegation of half a dozen, New York State is sending more than a dozen, Pennsylvania is sending fourteen, Illinois is sending eight and other states likewise will be well represented. Robert W. Madry is chairman of the committee on local arrangements.

STOCK EXCHANGE OFFICIAL SPEAKS TO CAROLINA MEN

Cameron Beck Talks on Necessity Of Preparation for Business Career.

Cameron Beck, personnel director in the New York Stock Exchange, spoke to an interested group of listeners yesterday morning during chapel hour.

His talk centered about character and the necessity of a boy's being prepared before entering business. He told of the methods of employment by the Stock Exchange, and the selection of employees for further advancement.

Mr. Beck stated that a young man should have a definite plan for the line of work which he intends to follow. Next to purpose, he should have perseverance, and carry out his plan successfully by being able to turn down all discouragements which face him. Above all, Mr. Beck said that character was the first step toward a successful life. This is the first qualification which an employee of the New York Stock Exchange must possess. No man can be happy and prosper long by underhand methods.

He gave several examples of employment methods which he uses, showing that the boy who has a definite purpose, perseverance, and character gains for himself a position to be envied.

"Carrboro Limited" Runs Off Track

While shifting cars below the University power plant yesterday, the "Carrboro Limited" made a slip that attracted many students to the scene. The train backed in to pick up the empty gondola from which stone for the bell tower had been removed, and rolled too far, pushing the rear wheels of the car off the end of the rails.

The brakeman and conductor pried with some handy crossties, and after much blowing and puffing, the engine finally dragged the wayward car back on the track. Then, like a licked pup, the "limited" crept slowly out to Carrboro.

Emerson Gill

GILL IS ENGAGED FOR MAY FROLIC

Popular Band, Now at Bamboo Gardens in Cleveland, Will Play for Annual Dance.

After many weeks of negotiation word has been finally received by the May Frolic committee that Emerson Gill and his Columbia Recording Orchestra will play for the second annual May Frolic.

The May Fdolic was inaugurated last year by a group of fraternities on the campus with the purpose of promoting a bond of friendship and good will between the fraternities and to give a set of dances that would suitably replace the old German Club Easter dances which were done away with at the time the Easter holidays were changed to the present spring holidays.

Last year the May Frolic was given on the second and third of May and met with such wide approval that it was definitely fixed as an annual affair. With this view in mind a permanent organization was formed composed of the following fraternities: Zeta Psi, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Sigma Nu, Kappa Sigma, and Beta Theta Pi. The following officers were elected: president, Art Sickles; vice-president, Willis Henderson; secretary-treasurer, Buck Snow; and dance leader, Dail Holderness. Besides those already mentioned, on the committee in charge of arrangements this year are: Henry Anderson; Clyde Dunn, and John Jamison.

No pains have been spared to make this year's May Frolic one of the most brilliant social events of the year and in selecting the music of Emerson Gill the committee feels that they have one of the country's outstanding orchestras. It is at present playing at the Bamboo Gardens, and is also broadcasting over station WTAM. Before then they broadcasted over the Columbia chain through WABC.

Carolina's Two "Grand Old Men"

DEAN M.C.S. NOBLE

PROFESSOR COLLIER COBB

Dr. M. C. S. Noble (left), retired dean of the school of education, celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday at his home here Sunday, March 15. Dr. Noble has been on the faculty of the University since 1898. He has been president of the Bank of Chapel Hill for twenty-five years, and is greatly respected in the town and University being given the title of "grand old man of North Carolina education."

Dr. Collier Cobb (right), head of the department of geology in the University and one of the most universally beloved members of the faculty, celebrated his sixty-ninth birthday Saturday, March 21. Dr. Cobb still enjoys the best of health and is known as one of the jolliest men in the University.

STATE BRANCH OF A. A. U. W. TO MEET AT DUKE APRIL 24

Dr. Kathryn McHale and Professor Winifred Cullis Will Be Guest Speakers.

Dr. Kathryn McHale, executive and educational secretary of the American Association of University Women, and Professor Winifred Cullis, president of the International Federation of University Women, will be the guest speakers at the annual meeting of the North Carolina division, to be held in Durham April 24 and 25, it was announced today by Miss Katherine Jocher, publicity chairman of the North Carolina division.

All meetings will be held on the campus of the Women's College of Duke University. Dr. McHale will be the speaker at the banquet on Friday night which marks the formal opening of the conference and at which time the guests and delegates will be entertained by Duke University. Professor Cullis will be the speaker at luncheon on Saturday.

A new and special feature of this meeting will be the conference on collegiate and vocational education of girls in secondary schools, led by Dr. McHale.

Dr. McHale has held important positions as professor of education at Goucher College, Columbia University during summer sessions, and at the University of Minnesota. She is, also, a member of the National Child Study Association, and the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection.

Professor Cullis, who was born in Gloucester, studied at the London School of Medicine for Women in 1901. She is now head of the department of physiology at that school; and has held a professorship at the University of London, not to mention several important positions with the government and foreign universities.

ENGINEERS HEAR N. P. HAYES TELL OF NEW BUILDING

Carolina Steel Company Official Describes Construction of Bank of Manhattan.

N. P. Hayes, vice-president of the Carolina Steel and Iron Company of Greensboro spoke to the members of the William Cain Society, student branch of the American Society of Civil Engineers, on "The Erection of the Manhattan Bank" when the students met Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock in room 319 Phillips hall.

Hayes divided his lecture into two parts and illustrated each with films furnished him by the American Institution of Steel Construction. The first subject with which he dealt was the newly created battle deck flooring.

This new flooring has been tested by the severest conditions as found in the wear and strain on battleship flooring. Also the material is adaptable to blend with the finest and most luxurious furnishings of ocean liners. Mr. Hayes pointed out that modern office buildings were also adopting this floor because of the saving in weight and space. The reduction in weight lightens the frame construction of the buildings, and the difference in thickness saves a great deal. In a construction of twenty stories twelve feet in height can be eliminated by using the new material, says Hayes.

The second part of the lecture treated with the construction of the Bank of Manhattan. According to the Carolina Steel representative, this construction was an epic in steel. Where the average time for building such a structure had been two years this building was completed in half the time.

When the skyscraper was finished it was the tallest in the Classes To Nominate Candidates Tonight

Members of the freshman, sophomore and junior classes will meet tonight at seven-thirty for the purpose of nominating candidates for their class offices next year for the election which is to take place Tuesday, March 31.

Students in the Class of '34 are to meet in Gerrard hall, Class of '33 in Bingham hall, and Class of '32 in Murphey hall. Men from each class will be nominated for each of the following offices in the respective rising classes: president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and the representative on the student council.

N. N. Kedroff

KEDROFF QUARTET HIGHLY PRAISED

Perfection of Famed Musicians, Who Appear Here Tuesday, Especially Noteworthy.

The Kedroff Quartet, internationally famous musicians and singers, will appear in Memorial hall Tuesday night at eight-thirty to present a selected collection of Russian folk songs and classics.

Everywhere they have appeared, they have been heralded as the most wonderful phenomenon of the vocal world today" to use the words of Koussevitzky and The New York Post. Walter Damrosch, director of the New York Symphony Orchestra, gave them a special invitation to appear as soloists with the orchestra at Mecca Temple, New York. They were recalled eight times before the curtain, and it is a rare instance to have a vocal quartet sing without accompaniment with one of the great orchestras.

There are few, if any, vocal quartets in existence of the same type as the Kedroff ensemble. Before their organization, quartet singing was regarded as inconsequentil, not to be taken seriously because of the difficulty of perfecting it. It required long years of practice and devotional work to achieve the results they have reached. Their sole aim is attaining perfection, the perfection of a group of string instruments, combined with unity of interpretation. It is their desire to keep any one voice from gaining ascendency over the others that causes the strange effect of a single instrument playing.

A. J. Warner, of the Rochester Times-Union writes, "I have never heard a quartet in the least like the Kedroff ensemble, which is different even in the arrangement of its personnel on the stage, the baritone standing at the side of the first tenor, with the second tenor placed between the baritone and the bass."

STATE DRAMATIC TOURNAMENT IS TO BEGIN TODAY

Presentation of Plays by Clubs And Junior Colleges Opens Program at Three O'clock.

This afternoon at three o'clock, the eighth annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association will be opened. The preliminary contest of the community clubs and junior colleges will begin at that time. The Accomplice, by Abigail Marshall will be presented by Mars Hill college. Following this, the Reid Players, of Reidsville, will present Behold the Man, by Brandon Tyman.

At 4:30 o'clock the representatives will register at the Playmakers theatre. Registration will conclude the program for the afternoon.

Delegates (except the director) from each club of the association will pay a registration fee of one dollar, which will admit them to all sessions of the festival. Admission to any one performance of plays for those not registered will be fifty cents. Group tickets, good for all plays presented during the festival, will be sold for $1.50.

Tonight at 7:30, the contest in original plays of the community clubs and junior colleges will be held. The Woman's Club, of Seaboard, will present The Evidence, and Mars Hill college will offer as its part of the evening's program, His Heritage, written by Frances Barnes. At nine o'clock, the final contest in play production of the community clubs and junior colleges will be held. The Drums of Oude, written by Austin Strong, will be presented by the Rocky Mount Theatre Guild, after which the winner of the contest in the afternoon will be announced.

An exhibit of play-books, cos-

STUDENT REPORTS TO OCCUPY LAW SCHOOL SEMINAR

Labor Injunctions and Yellow-Dog Contracts Are Subjects for the Morning.

"Legislative Limitations upon the Labor Injunction and Yellow-Dog Contracts" will be the subject of discussion by the law school seminar on administration of justice, this morning at ten-thirty o'clock, under the supervision of Professor M. T. Van Hecke.

The following papers of ten minutes duration each will furnish the basis for discussion: "The History of the Labor Injunction," W. W. Johnson; "Legislative Limitations on the Scope of Labor Injunctions," L. J. Giles; "Legislative Limitations on Procedure in the Issuance of Labor Injunctions," R. M. Gray; "Jury Trials in Contempt Proceedings under Labor Injunctions," Allen Langston; "Legislative Nullification of Yellow-Dog Contracts," E. M. Perkins.

The seminar will be attended by the economics class in trade unionism under Professor H. D. Wolf, the economics class in government and business under Professor Richard J. Hobbs, and the law class in equity under Professor Van Hecke. The discussion of the student papers will be led by Professors Wolf and Hobbs and by Professor Duane McCracken, of the economics department of Guilford College.

Experience Still A Great Teacher

A number of baseball players in North Carolina colleges are realizing that experience is still a great teacher. We refer to those who have recently been declared ineligible for collegiate competition by their respective athletic councils. The basis of the action of these councils is the Southern Conference ruling which declares ineligible all players who sign or agree to contracts with professional baseball teams.

The latest to fall beneath this ruling is Burgess Whitehead, captain of the Carolina team. Burgess was connected with professional contracts during the winter quarter by newspaper stories stating that he had signed a contract. A prompt denial was made by Burgess and the denial seemed to close the matter. However, the Athletic Council, of which Burgess is a member, declared he had violated the regulation and was therefore ineligible.

Without doubting Whitehead's statement that he has not signed a professional contract or the words of the other players involved we prefer to stick by the rulings and let the players go. Baseball prospects may be ruined but the players have only themselves to blame. There isn't a ball player in this state who hasn't been warned not to sign contracts or papers without consulting someone who knows. And yet they sign away their amateur standings and think they can get away with it. It just can't be done. And the spirit of the ruling is about as binding as the letter.

With Contemporaries

A Preposition Is A Bad Word To End A Sentence With—

The suggestion of the University of Minnesota to abolish freshman English courses has set the educational world agape. Press reports have it that Minnesota's authorities have been considering for some time the abolition of the required first-year courses in English. The high cost and relative low return for the investment was given as the major reason for the revolutionary change in the course of study.

Some of the more "modern" institutions of our country probably will fall heartily in accord with Minnesota's proposed step. Other universities will look askance at it, and will wonder that, of all courses incorporated in a curriculum, the axe should fall upon the King's English.

No one should be graduated from any college or university without sufficient training in English to enable him to express himself intelligently. The English language is a peculiar subject, even in the United States; more peculiar perhaps than the study of a foreign lingo. For example, the child learns to speak it according to his environment, which may be good or bad. Owing to its complexity, the average high school student is able to grasp only a few of the rudiments of sentence structure and grammar. It therefore falls to the college or university to acquaint the youth with refining details and the art of fluency.

Consider then the conditions of our mother tongue a few decades hence should all institutions of higher education decide that instruction in courses of English was not paying its way!

Says the Minnesota Daily, university publication, in an editorial: "The modern college is trending toward abolition of all cultural values and the substitution only of courses which have direct monetary value. The English department represents the last stronghold of a cultural subject in the University. That last stronghold is about to give way to the modern trend."

That specialization is commendable within limits is not to be refuted. To specialization, we owe the education of our doctors, lawyers and other professional men. But when specialization means that students are denied the privilege of enrolling in elective subjects, the primary purpose of an education—that of broadening the individual—is defeated.—Indiana Student.

Poorest Professors Give Lowest Grades

According to President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern University, the lowest grades in college and university courses are given by the poorest professors—poorest both in financial matters and teaching ability. These men are the ones who are not reappointed to office. President Scott found, in studying the matter, that this group of professors gave seven times as many low marks as the group recognized by the university authorities as the best.—Virginia Tech.

Changes Made at Wisconsin Praised

The University of Wisconsin has in the past two years made many critical changes in their curriculum that have proved successful and have gained the praise of their legislature. Recently new changes have been suggested which the reorganizing committee feel will be a trail blazer in the educational world.

The questions of most importance to the interim committee were those of the university's advisory system and the state boards of education. The spirit of the campus at Madison is to eliminate all superfluous offices.

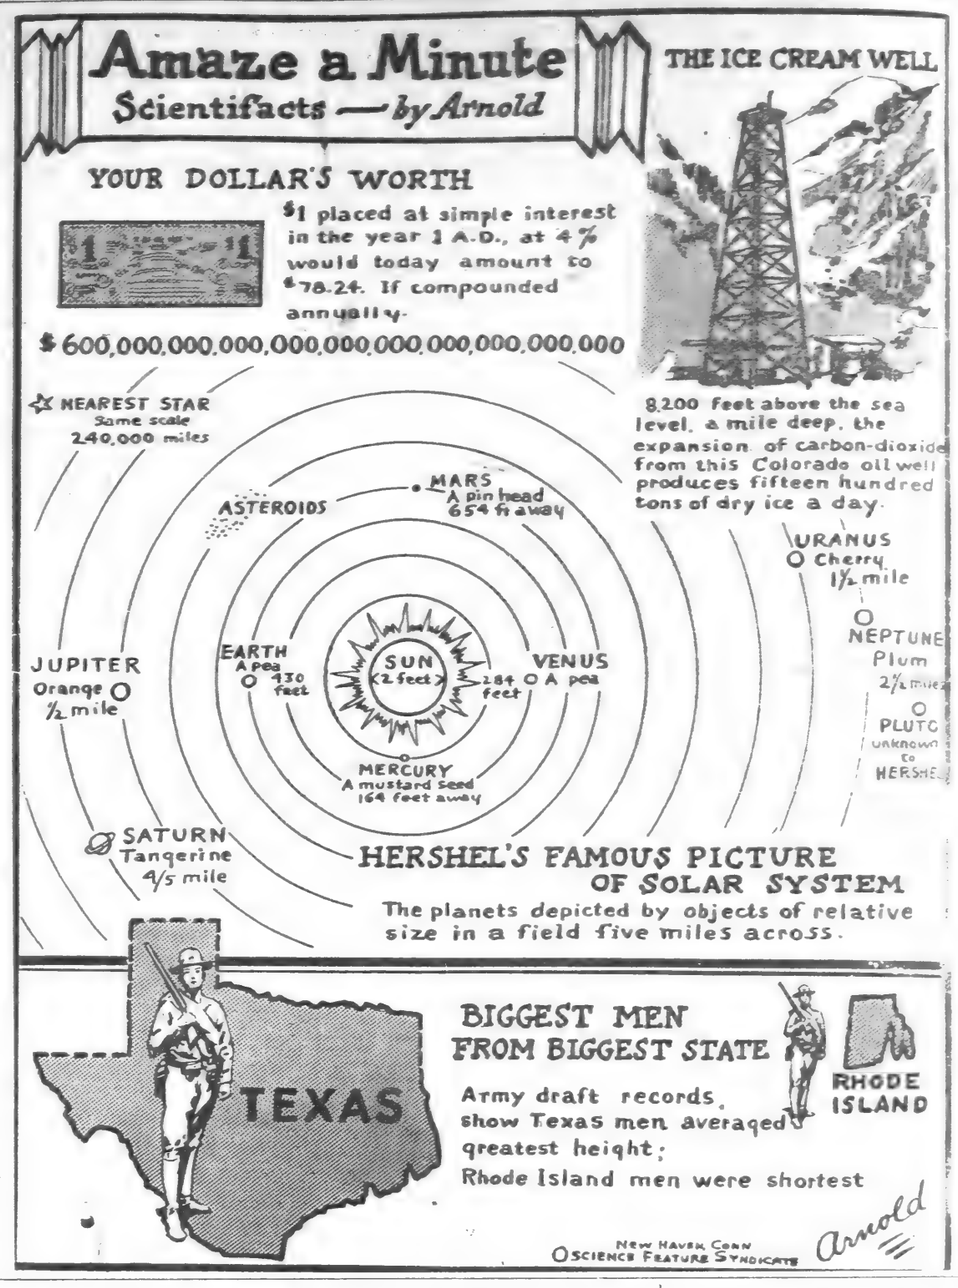
In the past the duty of advising freshmen and sophomores at the University of Wisconsin was placed upon the professors, but they disliked the task and shifted it to assistants. These were for the most part young and inexperienced. They were not fitted to guide the new men, and could not get the cooperation of the older members of the faculty.

This attitude of the older men of the college has changed and the advisory committee reorganized. The advisors have been more carefully selected and are rendering efficient service. Salary increases and faculty promotions are based somewhat on the attitude of the professors to this field of service.

The feature of most prominence is the proposed change in the education commissions, boards, and assemblies. The interim committee proposes to reduce the present 162 individuals who plan the educational policies of the state of Wisconsin to fifteen men who will form one board to handle all the educational problems confronting the people.

Such changes would cut the number from eight major boards and four minor commissions to one collected body of fifteen men. This would abolish many offices that are at present very useless and only a drain from the state funds. The interim committee believes when such proposals are executed the state educational system will operate much more efficiently and simply.

New Alumni Directors



Three new directors were elected at the meeting of the Alumni Association of the University in Raleigh last week, at which time President Kemp P. Lewis, successor to the late Felix Harvey, presided. The new directors are: James R. Patton of Durham, C. S. Carr of Norfolk, and Harlee Bellamy of Wilmington. Watts Hill was re-elected treasurer.

Co-Eds Unpinned

After August 15, 1931, co-eds in the state of Ohio will have to return fraternity pins to their original owners or spend a month or so in jail, for a law on the Ohio statute books declares that "Whoever, not being entitled to do so under the rules and regulations thereof, wears the badge or button of a society or organization of ten years' standing in this state, shall be fined not more than $20, or imprisoned not more than thirty days, or both."

SPEAKERS FROM 228 SCHOOLS TO DEBATE IN APRIL

Annual Triangular Debates To Be On Question of Philippines' Independence.

Nine hundred and twelve debaters, representing 228 high schools, will take part on April 3 in the nineteenth annual series of triangular debates of the North Carolina High School Debating Union, it was announced yesterday by Secretary E. R. Rankin.

The query for the debates is: Resolved, That the United States should grant immediate independence to the Philippines. In their preparation for the state-wide contest the high school speakers have made exhaustive studies extending over the past several months of all available material bearing on this question.

All high schools which win both sides in the triangular debates will send their representatives to Chapel Hill to compete on April 16 and 17 in the final contest for the Aycock Memorial Cup, the highly prized debating trophy which has been provided by the intercollegiate debaters of the University of North Carolina.

Eighty-seven counties are represented by schools enrolled for the contest, Buncombe leading with eleven. Only thirteen counties are not represented.

ROOKIE-REGULAR PRACTICE GAME ENDS IN 3-3 TIE

Regulars Come Up In Final Period To Even Score With Rookies.

POTTER GETS HOME RUN

Shields Goes Route for Regulars, Mass and Merritt For Rookies.

The Regulars came from behind in the last inning to push three runs over the plate and tie the Rookies at three-all in a six inning practice game yesterday at Emerson Field.

Lefty Mass started for the Rookies and hurled hitless ball during his three inning stay. Merritt, who succeeded him, also hurled hitless ball for two innings, but was found for three hits, including a double and a home run, which netted the Regulars three runs. Shields, veteran right hander, went the route for the Regulars, pitching creditable ball, only allowing four hits.

Neither team scored until the third stanza when the Rookies scored twice on two hits and two misplays. Mass opened that session with a scratch single through the box, stole second and rode home on Billy Powell's safe drive down the left field line. Powell stole second, got to third when White muffed Daniels' grounder and scored when Wyrick, backing White, threw wild.

A freak play enabled the Rookies to score again in the fifth inning. Powell walked and advanced to third on Daniels' hit to right. When Ferebee lost Blythe's throw in the sun, the ball rolled into left field enabling Powell to score.

The Regulars, hitless for five innings, fell on Merritt in the sixth, and when all was cleared, they had three runs. Potter led off with a tremendous wallop to center field for a homer. Horneday, batting for Shields, walked, went to second on Wyrick's single, advanced to third on an infield out and scored when Pattisall, Rookie catcher, threw wild past third base. Peacock's long single to left center scored Wyrick with the trying run.

Briefs.

Lefty Mass retired the Regulars by the strike-out route in the third inning, Potter, Paxton, and Shields fanning before his slants.

Clyde McKinney pulled a nice play in the second inning. With Blythe on base, Henry House lifted to McKinney in right center. "Mac" uncorked a beautiful throw to double Blythe off first.

This tie game is the closest that the Regulars have come toward a victory over the Rookies.

FACULTY GOLFERS TO MEET WAKE, DUKE, STATE

A team of twenty members to represent the University faculty in matches against faculty teams of Wake Forest, Duke, and State College is being chosen by officials of the Chapel Hill country club. Selection of the group will be determined on the basis of low cardings.

Two matches will be played with each of the teams, one on the home course and the other on the course of the opposing institution.

Second Sack Most Popular Infield Post For Yearlings

Small Army Reports for Initial Frosh Diamond Work; Magner And Sapp Fill Coaching; Cage and Grid Stars Among Promising Candidates.

With the law firm of Magner and Sapp at its head, an army of Freshman baseball enthusiasts gathered one hundred strong on the Freshman field Tuesday afternoon for the initial practice. When Coach Bob Cerney was excused for the rest of the year on account of bad health, Sapp and Magner were appointed to coach the Tar Babies.

After all the candidates had been enrolled there was a lengthy batting practice. Everybody got at least one lick and there were all kinds of blows, some good and some not so good. After the hitting Coach Sapp called for all aspirants for the respective positions and Coach Magner gave them infield practice, while Sapp sent balls to the outfield. Second base was the most popular spot in the infield, drawing more than any other two positions. The outfield was just one mass of "fly chasers."

With so many ball hawks on the list the coaches are going to have a hard time deciding who will get the equipment. None has been distributed as yet, but after a few more practices the coaches intend to give some out.

The first game comes early next week when the Wardlaw Preparatory School team will meet the Tar Babies in a two game series. These games will be played on Monday and Tuesday. With such a short time to get a team together, Coaches Sapp and Magner will have to pick their first nine at random and probably give all the men a try in these two games.

Among the mob there were several athletes that have already distinguished themselves in athletics this year. Watt Jones, scrappy quarterback on the Freshman eleven and promising varsity material was maneuvering around the keystone sack. Gus McIver, guard on the freshman eleven was chasing balls in the outfield. McDaniel Jones, stellar guard on the State Championship quintet, was stopping them at third along with Chuck Woollen, and Brandt, Frosh football stars. John Phipps, star halfback and Fanny Fisher, star forward, were on second and in the outfield respectievly. Among the other familar faces were Tatum football guard and Matheson another guard who were both out for the catching job, and Frankel, an end of the eleven, who pitches.

FROSH TRACKMEN MEET CHARLOTTE

Trials Scheduled For Saturday At Same Time As Varsity Event.

The Carolina freshman track squad will meet the strong Charlotte High School team in the preliminary of a double header that will see the varsity pitted against Presbyterian College, S. I. A. A. champions. Both meets will be run off simultaneously, beginning at half past two.

The Tar Babies have been hard at work during the past week and are expected to present a formidable array of cinder talent. Judging by their work in the Southern Indoor meet, the freshmen have some promising men at work, but they will meet stiff opposition in Charlotte's speedsters. Charlotte won the State high school meet at Davidson last Saturday.

The freshmen will have great strength in the 100, 220, and 440, with Higby, Nicholson, Prochazka, Ashkenas, Tobin, Weisker, McGlinn and McBrair to choose from. The distance runners will be chosen from Mead, Vitz, Kimrey, Groover, Farr, Entwistle, Sullivan, and McRae, several of whom were on the cross country team last fall.

In the high jump the Carolina jumpers will be selected from Dockery, Bullock, Pool, Griffin, Reid, Dunn, and Sykes. Nicholson, McBrair, Higby, and Weisker will compete in the broad jump with Bob Gold Blount, and Sykes in the pole vault.

In the weight events the Carolina coaches will be able to make their selections from Mullis, Horney, Crane, McBrair, Brandt and LeGore. LeGore may be unable to compete in this meet, having been kept out of practice for the past few days with a slight attack of measles.

In winning the State high school meet at Davidson, Coach Galen Elliott's Charlotte high runners and weight heavers put up a brilliant exhibition in the final events to come from behind and take the meet by a large margin. Charlotte had little success in the running events, but with the Sutton brothers, Howard and Harold, Soule, and Hasty turning in brilliant performances, took five first places to leave all opposition far behind.

Allison won Charlotte's only first place in the running events, leading the field in the low hurdle event.

FENCING TOURNEY SET FOR FRIDAY

Phi Gam's To Meet Winner of Beta-Aycock Match for Campus Title.

Phi Gamma Delta fraternity will meet the winner of the Beta-Aycock Friday afternoon in the Tin Can for the campus fencing championship. Aycock was the only team to go through the past season undefeated while the Beta's and the Phi Gam's each dropped one match. The Phi Gam's drew a bye in the drawing and automatically went into the finals.

Fencing received its start as an intramural sport for the first time last year through the efforts of Mr. J. B. Linker, of the French department and J. M. Lynch, a University student. Beta Theta Pi fraternity won the intramural championship last year and will make a strong bid to retain their title, although Aycock is expected to give them a hard fight in the semi-final play-offs.

Each team is composed of three men and the matches consist of fifteen bouts, each man participating in five. The lineups for the three participating teams are: Phi Gam's, Crueser, Hubbard, and Pitken; Beta's, Waugh, Brown, and Fenker; Aycock, Urband, Hereman, and Watson.

OLD TIME TRACK STARS WILL DON TOGS SATURDAY

Elliott and Henderson To Give Exhibition as Tar Heels Meet Presbyterian College.

Two of Carolina's old time track stars will be back in togs here next Saturday, March 28, when Carolina meets Presbyterian College in a dual track meet. They are Galen Elliott, All-American miler, and Johnny Henderson, holder of the Southern Conference two-mile record, who will give an exhibition performance as a part of the program.

Both men have played an important part in Carolina's past track record. Elliott, it will be remembered, won the Southern Conference one-mile run for three consecutive years, 1926, 1927, and 1928. He also won the Conference record for this event in 1926 with a time of 4:21.2. Along with his other achievements, he was captain of the cross country team in 1927, and was a member of Carolina's national championship relay team which copped top honors at the Penn Relays in 1928. In his workouts in preparation for the exhibition he does 1 1-2 miles, or six laps, in 7 minutes, 16 seconds.

Henderson also has a notable record for his performances here. He set the University and Southern Conference record for the two-mile run in 1928 at the Duke-Carolina dual meet with a time of 9:38.2. He succeeded Elliott as captain of the cross country team in 1928, and in 1929 he was chosen to captain the track team. And with all this string of honors he wasn't satisfied—he had to make Phi Beta Kappa.

He is now traning with the Carolina distance men and does the two-mile well under 10 seconds, with every indication that he will better his old record. He has a slight edge over Elliott for 1 1-2 miles, making the six laps in 7 minutes, 13 seconds.

MEETS TO DRAW MANY SCHOOLS

Interscholastic Tennis Tourney and Track Event Carded Here for April 16 and 17.

High schools of the state are showing a great deal of interest in the interscholastic tennis tournament and track meet which will take place in Chapel Hill April 16 and 17. Coach Kenfield will have charge of the tennis tournament, while the track meet will be in the hands of Coaches Fetzer and Ransom.

Charlotte has won the track meet every year since 1922, except for the year 1928, when Greensboro took the championship. Raleigh won the singles title in last year's tennis tournament, Winston-Salem copping the doubles title for the second straight time.

In track Charlotte has seven record-holders, while Wilmington is next with four. The other records are held by Greensboro, High Point, Oxford, Winston-Salem, and Asheville. Seven new records were set last year.

SPURTS IN SPORTS

Jack Bessen

Last year the boxing team rightly enjoyed unprecedented popularity; more spectators saw the bouts than ever before. But the man that really started boxing at the University has gone unrewarded for his two years of work as manager, coach, and financier. That person is Bill Cox, now sports editor of the Greensboro Daily News. It was Cox who arranged meets with Fort Bragg in 1924 and 1925 and it was Cox who took charge of the ticket selling and managerial duties. And yet Cox left school without any reward.

The writer believes that the Athletic Association would certainly not make a mistake, if after a seven year interval, they should award a manager's letter to Bill Cox.

Several college baseball teams have been hard hit by the disease known as "scoutitis." Carolina, State, Wake Forest, and Duke are afflicted Big Five schools.

Now that the major leagues are turning more and more toward the colleges than to the sandlots with the result that scouts have been turning college campi inside out in an effort to supply the demand for college ball players. Wake Forest has lost Ralph Gillespie, a sweet catcher, and Duke lost Archie Cochrane, also a receiver by the same route.

Since this practice is increasing annually, it is evident that something should be done about it and done right away. There are two good solutions to this problem. Perhaps the one used by the Professional Football League is the better. A college player that hasn't received his degree is ineligible to participate in the games. Or organized baseball can adopt a resolution whereby a contract signed by a collegian still in college is null

FIVE DIXIE FOIL TEAMS TO FIGHT FOR TITLE HERE

South Carolina, V. M. I., College of Charleston, and Georgia Tech To Meet Here Friday.

Devotees of the foil from five southern institutions will gather at the University Friday and Saturday for the first southern fencing tournament. South Carolina, Georgia Tech, Virginia Military Institute, College of Charleston, and North Carolina will be represented.

By virtue of a win over Georgia Tech last year and South Carolina the previous season, the Carolina fencers will be the defenders of the title. In the only meet staged this year against the five, the Blue and White foilmen defeated V. M. I. five to four in a close match, and the Keydets are thus conceded as the foremost contender for the 1931 Dixie title.

H. Hendlin, F. Wardlaw, and D. Wardlaw will represent the Tar Heels with Allen, Moody, and Burgod composing the V. M. I. invaders. J. F. Reynolds is Charleston's outstanding contender and A. B. Hall of Georgia Tech is one of the foremost men from the Atlanta institution.

Team tourney preliminaries will get underway in the Tin Can Friday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock with the team semi-finals and individual preliminaries at 7 o'clock Friday night. Individual semi-finals will be run off Saturday afternoon and team and individual finals at 7:00 o'clock.

Capt. Rosov of V. M. I. will officiate.

University Registration

There are 2333 students, excluding the law school, registered in the University this quarter. This is a reduction from the number in school the past two quarters, but compares favorably with the spring quarter, 1930.

STATE DRAMATIC TOURNAMENT IS TO BEGIN TODAY

tumes, stage models, posters, and other materials will be placed in the Playmakers scene shop in Person hall. Delegates are invited to visit the exhibit between sessions of the festival.

The Carolina Dramatic Association was formed in 1924, "to promote and encourage dramatic art in the schools and communities of North Carolina, to meet the need for a genuinely constructive recreation, to cooperate in the production of plays, pageants, and festivals of real worth, and to stimulate interest in the writing of the native drama." Membership in the association is open to any dramatic group or individual interested in drama.

Contests in play production, in playwriting, and in other dramatic arts are conducted each year in connection with the annual festival. Groups entering the contest are classified into four sections: city high schools, county high schools, senior colleges and little theatres, and junior colleges and community clubs. Special contests in costume design, make-up, posters, programs, and stage models are also conducted. The club winning the state championship in its classification will be awarded a plaque bearing the signet of the Carolina Dramatic Association. The winners of the special contests will be awarded complete sets of the Carolina Folk-Plays.

Johnson Discusses Control of Malaria

H. A. Johnson, sanitary engineer of the United States Public Health Service, gave a lecture last Tuesday to the seniors in the school of civil engineering. In his lecture the speaker described the extensive malaria control methods used by the public health service and emphasized the large engineering aspects of the subject.

Throughout his address, Johnson used moving picture films to show the methods of malaria control, in which airplanes were shown dusting with paris green to control mosquito breeding in large swampy areas.

Saville Attends Meeting In N. Y.

Professor Thorndike Saville of the engineering school spent two days during the spring recess attending meetings of the United States Beach Erosion Board of which he is a member.

Inspection was made of the shore and inlet protective projects under construction in New Jersey. At a meeting in New York the Board adopted two projects for study in North Carolina, one near Nags Head and another at Fort Fisher. At both points beach erosion has recently become a serious problem.

Variety Of Editorial Praise Is Accorded New Book By S. H. Hobbs

Not only from the newspapers at home but from editors of far away states and from foreign countries there are coming in almost daily bouquets of editorial praise for Dr. S. H. Hobbs' North Carolina: Economic and Social, a volume released recently by the University of North Carolina Press.

The Boston Globe calls the book "an encylopedia of useful information about the Tar Heel state," and the London Times describes it as a model of social diagnosis, candid and thorough."

Says a review in the New York Times, in part: "Professor Hobbs' book stands out among books dealing with localities because of its author's frankness, his desire to set forth the exact truth, and his determination not to admit into his text rhetorical patches of patriotic outbursts."

The New York Herald says the book "contains an amazing amount of information upon all possible phases of North Carolina."

H. L. Mencken in the American Mercury says: "Dr. Hobbs does not hesitate to write plainly about what he discovers, no matter how unpalatable it may be to idealists. Nor is he shy about offering remedies, some of them of a very drastic nature. The point is that North Carolina is ready and willing to listen to such candor—more, to pay for it. That is probably the main reason why the state is going ahead.

"This volume," says the Boston Transcript, "was written especially for those who make North Carolina their home, yet it is also sure of a country-wide welcome by telling the economic and social story of this famous State with a completeness which has not hitherto been even attempted. Arraying his wealth of facts against a background of information regarding physical resources, Professor Hobbs describes practically every feature of human living and working, from race characteristics to education, from agriculture to industry, and from transportation and communication to government."

Getting nearer home one finds the Gastonia Gazette saying, "Every North Carolinian who is interested in his home State should by all means read Mr. Hobbs' book, and, if possible, keep it for reference from time to time. Its value from this standpoint alone more than matches the price of the book."

"We are agreed," says the Charlotte Observer, "that this book should find its way into public libraries, school libraries, into the hands of teachers, newspaper editors, and all those interested in knowing the facts about this State."

That "the book deserves a place on the shelves of every citizen interested in the State," is the opinion of The Charlotte News. The Raleigh News and Observer declares: "It is a remarkable book, the value of which can hardly be overestimated."

Phi Hears Haywood's Inaugural Address

A large part of the first meeting of the quarter of the Phi Assembly was given over to Speaker Bert Haywood's inaugural address. Speaker Haywood outlined possible means of making the organization more active and alive. He considered emphasis on county consciousness of very great importance. The speaker pointed out the fact that the Assembly, modeled after the state house should carry its likeness to the point of making the county the unit in the body. He intends to appoint county chairmen to promote the interests of the units.

Representative Uzzell introduced a motion to favor the passage of a luxury tax for the benefit of higher education. The bill was passed almost unanimously.

The bill, resolved that a more adequate infirmary should be provided at the University was passed when Speaker Haywood cast the deciding vote in favor of the measure. At the last meeting of the Phi, after the assembly discussed the bill, a tie prevented either passage or rejection when Speaker Haywood withheld his vote until Tuesday night's session.

Supper To Be Given By Sigma Xi Society

The local chapter of the Sigma Xi, national scientific society, will meet for the first time of the spring quarter next Tuesday night, March 31, for a supper at six-thirty o'clock in the Carolina Inn.

The program for this meeting is to be handled by the zoology department, and consists of a report of the department's research for the past several months.

During the business part of the meeting new members of the society will be initiated and next year's officers elected.

Reservations for the supper should be made to Dr. H. D. Crockford, assistant professor of chemistry.

Ramsay Takes Over Chair of Di Senate

The Di Senate held its first meeting of the spring quarter on Tuesday night in its hall in Old West building. The new president, K. C. Ramsay, called the first meeting to order after which he delivered his inaugural address.

President Ramsay, in his speech, favored a program of livelier bills on the calendar for the coming quarter. He asked that the younger senators take a more active part in the discussion of bills at the sessions of the senate. He pointed out that this was the only way that they could derive any benefit from society participation.

President Ramsay appointed Senators Billy McKee and Ed French to serve with McBride Fleming-Jones on the ways and means committee.

ELEVEN HIGH SCHOOLS ENTER SPANISH TRIALS

Eleven schools have entered a total of 203 contestants in the high school Spanish contest, which will be conducted Friday, March 27 by the University extension division. Schools entering contestants are Albemarle, Raleigh, Charlotte, Fayetteville, Gastonia, Hertford, Leaksville, Rocky Mount, Statesville, Wilkesboro, and Winston-Salem. Wilkesboro heads the list with thirty-five entrants, followed by Raleigh and Rocky Mount who have twenty-five each.

world, rising 927 feet above the street level. In order to hasten completion the foundation was first made to support a twenty story structure, and while the steel work was under way on this portion, the foundation was enlarged to size necessary for the completed building. There was so much steel required that the contracting company built a special factory for the job.

The films used to illustrate Hayes' lectures were entitled "An Epic in Steel," and were actual views of the building in question.

Students Suspended On Cheating Charges

The executive committee of the University faculty on Tuesday, March 4, 1931, deprived a freshman of all credits earned during the winter quarter for a confessed violation of the honor system in connection with one of his final examinations last quarter. It deprived a sophomore of all credits earned during the winter quarter and suspended him for the spring quarter for a confessed violation of the honor system in one of his final examinations for the last quarter. And it suspended another freshman for the spring quarter for a conviction of a similar offense over his denial.

Big Three Schools Taking Up Rugby

Rugby football will be included in the sports schedule of Yale, Princeton, and Harvard this spring. This trio together with the U. S. Marines of Philadelphia, and the New York Rugby football club, have formed a quintet of playing teams.

Last spring this group, with the exception of Princeton, played nine games, the U. S. Marines and Yale netting the most victories. In addition, Yale played the powerful Montreal club, twice champions of Quebec, to a tie. Princeton decided to take up the sport this year.

Followers of Rugby point out that each one of the fifteen players to a side has a chance to carry the ball, run with it, pass, kick, or tackle. It calls for all-round team play rather than the work of individual stars. It bears very little resemblance to soccer, or the standard American type of football.

Senate Approves Measure To Combine Three State Schools

BILL NOW GOES BACK TO HOUSE

Opportunity for Saving Is Principal Point in Favor of Bill's Passage.

SCORE BROOKINGS REPORT

The administration bill to consolidate State College and the woman's college at Greensboro with the University was passed Wednesday by the State Senate, after several amendments had been made. Before a final record vote is taken on it, the measure must go back to the lower house for ratification of these amendments. One suggested change in the bill, a proposal to postpone the consolidation until 1933 was defeated by the Senate.

In the eyes of some of the senators, the fact that the consolidation would save the state a considerable amount of expenses in the operation of all three schools seems to be the principal point in its favor.

As the measure now stands, there will be a commission of twelve experts, six to be named by the governor and two each by each of the presidents of the institutions, who are to study the problem of consolidation and report their findings to the board of trustees to be appointed by the 1931 assembly.

The Brookings Institute at Washington has made a report recommending several changes that might be made in the bill. A good many of the senators object to the fact that an institute in Washington should know anything about conditions in North Carolina and therefore is incapable of making any suggestions or criticism.

Senator Baggett, of Harnett, said that he believed that it would be better to preserve the individuality of the schools; to quote him: "I have a number of married children, and it might be more economical to keep them all in one house with me as head, but it would never work."

Summed up the measure provides for a consolidated board of trustees of a hundred members, a commission of twelve to consider the merger plans, and the immediate going into effect of the bill as soon as the House concurs to the several amendments which the Senate has added.

Bradshaw To Speak At Dean's Convention

One of the principal speakers at the convention of the National Association of Deans and Advisers of Men, to be at Gatlinburg, Tennessee, April 16, 17, and 18, will be Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students at the University, who will deliver an address on "The Preparation a Dean of Men Must Have for His Work."

Phi Kappa Sig Dance

The local chapter of Phi Kappa Sigma, national social fraternity, has plans under way for a formal dance to be given Friday, May 15. Jelly Leftwich and his University Club Orchestra of Durham will furnish music for the occasion.

Jack Dungan Is Nominee of Staff

The members of the Daily Tar Heel staff, meeting yesterday afternoon in the office of the publication, unanimously nominated Jack Dungan, present managing-editor, for the position of editor in the coming election on Tuesday, March 31.

Since entering the University Dungan has held the positions of star reporter, assistant-editor, city-editor, and is at present the managing-editor of the Daily Tar Heel. He has served on that publication longer than any person The bill under discussion was in his class now enrolled in the University, and is the only man to serve two consecutive years as the editor of the Carolina Handbook. Other positions on the campus which Dungan has held include secretary of the Publications Union Board, and president of the Sophomore Y '29-30. He is entirely self-supporting.

Since 1926 the official nominees of the staff who have become editor have been: J. K. Madry, 1926; Jud Ashby, 1927; Walter Spearman, 1928; Glenn Holder, 1929; and Will Yarborough, 1930.

LABOR INJUNCTION IS DISCUSSED BY LEGAL SEMINAR

Experts and Students Present Papers at Meeting Which Is Well Attended.

More than an hundred students, teachers and townspeople attended the law school seminar on administration of justice yesterday morning, at which speakers discussed the desirability and effects upon existing law of proposed legislation recently pending in Congress restricting labor injunctions and contracts by employees not to join a union.

The outside speakers included Professor Duane McCracken, of Guilford College, who, upon the basis of a personal investigation of recent strikes in North Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee, has written a book on "The Strike Injunction in the New South"; Professor H. D. Wolf, of the University department of economics, who has made an extensive study, soon to be printed, of the so-called "Yellow-Dog Contract;" Professor Richard J. Hobbs, of the school of commerce; and Mr. George W. Marshall, of Charlotte, an official of the American Federation of Labor. Attempts to have judge N. A. Townsend, who acted for the Governor during the recent troubles at Gastonia and Marion, present his attitudes, failed because of his engagements with the legislature. Law students who, under the supervision of Professor M. T. Van Hecke, presented papers dealing with different aspects of the matter, included W. W. Johnson, L. J. Giles, R. M. Gray,

DRAMA FESTIVAL CONTINUES TODAY

Koch to Discuss "Our Local Theatres" at Ten O'clock This Morning.

Yesterday, at three o'clock, the eighth annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association was opened with the preliminary contest of the community clubs and junior colleges. Mars Hill College presented the play, entitled The Accomplice, by Abigail Marshall. Following this, the Reid Players, from Reidsville presented Behold the Man, written by Brandon Tyman.

At four-thirty the delegates were registered at The Playmakers Theatre. Registration completed the program for the afternoon.

In the evening, beginning at seven-thirty the contest in original plays of the community clubs and junior colleges was held. The Woman's Club, of Seaboard, offered The Evidence, a play written by Lelia Taylor Edwards and Bernice Harris of Seaboard. Frances Barnes' play, His Heritage, was next presented by Mars Hill college. The final contest in play production of the community clubs and junior colleges began at nine o'clock. The Rocky Mount Little Theatre Guild offered as its contribution to the evening's program, The Drums of Oude, by Austin Strong.

The program for this morning opens at ten o'clock with an address by Professor Frederick H. Koch, director of The Carolina Playmakers. His topic will be, "Our Local Theatres." Following this will come conferences of directors and students at ten-fifteen. "County Dramatics" will be discussed by Mrs. T. R. Everett, of Seaboard, and Mrs. Herbert Bluethenthal, from Wilmington, will speak on the subject of "Community and the Theatre." W. K. Morgan, of Asheville, will talk on "The Amateur and the Professional Stage." and delegates from Charlotte, Garner, Fayetteville, and Morganton will discuss "Dramatics from the high school Student's Viewpoint." Following, at eleven-fifteen the director of the Town Theatre in

UNIVERSITY STUDENT IN CHARGE OF STUDY TOUR

Wallace Kuralt, University student, is in charge of local registration for a recreational and educational tour which will start from Chapel Hill June 10 for visits to California, Great Lakes, the Canadian Rockies and intermediate points, returning here about August 8. This tour, which is being conducted by the Atlantic and Pacific Tours, is particularly attractive to Virginia teachers, since they will be given certificate credit for making the trans-continental trip.

Recommending it for University students, a faculty member here says: "My experience as instructor on a study tour has proved to me that for those with eager minds, transcontinental travel, under such trained guidance as this trip promises, is of great value, undoubtedly of far greater value than the usual summer school experience."

DEBATERS MEET EMORY TONIGHT

C. D. Wardlaw and J. A. Wilkinson to Represent Carolina on Free Trade Question.

The debating teams of Carolina and Emory University, Georgia, will meet tonight at eight-thirty o'clock to debate the proposition, Resolved: That the United States adopt the policy of free trade. The debate will take place in Gerrard hall, and Carolina will defend the negative side of the question.

The men representing Carolina are C. D. Wardlaw and J. A. Wilkinson. Due to illness Hamilton Hobgood, who intended to debate, will not participate.

The query used for the debate has been the popular proposition this year and has been debated frequently, since the intercollegiate debating tournament this spring has selected it. Carolina does not enter the tournament, but has argued the question with several colleges which wished to practice for the coming tournament.

For the past eight years Carolina has engaged the debating team of Emeory with the exception of 1929 when the proposition, Resolved: That the United States should enter the world court without restriction, was cancelled. Last year the question was Resolved: That modern science tends to destroy theistic faith, and Carolina took the affirmative.

STUDENT SOCIAL CONFERENCE WILL CONVENE APRIL 6

Five Men to Represent the University at Goldsboro Meeting.

Five men will represent the University at the annual meeting in Goldsboro of the North Carolina Social Service Conference. The student division of the conference is scheduled to meet April 6, 7, 8.

Last year the conference was held in Charlotte with a large number in attendance. Governor O. Max Gardner was the principal speaker of the occasion.

The fundamental purpose of the conference is to help the students of North Carolina colleges to understand the social conditions in their own state and to have them lend their support to the conference in its program of ameliorating these conditions.

In the past this conference has lived up to these ideals by doing such things as influencing the passage of laws such as the workmen's compensation act and other acts regulating women workers. Various progressive prison reform bills were materially furthered by this organization, also.

The present officers of the student division are: Eloise Baning, president; Beverly Moore, of the University, vice-president; Christine Rosebro, secretary; and H. F. Comer of the campus Y. M. C. A., advisor.

The leaders of the conference as a whole are all North Carolina men and women. Mr. Hugh McRae of Wilmington is the

ELECTION DAY IS SET FOR TUESDAY

Y.M.C.A. and Publication Staffs Make Official Nominations For Offices.

With the nomination of the candidates for the several campus offices this morning in Gerrard hall at chapel period, the political situation will begin to assume a position of first importance. Candidates for the several class offices were nominated last night for the rising sophomore, junior, and senior classes.

The nominees for the office of president of the student body are scheduled to speak before the students in Memorial Hall Monday morning during chapel period. In their speeches the men will probably state their platform and explain their plans in case of election.

At a meeting of the Daily Tar Heel staff held yesterday afternoon in the office of the publication in the basement of the Alumni building, Jack Dungan, present managing-editor of the paper, was unanimously nominated by the staff for the editorship.

The nominee for the editorship of the Yackety-Yack which was made by the staff of that publication is Holmes "Chink" Davis.

Those candidates who have been nominated by the Y. M. C. A. cabinets for the four campus Y offices for 1931-32 are as follows: For President, F. M. James, and Harry Finch; for vice-president, Lee Greer, Ed French, and Haywood Weeks; for secretary, John Manning, Bob Barnett, Jimmy Kurfees, and Billy McKee; and for treasurer, Frank Hawley, Bim Ferguson, Jim Kenan, Charles Rose, and Jim Steere.

At the meeting in Gerrard hall this morning at chapel period men will be nominated for the following offices; president of the student body, president of the Y, editor of the Daily Tar Heel, editor of the Yackety Yack, editor of the Buccaneer, editor of the Carolina Magazine, vice-president of the Y, secretary of the Y, treasurer of the Y, president and vice-president

Up To Old Tricks Again

For the past three years we have viewed with interest the political manipulations of the Democratic and Republican parties. And until two years ago when the Democrats finally decided that publicity was useful and opened a publicity bureau the Republicans had the better of the arguments.

The Republican procedure consisted of selecting the leading Democratic candidates and destroying public faith in them long before the national convention. Preceding the 1928 convention and campaign the Republican party aided and abetted by various organizations, pure in voice and sinister in method, had succeeded in instilling in the minds of many of our citizens a fear of Mr. Smith that not even facts could eradicate.

And now we are watching again the same procedure. Governor Franklin Roosevelt, thought by many to be the logical candidate for the Democratic nomination, has become the target of Republican propagandists. They are attempting to align him with Tammany Hall, a well known semi-political organization of New York City. Tammany just now doesn't stand in the high favor of all. Some of its members are facing charges of misconduct in office. Governor Roosevelt has revealed a disinclination to proceed headlong on information furnished by political fanatics. And so he is shielding Tammany, we are told.

Unfortunately for the Republican publicity agents the Democrats have a publicity department just about as good as they go. And with the charges against Governor Roosevelt the Democrats merely point to conditions which exist in Republican controlled cities and ask if Mr. Hoover is to be blamed.

All of which indicates another publicity campaign similar to that before the 1928 conventions. But this time Republican charges will not go unchallenged.

Seven Until Seven

Not so long ago a grocery clerk slipped back to the meat department to bet a dollar on the results of a Carolina game. The procedure was pathetic, yes, but it was hopeless, too. The chain store clerk, working from seven until seven, couldn't play in the game himself. He coldn't see the game. He couldn't take time off to hear the game over the radio.. All the poor little devil could do was bet on the game, and bet a dollar he couldn't afford to lose.

He had heart enough to stand the grind of athletics. He would have to have, to work in his chain store from seven until seven. And he had the love, for nothing else could have prompted his wistfulness as he bet the dollar he couldn't afford to lose. Somebody or something, fate will do as a name, had given him just so much and no more. He had the backbone, and he had the love. But he hadn't the breaks.

He was built for sprinting, but working from seven until seven, he would never have a chance at even the preliminaries.—V. A. D.

A Tennis Treat

A few of the students realize what a treat is in store for them during the coming tennis season, but the vast majority of the students on the Hill do not realize what tennis talent we will have this Spring to exhibit. Unless something very drastic and unforeseen happens, the University will have unquestionably the best collegiate tennis team in the Nation. Those men who will probably be ranked the first four of the six-man team have really accomplished things in the tennis world. They include the National Clay Courts champion, the National Junior champion, and two state title holders. To those men who are not devotees of the game, a rare chance is to be had in watching men of this calibre in daily workouts; those who follow the game at all here on the campus will of course be out on the courts watching.

Carolina is able to boast of a team being recognized as the Nation's best largely through the influence Coach Kenfield has had in attracting to the University men of such talent. To him should go a great deal of the credit for bringing here a collection of the "Nation's best." A new feather should be added to Carolina's athletic cap by these men in giving us a National Championship. Galen Elliott and a collection of track stars gave us a National Championship in another field a short time ago. National Championships are coming more often—let's see them come every year!—O.W.D.

A Correction

To the Editor:

The last issue of the Spokesman stated that I was a candidate for Treasurer of the rising sophomore class on the Non-Fraternity Party ticket. I wish to publicly state that I have no connection with that organization whatsoever.

CHIPS OFF THE OLD BLOCK

MOORE BRYSON

Back in the old days we used to return from the Easter holidays and find that the campus had put on a new coat of green and was all diked out for spring. However, since the faculty has deemed it advisable to change the holidays in order that they come between quarters, we return to the same drab Hill but with the pleasure of seeing the change actually take place.

After the above aesthetic reflection, I shall proceed into the serious business of writing a column. It is going to be rather difficult because I was unfortunate enough to lose my notes during the process of moving. There are some who should breathe a sigh of relief for I did have some wonderful scandal written on that sheet of yellow paper.

Probably the best story since the last appearance of Chips has to do with a little affair at the K. A. house a few nights before the holidays began. The boys, feeling in a rather playful mood, borrowed a certain young girl's clothing for the night (I, of course, mean her extra dress, etc.) and dressed Billy Lindsay up as a passionate flapper. The first venture was only reasonably successful for the onlookers were unable to control their mirth and the cat was out of the bag. Next they called Pete-e Gilchrist, but he knew too much about women and caught on immediately. The venture was tottering on the verge of failure when Frank Plummer happened (and I mean Happened) in. They told Frank that there was a girl in the next room who was unable to navigate very well, and wouldn't he please see what he could do for her. The story goes that Frank was completely sucked in and was just about to convince the young lady that she should come and take a ride in his car when the lights flashed up, Billy jerked off his hat, and Frank made his departure in haste. That's the story as I heard it.

The recent play, Playthings, has been an inspiration for numerous letters, petitions, comments, etc., on the campus. It has even inspired a certain poet to compose a few lines which are given below. The author is anonymous and will remain so.

FOURTH DEMENTIA

There was a young man named Buttitta
Who said, "I'm the greatest world's beatta,
So I'll write me a play
And get Paul Green to say,
'No one ever wrote anything sweetta.'

It is reported that Co-Ed, Tweet-Tweet Curlee has not been able to control himself so well in a certain down town drug store.

Which reminds me that Pritchard-Lloyd's has the cleverest cover on their paper matches I have seen. They are the kind your girl will want to take back to school with her.

* * *

Well, the campus will be flooded with Ethel Barrymores, George Arlisses, Greta Garbos, etc. etc. etc. for the next few days. Well do I remember the days of my childhood when I wrote a fan letter to a little high school girl who was appearing in the Dramatic Tournament. From the looks of things this afternoon there will probably be a lot of stage door Jonnies this time.

With Contemporaries

Chicago Again

Among all the innovations in Chicago University's curriculum which President Hutchins described in yesterday's New York Times, one is outstanding for its radical implications concerning university and professional education. This is the "college," an entirely new educational unit, which prepares men in an unprescribed period for advanced university study or for a professional school.

Some plan generally similar to that of the Chicago "colleges" may prove the solution of two pressing problems: the presence of uninterested and unfit students in the advanced stages of university work, and the disproportionate length of time necessary for professional training. The "college" takes a step toward solving the first problem by providing a general education for the large group who neither wish nor deserve specialized instruction in the arts and sciences. It avoids the necessity of persevering through four years merely because "there is no curriculm leading to a dignified terminus at an earlier period."

The solution of the second problem will depend on whether or not the schools of law and medicine are willing to change their entrance requirements. The Chicago "college" will provide the general education which, in fairness to the man of limited means, ought to be the condition of admission into a professional school. Specialized academic work does not necessarily increase a man's qualifications for a professional training. Some satisfactory standard of achievement and ability other than the possession of a college degree could surely be found.

With many universities emphasizing, as Harvard is, higher learning in the liberal arts, there is a distinct need for good "colleges" of the Chicago type. Whether or not such "colleges" do develop the professional schools would make no mistake in studying some plan for the admission of specially able men who have a general education, even though they have no degree.—Harvard Crimson.

Athletic Policies Change—

Least mentioned in the press accounts of the University of Pennsylvania's widely heralded, new athletic program inaugurated to combat the "commercialization" of its athletic teams and to prevent the over-emphasis of intercollegiate competition, is its new policy of securing athletes for intercollegiate competition. According to Thomas S. Gates, president of the university, varsity football and basketball players are to be selected principally on the records made by the varsity candidates in intramural sports. The latter will be more highly organized than they have been under the former system, it was explained.

The decision to put an end to "scouting" for athletes comes as a natural result of the sweeping changes made at Pennsylvania. Other eliminations include the use of special dormitories for members of intercollegiate teams, the maintenance of the training table which segregated the athlete from the groups of representative students, the practice of making week-end jaunts to expensive resorts to afford the teams rest and recreation, and pre-season training. This policy cannot help but affect the character of future teams representing the institution.

The new athletic department has been established at the Eastern school with three subdivisions—student health, physical instruction and intercollegiate athletics. The members of the athletic department will have the same status as other professors in the university; salaries will be based on the same scale, and all decisions made by the faculty of the athletic department will be reviewed by a university faculty committee appointed by the president.

Eligibility of a student desiring to engage in intercollegiate competition will be determined by another faculty committee appointed by the president. Provisions for financial help for needy students who are participating in intercollegiate athletics are to be placed on the same basis as provisions for aid to all other needy students.

Indiana university has been operating for years under most of these regulations, and recent changes in the athletic policy of the university indicate the desire on the part of the Athletic committee to keep athletics on a parity with academic work. To stress intramural athletics, however, as part of the physical educational program of the university would be no infringement upon this policy, it is believed.

Many physically capable men students in the University take little or no part in intramural athletics. Thus far intramural

COACH JUGGLING BASEBALL SQUAD FOR SHORTSTOP

Nothing Settled as Opening Game With Cornell Draws Near.

With nothing settled except that everything is unsettled, Coach Jim Ashmore of the Carolina baseball team expects to try still further shifts and jugglings the last of this week in an effort to whip the Tar Heel infield into shape for Monday's opening game with Cornell.

The professional scouts with their pesky contracts and agreements came along and took away Burgess Whitehead, captain and star shortstop, and today it was learned that two of the best sophomore infield candidates were ineligible scholastically.

As a result Coach Ashmore has to build an entirely new infield, and, worse than that, he hasn't a multitude of prospects with which to do it. Several shifts are contemplated.

John Peacock, who did most of his freshman work as a catcher, is due to get a try at first, for Peacock is a better than average hitter, and the Tar Heels need hitters worse than anything.

That means Paul Dunlap, a reserve who seems to have real ability with the bat, and who has a strong arm, may get a shift to third, where the sophomore Powell is good enough as a fielder but weak with the bat.

Shortstop and second base are unsettled too. At the former Smoky Ferebee, small but clever and fast, and a good man to lead off and tease opposing pitchers, has a slight edge over Leonard, a reserve, whose hitting ability is questionable. At second Pete Wyrick, old to football but new to baseball, is leading the pack.

Blythe, a letterman, has been hitting hardest and leads the seasoned outfield candidates. Croom and Daniel, two speedy halfbacks, are dependable fielders and good prospects if their hitting improves. House, Davis, McKinney and Paxton are veteran contenders, yet to strike their hitting stride, however. It's all unsettled yet, it seems to Coach Ashmore.

RHODES SCHOLAR COMPETITION TO BEGIN OCTOBER

The competition for Rhodes Scholarships begins this year by October tenth, when the colleges select their candidates. Applications must be by October 17, and Rhodes scholars elected in December, 1931 will enter Oxford in October, 1932.

The scholars are elected in the following manner: the forty eight states are divided into eight districts of six states each. Each state committee selects two men from its state, making twelve men from a district, from which four men will be selected to represent these states at Oxford.

A Rhodes Scholarship is tenable at the University of Oxford and may be held for two years, but may be kept for a third year upon the presentation of a suitable plan of study to the college and the Rhodes Trustees. A Rhodes Scholar is allowed to postpone his third year and return to Oxford after a period of work in the United States, or spend the third year in post-graduate work in any other university in Great Britain or on the continent. The stipend of a scholar is four hundred pounds per year, the equivalent of two thousand dollars.

A candidate to be eligible must: (1) be a male citizen of the United States and unmarried, (2) be between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five, and (3) have completed his sophomore year in college. He may apply in the state in which he resides or in the one in which he has received at least two years of his college education. The qualities to be considered in making selections are: (1) literary and scholastic ability and attainments, (2) qualities of manhood, truth, devotion to duty, sympathy, unselfishness, courage, and fellowships, (3) exhibition of moral force of character and of instincts to lead and take an interest in his schoolmates, and (4) interest in outdoor sports and in other ways.

Further information and application blanks may be obtained from Dr. W. C. Davison, Duke University in Durham; or from President Frank Aydelotte, of Swarthmore College, American secretary to the Rhodes Trustees,, Swarthmore, Pennsylvania.

WARDLAW TO PLAY AT MYRTLE BEACH

Jack Wardlaw and His Carolina Tar Heels have been chosen from a number of orchestras all over the country to play at Myrtle Beach for the entire summer season. The committee from Myrtle Beach selected the "Tar Heels" after hearing them play at the Presbyterian College mid-winter dances at Clinton, S. C. The contract was signed a few days ago.

FENCING TEAM TO DEFEND ITS TITLE

Five Southern Colleges and Universities Will Be Represented Here Today.

Four Southern Conference teams and one non-Conference team will get into action Friday afternoon at three o'clock to decide the 1931 fencing championship of the South. Carolina is the present holder of the title and is favored to repeat, although stiff opposition is expected from Georgia Tech, V. M. I., Charleston College, and South Carolina, the other teams entered.

Carolina has been undefeated in five matches this season, having won over the V. M. I. Cadets in their only Conference meet of the season. During the Spring holidays the Tar Heels went on a northern trip and registered victories over Lehigh 7-2, Lafayette 6-3, Rutgers 6-3, and St. Johns of New York 5-4. Hinkey Hendlin turned in brilliant work in all of these meets winning fourteen matches and losing only one bout, that to Freese of St. Johns who went to the finals of the intercollegiate meet last year. The other Tar Heels to see action during the trip were Fred Wardlaw, who broke even in fourteen bouts, Digby Wardlaw, who won seven and lost six, and Lynch, who won one out of three bouts. Hendlin is a former holder of the Clemens medal.

Hendlin and the Wardlaw brothers will represent the Tar Heels in the Southern meet here while Allen, Moody, and Burgod will be entered by the V. M. I. Cadets. Two other outstanding performers who are expected to make strong bids for the individual championship are Reynolds of Charleston College, and Hall of Georgia Tech.

Preliminary matches for the team championship are scheduled to begin at three o'clock Friday afternoon, with the semi-finals at seven o'clock. The team championship finals will take place in the Tin Can at seven o'clock Saturday night. The preliminary bouts for the individual championship will be held Friday night, with the semi-finals Saturday afternoon and the finals Saturday night.

Intercollegiate Sports

At the request of athletic association officials, spectators at the Penn State-Army boxing meet at State College, Pa., recently came attired in formal dress "out of respect for the visiting cadets."

Nightsticks wielded by doughty denizens of the law was the only means of forcing demonstrative Northwestern University basketball fans to return to Tuesday classes after the Wildcat basketball team had annexed the Big Ten conference cage title. Following the victory, a rumor was circulated that Tuesday classes would be dismissed; the student body en masse paraded to the home of the president of the institution and lit a bon-fire on the lawn. Fighting his way through smoke and flame, President Walter Dill Scott endeavored to inform the mob that school would be run as usual. When Scott extemporaneous speech failed to make an impression on the group police were called.

The only flying dean of women in America is the distinction held by the dean of women at Franklin College. Pilot's license was obtained recently after the usual examination.

The University of North Carolina, leader in many fields of sportdom over the conference are now casting envious eyes on the tennis championship. They seem to be the logical contenders for the throne long occupied by Tulane. This year, however, the Tar Heels have two national champions within their stronghold: Wilmer Hines, a South Carolina "sandlapper," and Bryan Grant, a Georgia "cracker." Hines is also a member of the varsity basketball squad.

Paired together, these boys should not have any difficulty in capturing the championship which Clifford Sutter held so long for Tulane. Sutter is no longer in school. He is participating in a tournament in Hamilton, Bermuda, at the present time.—The Clemson Tiger.

In celebration of their victories over Clemson, students at the College of Charleston employ a bell which is clanged tauntingly. Last year in a riot the original bell was destroyed, but following the victory of the collegians over the cadet team this year for the championship of Charleston, a rumor was spread that a new bell would be rung. Another riot with the customary police intervention followed and a score of participants on both sides are nursing injuries in the city hospital.

president of the main body. Others serving with him are: E. McNeil Poteat of Raleigh, Dr. E. C. Branson, and Professor E. L. Kinson.

The representatives to the student union will be chosen on the basis that they will be socially-minded and active enough to introduce ideas and promote the conference work at large.

The main subject to be dealt with by both divisions of the conference will be "The Problem of Agriculture in North Carolina."

The University men who will attend the conference are Beverly Moore, Ed Hamer, Charles Rose, Billy McKee, and Bob Barnett.

REGULARS DEFEAT ROOKIES BY 7 - 1

Peacock and Blythe Hit Home Runs; Longest Pitches Well For Regulars.

The Regulars won their first game of the season yesterday afternoon swamping the Rookies 7-1 in an eight-inning practice tilt. The Rookies had previously won one game while tieing the other at three all.

Hinton started for the Regulars but pitched only fair ball and was removed in favor of Longest, who finished the game. Longest pitched the best ball of the afternoon holding the Rookies scoreless during his stay on the mound.

Scarboro and Edwards divided the pitching duties for the Rookies, both being hit freely.

The Rookies' only run came on a wild throw, Jimmy Moore, second sacker scoring on the misplay. Tom White, first baseman, and Billy Powell, third sacker, showed up best for the Rookies.

Peacock, third sacker, and Blythe, right fielder, hit homers for the Regulars. Longest and Dunlap hit long triples for the veterans. Dunlap has shown steady improvement since being shifted over to the first cushion and now looks like the best bet for that position when the season opens Monday against Cornell.

Coach Ashmore's biggest worries right now are at shortstop, made vacant by the ineligibility of Captain Burgess Whitehead, who was ruled ineligible by the Athletic Council earlier in the week. Ferebee, rookie second sacker, has been shifted over to short and has played creditable ball at the latter position.

The Regulars' lineup included Wyrick, second base; Ferebee, shortstop; Peacock, first base; House, left field; Daniels, center field; Potter, catcher; Hinton and Longest, pitchers.

of the Athletic Association, one representative on the P. U. Board from the rising senior class, one from the rising junior class, and one from the student body at large, and two representatives at large for the debate council.

The day of the election which was set by the student council at their last meeting is to be Tuesday, March 31. On that day the polls will open at nine o'clock in the morning and will remain open until five o'clock that afternoon. Ballot boxes will be placed in the lobby of the Y building and also in front of Gerrard hall. As has been done for the past several years the Australian ballot system is to be used in voting.

Physicians College Honors Dr. Manning

Nine North Carolinians were made fellows of the American Colleges of Physicians at a special convention ceremony in Baltimore Tuesday night. They were Harold Lindsay Amos, Durham; Samuel Moffett Bittinger, Sanatorium; Alva Brown Craddock, Asheville; Samuel Leslie Crow, Asheville; William Banks Dewar, Raleigh; Robert Lee Felts, Durham; Isaac Hall Manning, dean of the school of medicine of the University of North Carolina; Karl Schaffle, Asheville, and William Hopton Smith, Goldsboro.

Doctors Dewar and Smith, are both practicing physicians in their respective towns, and alumni of the University.

LABOR INJUNCTION IS DISCUSSED BY LEGAL SEMINAR

Allen Langston, and E. M. Perkins.

The legislation, known as the Senate Substitute for the Shipstead bill, would deprive courts of power to issue injunctions against a number of union activities heretofore enjoined by courts, but thought by labor leaders to be ligitimate union functions. It would deprive them of power to issue restraining orders and temporary injunctions, except in grave emergencies, without a hearing in open court, instead of on the basis of conflicting affidavits, as at present. It would speed up appellate review of labor injunction decrees and would require a jury trial in contempt proceedings for violations of injunctions. Finally, it would deprive the courts of power to entertain any injunction suit against the unionization of employees based upon any contract upon their part not to join a labor union.

The bill under discusion was not passed by Congress, nor is it pending now in the North Carolina legislature. Consideration of the bill was a device for studying and discussing, impartially, the modern legal, economic and social problems that are presented.

TWO CHAMPIONS TO COMPETE ON TRACK SATURDAY

Carolina, Southern Title Holders, and Presbyterian, S.I.A.A. Champions, To Clash.

When the Carolina Tar Heels, Southern Conference Indoor and Outdoor track champions, meet Presbyterian College here Saturday afternoon at 2:30, they will be facing some of the stiffest opposition in the South. Presbyterian College holds both the S. I. A. A. championship and the South Carolina state title, having won both by wide margins.

The Presbyterians will show their greatest strength in the 440 and the hurdles. Chapin, P. C. hurdler, took first place in the high hurdles and second in the low hurdles in last spring's S. I. A. A. meet and has been showing good form in training this season. In the 440 Presbyterian will have two exceptionally good men in Senter and Ketchum. Senter took fourth place in the Southern meet in the 440 and ran on the championship relay team, while Ketchum took third place in the 440 and first in the 880.

With Charley Farmer and Stafford on the injured list, Coach Bob Fetzer will be unable to muster full strength for the Presbyterians. Farmer, the South's leading sprinter, will be kept out of action with a leg injury sustained in the Southern Indoor meet, while Stafford, a sophomore, was victim of the same sort of injury in practice a few days ago. Stafford, entering the high jump in the Indoor meet, cleared the bar at five feet eight inches and stands out as one of Carolina's best prospects in this event.

Another high jumper, the veteran George Bagby, has been on the sick list for the past few days, but will probably enter the meet in spite of the fact that he will be far from the best of condition.

VALENTINE VISITS FOUR STATES ON RESEARCH WORK

Zoology Professor With J. S. Dendy Spends Spring Holidays Studying Beetles.

Dr. J. S. Valentine, of the department of zoology, assisted by J. S. Dandy, has just returned from a trip through the states of Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, and Alabama, engaged in research work dealing mainly with the study of the eyeless cave-beetles or pseudanopththalmids. The purpose of the expedition was to collect and classify the various specimens of animal life in the caves found in the above regions.

The party left Chapel Hill at the beginning of the spring holidays and returned Sunday, March 22. The results of the trip are reported to be most gratifying.

Many types of caves were visited, differing in formation and size as to the geological conditions of the particular locality. A great many of the caves had been commercialized and were equipped with gates and attendants. These, however, did not give as abundant a yield of animal specimens as the natural and hitherto undeveloped caves. In the latter many examples of the eyeless cave beetle were discovered among which were some entirely new and undescribed species.

As nearly all caves owe their existence to the working of erosion by subterrenean streams the members of the party found opportunity to explore the piscine life present there. Fish of two types were found: those covered with solid white scales and having no eyes and others with enormous projecting eyes.

Several unusual species of crayfish were also observed. These were similarly colorless and eyeless.

Among the caverns visited the most interesting was Shelter Cavern in northern Alabama which is reputed to be the largest unsupported roof in the world, covering from three and a half to four acres. Stalactite and stalagmite formations were found in profusion together with exquisite examples of lacework in stone. This cave boasted countless chambers and corridors from tiny cavities to rooms of great depth.

The party also visited a small cavern found in the heart of the city of Huntsville, Alabama. A spring pours daily 24,000,000 gallons of fresh water which serves as the city water supply.

sports have been sanctioned but not stressed. What better time could be found than now for inaugurating a program of intramural competition, whereby every able bodied male student would have a place in the sport he enjoys most? Coach E. C. Hayes is noted for his ability to take men with little or no training and develop from them super-athletes. Such a program not only would call forth many men to participate actively in intramural athletics, but would afford Coach Hayes an excellent opportunity to recruit likely candidates for Indiana's future varsity teams.—Indiana Daily Student.

Seriousness Needed

William Allen White, the famous editor of the Emporia (Kan.) Gazette, writing in the New York University Daily News takes up the cudgels which have been wielded with such force by Dr. Flexner et al. against the argument that college [illegible] because of the social veneer which it imparts to its students. He makes the old distinction between those who come to college to prepare for a happy life by learning the significance of things and those whose "aim is the principle to get on the climb to be somebody."

Mr. White has contributed little to the discussion which raged not only over Dr. Flexner's book which indicated the universities and the colleges as well as the prospective students and their parents but even more so concerning Dr. Robert Hutchins' drastic proposals for the remodeling of the entire academic organization of the university. He voices what is in general the popular opinion.

The call of Mr. White for more serious students is entirely useless in view of the fact that there are certain limitations placed upon a man's capacity for serious work by his intellect and intelligence. It is still true, if trite, that one cannot make a silk purse out of a sow's ear.

But there is something to be said for the others who do find in college a pleasant way to fit themselves for the outside world and to tide over the formative years while they are too immature to take care of themselves. Though there are many who maintain that one should marry and raise a family early in life, college is the easiest and by no means the worst place for those who are of the other school to spend their time in. The important point to be remembered is that, like the University of Chicago's plan, it must be openly recognized.

The two functions of the college are being carried on side by side and should be kept distinct in the minds of the critics who are continually commenting upon the university and its function. There is no one that will maintain that the sole purpose of a college is the imparting of higher learning and as long as students are aware of what their particular purpose in going to college is, they can seek after it in the most direct way and the university will have served its functions. That this is not now the case at the University can be maintained by no one who has taken the freshman composition course, English 1. —Pennslyvanian.

HIBBARD EDITOR OF VOLUME OF SOUTHERN TALES

Present Liberal Arts Dean of Northwestern Has Book Published by U.N.C. Press.

Addison Hibbard, dean of the college of liberal arts at the University of Northwestern who until this year filled the same position in this University has edited a book, Stories of the South which was released yesterday from the University of North Carolina Press.

A special introduction by the editor precedes the collection of stories in which Dean Hibbard explains the content and source of his work, laying special emphasis on the noted authors who have contributed. This list of twenty-seven includes such well-known persons as William Gilmore Simms, Thomas Nelson Page, Joel Chandler Harris, Irvin S. Cobb, Dubose Heyward, Elizabeth Madox Roberts, O. Henry, Wilbur Daniel Steele and Paul Green.

The twenty-seven tales are of plantation life and of the new negro; of the slowly changing hill-billy and the poor white of the lowlands; of traditional Charleston, colorful New Orleans, and progressive Birmingham. It is a picture of the south, past and present, portrayed by writers of short fiction.

"HIM WHO THINK OFTEN AT YOU"

The letter below, from "him who think often at you," a French boy, may console some of the freshman French students in the University, who will find that the French have as much difficulty in learning English as they have in mastering French. Moreover, certain lines in the letter seem to indicate that this youthful Frenchman already has acquired some of that understanding of women which his countrymen are known to possess. The letter was received by a girl in Miss Isabel Cooke's French class of Asheville Senior High School from a member of George Blackburn's English class at the Ecole Normale d'Institutions de Limoges, France:

"I expected your letter with impatience, also I tryed much pleasure is receive it. I thank you.

"I give the address of Miss Betty to Mister Colomb. He says at me I shuold write soon. You will can say this at she.

"Have you a fair sun Miss Sarah? At Limoges we have a very bad times. Lately it froze. The streets are very slippery. In going to my school I had slip and I fell. The posterior part of my body is go in contact with to sidewalk with brutality. I regret of do not know enough English for describe at you the majestic laying which I had at the instant.

"Do you know the French literature? I do not know well the English literature. I read however many books of Jack London. I read also a novel of Monk Saunders Whings in French Les Ailes. It is very interesting. I love much: Dickens, Peard, Williamson, Swift, and any another.

"Have you a brother or sisters, Sarah? Me I have not any. I am only. I have girl cousins but they live in other town which me and they stopped doing English.

"As for my friend, you are the only. . . .

"I send at you half-a-score of view of Limoges. This will be a remembrance of your French friend.

"I should pray you write at me as soon as you would can.

A correspondence between the classes of Miss Cooke and Mr. Blackburn has been carried on since last term, and the idea is thoroughly enjoyed by the Asheville students, according to Miss Cooke.

Columbia, S. C., Harry Davis will speak on "Town and Theatre." The make-up contest, at eleven-thirty, will be conducted by Samuel Selden, of the Carolina Playmakers. Lynn Riggs, Oklahoma playwright, will conclude the morning's program at noon with an address on his adventures in playwriting.

The afternoon program will be opened at two o'clock with the preliminary contest of the eastern city high schools. The Drums of Oude will once more be offered, this time by the Charles L. Coon high school of Wilson. Booth Tarkington's play, The Trysting Place, will be presented by the Lumberton high school. The presentation of an original play by a county high school will start at three-thirty with Ephriam's Light, by Helen Parker. This play will be presented by the Seaboard high school. At four o'clock the afternoon's program will be concluded with the final contest in play production of the county high schools. This contest will have two numbers On Vengeance Heights, by Allen Davis will be offered by the Paw Creek Dramatic Club, and Elizabeth McFadden's play, Why the Chimes Rang, which will be offered by the Hallsboro high school dramatic club.

The contest in original plays of the city high schools will begin at seven with the Asheville senior high school's presentation of We Still Have Memories by Mosella Burke. Following this, the R. J. Reynolds high school of Winston-Salem will present Isobel Hanson's, The East Wind's Spell. The program for the day will be brought to a close at nine o'clock with the final contest in play production of the city high schools. The High Heart, written by Adelaide Rowell, will be offered by the Asheville senior high school.

LAW ASSOCIATION TO PETITION FOR RENOVATED DORM

Lawyers Seek to Convert Carr Building Into Professional Club.

At a special meeting of the Law School Association yesterday during chapel period a petition was circulated which is to be presented to the President and the University administration requesting the setting aside of Carr building for the use and occupancy of the members of the Law School.

Extensive renovations begun on Carr March 15 will continue until about June 15 when the building will again be ready for occupants. The building is undergoing a complete overhauling both externally and internally. The outside of the building is being cleaned and loose bricks are being replaced.

The interior of the building will be changed so that there will be a few more rooms, thirty in all. The plumbing system of the dormitory is being repaired and in some places replaced. New windowpanes and new tiles on the roof are being installed.

It is the purpose of the Law school members to make a sort of club out of the building. J. A. Williams, after having seen the University authorities, passed around two papers. One was the petition asking the officials of the University for permission to use the building exclusively for the men in the Law school, and another paper which was a contract stating that the undersigned agreed to occupy rooms in Carr building if it were made the exclusive residence of the members of the

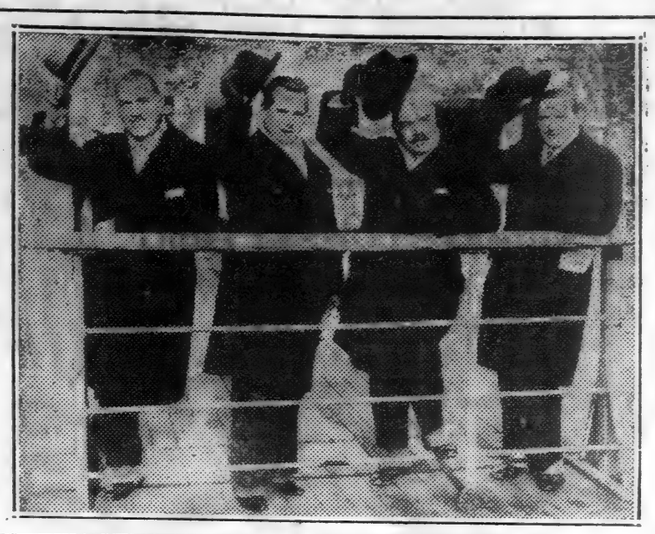
RUSSELL IS MADE FACULTY MEMBER

Prominent Author Joins English Department as Visiting Lecturer.



Phillips Russell has been made a member of the University faculty in the capacity of a visiting lecturer and teacher in the English department. He is not to carry on regular classes but his meetings will be made in the nature of informal conferences. Practice in composition will be included in his course.

His forbears for several generations have all been connected with this institution in the capacity of professors. Both his great grandfather, James Phillips, and his grandfather, Charles Phillips, were teachers here. He himself graduated from this University in 1904.

Following his graduation he entered the field of newspaper work for a while in Charlotte. He also served on several of the New York newspapers and later was a member of the staff of the London Express. Among his other accomplishments he numbers three biographies, several novels and numerous sketches.

It is hoped that those students who are interested in writing either professionally or merely for its own sake, will attend these conferences. Russell will be glad to encourage and stimulate all such students in their literary endeavors.

Kedroff Quartet

Kedroff Quartet To Be Fifth Of Entertainment Offerings

The Kedroff Quartet composed of the Kedroff Brothers N. N. and C. N., who sing baritone and basso respectively, I. K. Denisoff, first tenor, and T. F. Kasakoff, second tenor will be the performers on the fifth offering of the entertainment committee to be presented in Memorial hall Tuesday night at eight-thirty.

The program will be divided into three parts, the first part to be made up of the songs written by Russian composers. The second group will be composed of Russian folk songs, the third will be art songs, and the fourth and final part will be made up of songs by non-Russian composers.

Of great fame in their native country, having toured Europe many times prior to the World War, and with a brilliant record of a quarter of a century's work as the best exponent of Russian folk and church music, the Quartet left Russia in 1923. Since that time they have toured Germany, Holland, France, Belgium, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal, England, Ireland, and Scotland, and have sung in the presence of King George of England, the Queens of Spain and Belgium, and the President of France.

In May, 1927, in Paris, the Quartet celebrated its 30th anniversary. The decorations which the artists wear on the concert platform are those presented to them by the French government. On January 7, 1928, the Quartet made its American debut and on October 3, 1928, opened its second season appearing in Carnegie hall, New York. In three seasons before the American public, filling over 190 concert engagements, the Kedroff Quartet has won a triumph which rivals their conquest of the music world of Europe. Their fourth American season will extend from October 20, 1930, to March 25, 1931.

Few nations can claim such wealth and beauty in folk music as Russia, and it was the beauty of this music and the idea of assembling and popularizing these melodies that inspired the organization of the Kedroff Quartet. Professor N. N. Kedroff has spent years in research work and in collecting and harmonizing these treasures of the Slavic race, keeping intact their original style and spirit. The great majority of Russian songs in the extensive repertoire of the quartet are harmonized by this great musician and authority on Russian folk music.

Edward Moore, in reviewing their Chicago debut at Orchestra hall, wrote in The Chicago Tribune, "They call themselves the Kedroff Quartet—only that and nothing more—but they are the most extraordinary four men who ever blended voices in the direction of the audience." And Herman Devries, in The Chicago American, summarized his praise in the following terms: "These men are indescribable. Musicians of the first rank, tone artists, virtuoses of shading, masters of dynamics, creators of charm and atmosphere, simplicity, pathos, delicious humor, the latter aplenty, and always modest, delightfully informal and engaging."

Agitation Against Dorm Stores Dies

The commotion, started when a bill to abolish the dormitory stores, supported by the Chapel Hill merchants, Raleigh merchants, the North Carolina Merchants Association, and the Southern Retail Furniture Association, was presented to the state legislature, has become practically nil at the present.

The matter now rests in the hands of President-elect Frank P. Graham, who will consider and make a report on it. It has been agreed that this question be settled between the store managers and Chapel merchants, and not in the legislature. A recent statement said the feeling between merchants and store managers was friendly at present.

LEWIS AND WOLFE MEET ON VOYAGE

One of the literary minded alumni of the University, Thomas Wolfe, whose first novel, Look Homeward, Angel, achieved a great success, is now finishing his second book. The scene of this book, October Fair, is laid in North Carolina and is to be published by Scribner's, probably next fall.

The novelist had the good fortune to return from Europe on the same boat with Sinclair Lewis. Lewis invited Wolfe to have dinner with him and the two talked over many things, literary and otherwise.

Wolfe has decided to settle down now after bumming around the world for several years. He has hinted vaguely of coming back to this state to live.

VISITING DRAMA STUDENTS ENJOY VARIED PROGRAM

Activities of Second Day of Festival Open With Address by Professor Koch.

Professor Frederick H. Koch opened the morning program of the eighth annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association yesterday at ten o'clock with an address on the subject of "Our Local Theatres." Following Professor Koch's address, conferences of directors and students were held for an hour beginning at ten-fifteen. Mrs. T. R. Everett, of Seaboard, spoke on "County Dramatics," and Mrs. Herbert Bluethenthal, of Wilmington, discussed as her topic, "Community and the Theatre," "The Amateur and the Professional Stage," was the subject discussed by W. K. Morgan, of Asheville. "Dramatics from the High School Student's Viewpoint" was the subject upon which delegates from Charlotte, Garner, Fayetteville, and Morganton spoke.

At eleven-fifteen Harry Davis, director of The Town Theatre in Columbia, S. C., delivered an address on "Town and Theatre." The make-up contest was conducted by Samuel Selden at eleven-thirty, and Lynn Riggs, Oklahoma playwright, closed the morning's program with an address in which he spoke of his adventures in playwriting.

In the afternoon at two-thirty the preliminary contest of the eastern city high schools was held. The Drums of Oude, written by Austin Strong was presented by the Charles L. Coon high school, of Wilson, and Booth Tarkington's play, The

CAROLINA PRESS PLANS SIX BOOKS

Releases for Next Quarter Will Include Addison Hibbard's New Volume.

Six books are scheduled to be released from the University press this quarter, besides Addison Hibbard's Stories of the South, which came off Thursday, March 26.

The Family in the Present Social Order, by Ruth Lindquist, will be ready April 18. It is a study of the needs of American families and is written with the cooperation of the American Home Economics Association. On the same date will appear The Plight of Cigarette Tobacco, by T. J. Woofter, Jr., of the University sociology department, being an account of the economic condition of the tobacco farmers of the southeast, who produce tobacco mainly used in cigarettes.

H. R. Huse, of the foreign language department, has written a text supplement entitled The Psychology of Foreign Language Study which summarizes the present state of experimental knowledge, pedagogical doctrines, and aims and methods. It will be ready April 25.

A detailed account of the diplomatic relations with sufficient emphasis on commercial, naval, and military aspects to explain significant diplomatic phenomena will be included in Ray

ARCHIBALD HENDERSON SPEAKS AT COLUMBIA

Dr. Archibald Henderson, professor of mathematics, has just returned from a week's visit to New York, where he delivered a series of lectures.

Dr. Henderson spoke on the subject of "Art and Fame of O. Henry" before the Institute of Arts and Sciences at Columbia University Monday night, March 22. The following evening he lectured to the Town Hall club of New York City on "Einstein, Enigma of Genius."

GREAT INTEREST BEING SHOWN IN COMING DEBATES

Over Two Hundred High Schools Enrolled for Annual Triangular Contest.

Great interest is being shown by high schools scattered throughout all sections of the state in the forthcoming contest of the North Carolina High School Debating Union, it was stated today by Secretary E. R. Rankin.

Nine hundred and twelve high school debaters, representing 228 member schools of the High School Debating Union, located in 87 counties, are now making final preparations for the state-wide triangular debates, which will be held on April 3.

The query which will be discussed at all member high schools in the nineteenth annual debating contest on Friday evening is: "Resolved, that the United States should grant immediate independence to the Philippines." The youthful speakers in the high schools have put forth a great effort in their study and general preparation for the forensic events.

The high schools which win both sides in their triangular debates will send their teams to Chapel Hill on April 16 and 17 to take part in the final contest for the Aycock Memorial Cup, the handsome trophy which has been donated to the High School Debating Union by the intercollegiate debaters of the University of North Carolina.

The triangles which have been arranged for the state-wide debating contest were announced today as follows:

Raleigh, Durham, and Fayetteville; Greensboro, High Point, and Winston-Salem; Greenville, Washington, and New Bern; Hamlet, Laurinburg, and Rockingham; Salisbury, Lexington, and Statesville; Gas-

PLANS COMPLETE FOR SOPH DANCE

Plans have finally been completed for the Sophomore Hop which is to be given in the gymnasium on May 1. Jelly Leftwich and His Orchestra will be secured to play for the occasion.

Leaders of the dance who were elected at the last class smoker are: Dave Henry, president of the class, leader; John Sparks Griffin, first assistant, with Miss Lois Meacham, of Charlotte; and T. Ben Campen, second assistant.

VICE-PRESIDENT'S OFFICE CREATED

Presidential Candidates Will Express Platforms at Chapel Period Monday.

At the meeting of the student body in Gerrard hall Friday norning during chapel period the candidates for the various campus offices were formally nominated. Due to the lack of time Red Greene, president of the student body and presiding officer of the meeting, was obliged to place a limit on the length of the nominating speeches.

Nominations for campus offices exclusively were made at this meeting as the different classes nominated candidates for their respective offices Thursday night.

Mayne Albright and Bill Speight were the nominees for the most important office on the campus, the presidency of the student body. These candidates are scheduled to speak before the students in Memorial hall Monday morning during chapel period. It is probable that the men will state their platforms at that time and make known their plans in the event of their election.

It was voted by the assembly that an entirely new office, that of vice-president of the student body, should be created. This was done in order to promote efficiency in the management of the student government operations. Nominees for this newly-formed office were Slim Medford and Clyde Shreve.

Jack Dungan and J. C. Williams were nominated as the candidates for the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel.

For editor of the Yackety Yack Holmes "Chink" Davis was the sole nominee, thus being automatically elected to the position.

Pete Gilchrist and Gil Pearson were named as the candidates for editor of the Buccaneer

For editor of the Carolina Magazine D. C. "Spec" McClure and Phil Liskin were nominated.

The nominees for the presidency of the Y. M. C. A. were Pardner James and Harry Finch, and for the vice-presidency Lee Greer was the only nominee and thus elected. For secretary John Manning and James Kurfees were nominated and Frank Hawley was named for treasurer.

Jim Baley, Cecil Carmichael, Carlyle Rutledge, and Red Merritt were nominated for the debate council.

For Senior member of the Publications Union Board, McBryde Fleming-Jones and Ben Neville were nominated, while Charles Rose, for junior member, and Don Shoemaker, for member-at-large, were the sole nominees for their positions and were duly elected.

The nominees for the president of the Athletic Association were Theron Brown and Paul Edwards, with Harry Hodges and Ellis Fysal for vice-president. Addie Hazelwood was nominated and elected to the position of chief cheer-leader.

The day of election which was set by the student council at

A Wholesome Campaign

During the next four days University students will be treated to another vigorous campaign. Until last year political conditions here necessitated much secrecy about the candidates and the parties. But last year a new system came into being and this year we have improvement on that.

Meetings became open last year for the first time and by opening their meetings the parties showed that despite political reformers and such there was nothing about politics in which the average student could participate. Now we have even more not open politics than last year and this shows a healthy improvement in political conditions here.

All signs indicate a vigorous campaign. Such are good for the campus and stimulate greater activity along all lines. But such a campaign may work harm to the University if false issues are allowed to creep in and influence the voters. We must consider first of all the fact that Tuesday we select the men who will direct the activities of the campus for the coming year and who will represent to the collegiate world the student leaders of the University of North Carolina. That comes first; other issues may be considered later.

The sporting event of greatest world interest at this moment is King Alfonso's effort to keep his crown on.—Springfield Republican.

We read that Portsmouth, Ohio, supplies more than half of America's spats. And Reno, Nevada, exploits them.—Weston Leader.

With Contemporaries

Lethargic Languidity

Undergraduates, according to the testimony culled from the editorial comments of the Williams Record, the Dartmouth, the Yale News, the Harvard Crimson, the Cornell Daily Sun, the Princetonian, and the Brown Herald are growing daily more apathetic about what has been the tradition heritage in student interests, sports, extra-curricular activities and class government. The Princetonian maintains that this unloosed energy is being turned into channels of informal sport, explaining the rise in the popularity of tennis, squash, and golf. As far as we can see, at Pennsylvania it is being devoted chiefly to the conversational art and to attendance at the cinema.

Cornell editors complain of a dearth of editorial material for comment, stating parenthetically a maximum with which we heartily concur, that when the editor can scrape an item thin enough to find in it a subject for an editorial, he is distinctly boring. We have serious doubts as to our ability to engage and hold the interests of the student body away from the more mundane interests of college life.

If the student body has been satisfied with itself and its attitude throughout the year, we have not. Our two biggest subjects for comment in the past week have been the radical change in the athletic policy of the University which we have hailed with delight, and the rushing season which seems so upset by the divided organization of the various fraternities. We have received only one letter about the former and that from a sarcastic graduate: while no one in particular seems concerned about the patent violations of the code which applies to some and not to others but is executed by no authority.

To develop public opinion among the undergraduates of the University, as in many others at the present time, is like attempting to goad a dead horse. In the end, your editors may be obliged to resort to sensationalism, which of itself should be shunned as an easy cliche. The question resolves itself to a matter of issues. No matter how we may take it upon ourselves to raise, the undergraduate body will fail to react to them.

We have pointed out before how lifeless various organizations are on the campus. We welcome suggestions as to ways and means that flagging zeal may be stimulated.—The Pennsylvanian.

Colgate Falls Flat

The Colgate Plan, which is advocated by Dr. George Cutten, president of the university, is to have athletic as well as extra-curricular achievements count for credits in the earning of a Bachelor of Arts degree. By supporting and encouraging this movement, Dr. Cutten joins the ranks of contemporary educational reformers, the most prominent being Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn whose experimental college at Madison, Wisconsin, is causing vigorous comment in educational circles.

If this unique and revolutionary plan is put into operation, the college intellectual of the future will be judged to a sharper degree by the breadth of his shoulders rather than by the height of his forehead. Dr. Cutten holds that an athlete is more deserving of an A.B. than the average student and points out that the undergraduate passes most of his time in laboratories or poring over books instead of spending a considerable portion of his time in extra-curricular activities.

In short, Dr. Cutten believes that the academic side of college life is highly overemphasized. At least this point of view has the piquancy that goes with novelty.

While we look back upon extra-curricular activity with fond recollections, our actual participation in it is not exactly pleasant. Hard work. Continuous work. But fortunately our aspiration of the ultimate end outweighs the current unpleasantness of the job. If these jobs were prerequisites of an A.B. degree, they would become irksome, specialized, stereotyped. As more students enrolled in this type of activity, rigid standards of work would be set which would stifle the individual and original efforts on the part of the student to come out on top.

The Colgate Plan, which is in direct opposition to the noble movement at the University of Pennsylvania, not only catalyzes commercialism in athletics but also, and to a more displeasing degree, makes the racket of subsidizing certain brawny men more within the law.—Daily Dartmouth.

Democracy and Science, Politics vs. Education

By Glenn Frank

(President of University of Wisconsin and Famous Editor.)

As president of a state university, I have the privilege of being stationed at one of the most interesting listening posts in American democracy.

This is a year of economic stringency.

This is a year when State legislative sessions are under way.

And the reaction of State legislatures to State universities will this year be an acid test of American democracy.

It will be interesting and illuminating to watch what happens when the State legislatures, in a year of economic stringency, deal with the State university budgets.

The universities, in a spirit of sportsmanship, should reassess themselves and ask the taxpayer for nothing that is not essential, taking advantage of a stringent time to make a bonfire of anything that smacks of the obsolete in their programs.

This will be a test alike of their sportsmanship and of their statesmanship.

If they meet this test of sportsmanship and statesmanship, then the field will be cleared for a very real test of the social insight of the legislatures.

I have before me, as I write, clippings from a dozen States in which the early reactions of State legislatures to State universities are recorded, and I find such reactions as the following:

Outcries against salaries that seem to some legislators unjustified.

Outcries against research that seems to some legislators as simply the private luxury of professors who should be spending at least eight hours a day in the class room.

Outcries against education in general because the money spent in other years on universities has not prevented the current economic stringency and ushered in Utopia.

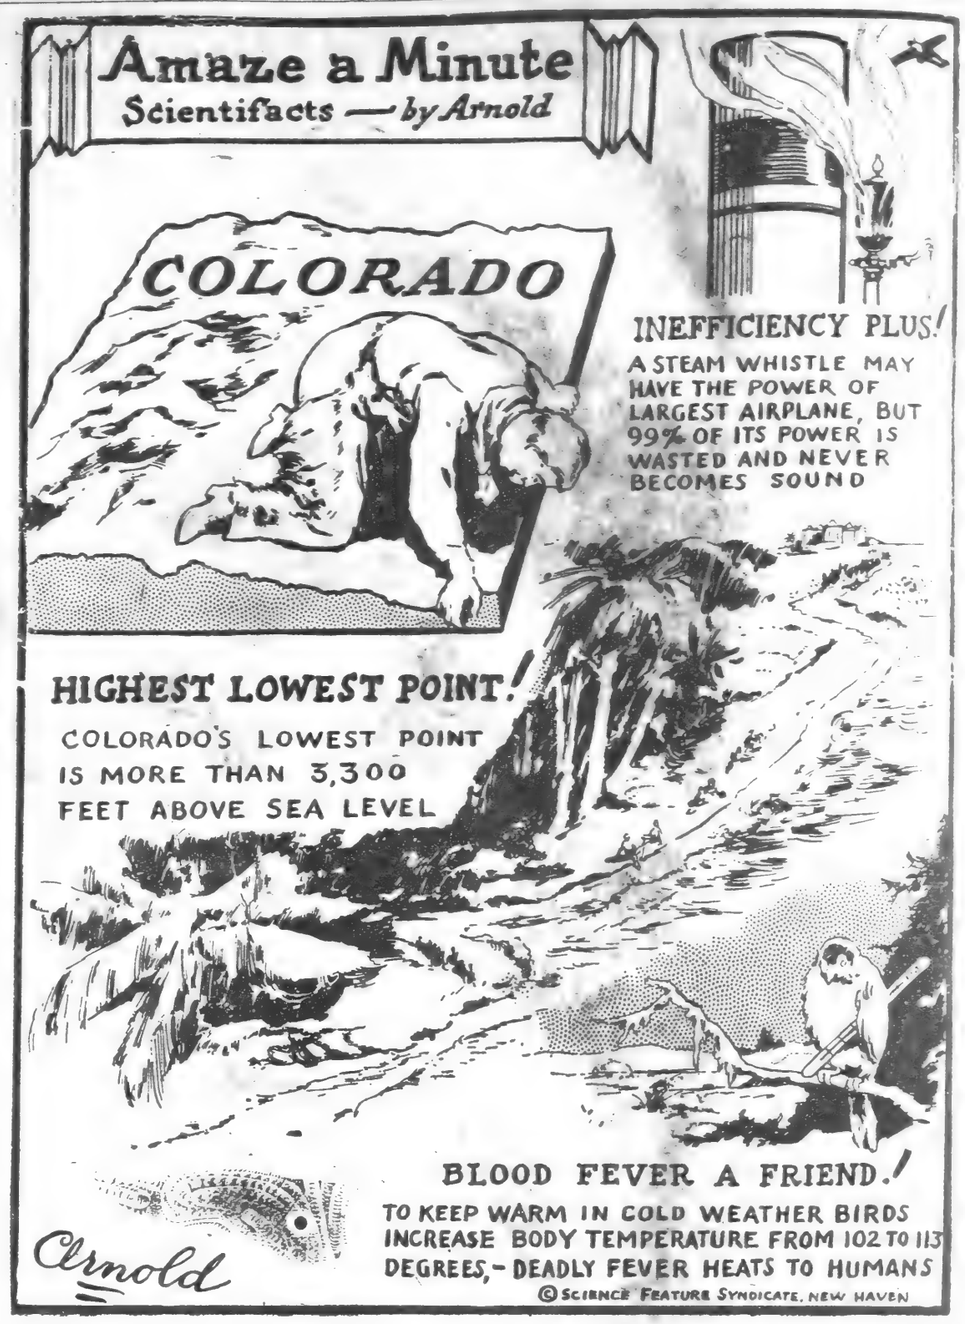
The fact is that nowhere in the nation are the salaries of teachers high enough to attract an adequate number of superior men into the teaching profession.

The fact is that hidden away in the research laboratories of one of these State universities may be the man or men who will before long emancipate the race from the scourge of cancer.

The fact is that the universities are about the most effective forces we have in the warfare against cynicism, materialism, and social indifference.

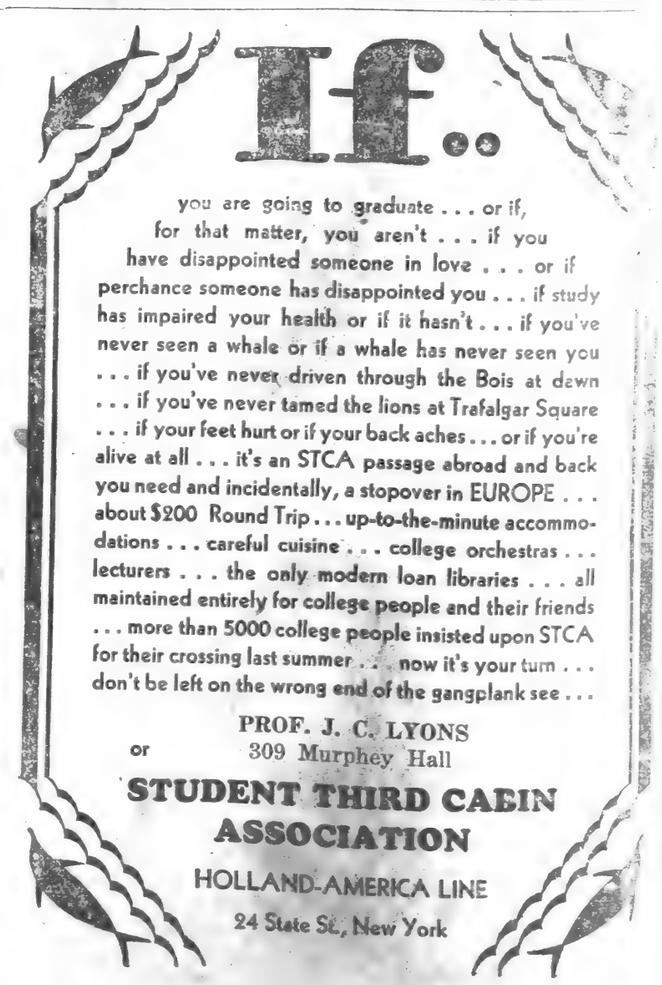
Nothing will give us a better insight into the capacity of democracy to run the modern world than a careful watching of what State legislatures do with State universities this winter.—Newark, N. J. Ledger.

The Argo's Experiment



About four months ago we saw a white-sailed Argo coming over the horizon. Because we are but a small port, and because we were already served by a tried old vessel, there were some misgivings at the time. Stimulating as competition may be, it is sometimes equally destructive: and so it is not entirely with regret that we now see the Argo veer about and disappear in the blue.

However, our motives for opposing the introduction of another publication were in no sense critical estimates of any particular feature of the new magazine. Nor were we under any false impressions as to the Campus need for a revival of interest in literature in general, and more particularly, in that produced by the student body. While we looked askance at the new publication on grounds of policy, once it arrived there was no denying the merit of its contents or the singular competence of its editors and contributors.



Theirs was a really praiseworthy contribution to campus life. In their first issue, they renounced prejudice and dogmatism, fads and pseudo-sophistication, and set out to give voice to the spirited enthusiasms of youth. This, however, was obviously no more than The Nassau Lit, in its revitalized form, hoped to do. It seemed to us that a division of undergraduate talent could be of no advantage to either group, and only of detriment to both.

Whatever led to the discontinuance of the Argo, it was not, we feel sure, the disinterest the founders. Accordingly is our opinion that the Lit is perfectly suitable vehicle carrying on the aims and ide thus far observed in the interred review. If such tale as responded to the call of th Argo would now interest itself in the Lit as a means of furthering the best thought and taste of this rising generation it would do much to increase the interest of the Campus in its own literary products and justify the Argo's experiment —Daily Princetonian.

Trackmen Open Season With P. C. Today

FROSH AND HIGH TEAM TO TANGLE IN DUAL BATTLE

Varsity Ranks Shattered By Injuries and Sickness to Four Stars.

Carolina's 1930 Southern Conference track champions, ranks shattered by graduation and injuries, will open their 1931 season against Presbyterian College here this afternoon at two o'clock. The pole vault, high jump, and discus events will begin at two o'clock while the running events will open at 2:30 when the 100 yard dash will be run off. The freshmen will meet Charlotte High school in an added feature of the day's program.

Four Tar Heel stars will be absent from the line up due to injuries and sickness. Charley Farmer and Stafford, dash man and high jumper respectively, will be out with pulled leg muscles, while George Bagby and Clarence Jensen have been kept out of practice during the past week with measles. Farmer and Bagby are veterans and have done outstanding work in their events, while Jensen and Stafford, sophomores, are two of the most promising prospects of the year. With these men out of the competition, the Tar Heels will be hard pushed to take the strong Presbyterians.

In addition to the regular meets, Galen Elliott and Johnny Henderson, former Carolina distance stars, will run an exhibition two mile race at 3:10. Both hold several Carolina and Southern records, and much interest is being shown in this race.

With Charley Farmer out of the running, "Rip" Slusser, Bob Drane, and Marland will enter the 100 yard dash for the Tar Heels with Marland and Drane also running in the 220. Lionel Weil, holder of the Conference indoor record, and Smith, veteran dash man, will run in the 440, while Jones, Garrett, Brock, and Watkins will take care of the 880. Garrett is the only veteran of the quartet.

Cliff Baucom, veteran, will team with Jones, Donnell, and Gabriel in the mile run and will also be in the two mile event along with Jones, Cordle, Hubbard, and Pratt. Archie Davis, up from last year's freshman team, will enter both the hurdle events, while "Rip" Slusser will run in the low hurdles along with him. Egan and Waugh will be the other entrants in the high hurdles.

The relay team will be chosen from Weil, Smith, Marland, Brock, Jones, Watkins, Case, and Garrett. Five points will be awarded to the winning team in this event, while the losers will get no points.

Theron Brown will lead the Tar Heels in the field events, competing in the shot, discus, and javelin. Sandy Dameron, George Thompson, and Ray Ruble will also be entered in the discus with Underwood, Thompson, and Hodges competing in the shot put. In addition to Brown, the Tar Heels will have in the javelin Stuart Chandler, Henry, Houston, Gil-

CAROLINA, V. M. I. SWEEP PRELIMS IN FOIL TOURNEY

College of Charleston and South Carolina Bow to Victors By Large Scores.

North Carolina and V. M. I. fencers swept all opposition here yesterday afternoon in the preliminary rounds of the Southern fencing tournament. North Carolina, present holders of the Southern title, scored decisive wins over South Carolina 8-1 and College of Charleston 9-0, while V. M. I. defeated the same teams, each by a score of 9-0.

All three of the V. M. I. foilsmen showed good form in going through the afternoon without a defeat, while the work of Hinkey Hendlin and Digby Wardlaw was outstanding for the Tar Heels. Riley of South Carolina scored the only point of the preliminary rounds for his team, and showed up well.

Tournament finals will be run off in the Tin Can tonight at seven o'clock.

Increased Number Make Application For C. M. T. Camps

Applications are coming in from all over the country from men interested in attending the numerous C. M. T. Camps which are scheduled to start June 12 and continue through July 11, according to a letter received from C. M. T. C. headquarters from this district.

Last year out of the 8,939 men who made application to attend the camps, only 4,400 were able to be accepted because of the limited facilities, and the officials suggest that all persons planning to attend this summer make application immediately.

Any boy over seventeen years of age is eligible to go to camp provided that he has been vaccinated against small pox and typhoid fever within the past three or four years.

During their stay in the several camps the candidates are entirely on the expense of the Government, which also pays the transportation to and from camp.

Some of the amusements which entertain the men while in camp include baseball, basketball, tennis, track, and several other types of outdoor sports. In the evenings the "talkies," sings, stunts, dances, concerts, and boxing matches, are some of the other types of entertainment which the C. M. T. C. members enjoy.

The sale of apples to provide employment, the practice pursued on the streets of our leading cities, is an ancient idea. Mother Eve brought employment upon all of us when she "sold" that apple to Father Adam.—Arkansas Gazette.

BATTERIES TAKE SHAPE AS FIRST CONTEST LOOMS

Ashmore Still Looking for Good Southpaw In Hurling Department.

Carolina's battery forces has just about taken shape, but with the opening game with Cornell just around the corner and set for Monday, the Tar Heel outfield is as unsettled as ever.

In the pitching department the stout-armed veteran Edwards has been showing most promise, and it looks as if the lettermen Shields and Longest and the sophomore Griffith will give best support and see duty first. All these boys are right-handers, however, and Coach Jim Ashmore still needs a good southpaw.

Behind the bat Piggy Potter capable understudy last year to Captain Maus, catches well and his hitting to date has left little wanted. Pattisol, a sophomore, is a good assistant.

The outfield is another matter. Clyde Blythe, left-handed hitter and letterman from last year, has been hitting the horsehide hard and straight, but despite the fact that several veterans are available, Blythe is more or less in a class by himself.

Such men as House, Davis, McKinney, Paxton and Crouch all have yet to hit a hitting stride, although what hits McKinney has had have been tremendous wallops to far distant places. There are a couple of good fielding sophomore candidates in Daniel and Croom who may fill the bill too, if their hitting picks up a bit.

VARSITY DEFEATS FRESHMEN 5-2 TO GET SECOND WIN

Fereebee Leads Veterans With Triple, Single, and Walk for Perfect Day at Bat.

EDWARDS AND MASS HURL

Phipps Brothers, Tatum, McIver, Jones, and Fisher Show up Best for Frosh.

The Regulars defeated the Freshmen yesterday afternoon, 5-2, to win their second game of the season, holding the yearlings to five hits and two runs in the abbreviated six inning tilt. The varsity wins came on successive days, defeating the Rookies 7-1 Thursday, after the Rookies had won and tied one in their first two encounters with the veterans.

Edwards, letter pitcher, started in the box for the varsity and held the frosh to singles by DeRose and Frankel and fanning three men during his two innings on the mound.

Edwards and Longest have shown the best form in pre-season practice games and right now it looks as if they will divide the mound duty against Cornell Monday, with Edwards probably starting the game.

Frankel started for the first year men but was hit freely by the varsity, being relieved by Lefty Mass, who finished the game, in the third. Mass pitched good ball during his turn on the hill holding the Regulars scoreless in the final innings after the veterans had bunched two walks and a double, by Potter and a hard single by Fereebee for three runs in the third.

Fereebee led the attack of the varsity getting a single, a triple and a walk in three trips to the plate for a perfect day at bat. Potter also had a perfect day at bat getting walked once and a double on his second trip to the plate.

The yearlings' runs came in the sixth on John Phipps' single with Harry Phipps on base. John Phipps scored the first year men's final tally when Pattisol threw to second to catch McIver stealing with Phipps on third.

For the freshmen John Phipps, shortstop, Tatum, catcher, Harry Phipps and Watt Jones, second sackers, McIver and Fisher, outfielders, and Weathers, first baseman looked best out of the twenty-odd men used by Coaches Magner and Sapp.

The starting lineups were:

Varsity: Potter, catcher; Edwards, pitcher; Peacock, third base; Fereebee, shortstop; Wyrick, second base; Dunlap, first base; House, left field; Blythe, center field; and McKinney, right field.

LIONS SCHEDULE FOUR DUAL MEETS

State College, Pennsylvania, March 28.—Approval of the 1931 track schedule was announced by the Penn State Athletic board of control today. The Lion athletes will engage in four dual meets in addition to taking part in the Penn Relays and the Intercollegiate championships.

The complete schedule is as follows:

April 24-25, Penn Relays at Philadelphia; May 2, Syracuse at State College; May 9, North Carolina at State College; May 16, Temple at State College; May 23, University of Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh; May 29-30, Intercollegiates at Philadelphia.

Temple University is the only newcomer to the schedule this year, the other three opponents, Pitt, Syracuse and North Carolina having been on the 1930 schedule although the meet with Syracuse was not held because of rain. The schedule includes four dual meets for the first time in many seasons, three being the usual number in recent years.

Closes Date

Commander F. G. Reinicke, graduate manager of athletics at the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland, in a recent letter to Graduate Manager Charles T. Woollen of the University, closed the date for a boxing meet against Carolina, to take place there on February 20, 1932.

The return of prosperity will, in a manner of speaking, upset the apple cart.—Arkansas Gazette.

Phi Will Discuss Marriage Question

The system of companionate marriages which Judge Ben Lindsey has recently advocated will be the subject for discussion in one of the bills on the Phi assembly calendar when the society meets for the second time this quarter Tuesday night.

The three bills to be discussed are stated as follows: 1. Resolved: That the Philanthropic Assembly go on record as favoring the resolution that the state establish a system of retirement funds for University professors; 2. Resolved: That companionate marriages contracted under the system proposed by Judge Ben Lindsey be recognized as legal unions; 3. Resolved: That the Prohibition Act be modified so as to legalize the sale of light wines and beers.

Trysting Place, was presented by the Lumberton high school. After this contest the presentation of an original play by a county high school was held at three-thirty, when the Seaboard high school presented Ephriam's Light, by Helen Parker. The afternoon's program was closed at four o'clock with the final contest in play production of the county high schools. The contest consisted of two plays. Allen Davis' play, On Vengeance Heights, was offered by the Paw Creek high school Dramatic club, and Elizabeth McFadden's Why the Chimes Rang, was presented by the Hillsboro high school Dramatic club.

In the evening two contests were held, the contest in original plays of the city high schools, and the final contest in play production of the city high schools. In the former contest at seven, the Asheville senior high school presented Mosella Burke's play, We Still Have Memories, and The East Wind's Spell, written by Isobel Hanson, was offered by the R. J. Reynolds high school of Winston-Salem. In the latter contest, the Asheville senior high school presented Adelaide Rowell's play, The High Heart.

This morning at ten o'clock the business meeting of the Association will be conducted. An hour later, Dwight Mathis, director of The Tar Heel Dramatists at radio station WBT, will deliver an address on "Radio Play-making." "Five-and-Ten-Scenery" will be the subject of an address by Samuel Selden, of the University.

At eleven-thirty "Dramatics From the College Students' Viewpoint" will be discussed by delegates from N. C. C. W. and Wake Forest, and by Tom Loy of the University. Barrett Clark, dramatic critic of New York City will close the morning's program with an address using as his topic, "Broadway Tomorrow."

A demonstration performance of May Miller's drama, Riding the Goat, will be offered at two by St. Augustine's College (for negroes). At two-thirty the costume review will be conducted by Ruth Valentine, of the University, which will be followed by the individual member's original play presentation at three o'clock. The Asheville senior high school will present Kneale Morgan's play, Rhinestones and Rouge. The Old Lady Shows Her Medals, written by J. M. Barrie, will be presented by the Alexander Graham junior high school of Charlotte at three-forty-five. The scene is laid in London at the end of the World War. Gladys Angel, of the University, will direct a demonstration of folk dancing at four-thirty. The directors' Supper at the Carolina Inn at six o'clock will close the afternoon's program.

The evening's program opens at seven o'clock with the final contest in play production of the senior colleges and little theatres. Marching Men, by James O'Brian, will be offered by the Dramatic Club of Wake Forest, and Paul Green's drama, The Last of the Lowries, will be offered by the Lenoir-Rhyne Players. The Taurian Players, of Duke university, will offer Eugene O'Neill's play, Bound East for Cardiff, and El Christo, written by Margaret Larkin, will be presented by the Charlotte Drama League.

At ten-fifteen Professor Frederick H. Koch will announce the winners of all contests and the festival will be closed with the presentation of the awards by President Frank P. Graham.

REPORTERS

All reporters are reminded of the fact that they are required to cover their beats this morning and turn in their stories before twelve o'clock. All those who, after covering their beats, fail to secure any news are asked to report to the news editor in the Daily Tar Heel office before eleven o'clock.

LAW ASSOCIATION TO PETITION FOR RENOVATED DORM

Law school. When completely renovated, there will be accomodations for sixty men, with possibly room for a dining room and kitchen.

The reason for the proposed plan is that the Law school members are of the opinion that they would be better able to study if in the more quiet atmosphere which would pervade the building if occupied solely by law students. Another argument advanced for the making of the building into a sort of law club is that all the persons residing in the dormitory would have common interests and more or less common tastes and so would be able to get the greatest amount of benefit out of their leisure time by contacts with each other.

Grail Dance

The Order of the Grail will give the first dance of the quarter tonight in the gymnasium from nine until twelve o'clock. Music for the occasion is to be rendered by Jack Wardlaw and His Carolina Tar Heels. Tickets are now on sale at the Pritchard-Lloyd Drug Store and the Book Exchange for the usual price of one dollar.

CAROLINA PRESS PLANS SIX BOOKS

RUSSIAN QUARTET TO SING CHURCH AND FOLK MUSIC

Group Said To Represent Highest Achievement in Particular Types of Music.

The Kedroff Quartet, which is to appear here under the auspices of the student entertainment committee Tuesday at eight-thirty, represents the highest achievement of Russian vocal art, and is considered as one of the best exponents of Russian folk and church music.

The group originally formed in 1897 by Professor N. N. Kedroff; his brother C. N. Kedroff, formerly professor with the School of Musical Technique in Petrograd, joined in 1910, and the first and second tenors, I. K. Denisoff and T. F. Kasakoff, both formerly with the Imperial Russian Opera of Petrograd, joined in 1920.

In 1923, due to the Russian revolution, they were stripped of all their possessions, and after severe hardships, they managed to leave Russia. However it was not long before their fame again spread through Western Europe. January 7, 1928, at Town Hall, New York, the Quartet made its American debut and in three seasons before the American public the Kedroffs have won a triumph which is compared favorably with their conquest of Europe.

Apart from its musical perfection, from the sincerity and intensity of expression which the Kedroffs bring to their performances, the Quartet has achieved remarkable success in popularizing and in keeping alive Russian vocal music in all its forms. Their programs, varied as they are, have as their basis genuine Russian folk songs. This type of music is a heritage of an ancient and romantic ace, for whom beauty was the immediate expression of life.

After having sung all over Europe, the Kedroff Quartet came first to this country in January, 1928. They sang in such a way as to justify Chaliapin in calling them "a miracle," and Koussevitzky in describing them as "the most wonderful phenomenon of the vocal world today."

Police Investigate Fires On Frat Row

In the opinion of the police and fire departments of this community, the two fires which occurred early Monday morning were the work of incendiaries.

The fire at the house of the Alpha Kappa Kappa, medical fraternity, which started in the laundry bags on the front porch was discovered by K. D. Cole, driver of one of the University laundry trucks. According to his report, the fire was evidently not of an accidental nature. One of the bags which was separated a considerable distance from any of the others was blazing as much as the rest.

At the fire in the old Tau Epsilon Phi house on fraternity row, kerosene was discovered on the walls and some of the few students who witnessed the spectacle say the smell of this highly combustible fluid was exceedingly strong. There is little likelihood that the fire started of its own accord since the house was empty, and the electrical connections had been severed and the current cut off.

Y MAKES PLANS FOR BLUE RIDGE

Human Relations Institute Will Be Sponsored By the Three Campus Cabinets.

The members of the three Y cabinets meeting in their first regular session this quarter tomorrow night will discuss questions dealing with the plans for the Second Quadrennial Institute on Human Relations, which is scheduled to meet May 3-9.

This institute, being presented by the local Y. M. C. A. association, was first organized in March 1927. At that time some of the noted men in the United States were brought to the campus to address the students on various subjects on which the speakers were well informed. Such men as Kirby Page, J. J. Cornelius, Herbert Adams Gibbons, Dr. Will Alexander, E. M. Patterson, and Cameron Beck were only a few of the outstanding notables who were here under the auspicies of the Institute.

Plans for the coming Blue Ridge Conference this summer will also be taken up at the meeting tomorrow night. Each summer the University Y association sends over twenty-five delegates to this conference, which is held in the mountains about fifteen miles from Asheville. It is the plan of the local Y that a similiar delegation be sent again this summer, and delegates will probably be selected in one of the meetings in the near future.

Graham McLeod, president of the Freshman Friendship Council, requests that all members of that group attend the meeting tomorrow because of the fact that important plans are to be made in regard to high school week.

PHI BETA KAPPA PLANS INITIATION

Dr. H. Van P. Wilson Will Address New Members of Scholastic Society.

On Thursday, April 9, at eight-thirty, the new members of Phi Beta Kappa will be initiated in Gerrard hall. Dr. Henry Van Peters Wilson will speak to the initiates and all persons are invited to hear his address.

Last year twenty-nine students were accepted into the national honorary scholastic fraternity. The officers of the Carolina chapter are Joe Eagles, president; T. H. Barker, vice president; Beverly Moore, secretary; and Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., corresponding secretary.

The national organization was founded at William and Mary College in 1776 and now has over 100 chapters throughout the United States. Membership to this fraternity is based on the three qualifications of fraternity, morality, and scholarship. A student must have an average of at least 92.5 to be eligible for admission to the organization.

Dr. Wilson, who is to speak before the chapter on the night of their initiation ceremonies, is a scientist of international importance. He graduated from Johns Hopkins University with an A. B. degree in 1883 and five years later received his Ph. D. from the same institution. Among the many important

Pardner James Elected Y President

With the withdrawal of the name of Harry Finch, one of the official nominees of the Y. M. C. A. for president of that association, F. M. "Pardner" James was yesterday declared unanimously elected president of the Y by the student council, because of the fact that he was the only candidate running for office after the list of withdrawals were turned in.

Upon the withdrawal of the names of Ed French and Haywood Weeks, Lee Greer was unanimously elected to the position of vice-president of the Y; John Manning also went into the office of secretary after Bob Barnett, Jimmy Kurfees and Billy McKee had dropped out of the race. The office of treasurer of the association went to Frank Hawley upon the withdrawals of Bim Ferguson, Jim Kenan, Charles Rose, and Jim Steere.

CHEMIST TELLS OF NEW WAY TO CLEAN BRONZES

Columbia Professor Reveals Electro-Chemical Process to Local Society.

A new process of restoring ancient bronzes was revealed here this week by Dr. Colin G. Fink, head of the division of electrochemistry at Columbia University, when he spoke before a meeting of the North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society. The address followed a supper in honor of Dr. Fink at the Carolina Inn.

Dr. Fink told his audience the story of how he and his colleagues at Columiba have, after violating and even reversing many of the established processes of electro-chemistry, discovered this better way of restoring bonzes.

This new method, Dr. Fink pointed out, involves an electrochemical process which he perfected only after trying and discarding most of the accepted formulas of electrolysis. He told how this method literally "uncorrodes" the crusted corrosion of the centuries and restores the original tracery and pattern of the bronze statue or coin.

Dr. Fink explained that this process is more effective and can do much more delicate work than the old mechanical methods, and stated that it is already being used by the larger museums and archaeologic expeditions.

Dr. Fink was introduced by L. A. Bigelow, of the Duke University chemistry department, who, as president of the North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society, presided over the meeting.

CAROLINA DEBATES EMORY UNIVERSITY

The University of North Carolina debated with Emory University in Gerrard Hall Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock on the query, Resolved: That the nations of the world should adopt a policy of free trade. The North Carolina team represented the negative side of the question.

Representing Carolina were C. D. Wardlaw and E. E. Ericson. The affirmative side, upheld by the Emory team was composed of Hoyt Dobbs and William Woodruff. The duration for the debate was fifteen minutes for the main speech with a rebuttal of six minutes. No decision was reached.

The University will meet Tennessee, Tuesday evening, March 31 in Gerrard hall at 7:00 o'clock, the hour being changed so as not to interfere with the Kedroff musical quartet which will take place at 8:30 o'clock. The query at this time will be the same as was debated with Emory.

MIKE SPECIALE IS ENGAGED FOR SPRING FESTIVAL

Five Fraternities Are Sponsoring Social Events of April Ten and Eleven.

Mike Speciale and his Crusaders, who are now at the Hotel Gibson in Cincinnati, will come to the University, April 10 and 11, to play for the annual Spring Festival, a major event of the spring social season on the campus.

The Festival, comprising a series of three dances during the weekend, is being sponsored by the Phi Gamma Delta, Pi Kappa Phi, Phi Delta Theta, Pi Kappa Alpha, and Alpha Tau Omega fraternities. The dance committee is composed of George Newman, Pi Kappa Phi, chairman; Mosely Fonivielle, Phi Delta Theta, treasurer; Bill Bliss, Phi Gamma Delta, secretary; Ed French, Pi Kappa Alpha; and Barron Grier, Alpha Tau Omega.

Several of the fraternities are planning house parties for their guests during the Festival. Decorated in blue and white, the University colors, Bynum gymnasium will be used for the three dances, Friday evening, Saturday afternoon, and Saturday night.

Engagements which Mike Speciale and his Crusaders have played include those at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Philadelphia, Castle Farms in Cincinnati, Young's Million Pier at Atlantic City, Bamboo Gardens in Cleveland, and at a number of clubs in Chicago, St. Louis, and Atlantic City, including seven in New York.

The unique entertainment ability and tuneful versatility of his band and his slogan, "Everybody Dance," have made "Mike at the Mike" popularly known to the audiences of a majority of the leading radio stations.

Di Will Discuss Tax On Football Games

When the Dialectic Senate meets next Tuesday night attention will center around the happenings in the General Assembly and on the campus. There are three bills on the calendar: Resolved, that official sanction be given party politics on the campus by printing together on the official ballot the names of the candidates of respective parties; Resolved, that Governor O. Max Gardner should be censured for his stand on the sales tax; and Resolved, that the House tax of ten percent on college football games is unfair and unwarranted.

The Guild production for today is "The Devil's Pit," a feature representation of life among the aborigines of New Zealand.

SCIENTIFIC GROUP PLANS ELECTIONS

Sigma Xi Will Elect New Officers at Supper Tuesday Night.

Members of Sigma Xi, scientific fraternity, will vote on the officers for next year when they assemble for a supper Tuesday night in the Carolina Inn. The nominating committee has already named the candidates for office.

The committee of nomination is composed to Dr. Otto Stuhlman, president, Dr. E. T. Brown, secretary-treasurer, Dr. F. K. Cameron, and Dr. H. D. Crockford. For the office of president they selected Dr. J. N. Couch, of the botany department, and Dr. A. S. Wheeler, of the chemistry department. Dr. R. W. Bost, of the chemistry department, and Dr. F. P. Brooks, assistant professor of bio-chemistry, are candidates for the vice-presidency. The present secretary-treasurer, Dr. E. T. Brown, will retain that position next year, and Dr. H. D. Crockford continues his duty as a member of the executive committee.

Following the election of officers, the new members who have been recently accepted into the society will be initiated. The remainder of the evening is to be used by the zoology department in a report of the research carried on in the past year. Dr. H. V. Wilson will give an account of his study of sponges, and other reports will be given by Dr. J. M. Valentine and Dr. R. E. Coker.

NOTED SPEAKERS ARE SECURED FOR PRESS MEETING

President Graham and Josephus Daniels Will Address College Publicity Association.

Albert N. Ward, president of Western Maryland College; Frank P. Graham, president of the University; Josephus Daniels, prominent newspaper publisher, who was Secretary of the Navy in Wilson's cabinet; and Wallace Wade and R. A. Fetzer, athletic directors at Duke and North Carolina universities, respectively, are listed among the speakers for the seventeenth annual meeting of the American College Publicity Association (formerly the American Association of College News Bureaus), which will take place at the University on April 23, 24, 25, according to the program announced yesterday by R. W. Madry, director of the University News Bureau, who is in charge of local arrangements.

Indications point to the largest attendance on record, around 100 delegates, from colleges and universities in all sections of the country, having signified their intention to attend. Far off states like California, Texas, and Massachusetts will be represented. There probably will be half a dozen delegates from the state of California, and equally as many from the other two states mentioned. Last year the convention was held at New York University, with an attendance of seventy-five.

The highlight of the convention will be the annual banquet and dance on Friday night, April 24, when Mr. Graham and Mr. Daniels will speak. The Carolina Buccaneers, local stu-

GRAHAM AWARDS PRIZES AT STATE DRAMA FESTIVAL

Many Schools Compete in Annual Contest Held in Playmakers Theatre.

President Frank Graham, of the University, brought the eighth annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association to a close last evening with the announcement of the winning plays and the presentation of the awards.

The best original play to come out of a community club or junior college was The Evidence, by Lyla Taylor Edwards and Bernice Harris, presented by the Seaboard Woman's Club under the direction of Mrs. Herbert Harris. The cast included Vernon Cordle, Carter Grant, Tom Capel, Mrs. David Grubbs, Reece Bullock, and Garland Long.

The best produced play in this same group was The Drums of Oude, put on by the Rocky Mount Little Theatre Guild under the direction of Mrs. Leon Epstine. The actors were Welford Price, James Johnston, Norman Gold, Sam Austin, Scott Holman, Garland Daughtridge, and Jameson Bunn.

Seaboard also carried off the original-play award for county high schools, with Ephriam's Light, a tragedy of slave life by Helen B. Parker. It was directed by Mrs. T. R. Everett and acted by Woodrow Bass, Helen Bridges Parker, Poe Parker, and Katherine Crew.

The county high school that produced the best play was Hallsboro, which, under the direction of Margaret Irby, put on Why the Chimes Rang, with Arthur Anderson, William Shipman, Graham Rowe, Grace Herrem, and Carolyn Council.

Winston-Salem was the city high school that produced the best original play. It was a negro fantasy called The East Wind's Spell. Isobel Hanson was the author, Hessie Watts and Bill Perry, the directors; and the actors: Henry Wimbish,

PLAYMAKERS TO READ OPERA BY LOCAL MUSICIAN

The Mountain Song, an opera in three scenes, which was written by Lamar Stringfield, winner of the Pulitzer prize for Southern Mountain suite, will be read in the Playmakers Theatre Sunday night at eight-thirty. The characters are: Cindy Sherwood, (mezzo-contralto) wife of Joe Sherwood; Joe Sherwood, (bass-baritone) a moonshiner; Lula Sherwood, (lyric-dramatic-soprano) the daughter; Jim Anderson, alias Bob Buckner (tenor); five still attendants; and four revenue agents.

The opera deals with the traditional feuds between mountaineers and their fierce hatred of opposing clans. Some of the music in the opera will be played by the Faculty Chamber orchestra, and the character parts will be read by members of the Playmakers. Dr. Urban T. Holmes will sing the song, "The Law is My Enemy," with the orchestra. The cast consists of: Cindy Sherwood, Marjorie Goode; Joe Sherwood, Charles Ellege; Lulu Sherwood, Muriel Wolf; Bob Buckner, James Queen; Lin, Guilbert Stamper; Al, Lamar Stringfield; Bill, Carl Dennis; and Jack, Wilbur Dorsett.

We Congratulate And Warn

To those candidates who will be unopposed in the general campus elections Tuesday and automatically become elected with the closing of the polls that day we wish to offer our congratulations either for your ability or for your political genius.

When there are two well organized political groups contesting in a campaign it is unlikely that any one group will possess enough political ability to cause the election of half a dozen of its candidates without opposition. So we are inclined to congratulate you for your ability. Deserve it or not you have been marked as men who have so distinguished yourselves that there was no question of your fitness for the positions to which you will be elected.

And by the same token we wish to warn you. Election without opposition places upon you a far greater responsibility than election over strong opponents. You stood above the others in your fields. You were selected by the entire student body. They have confidence in you. You in turn must realize that the responsibility for the success or failure of your effort rests solely upon you. Your hands are untied and you have no obligations which might restrict your choice of co-workers. It's up to you to produce the goods. If you fail then only you are to blame. We congratulate and warn you.

Mr. Warburg, New York banker, says business revival needs the help of psychologists and not economists. Perhaps a few buyologists would help.—Brunswick Pilot.

The Drama Festival

Last evening marked the close of the eighth annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association. For the past several years Chapel Hill has been the center of the activities of the Carolina Dramatic Association insofar as contests and meetings are concerned, and the community as a whole has taken a genuine interest in the proceedings of the annual festival.

Due to the efforts of such men as Professors Frederick H. Koch of the University, and W. R. Wunsch of the Asheville high school, the association has had a rapid growth and has extended its activities into many sections of the state. Its program is gradually enlarging, and fresh enthusiasm in dramatic appreciation is continually manifesting itself as a direct result, in many cases, of the influence of the association.

There is no program which serves better to further general interest in the drama than that which is designed to effect high school students. Such a program the Carolina Dramatic Association sponsors. The students in the past festival were the actors in their productions, many of which were written by students in the high schools of North Carolina.

The annual festivals are a distinctive feature of the school year, and we hope the Carolina Dramatic Association will continue to hold its spring meeting here.—B. M.

Bury The Dead

Southern California is not the only university suffering with an overabundance of class officers, if the Stanford Daily is to be believed. The Stanford publication comments editorially as follows:

Last week the Daily condemned the action of the executive committee in defeating a motion to abolish class vice-presidencies and to consolidate the respective class secretarial and treasury offices.

Tonight the committee will again have an opportunity to pass some intelligent legislation on this subject.

Stanford class officers are largely dead figureheads, useless symbols of a government that does not exist. Once every year, each class elects four officers; before the year is over, elections are held for the useless successors of three of these officers. Class treasurers are not distracted from their nonexistent work by mid-semester polls.

Class offices are sought not as opportunities for service in the student interest, but simply for the honor the titles may convey. A single class officer could perform the duties of the four present officers in each class, without any undue strain. Perhaps the Quad might not seem the same, without its groups of officers named and pictured; perhaps fraternity and sorority groups might feel the loss of "prestige" without class vice-presidents and secretaries on their rolls; but a considerable amount of inefficiency and dead wood could be eliminated by intelligent action of the executive committee.

Tonight the executive committee will meet, with the opportunity to take that intelligent action, to legislate these dead figureheads out of existence. The Daily will report tomorrow on the committee's action.

The situation is identical here. The candidates get a little excited at election time, and then proceed to sit under a Bo tree. If anything is accomplished, it is through the effort of the class president alone. Class executive committees never meet. Class vice-presidents and secretaries serve only as something to tell rushees about, or to add padding to one's election advertisement for a higher student body office. Some day, perhaps, Southern California will awaken and eliminate its figureheads.—Daily Trojan.

Chastity And Pajamas

When a group of women wear pajamas down to a restaurant and order a bite to eat the incident ocasions comment from the lordly males, and the more retiring members of the masculine species pine away in seclusion, lamenting the passing of coyness and maidenly decorum. Such thinking is a traversity of common sense.

Every person who has slept on a sleeping porch knows that pajamas must be of good heavy weight to stand the rigors of the cold wintry nights and the incessant blasts which sweep over the Hill.

Why then should a group of sisters be censured if they walk down to Roby's on some balmy evening wearing their pajamas? When they are wearing the pajamas they are wearing plenty of clothes. Even the volumnuous petticoats of other generations were not so all-enveloping. The impression that a woman has no legs is not left by pajamas, of course, but who wants to think of women as bureaus or boxes, or something like that?

It's all in the state of the mind; shuffle the deck and deal, old fellow.—The Daily Kansan.

GRAHAM AWARDS PRIZES AT STATE DRAMA FESTIVAL

Jacque Gwyn, and Gilbert Tillett.

Asheville, under the direction of W. R. Wunch, won the contest in city high school play production, with The High Heart, using a cast composed of John O'Brien, Bob Estes, Moselle Burke, Kneale Morgan, Hazel Bowen, Pearson Brown, Ed Wilde, Charles Rawls, and Harold Bennett.

The best individual-members original play was Rhinestones and Rouge, by Kneale Morgan, presented by the Asheville senior high school under the direction of Wilbur K. Morgan and W. R. Wunsch. The players were Kneale Morgan, Bob Estes, Sadie Markovitz, Frances Thomas, and Harold Bennett.

Kneale Morgan, of Asheville, won the make-up award, and Barbara Setzer, of Lenoir-Rhyne, received honorable mention.

Barrett H. Clark, New York dramatic critic, talking at the closing business session on "Broadway Tomorrow," spoke of the waste and inflated values that must be eliminated as the theatre makes artistic progress. He said that, in the future, such plays as On the Spot, and Grand Hotel will be relegated to the talkies, leaving the stage freer and more experimental. He explained Playwright Elmer Rice's scheme to open one of his new productions in more than a hundred little theatres throughout the country on the same night that it first sees the light of Broadway.

In the morning business session of the association, it was decided that, since the past success of tragedies has caused them to overbalance present tournament programs, certain groups will be limited to certain types of plays in the future.

Samuel Selden, technical director of the Carolina Playmakers, told the directors how to equip their little theatres for the least cost.

Talks on dramatics from the students viewpoint were given by Ennis Atkins, of Duke; Miss Ruth Abbott, of N. C. C. W., and Tom Loy of the University.

For the first time in history, an all-negro cast gave a play in the stage tournament. It was Riding the Goat, a comedy of lodge life, presented by St. Augustine's College, Raleigh, under the direction of Julia Brown Delaney. The cast included William Perry, Beonia Keck, Muriel Rawlins, and Cecil Coble. This play was staged at the suggestion of the state department of education.

Carolina Trackmen Win First Meet 88-38

FRESHMEN EASILY BEAT CHARLOTTE WITH 99 POINTS

Tar Babies Take Eleven First Places While Varsity Wins Nine.

A small crowd sat through a drizzling rain yesterday afternoon to watch the 1931 Tar Heel track team open its outdoor season with a 88-38 victory over Presbyterian College. The freshmen won a triangle meet from Charlotte and Raleigh High schools, scoring 99 points to 13 for Charlotte and five for Raleigh. Raleigh entered only one man, Hudson, who took first place in the one mile run.

Carolina piled up nine first places, eleven seconds, and ten thirds, scored in all events and took all three places in the 100 yard dash, two mile run, and discus throw. Presbyterian did its biggest scoring in the 880 yard run when Osman and Kitchum took first and second places respectively. Osman with firsts in the 880 and 440 led the scoring for the South Carolinians, while Theron Brown, veteran Carolina weight heaver, was high scorer for the meet with two firsts, a second, and a third for fourteen points. Brown took first place in the discus with a heave of 128 feet nine inches, placed third in the broad jump, second in the shot, and tossed the javelin 154 feet one inch to capture first place in that event.

Brodie Arnold and Ray Ruble both cleared twelve feet in the pole vault and let it go at that. Arnold also took second place in the broad jump to give him a total of seven points for the afternoon. Slusser, with first place in the low hurdles and third in the 100 yard dash, and Marland, with first in the 100 and third in the 220 were other leading scorers for the Tar Heels. Chapin of Presbyterian College placed first in the high hurdles and second in the low hurdles to follow Osman in the scoring for the day.

In an exhibition two mile run between two former Carolina distance stars, Johnny Henderson stepped the distance in nine minutes and fifty-four seconds to lead Galen Elliott to the tape by a large margin.

The crowd got its biggest thrill in the 440 yard run when Osman of Presbyterian College came from behind in the last fifty yards to pass Weil and Smith of Carolina and win in 50.6 seconds. Osman also came from behind in the 880 to take first place with Kitchum of Presbyterian College second.

The freshmen in swamping the Charlotte High School team won every first place but one, taking second and third in the mile. In addition to the twelve first places, the Tar Babies turned in ten seconds, and nine thirds, while the best Charlotte could do was three seconds and five third places.

Horney led the Tar Baby scoring with first places in the shot put and javelin throw, and second place in the discus for thirteen points. Ashkenas, with firsts in the 100 and 440, and Goodwin with firsts in the hurdle events, scored ten points, while Higby came next with a first, second, and third for nine markers. Harold Sutton was high scorer for Charlotte with five points garnered by a second in the javelin throw and third places in the discus and shot.

Due to a heavy track caused by a steady drizzle, the times for the various running events were not particularly good.

HEEL PRINTS

By A. H. Ramsay

LEGISLATURE MAY TAX ATHLETICS

Sports columns very seldom get a chance to dabble into politics, and especially into state politics. But the North Carolina legislature during the wee hours of Saturday morning passed, on the second reading of the revenue bill, a clause to tax all athletic contests in North Carolina at the rate of ten percent.

They see the large crowds attending the football games and say that that is an excellent source of revenue. Thus a war time rate of ten percent. But they do not consider the fact that the other college sports are pauper sports, and that the great game of football practically supports the whole program.

We are in no way connected with professional baseball, but it must be admitted that a ten percent tax would hasten the already approaching death knell of the minor leagues.

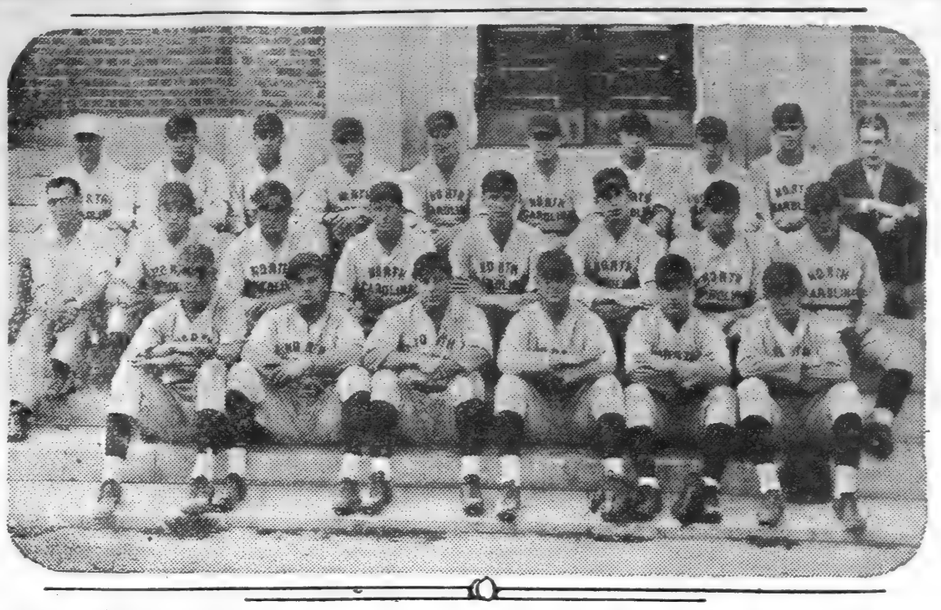
It is perfectly fair for the legislature to tax athletic events as one of the good sources of revenue. The failure of the legislature, it seems to us, is that it places an unusually high rate on one source, and allows other sources to go untaxed.

A five percent tax on athletics would be a fair levy. The legislature is failing to evenly distribute taxation when they raise many taxes such as the gasoline tax, inaugurate sales and athletic taxes, and fail to distribute the burden evenly by collecting the constitutional maximum of six percent on the higher levels of incomes. This is only one example of the sources of taxation that is being taxed on a too low rate.

Please, Mr. Legislator, don't make it impossible for us to have our athletic programs. I believe that we are willing to pay a reasonable amount, say five percent, but don't make us bear more than a just share of the burden.

"THE NATIONAL PASTIME"

Well! we will get a chance Monday afternoon to see what Coach Jim Ashmore has been able to do with a bunch of rookies, when they open the baseball season with Cornell University.



The loss of Captain Burgess Whitehead is a cruel blow to the outfit. For the team had been working several weeks to get a smooth working infield built around him. They are working hard to fill this gap, and they may be able to do so, but it will be an uphill fight for several weeks until the "greenies" get used to it all.

WILL WE HAVE ANOTHER WINNING TRACK TEAM?

The Tar Heel track team is starting out on another stiff schedule, trying to live up to the remarkable record that the "Dean of Southern Track" and his men have built up during the past ten years. They are weak on the hurdles and in some of the field events, but if Charlie Farmer's leg comes around, and several of the rookies prove their worth, they should be able to live up to their reputation.

It is said that many modern novelists write entirely for their own pleasure. We gladly accept the explanation.—Punch.

CAROLINA'S 1930 BASEBALL SQUAD

There will not be many men from last year's team, shown above, who will play in the opening game with Cornell tomorrow. Loss of such stars as Maus, Lufty, Whitehead, Jackson, and Rand has crippled Carolina's chances for supremacy.

SPRING PRACTICE FOR BOXING TEAM BEGINS MONDAY

Leatherpushers Scheduled To Meet Navy, Intercollegiate Champions.

The Tar Heel boxing squad, minus four of this year's regular battlers, will start spring practice in the Tin Can Monday afternoon at four o'clock. Only two veterans, Platt Landis, lightheavyweight, and Marty Levinson, featherweight, will be elegible to fight next year, and around these two men Coach Rowe plans to build his 1932 team. The remaining members of next year's varsity team will have to be picked from the rising members of this winter's freshman squad, varsity reserves, and whatever newcomers develop by next winter.

This is the first year that any intensive spring practice has been held at Carolina, and the coaches are inaugurating it this year in order to get an early start for next season. The Tar Heels' 1932 schedule calls for a match with Navy, winners of the Intercollegiate tournament a few days ago, while the other teams to be met will be approximately the same as faced by this year's team. With such a heavy schedule and a scarcity of experienced material, the Tar Heels will have a great deal of work to do if they hope to uphold their past record.

In addition to the regular boxing practice, there will be another Intramural boxing tournament this spring which will count in the final intramural scoring. Team and individual points will be awarded as before and the individual winners will receive medals again. Since no man who has competed in either varsity or freshman bouts is eligible for intramural boxing, all but one of the class winners crowned last December will be ruled out of the competition, Bob Gold, winner in the lightweight division, is the only man who may defend his title.

Intramural boxing practice will start work with the varsity candidates, and the two squads will receive the same coaching. Coach Rowe stated yesterday that special classes would be conducted for the benefit of all new men with instructions given by himself and Coach Allen.

Eugene O'Neill's new play will take three nights to run. At least it'll have a run of three nights.—B'nai B'rith Messenger.

Frosh Golfers Tie Varsity 9-9

Carolina's varsity and freshman golfers tied at 9-9 for their annual meeting at Hope Valley yesterday. Ben Goodes, letterman, and Joe Adams, sophomore, led the varsity, the latter's 78 being low score. Archer Glenn and Gwynn Harper led the frosh in points although Pete Tyree's 80 was low. The varsity played without Captain Meade Willis, who is sick, but the frosh were without Alan Smith, former state champ, who is playing in the North-South tournament at Pinehurst.

State Federation University Women Meets In Durham

The annual meeting of the North Carolina Division of the International Federation of University Women will convene in Durham April 24 and 25. Dr. Kathryn McHale, executive and educational secretary of the American Association of the Federation of University Women, and Professor Winifred Cullis, president of the same body, will be guest speakers at this meeting, it has been announced by Miss Katharine Jocher, publicity chairman of the North Carolina Division.

Dr. McHale will be the speaker at the banquet on Friday night which marks the formal opening of the conference, and at which time the guests and delegates will be entertained by Duke University, on the women's campus where all the meetings are to be held. Professor Cullis is to talk at the luncheon Saturday.

One of the new and special features of this meeting will be the conference on collegiate and vocational education of girls in secondary schools, led by Dr. McHale. The subject will be presented from the angle of the college girl and also of the high school student's point of view.

TAR HEELS WILL OPEN BASEBALL SEASON MONDAY

Ashmore Will Be Forced To Use Many Reserves and Sophomores in First Game.

The Carolina baseball squad yesterday afternoon took its last pre-season practice and stacked its bats with prayerful hopes.

This was the last drill the Tar Heels will get before Carolina and Cornell get together here tomorrow and Tuesday afternoons to pry the lid off their respective seasons. The games will be called at 4 o'clock.

The Tar Heels will meet Pennsylvania Wednesday and Thursday, Washington and Lee Friday, and Maryland and Penn State Saturday, all at home.

Coach Ashmore's continued jugglings have put the Tar Heels in much better shape, but their strength is at best questionable in several departments, and what the year will bring remains a matter of conjecture.

Longest's pitching has been best in practice games, but either he or Paul Edwards, a likely veteran, may start Monday.

Potter and Pattisol, the former a veteran and the latter a soph, make the Tar Heels strong behind the bat, but aside from Potter, outfielder Blythe, and one or two more, the boys' hitting has been weak.

Boxing Practice

All men interested in going out for varsity or intramural boxing will report at the Tin Can at four o'clock Monday afternoon.

Sacred Cantata

"The Crucifixion," sacred cantata will be presented at eleven o'clock this morning by the Presbyterian Church choir, taking the place of the regular Sunday morning service. The soloists will be J. C. Connolly, tenor; Professor G. A. Harrer, bass; Mrs. A. S. Wheeler, organist; and the chorus will be under the direction of George H. Lawrence.

Graduate Notice

All graduate students who expect to receive degrees in August should submit applications by Monday, March 30. The proper forms on which to make application may be secured from the graduate office in 202 South building.

CHI OMEGA PRESENTS FIRST DANCE OF QUARTER

The first dance of the quarter was given Friday night from nine until one o'clock, at the Carolina Inn, by the Chi Omega sorority, with Jack Wardlaw and his Carolina Tar Heels furnishing the music. The decorations in the ball room of the Inn were carried out in a red and yellow design.

There was one no-break during the evening, this being for the sorority giving the dance.

What's worse, since Captain Whitehead was ruled ineligible, the Tar Heels will have an entirely new infield, probably Dunlap at first, Wyrick or Moore at second, Ferebee at short, Peacock at third.

Scratch his head as he may, Coach Ashmore can't pick his outfield yet. Blythe will be in right field on account of his hitting, but from the other candidates it's hard to pick.

Daniel and Croom, sophomores, are par fielders, fair hitters. McKinney, House, Davis and other veterans haven't hit their stride yet, and Ashmore will probably have to put them through the trial and error process.

Cornell, likewise opening its season, will be in the same shape as Carolina but in a different way.

Kappler and Habicht are seasoned and capable men for first and second, Handelman is one of the best shorstops in the east, and Captain Goodman is a star at third, but the outfield is new. Bob Stevens heads the pitchers, and Zahn and George make them strong at catcher.

Both teams will open their seasons with a bang. Carolina plays at home every afternoon next week, and indeed, the Tar Heels will play 10 games the next 10 days. Cornell has six spring training games ahead this week, meeting Carolina Monday and Tuesday, Duke Wednesday and Thursday, and Bridgewater Friday and Saturday.

Flood of Letters Swamp Contest Judges

MORE than 1,000,000 letters were received by R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company at Winston-Salem, N. C., in the contest for $50,000 cash prizes in connection with the new cellophane wrapping for Camel cigarette packages. The photograph shows one mountain containing more than 500,000 unopened letters as they were delivered to the judges. Several weeks will be required to read letters and select winners.

However, Osman's performance in winning the 440 yard run proved to be the outstanding occurrence of the day. Osman ranks as one of the leading quarter milers in the South, and is said to have covered the distance in a little over forty-nine seconds. His performance of running the event in 50.6 over a wet track stamps him as an outstanding performer.

Ruble and Arnold, the only Tar Heels competing in the pole vault, had little trouble in taking first and second. Both boys vaulted with their sweat clothes on until they reached the height of eleven feet six inches and cleared the bar at twelve feet in their tries. With both Lynn and Copeland of Presbyterian College out of the running, they let it go as a tie and did not fight it out for first and second places.

Summary of the Carolina-Presbyterian College meet follows:

100 yard dash: First, Marland, NC; second, Smith, NC; third, Slusser, NC. Time 10.2 seconds.

220 yard dash: First, Ritchie, PC; second, Drane, NC; third, Marland, NC. Time 22.6 seconds.

440 yard dash: First, Osman, PC; second, Weil, NC; third, Smith, NC. Time 50.6 seconds.

880 yard run: First, Osman, PC; second, Kitchum, PC; third, Watkins, NC. Time 2:00.6.

One mile run: First, Jones, NC; second, Gillespie, PC; third, Donnell, NC. Time 4:47.4.

Two mile run: First, Baucom, NC; second, Hubbard, NC; third, Cordle, NC. Time 10:08.2.

220 yard low hurdles: First, Slusser, NC; second, Chapin, PC; third, Davis, NC. Time 26.2 seconds.

120 high hurdles: First, Chapin, PC; second, Davis, NC; third, Waugh, NC. Time 16.4 seconds.

Broad jump: First, Green, PC; second, Arnold, NC; third, Brown, NC. Distance 21 feet 1-4 inches.

High jump: First, Bagby and Hamlet, NC, tied; third, Wyatt and Gosnell, PC tied. Height 5 feet 7 inches.

RUSSIAN QUARTET TO APPEAR HERE IN FOLK CONCERT

Kedroff Singers Utilize Slavic Melodies in Their Sensational Work.

The Kedroff Quartet will be presented tonight by the Student Entertainment committee in Memorial hall at eight-thirty. This organization, which has been recognized here in America and on the European continent as the highest exponent of the Russian folk and church music, have been looked forward to for a long time by many of the members of the University community.

The program will be divided into four parts: songs written by Russian composers, Russian folk songs, art songs, and songs by non-Russian composers.

Of great fame in their native country, having toured Europe many times prior to the World War, and with a brilliant record of a quarter of a century's work as the best of the Continent's singing groups, the quartet comes here. They have appeared before most of the crowned heads of the European countries and also before the president of France.

In three seasons before the American public, filling over 190 concert engagements, the quartet has won a triumph which rivals their conquest of the music world of Europe. Their fourth American season will extend from October 20th, 1930 to March 25th, 1931.

Few nations can claim such wealth in folk music as Russia, and it was the beauty of this music and the idea of popularizing these melodies which led to the organization of the Kedroff Quartet. Professor N. N. Kedroff has spent years in research work and in collecting and harmonizing these treasures of the slavic race, keeping intact their original style and beauty. The great majority of the Russian songs in the extensive repertoire of the quartet are harmonized by this great musician and authority on Russian folk music.

All of the more prominent writers and critics of America have joined in praising the finished product of the singing art which these men have succeeded in acquiring after many years of study and practice together.

Spanish Club

The first meeting of the University Spanish Club for the spring quarter took place Friday evening in the Y. M. C. A. building. The chief speaker on the evening's program was A. K. Shields of the Romance language department. Besides delivering an interesting talk Mr. Shields sang several Spanish selections.

D. M. Lacy presented "Una Lectura" and T. Ben Campen gave "Hell's Angels". A "Contesta de Palabras" was participated in by the club as a whole.

This club was organized about one month ago for the purpose of furthering the activities of the Spanish students of the university. Much interest has been evinced in its programs. Membership in the society is by invitation alone.

To Present 'Hamlet'

SIR PHILLIP BEN GREET

Sir Philip Ben Greet, who will appear in the new Memorial hall April 16th under the auspices of the Carolina Playmakers.

'HAMLET' WILL BE PRESENTED HERE BY GREET GROUP

Knighted English Actor and Producer Will Lead His Shakespearean Company Here.

An unusual treat for devotees of Shakespearean drama will be offered Tuesday, April 14 in the presentation by the Carolina Playmakers of the Ben Greet players rendering Hamlet. Tickets for the performance will be on sale at the Students' Supply Store and at the Book Exchange. This performance will be the first regular dramatic presentation to take place in the new Memorial Hall.

The Ben Greet players are now on their return transcontinental tour, the first tour of this kind having been made in the 1929-30 season. On the former tour the itinerary included such cities as Brooklyn, Boston, Richmond, Los Angeles, Omaha, Des Moines, St. Louis, San Francisco, Portland, and Seattle and universities such as Brown, Columbia, Pennsylvania, Michi-

PLAYMAKER HEAD TO EDIT FOURTH FOLK PLAY BOOK

Professor Koch Will Bring Out Another Volume of Folk Play Series.

Professor Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, has returned from New York, where he spent the spring holidays, with the announcement that Samuel French, Inc., will bring out the fourth of a series of Carolina folk plays, with Professor Koch as editor, in a volume to be published soon.

The other three volumes were brought out by Henry Holt and Company. Around 9,000 copies were sold and the plays were produced all over the country.

Professor Koch said today the new volume would contain the following plays: "Cloey," by Loretta Carroll Bailey; "Magnolia's Man," by Gertrude Wilson Coffin; "Companion Maggie," by Helen Dortch; "The Lie," by Wilkinson O'Connor; "Ever 'Snitch," by Irene Fussler, and "The Third Night," a play that Thomas Wolfe, formerly of Asheville, wrote during his student days at the University.

Samuel French also asked Professor Koch to edit a volume of American folk plays, in which will be included plays written by Professor Koch's students at the University of California and Columbia University during summer sessions.

While in New York Professor Koch lectured at Columbia University and visited with a number of playwrights. He brought back news that Thomas Wolfe, University alumnus, whose first novel, "Look Homeward Angel," achieved a great success, is now finishing his second, "October Fair," the scene of which is laid in North Carolina. It is to be published by Scribner's, probably next fall. Professor Koch had a long talk with Wolfe.

Bell Tower Scaffold Provides Sport for Frolicsome Freshmen

By Otto S. Steinreich

Carolina's latest favorite outdoor sport is scaffold climbing. Little did the donors of the Patterson-Morehead bell tower imagine that their gift would prove a delight to the student body not only when completed and when the beautiful chimes would send their music over the campus, but also while the wooden scaffolding was being raised.

Two freshmen, having nothing better to do Sunday afternoon, suddenly aspired to become steeplejacks and as the highest elevation in the surrounding country was the scaffolding for the Patterson-Morehead bell tower they gaily proceeded to scamper up the structure. After skipping up about thirty-five feet the freshmen began to have their doubts as to the wisdom of their plan, but nevertheless they continued merrily on—freshmen will rush on where angels fear to tread—finally after much climbing and many rests the two perspiring steeplejacks reached the height of their endeavor only to be faced with the problem of descending.

After duly pondering the matter, during which time they gravely considered sliding down the cables supporting the frame, the by now thoroughly frightened freshmen carefully and slowly made their way back to terra firma. According to their reports there was no sway at the top but it was "damn cold and the wind blew like hell."

Inspired by their stories a certain freshman discus thrower who hails from New Jersey resolved to work off his supper by duplicating the feat and accordingly after he had been invigorated with scrambled eggs and sweet cherries—oh yes sweet cherries manufacture lots of energy—he scaled the height where he could breathe good fresh air worthy of his manly chest. His companion who was to accompany him, a tremendously tall freshman in the engineering school, after ascending about twenty-five feet suddenly decided that it wouldn't be safe for him to go all the way to the top because, "My head might bunk into some of the stars."

Polls In Y. M. C. A. Lobby Will Be Open From 9 a. m. Until 5 p. m. As Fifty Candidates Seek Campus Honors Month's Campaign for Thirty-Three Offices Close With Elections Today.

EIGHT ALREADY ELECTED

Candidates for Presidency of Student Union Outline Platforms in Chapel.

Coming as the climax to one of the most extensive campaigns that the campus has ever seen, the annual spring elections will take place today between the hours of nine in the morning and five in the afternoon. At this time, twenty-five candidates for major campus officers will be elected by the student union, eight having already been elected by virtue of the fact that their nominations were unopposed Friday.

The election will be presided over by Red Greene, president of the student union while the only poll will be maintained at the Y. M. C. A. The election will be conducted under the Australian system, under which, the names will be rotated on ballots.

According to campus political observers, the present balloting is considered the climax of one of the hottest and most extensive campaigns ever carried on at the University in recent years, even hotter than the campaign of last year.

This year there are two political parties represented on the ballots and one independent candidate. Both parties have been distributing handbills and other literature for over a month and have been holding organization meetings for a longer period.

The two candidates for the presidency of the student union, Mayne Albright and Bill Speight gave short addresses in Gerrard hall during chapel period yesterday. Each of these, as candidate for the most important office on the campus, outlined his platform, as well as his party platform.

A new office, created by the assembly nominating candidates Friday morning, the vice-presidency of the student union, is sought by Slim Medford and Clyde Shreve.

Candidates For Presidency Of Student Body Issue Statements

By Bill Speight

To the Students of the University of North Carolina:

If elected to the presidency of this student body, I intend to donate my energy and time to nurturing those interests which I sincerely believe will be conducive to a greater student government and a united and progressive university.

Definitely, I add:

1. Sponsoring the organization of a non-fraternity council; working hand in hand with the dormitory council to handle problems peculiar to non-fraternity men only.

2. Sponsoring Open Forum discussions relevant to student government in order to ascertain the needs of the student body.

3. Handling all judicial matters impartially, regardless of the affiliations of the participants.

(Signed)
BILL SPEIGHT.

By Mayne Albright

To the members of the Student Body:

As a candidate for the presidency of the student body, I am fully aware not only of the honor but also of the responsibilities and duties of that position. If elected I will strive to give Student Government a more definite place in campus life, to make its principles better known, and its policies more clearly understood; and to make its affairs more the property of the student body, instead of restricting them to the narrow limits of the student council.

I am proud to be the candidate of a party which represents the interests of every student in the University and which aims at keeping the campus unified in spirit so that its affairs may be shared by all alike.

I will make no pre-election promises that are insincere or impractical. I pledge myself to devote my time and my best efforts toward the work of the student government, to the execution of the will of the student body, and to the following platform:

I. The promotion of the ideals of the All-Campus Party:

(1) A unified campus with no discrimination and no factional interests.

(2) The recognition of character and accomplishment as the sole criteria of campus distinction.

II. The placing of Student Government upon a firm and visible basis:

(1) Making accessible the agencies of Student Government by having a designated Council Room, regular office hours, and a definite schedule.

(2) Making known the policies and all the actions of the Council through the columns of the Daily Tar Heel.

(3) Continuing the existence and increasing the usefulness of the Central Administrative Council as an advisory body, and as a means of official contact with various student activities.

(4) Making clear the line of demarcation between the Honor System and the Campus Code.

(5) Introducing new students as thoroughly as possible to the principles of our Student Government, and seeking the cooperation of the entire student body in enforcing good campus citizenship.

III. The inauguration of Quarterly Meetings of the Student Activities Committee in order to provide a better coordination between extra-curriculum activities.

IV. The active participation of the University in the work of the State and the National Student Federations.

If elected I will, to the best of my ability, carry out this platform, and devote my time and efforts toward a democratic and progressive administration.

(Signed)
MAYNE ALBRIGHT.

LOAN FUNDS GIVE OUT FOR QUARTER

All Amounts Available for Term Are Borrowed by Needy Students.

In a statement yesterday Dean F. F. Bradshaw said that the student loan fund committee has loaned or promised to loan all the money that will be available for the spring quarter. Some men who are granted loans do not use them, and Mr. Bradshaw has requested that these men see him during this week and let him know definitely whether or not these grants will be used. All students who intend to apply for loans are requested to do so this week.

In order to meet the situation this spring, the committee desires that all students who find it necessary to borrow, obtain part or all of their loan from outside forces, and thus reduce the amount to be borrowed from the University to the lowest possible point.

Dean Bradshaw further stated that this was the second time in the last ten years that "the bottom had been scraped," with the result of no more available funds. He gave as reasons for this the increased enrollment, the general depression which has caused a decrease in repayments as well as an increase in demands, and many bank failures throughout the state. In speaking of the last cause, he gave an example of one student who had $3,000 for his education, saved in a bank which failed.

In order to alleviate this situation, the Alumni Loyalty Fund has contributed more than $12,000 through student loans. This year, the student loan fund has loaned approximately $57,000.

Dean Bradshaw stated that the situation would be more serious next year unless additional funds are secured.

Play-Writing Class Will Hear MacKaye

Percy MacKaye, noted poet-dramatist, is scheduled to address Professor Koch's nine-thirty play-writing class this morning. "All persons not taking the course who would be interested in hearing the speaker are invited to attend," stated Professor Koch yesterday.

Mr. MacKaye, a graduate of Harvard University, is the son of the famous Steele MacKaye, author of the first play ever to be published in the United States.

Some of the dramas which the younger MacKaye has written include: Jeanne d'Arc, The Scarecrow, Anti-Matrimony, Sinbad the Sailor, A Thousand Years Ago, The Roll Call.

Unusual Conditions

Today's election will be an unusual one for the present crop of Carolina students, for conditions have arisen which are likely to make it the most bitter fight of the past four years. Even last year's affair, which at times seemed to reach the white heat stage may be surpassed.

But even with such an election pending we contend that it may be run off smoothly and without a disturbing element if all factions will agree on one thing: no issues should be raised which will cause scars of a permanent nature. If they do not, it will develop that no matter who is elected today he will be able to work successfully with a divided student body.

We ask for an election as hard as you may make it, but an election which will not divide the campus into factions. We ask for an election which will reflect our true attitude towards the University and not an attitude of individual interest at all costs. Mud-slinging will go on undoubtedly. Personalities will be involved and charges and counter charges will be made, but these need not eliminate that friendliness which made it possible for the opposing candidates in years past to talk together while their workers worked the polls.

This editorial is the usual election day statement of the editor. It is this way because all editors realize toward the end of their terms that their positions are greater than any individual.

Towards Better Politics

A few years ago Indiana went on a Governor-imprisoning spree after a rather sensational expose of the state of affairs in the executive department of that state's government. Chicago has been trying to go on the same kind of a clean up spree ever since the murder of a Tribune reporter. What has come of it all? We see in the headlines every day or two of an alien gunman or two being apprehended in some fashion or another, but the whole thing is rotten—far too rotten to start the cleaning up of a government with the actual perpetrators of auxiliary crimes. The "big boys" at the head of the various governments like that of Chicago's are so involved in politics, and from here in crime and graft, that it is next to useless to try a clean-up at present.

If a man plays the gentleman in politics today or follows the dictates of his own conscience, he usually pays with his political life. No freedom is allowed; you must follow the dictates of a boss; if a man is outstandingly able in his field, good!—but will he do as we say? If he won't—drop him! Ethics of any description in politics—as they are practiced in America—are rare indeed.

Politicians are now getting their training from old-line methods which have been in use for the past one hundred and fifty years—with modifications for the worse rather than for the better. We think that professionalization of politics would do a great deal to remedy the situation and effect some badly-needed changes in our present system. When business was professionalized the ethics of the commercial men rose to a very much higher plane. Why not in politics? Professional training schools for would-be politicians might bring about a change for the better. Surely they could do no harm.—O.W.D.

OPEN FORUM

Editor the Daily Tar Heel:

On March 27 a letter appeared in the Daily Tar Heel stating that D. T. Perry was not connected with the non-fraternity party in any way "whatsoever."

Mr. Perry acknowledges the fact that he was not a nominee on either frame-up, but he declares that his letter was not printed word for word as it was written. He states that he simply wanted the public to know that he was not "officially" connected with the non-fraternity group.

The letter apparently was revised so as to cast reflection on the non-fraternity organization. Mr. Perry states that this was not his motive.

We think that it is only fair that the public know the truth about this.

WADE O. JONES.

With Contemporaries

Not Of Major Importance

In several colleges there has lately been a discussion on the feasibility of abolishing the distinction between major and minor sports and of awarding the letter to all men who have played on a university team. The accompanying press clipping from the Yale News is indicative of the abolitionist attitude while an interview with William J. Bingham, Director of Athletics, running elsewhere in the paper presents the argument for the retention of the present system.

The only distinction between a major and minor sport is the difference in the size of the letter awarded. Since the wearing of letter sweaters at Harvard is practically taboo the matter is of relatively small importance here. The athlete who has won his insignia rarely ever wears it except in practice sessions and during the summer months. There is also a certain tradition built around the athletic curriculum which designates the various sports.

As Mr. Bingham explains, to break this tradition would undoubtedly cause alumni and a percentage of the undergraduates to protest. Harvard has never feared a protest. Neither should sentimentality for customs ever be allowed to influence their retention if conditions warrant their being broken. But in this case there seems to be no immediate reasons for breaking with the past—especially at Harvard. The cries from many of the other colleges seem mainly to have been issued by youthful iconoclasts ever on the lookout for a change.

Of the five major sports at Harvard only one—baseball—is possibly over-rated in that position. The waning interest in the collegiate diamond game in the last decade has been marked. There would, perhaps, be some justification if it would be relegated to the minor class. The Athletic Council removed distinction between the minor sports two years ago and some of them might be in their right in clamoring for a raise in prestige now. But since the difference between the two categories is one to which so slight attention is paid at Harvard there seems to be no need for agitation in one way or another.—Harvard Crimson.

Equal Weight

Recent news from Ohio State University indicates that the traditional tables are being turned there with the inauguration this term of a plan to permit undergraduates to pass judgment upon the merits or deficiencies of members of the faculty. At the suggestion of the university's Student Senate, the administration has sent out questionnaires in order to ascertain the seniors' opinions of their individual professors and instructors from the standpoint of their attitudes toward students, their success in stimulating scholarship, and their general teaching ability.

The experiment is encouraging not so much because it seems to indicate a trend toward giving ability at instruction per se just recognition in the selection and promotion of faculty members. The tendency to give mere aptitude for research work undue weight in evaluating faculty merits is far too evident. For that reason, even the slightest move toward emphasizing teaching ability in considering the deserts of professors and instructors is most welcome.

It must be recognized that the plan on trial at Ohio State has obvious imperfections. The deficient sense of values on the part of many students together with the undeniable prejudices of others will reduce materially the accuracy of the results. However, the fairness of the principle of stressing teaching ability in the choice of faculty members—in institutions which, after all, are primarily educational—cannot be denied. Consequently, it seems only just that a man's proficiency in class-room instruction, as judged by as accurate methods as possible, should be given at least equal weight with the now-overemphasized factors of research and authorship.—The Daily Princetonian.

That twenty-million-dollar relief fund is to be loaned out upon agricultural property. Our rulers in their infinite wisdom have decided that what the distressed farmer needs is another mortgage.—The New Yorker.

'HAMLET' WILL BE PRESENTED HERE BY GREET GROUP

gan, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Missouri. The troupe was received with warm receptions by the audiences in these different localities.

The main reason for the appearance and success of these players is said to be the striking personality of Sir Philip Ben Greet, the leader of this cast. Sir Philip has been on the stage for fifty years and has taught more actors than any other living man. He is acclaimed one of the greatest living authorities on the English drama and is recognized universally as one of the greatest of the Shakespearean producers and actors. In recognition of his life devoted to the cause of drama in education he was knighted by King George of England in June, 1929.

On his first visit to the United States Sir Philip spent a season in the Garden Theater, New York City, giving in the period nearly two hundred performances. When he presented Everyman at this time it was the first time that a play had been offered in this country, by a professional company, in the Elizabethan manner.

On his present tour Sir Philip and his company are to give performances of Hamlet, Macbeth, As You Like It, Twelfth Night, and the morality play Everyman. This is the first time any Shakespearean company has offered two versions of Hamlet in the same repertoire to American audiences.

Sir Philip Ben Greet and his companies have toured this country during the space of many years. He has been on the stage for fifty years and has led his own organization for nearly as long. It is his striking and compelling personality that forms the main source of attraction to his appearances.

The sick list has again reached the total of nineteen. Those who are on the list are: Sybille Berwanger, W. D. Croom, C. S. Dickie, B. C. Philpott, B. C. Proctor, H. G. Ward, J. R. Riley, John D. Irish Players Are Secured To Appear Here Next Year

The Irish Players, from Dublin, Ireland, have definitely contracted to come to the University next year as one of the numbers on the student entertainment program. This organization is recognized to be the best group of entertainers of this sort who will tour America.

Thus far, this is the only definite engagement which the entertainment program has secured. Others are being considered and will probably be submitted to a student vote this spring.

Tar Heel Nine Defeats Cornell, 11 To 5

Blythe Drives Homer With Sacks Crowded

Fielding Mighty Ragged, But Hitting on Up and Up; Longest Holds Cornell to 5 Hits.

Scoring six runs in the sixth inning, the Tar Heel baseball team successfully opened their season with a 11-5 win over Cornell yesterday at Emerson Field. The frosh bowed to Wardlaw Prep, 5-7.

Cecil Longest hurled for the home team, holding the hard hitting Cornell team to five hits, but the visitors counted heavily on errors in the Carolina infield, no less than seven errors being committed.

The visitors used two hurlers, Lefty Williams and their ace, Bob Stevens. Williams hurled good ball until he was hammered off the mound in the eventful sixth.

Up until the sixth inning the Tar Heels were losing 5-4. House singled. Longest and Ferebee walked. Powell singled to left field scoring House and Longest. Dunlap walked, and then Blythe climaxed the rally with a tremendous drive to left field for a home run, tallying Ferebee, Powell, and Dunlap before him. From then on the game was sewed up for the Tar Heels.

Carolina jumped off to a one run lead in the opening inning when Wyrick beat out an infield hit and scored on Dunlap's line triple to left.

In their half of the second inning, the northerners scored two runs, giving them the lead. Handleman and Hatkoft walked and Kappler beat out a hit to Ferebee. A pretty double play, Longest to Potter to Dunlap removed two of the Ithacans but Ferebee's poor throw to Dunlap on Zahn's grounder enabled Hatkoft and Kappler to score.

Poor fielding gave the visitors runs in the third and fifth innings, but after that they were helpless before Longest's fast ones, getting two hits in the last four innings.

In the fifth inning, Cornell filled the bases by virtue of errors on three consecutive batters. A fielder's choice counted the lone run for that session.

"Smokey" Ferebee set a new record. He committed five errors, probably more than he made in his whole life. When he's right, Smokey is the flashiest fielder on the squad, but opening day must have got him. Watch Ferebee today.

Blythe never hit a more opportune homer. The Tar Heels went into that session one run behind and when the first half of the seventh started, the Tar Heels were five in front. The big boy seems headed for his greatest season.

Pete Wyrick, the team's sparkplug, led the offensive with three singles in five times at bat.

ALEXANDER - GUARD

Tom Alexander of Charlotte was named captain of the 1932 basketball team at a meeting of the squad yesterday morning. Alexander for two years has been a mainstay in the widely-praised defense of the Tar Heel team. Throughout last season his play was deserving of highest praise, both for his ability to cover his man and make long shots with deadly accuracy.

FROSH TRACKMEN TO ENGAGE IMPS

Meet With Duke Youngsters First Intercollegiate Competition of Year.

The Tar Baby track team will journey to Durham this afternoon to meet Duke's Blue Imps in their first intercollegiate competition of the season. The freshmen walked off with a triangle meet here last Saturday afternoon against Charlotte and Raleigh High Schools, scoring ninety-nine points to thirteen for Charlotte and five for Raleigh.

The Carolina entrants for this afternoon's meet will likely be the same as appeared against the high school teams Saturday although there is a possibility that several new men may get a chance to show what they can do under competition. Ashkenas, Weisker, Higby, and Nicholson will probably take care of the 100 and 220 with Ashkenas also in the 440. Higby won the 220 last week while Ashkenas took first in the 100 and 440.

Meade is the outstanding man in the 880 with Farr, Kimrey, and Entwistle also running in the event. The mile will probably see Sullivan and Grover running with Farr or McRae. The mile was the only event in which the Tar Babies did not win first place, Hudson of Raleigh winning the race in 4.46.2.

Carolina has Bunny Goodwin in both hurdle events with Bonner, Glenn, and Allison. The freshmen took all three places in both low and high hurdles Saturday and count these events among their strongest.

Dockery and Phipps, who tied at five feet eight inches to take first place against Charlotte, and Bullock, who took third place, will again be in the high jump, while Gold, Hobson, and Blount are favored to enter the pole vault.

Nicholson, who won the broad jump last Saturday with a leap of 21 feet three and one half inches, will be in this event along with Higby, McBrair, and Weisker, all of whom have been showing exceptionally good form in practice.

With Horney entered in all three weight events along with Mullis, Brandt, Crane, McBrair, and LeGore, the freshmen are well fortified in the shot, discus, and javelin.

HIGH SCHOOLS IN MIDST OF CHAMPIONSHIP FIGHT

The North Carolina high school baseball championship contests are being run off very smoothly, the teams being in the midst of their schedules at present. As the contest is run on a percentage basis, teams stay in the race longer than by a process of elimination, thus retaining the interest of the schools for a longer time.

By defeating Raleigh, the eastern champions, Charlotte won the Class A title last year. Shelby conquered Hamlet, thereby winning the general contest for the second straight year.

NETMEN SCORE OVERWHELMING WINS, 9-0, 6-0

Both Teams Score Complete Shutouts in Match Play and Win All Sets.

Complete shutouts in match play and a clean sweep in set play gave the Carolina varsity and frosh 6-0, and 9-0 victories over Clemson college and the Wake Forest freshmen respectively yesterday on the home courts. The Tar Heel varsity, pointing toward a national championship, had no difficulty in downing the Clemson visitors in straight sets, while the frosh permitted only two sets to go past the six game margin, both in doubles.

Summary of varsity matches: Grant over Lipscomb, 6-1, 6-0; Hines defeated Bennett 6-1, 6-0; Yeomans downed Howard 6-3, 6-0; Hendlin defeated Elliott 6-1, 6-0; Doubles, Yeomans and Wright over Howard and Lipscomb, 6-2, 6-2; Abbells and Graham over Bennett and Elliott, 6-0, 6-1.

Freshmen: Dillard (NC) over Bryan (WF) 6-0, 6-1; Shuford (NC) defeated Robeson (WF) 6-1, 6-0; Morgan (NC) over Buxton (WF) 6-0, 6-1; Dockery (NC) downed Wyche (WF) 6-0, 6-0; Carson (NC) over Hutchins (WF) 6-0, 6-1; Rosentrauch (NC) downed Talley (WF) 6-2, 6-3; Doubles, Harris and Minor (NC) over Bryan and Robeson (WF) 6-3, 6-2; Bennett and Odum (NC) defeated Buxton and Hutchins (WF) 7-5, 6-3; Curry and Fieldman (NC) over Weich and Talley (WF) 6-1, 7-5.

Carolina Fencers Win Southern Foil Tourney

H. H. Hendlin Turns in Perfect Score to Win Southern Championship.

V. M. I. TAKES SECOND

F. Wardlaw, D. Wardlaw Win Third and Fourth Places in Individual Competition.

North Carolina's foil artists capped a victorious season Saturday night in an overwhelming triumph over College of Charleston, V. M. I., and South Carolina in the first Southern fencing tourney. Eight other foes have fallen to the Blue and White foilsmen in rapid succession prior to Saturday's conquests.

Sweeping victories were scored both in the individual class and the team division of the meet. H. H. Hendlin, leader of the Carolina aggregation, scored a total of five wins and no losses in the individual division, while Allen of V. M. I. captured second place with three wins and two losses. D. Wardlaw, Carolina, followed the Keydet fencer with three wins and two losses but he received more touches. Fourth, Fifth, and sixth places went to F. Wardlaw, Carolina, Moody, V. M. I., and Metcalf, V. M. I., respectively.

Three Carolinians and three V. M. I. men qualified for the individual division following a round robin elimination.

Holding a one-point paper advantage over North Carolina, in the team competition, V. M. I.

Pass Books

Student athletic pass books are being issued from the information window of the business offices in South building. Bo Shepard, assistant graduate manager of athletics, states that only a number of books have been issued to date. These books must be secured before students can be admitted to the baseball games and other athletic events of the week.

600 Students Will Come Here for Contests April 16

The population of Chapel Hill will increase considerably the week-end of April 16 and 17, when around six hundred high school debaters and athletes will come here for the high school debate contest, track meet, and tennis tournament, all of which will take place on these two days. An unusual amount of interest is being shown at the various North Carolina high schools in these contests, and indications point to a successful gathering.

An entertainment committee, of which Ed Lanier is chairman, is planning a reception for the participants. All students are townspeople who can provide rooming accommodations for boys from their home town, or from other towns, should leave their names with Mr. Lanier.

SEAL-KAPS....

The Talk of Two Cities

All over Durham and Chapel Hill housekeepers are talking about the new SEAL - KAPS now being put on every bottle of Pasteurized Grade "A" GOLD SEAL Milk. Why? Purely because this entirely new type bottle cap does what ordinary caps can't do — it protects the pouring lip of the bottle against dust and dirt.

SEAL KAPS are the most sanitary caps known to the dairy industry. We have adopted them for GOLD SEAL MILK because we want our customers to have the best. It is our belief that every mother who realizes the importance of protecting the pouring lip of the bottle will immediately become a GOLD SEAL customer.

Kyser To Broadcast Over Station WTAM

Kay Kyser, former University cheerleader, who is now known throughout the broadcasting world as "the man from the South," has begun an engagement with his orchestra at the Golden Pheasant Restaurant in Cleveland, Ohio.

They broadcast over station WTAM, Cleveland, seven times a week, being on the air Monday nights from eleven-thirty-five p. m. to midnight; Tuesday from one-twelve to one-forty-five p. m.; Wednesday, twelve-thirty to one p. m.; Thursday, six-fifteen to six-forty-five p. m.; Friday, eleven-thirty to midnight; Saturday, six-fifteen to six-forty-five p. m.; and on Sunday from twelve-thirty to one a. m.

Kay organized his orchestra at the University of Norh Carolina several years ago, and since then he has achieved great success with his group of musicians, many of whom have remained with Kyser since they left the University.

Student Federation Opens Anti-War Poster Contest

The National Student Federation of America has opened a poster contest, offering a prize of $100. The poster must illustrate the slogan, "There Shall Be No More War," with emphasis on the human point of view. Only students may compete who are enrolled in a university, college, or art school. The posters will be judged on 1. idea and impression created; 2. design—composition, color and lettering. The posters must measure 24 inches long and 26 inches wide, and must be on heavy paper to insure durability. The poster must not have more than three colors.

A group of well-known artists will judge the contest. The posters must be mailed between two pieces of stiff cardboard to the Poster Contest director, N. S. F. A., 218 Madison Ave., New York City. The name and address must be printed on the back of the poster but not on the front. All entries must be received before 5 p. m., May 18, 1931.

Thirteen On Med School Honor Roll Last Quarter

The list of students in the medical school averaging either "A" or "B" for the winter quarter has been released by Dean Isaac H. Manning of that school.

Those averaging "B" in the second year class are as follows: Miss Elizabeth R. Christian, W. C. Fowler, H. C. Harrill, Miss Jean C. McAlister, and R. W. Wilkins.

In the first year class F. C. O'Neil was the only student averaging "A." Those averaging "B" were: F. M. Adams, David L. Avner, S. A. Barrett, W. C. Hunsucker, J. T. Kerr, T. J. Taylor, and John Thornton.

The City Ten Pin League finished its first schedule of the season last week with Motor Bearings team winning the championship and a beautiful loving cup given by the Bowling Center. Members of the team: Riggsbee (captain), V. Suitt, Vanatta, Mitchell, and Meachern. Mr. Byrd, president of the league, will announce the individual honor winners within the next few days.

Industrial Girls of the Y. W. C. A. conducted a special program at the Bowling Center Friday evening under the supervision of Miss Hydrick. The American Tobacco Co., Durham Hosiery Mills and Golden Belt Mfg. Co. provided prizes for high scores which were awarded to the following; Miss Rachel Myers, Miss Evelyn Buchanan, Miss Ethel McGhee, Mr. Markham, and Mr. Thomas. Another feature on this program was a special match between an all-star girls team and boys team from Duke University. The college boys won the match by only a small margin.

In the Carolina League—King Service Station is now only one game below first place by taking two out of three games in their match Friday night with the Duke University Heating Plant. Edgerton, King Service Station, bowled high score and high set in the Carolina League last week and copped the prize.

O. C. Upchurch, with 145, nosed out P. G. Wallace by one pin to win a pair of Carolina Theatre tickets for the highest individual score awarded regularly bi-weekly.

Tomorrow, Monday, March 30, a list of Durham's first ten ranking individual high score bowlers, according to league averages will be given out, it was announced by the Bowling Center.

Tennessee Debate Tonight

The University debate team, represented by Clyde Shreve and Dan Lacy, will debate the University of Tennessee this evening at seven o'clock in Gerrard hall on the subject of "Free Trade."

Screen's New Voice Makes Silence Silent; Films Can Now Whisper As Well As Shout

Ruth Chatterton as the young girl, sits and ponders on life—and in the theater there is gripping silence.
At Top: The quiet charm of country life is reflected in scenes characterized by stillness broken by moments of dialogue.

Silence in talking pictures will now be really silent.

Less than five years ago science gave the screen a voice and the figures of shadowland were enabled to speak. But that voice could never be entirely stilled.

Even in the best systems of recording and reproducing, certain mechanical sounds crept in. These have become familiar to audiences as the faint humming or hissing that became audible the instant the film began or during parts of it when the actors were silent.

Now science has perfected the voice so that the screen cannot only talk but be utterly silent as well. This achievement has for many years been sought after by experts. The invention comes as the result of painstaking research by scientists of Electrical Research Products, Inc., and the Bell Telephone Laboratories. It is known as the "Western Electric New Process Noiseless Recording."

Great Stride for Pictures

The process, it is said by engineers, marks the greatest improvement in motion picture entertainment since the development of talking pictures. It brings a degree of reality to the screen that was not possible before. Audiences will no longer be conscious that the sound is mechanically produced.

The ability to be dramatically silent is only one new talent which the invention gives to the screen. By cutting out all foreign noises, the process opens up a new range of sound which has up to the present been denied to the films. This is the range of softer sounds. With these now at its command, the voice of the screen takes on a new subtlety.

Eliminates Ground Noise

According to sound engineers, the so-called "ground noises" were previously inherent in the mechanism. They set up a level of sound that was constantly present. Consequently, other sounds had to be made louder than this in order to be heard.

With the ground noise eliminated, the faintest sounds can be recorded and brought naturally to the ears of the audience. A whisper, the rustle of a leaf, the call of a distant voice, will be heard as they are in real life.

The first picture to make use of the new process noiseless recording is "The Right to Love," a Paramount production starring Ruth Chatterton. In it the versatility of the new type of talking picure becomes apparent. Dramatic silences are climaxed by a faint sob. The country scenes shown in the picture speak from the film with the varied voices of nature.

Adopted by Hollywood

While Paramount was the first to make a picture with the new process, practically all the major producers of Hollywood are adopting it. The invention requires many changes in the recording apparatus and these are being rapidly made in the studios.

The finer quality of recorded sound is putting new problems up to the engineers who maintain the projecting equipment in motion picture houses. Noises in theatres which formerly passed unnoticed now become audible. Electrical Research Products is bringing theatre equipment up to the new standards required by the improved recording. The company has sent its staff of specially trained men throughout the country to visit theatres which use its equipment and study the further elimination of projection noises.

Experts Solve Puzzle

A puzzle recently encountered by these experts indicated the unusual situations they meet. In a New York theatre a brand new noise sprang up at six o'clock in the morning to upset their study of the equipment in operation. Not being able to find the cause of it in the theatre, one of the men decided to take a walk around the block.

Nearby he discovered a power station in the subway system that had a few minutes before heavily loaded the power line. The engineers changed the ground system in the theatre and thus cleared the way for the proper enjoyment of the new sound picture process.

U. board; "Pardner" James, president of the "Y"; Lee Greer, vice-president of the "Y"; John Manning, secretary of the "Y"; Frank Hawley, treasurer of the "Y"; and Ed Hazlewood, chief-cheerleader.

Societies Will Debate Companionate Unions

The members of the Phi assembly, meeting tonight for the second time this quarter, will discuss the question of establishing a system of retirement funds for University professors. Judge Ben Lindsey's plan of companionate marriages will also be one of the topics for discussion at the meeting in New East building.

The three bills as they are stated on the calendar are: 1. Resolved: That the Philanthropic Assembly go on record as favoring the resolution that the state establish a system of retirement funds for University professors. 2. Resolved: That companionate marriages contracted under the system proposed by Judge Ben Lindsey be recognized as legal unions. 3. Resolved: That the Prohibition Act be modified so as to legalize the sale of light wines and beers.

And the next time General Butler wants to talk about somebody in Italy, he'd better pick out some unimportant person like the king.—Judge.

Voting Gives All Campus Sweeping Win In Election

MEDFORD OBTAINS LARGE MAJORITY

Theron Brown, Is President of Athletic Association, Hodges Vice-President.

HEAVY BALLOTING

McClure Gets Largest Majority In Magazine Contest; Gilchrist Editor of Comic.

To the accompaniment of a cold, persistent, dreary drizzle, the University of North Carolina has once again gone to the polls; and once again has the voice of the student government asserted itself in one of the largest votes ever cast since 1905. Surpassing even the most sanguine expectations, the All-Campus party swept into office with an overwhelming majority; not a single nominee of that political association failed to be placed in office by the ballots of their fellow students. The key positions on the line-up, those of the Presidency of the Student body and editorship of the Tar Heel demonstrate well how the ballots ran: Mayne Albright received 987 votes to 538 for Bill Speight. This was the largest vote cast with 1525 ballots counted. Jack Dungan received 1057 votes, as contrasted to 449 votes for J. C. Williams.

The remainder of the ticket reads the same way; with each position definitely, unequivocally and irrevocably filled by student choice. W. C. Medford received 1016 votes, C. Shreve received 457, for the vice-presidency of the student body. Pete Gilchrist was elected editor of Buccaneer by 1045 votes against 437 for Gil Pearson. The largest vote cast for any individual candidate was for B. C. "Specs" McClure, who received 1135 votes for the editorship of the Carolina Magazine as against 347 ballots marked with a cross opposite the name of Phil Liskin. Cecil Carmichael and Carlyle Rutledge are now members of the Debate Council, 1049 and 1011 ballots cast for them, respectively. McBride Fleming-Jones received 1005 votes as the senior representative from the Senior class on the Publications Union Board. Theron Brown was elected to the position of pesident of the Athletic Association with 1064 votes against 428 votes cast for Paul Edwards. Harry Hodges carried the day with 1008 votes for the vice-presidency of the Athletic Association, against 495 for Ellis Fysal.

Many of the campus positions were filled last Thursday, when there were but single nominations made for eight offices. Thus since that time, it has been certain that Holmes Davis is to be editor of the Yackety Yack, F. M. James, president of the Y. M. C. A., Lee Greer, vice-

EXTENSIVE PLANS MADE FOR HUMAN RELATIONS BODY

Institute Taking Place Every Four Years Will Meet Here May 3-9.

The authorities in charge of the Human Relations Institute announced yesterday that General Charles P. Summerall and Fletcher Sims Brockman have agreed to speak at the Institute which is to take place from May 3 through May 9.

General Charles P. Summerall recently retired as chief of staff of the United States army to accept the position of director of The Citadel in South Carolina. General Summerall occupied the position of chief of staff since 1926. He has received the Croix de Guerre (with two palms), the D. S. C., the D. S. M., is a member of the Legion of Honor, and is the recipient of many other honors.

Mr. Fletcher Sims Brockman is often spoken of as the most influential foreigner in China. He probably understands China and its people better than any other person not of the Chinese race. He has spent the last thirty years of his life there and is now working on a plan of international education. Mr. Brockman now occupies the position of executive secretary of the Committee for the Promoting of Friendly Relations between America and the Far East.

The purpose of the Institute is to teach people to understand the problems confronting the United States and the world as a whole. In 1927, the University conducted its first Human Relations Institute and had many prominent men as lecturers.

At the former Institute it was decided to have a meeting every four years so that each generation of students at the University would be able to hear the nationally and internationally prominent speakers who would address the Institute. A good part of the Institute's time will be given over to the discussion of such questions as inter-

HOBGOOD CHOSEN TO HEAD SENIORS

Griffin Is President of Juniors and Jones of Sophomores.

The sensational success of the All-Campus party in the campus wide elections carried through not only to every office of a campus wide character, but to every office in each class.

In the senior class elections, Hamilton Hobgood polled 232 votes, as against 67 votes cast for Wofford Humphries. Tom Rose received 189 votes as against 107 for Tom Blythe; and Jimmy Moore polled 210 votes against 91 for John Stallings; Bill Jarman received 213 ballots against 71 for B. G. Gentry. Haywood Weeks is the Senior representative on the Student Council with 227 votes, while E. G. Beam received but 72.

For the rising junior class, Sparks Griffin was elected over Don Conklin with the impressive vote of 250 against 79; Haywood Weeks is vice-president of the class with 224 votes against 97 for G. Biggs; Tom Watkins is undoubtedly secretary of his class, for he polled 239 votes against 83 for Marty Levinson, reputed boxer; Dan McDuffie will bear the problems of the treasurer of the Junior class, for he obtained 219 votes against dimunitive Kornegay's 100 votes. Bim Ferguson is to be the representative from his class on the Student Council, with 209 votes against 110 for F. Anderson.

For those who are now merely Freshmen, but who expect to be Sophomores next year, they may look to "Watt" Jones as president of their class, with 312

The Kedroff Quartet

Appreciative Audience Hears Russian Quartet Performance

The justly praised Kedroff Quartet sang last night in the auditorium of Memorial hall. Their selections and the variety of the folk and church music of Russia which they offered were commendable.

They arrived in Chapel Hill early yesterday morning and spent the forenoon and afternoon walking about the campus and taking in the sights which the University has to offer. They remained in Chapel Hill over night and left early this morning for their next engagement.

The first group which the quartet sang was a collection of the most popular songs written by Russian composers. The next group was made up of Russian folk songs, most of which had been revised by the leader and organizer of the singers, N. N. Kedroff. The third division of the program was a selected four or five art songs from the music of various nations, and the fourth and final part was closely connected with the third division in that the offerings were selected from pieces written by the composers of all countries.

At first the unusual arrangement of the singers in the quartet led to comment, but the audience soon realized that it was probably due to this one fact that the music of the quartet was so peculiarly like the music of a single instrument. The usual order of quartet arrangement is to have the men lined up according to the pitch of their voice, as from the lowest on the right, or the basso, to the highest on the right, the first tenor.

The quartet is now on its fourth successful tour of the United States, having made their first in January 1928. This year's tour will extend until late in the summer, when the singers will return to the European continent.

PERCY MacKAYE TALKS TO CLASS

Percy MacKaye, well known poet-dramatist, man of the theatre, and recognized critic of American plays, in addressing Professor's Koch's playwriting class, Monday morning, spoke on the tradition of the American theatre, which extends back to the time when his father and grandfather were the moguls of the theatre.

He said that the central background of the dramatic tradition of the stage here in America was broken by the World War, and that his recent book, Epoch, a biography of his father Steele MacKaye, aims to pick up the loose threads of this scattered background.

MacKaye spoke of the eternal quality of the moment as being of great significance in art and in the theatre. "We must create now," he said and went on to stress the need of the conviction that we realize the possible permanence of our creation.

He concluded his talk by reading a scene from the Scarecrow, The most logically interesting feature of Epoch is a reproduced page of Steele MacKaye's notes, which outline the plans for a Carolina folk play in 1891. It was to be named The State Line but, for some reason, was never written.

WILLIAMS LOSES BY 1057 TO 449

Present Managing Editor and Editor-Elect Was Staff's Unanimous Nominee.

Jack Dungan, for the past three years an active member of the Daily Tar Heel staff, justified the opinion of the staff members, receiving a tremendous majority over his competitors for the position of editor of the daily publication.

Much interest in this particular office was created by the fact that both candidates were non-fraternity men and were of proven ability in the newspaper field. Nevertheless J. C. "Red" Williams, present editor of the Carolina Magazine, was defeated by Jack, who was unanimously nominated by the men who have worked with him for the past year or more.

Undoubtedly the campus at large agreed with the men who were in a position to know for they elected him to the second highest position on the campus by 1057 votes to 449—a clear majority of 608, more than one-fourth of the entire student body of the University.

The student body certainly realized that the man who has served the Daily Tar Heel as star reporter, with sixteen hundred inches on the tri-weekly Tar Heel, as a freshman, city editor during his sophomore year, and second managing editor of the first Daily Tar Heel to be published, deserved to be promoted to the higher position of editor. The congratulations and cordial good wishes that Jack Dungan has received since the eventful yesterday are expressive of the esteem in which he is held by the student body and his statements as to the future policies of the paper may well be relied upon by those who are acquainted with his past work.

FIRST FRATERNITY HOUSE ON CAMPUS IS FINALLY RAZED

Old Phi Kappa Sigma House Passes By Order of City Council.

One of the landmarks among fraternity houses on the campus passed out of existance during the recent vacation when the old Phi Kappa Sigma hall, on the corner of East Rosemary and Henderson streets, was torn down by order of the city council.

The building was the first fraternity house on the campus and thought to be the second in the South.

The wooden structure, built in 1884, shortly after the ban on farternities following the post-war re-establishment of the University, housed the organization for twelve years and saw the vicissitudes of Hellenistic life on the campus in that very critical period.

Following the break-up of the organization in 1896 due to stringent regulations on secret societies, the meeting-hall was rented to other groups for fifteen years, when the advent of well-equipped residences for fraternities made that use of the house impractical.

Apropos of Elections

Politicians and those who sometimes are classed as politicians when they express interest in elections are often condemned by a group of citizens for their methods. This condemnation does not arise from a belief that politicians are dishonest, for the average politician is about as honest as the average sportsman who plays hard and occasionally appears to commit a foul, but they are condemned for their hypocritical attitude toward their fellow being.

This so-called hypocrisy is somewhat similar to the attitude assumed by the business man when he desires your patronage. He may think you're a fool but his attitude seldom reveals it, or the stock broker who thinks you're a sucker but accepts your account, and so the politician may swallow his pride and sense of decency and smile in your direction while expressing the wish mentally to kick you in the slats. To the politician it's not altogether a matter of you (if it were, a lot of people would find it difficult to vote) but a matter of your vote. With the man in the non-political field it's not you but your business. Business is business except when the politician seeks it, then it's hypocrisy.

With the condemnation of the politician we hear criticism of the government of the nation, the state, the country, the city or the student community. It seems, if we are to believe our critics, that government is manipulated by politicians. Squawks come from persons who have refused to contaminate themselves by contact with political conditions. Squawks come from that class of persons who sit in the seats of the mighty and refuse to perform their duty as a citizen and select capable officials. Squawks come loudest and most often from those whose social prestige or delicate senses would be damaged were they to expose themselves to the mob, but who are classed usually with that group included by the late P. T. Barnum when he said, "One is born every minute."

A Matter Of Names

We went yesterday to vote according to the dictates of our conscience. We voted, down to the bottom. And then we stopped, astounded by the word "name," or "signed," we really don't remember which. We blinked a time or two, and leaned against a table, while our very dull intellect appreciated the fact that a signature was indispensable. We signed.

We were not ashamed to vote as we did vote. Rather, we gloried in voting as we did vote. For various and sundry reasons, or satisfaction was out of all proportion to the value of our ote. But, and we may be mistaken, there are certain timid souls who would rather not have had their leanings known. And there were souls who considered it nobody's business how they voted.

If the polls were anything but well regulated, there might be some point in signed ballots, or at least some excuse for them. But we agree with those people who consider voting a private matter. A man's conscientious scruples are his. His private agreements are his. His grudges are his. His spites are his. His heroes are his. His vote is his.

Foreign Language Talkies

A worthwhile innovation that the main body of students have greeted coldly is the introduction of weekly showings of foreign language productions. These photoplays, with casts of foreign stars for the most part and containing all the dialogue in German or French or Spanish or whatever the case may be, are of importance, not only because of their ability to instruct, but because at the same time, they supply entertainment of a high order.

Each Wednesday night feature has seen very small crowds, a group of people so small as to hardly justify the showing of the performance, even though it is a single program. And each program is complete: besides the feature, there is a comedy and either a novelty reel or a news feature—sometimes both.

This noticeable lack of interest on the part of the student body in something that has been introduced to the village primarily for their own benefit puts Carolina to shame,—even more so when it is discovered that groups of Duke students and instructors have formed the habit of coming over from Durham in order to attend the foreign language showings. These programs are unique in the south and are attracting wide attention from other parts of the section as well as from other sections of the country, but as usual here in Chapel Hill, where opportunity to participate in something novel and instructive has been dumped in their laps, the students cavalierly turn away and deliberately ignore, either through ignorance or lack of interest, the privilege.—R.H.

With Contemporaries

Extension Institutes

Robert Maynard Hutchins, formerly Dean of the Yale Law School, now president of the University of Chicago, has written on "The University of Utopia" for the spring issue of The Yale Review. In this article Dr. Hutchins considers the relation of higher education to the practical field of social problems, and, more particularly, its relation to our present crisis of business depression. Since among an educational people larger and larger taxes are being paid each year for the support of education, the question may well be asked whether it would not be better "to buy food with this money than to continue the expansion of a process that seems powerless to help us in time of need."

Dr. Hutchins' conclusion and answer to this question is, however, "that the remedy of our present ills and the only hope we have of preventing their recurrence is not less education but more." To this end, Dr. Hutchins shows the need of developing education in four respects. First, more money will be needed for any radical improvement—an almost superfluous observation. Secondly, there must be a more liberal extension of academic freedom through a wider integration of fields of knowledge and research. Further, on this liberal basis of scholarship there must be encouraged a more intensive study of human problems; and lastly the results of this study must be disseminated more widely by means of adult education through extension institutes in universities.

To the extent of liberalizing educational systems and of encouraging intensive study of human problems, we heartily subscribe to Dr. Hutchins' theories. The serious doubt remains, however, of whether mass education through extension institutes is, in the end, the best and most effective means of disseminating the results of investigations into human problems. It was our opinion that Dr. Flexner's vigorous book had once and for all pointed out the utter ridiculousness of mass production in higher education, and had amply shown, in his discussion of Columbia, the inconsistency between extension institutes and the ideals of education.

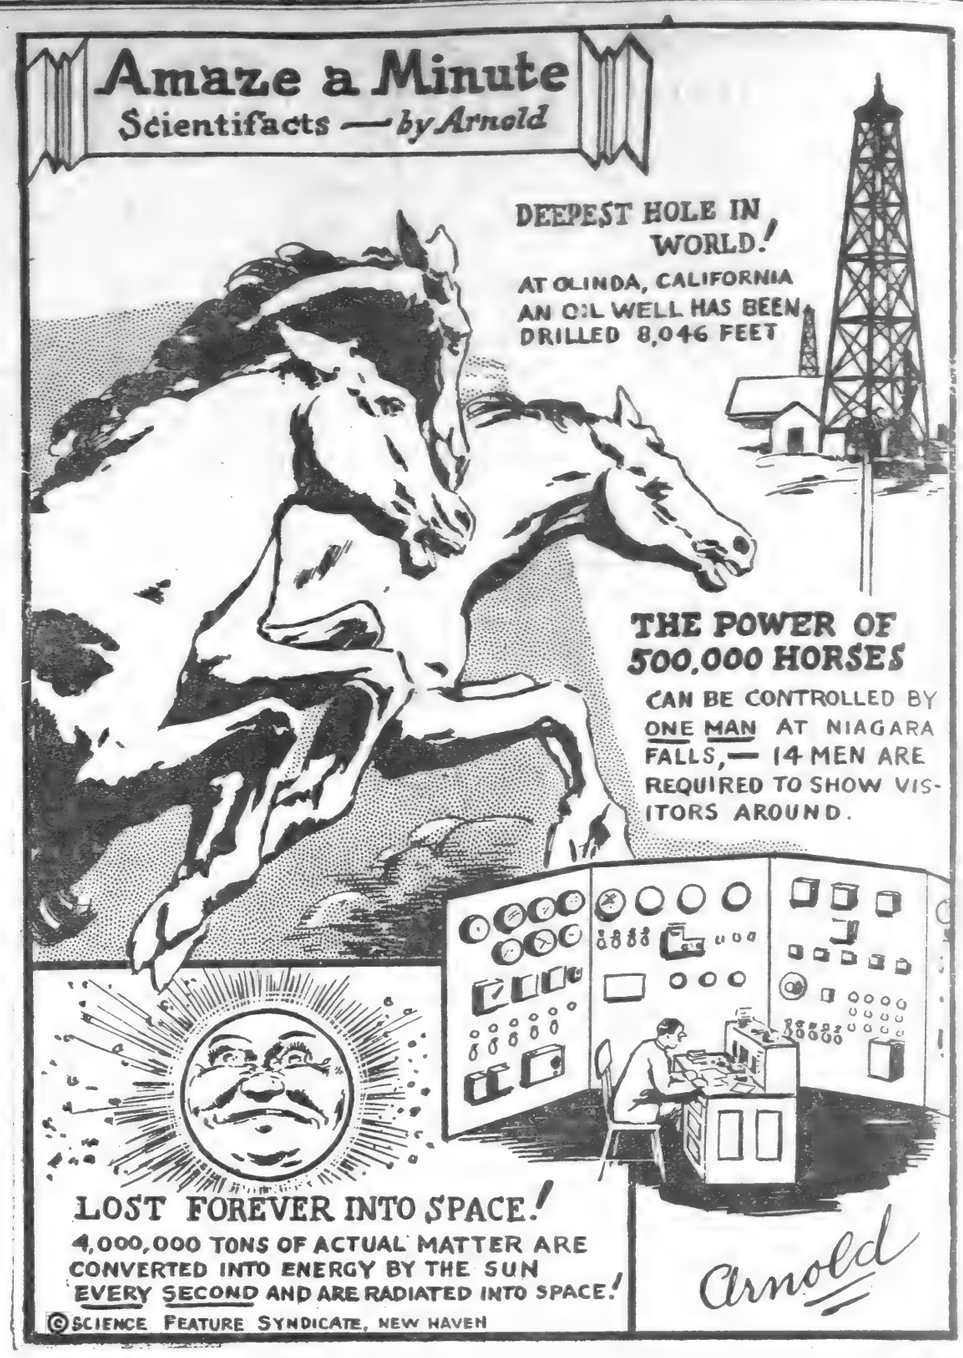
Educational institutions will prove their value to mankind in time of need, not when they have succeeded in scattering a few crumbs of wisdom on everyone's doorsteps, but when they have sent out, from their own walls, intelligent leaders who are prepared to cope with the practical problems of society and who are ready to lead others to the solution. The American university is still faced with the problem of developing intellectual leadership among its enrolled undergraduates. When it has done that, it may turn to increasing its audience.—Daily Princetonian.

Our Own Untouchables

Within the faculty which holds sway in the College, there are a number, an alarming number, of gentlemen who make a practice of keeping as far as possible entirely impersonal in their contacts with students. To this end they select office hours at such times as to make the possibility of student visits extremely slight, and as often as is practicable, they manage to be out during these same outrageous office hours. If, perchance, an eager member of the student body does manage to reach these untouchables, he is given such treatment as to make the likelihood of his return exceedingly slight.

What with professional writers making a fuss over the impersonality of the industrial age, English novelists calling Americans emotionless and educational critics calling our own University a mere knowledge factory, we feel badly enough without having the faculty turn inhuman. As an experiment, to improve our condition, we suggest that the teaching element of the Campus population discard the orientalism it has somehow acquired and substitute the "warmth of Southern hospitality.—Columbia Spectator.

Where Credit Is Due



One would have to look far in this world to find a more coldly critical group of people than a body of college students. When such a body commends one of its administrative officers, that officer may feel that his work is well worth recognition. To Dean Eugenie A. Leonard this well deserved recognition is beginning to come.

Quite naturally the scholastic surveys, the investigations into freshman problems, and the consistent effort on the part of Dean Leonard to get acquainted with as many Hill women as possible could not go unnoticed. Comments in praise of her progressive policy which has been of unlimited aid to all women on campus may be heard in almost every living center.—Syracuse Daily Orange.

Bill Of Original Plays Planned By Playmakers

The twenty-eighth bill of original plays will be produced by the Carolina Playmakers on April 9, 10, and 11. The first play to be given is Ted Herman's The Blue Remembered Hills, a two act play of college life.

A Very Pale Pink Angel, a modern comedy, by Ellen Stewart; Always a Bettin' Man by Tom Loy; and Ever Snitch, a comedy of Carolina fisher folk, by Irene Fussler complete the program.

Dr. Dashiell To Address Psychological Societies

Dr. J. F. Dashiell, head of the department of psychology, is this week attending three kinds of psychological programs. On Wednesday he is to address the Psychology Association of New York University giving a technical lecture. Thursday and Friday he is scheduled to participate in a symposium at the annual meeting of the Society of Experimental Psychologists, which is to be held at Vassar College. On Saturday he will read a paper before the Southern Society of Philosophy and Psychology, which meets at the University of Virginia at Charlottesville, Va.

Tar Babies Easily Swamp Blue Imps By 54 Points

FRESHMEN TAKE 10 FIRST PLACES

Higby and Ashkenas Account For 23 Points.

The Carolina freshman track team, meeting their second consecutive opponents on a wet track, walked off with ten first places and enough seconds and thirds to swamp the Duke University Blue Imps by a score of 90-36 in Durham yesterday afternoon. The Tar Babies took first places in all events except the mile, shot put, pole vault, and 880, and took all three places in the broad jump, 100 yard dash, and both hurdle events.

Higby took first place in the 220 and broad jump, and third in the 100 to lead the Tar Babies with thirteen points. Ashkenas placed first in the 100 and 440 for ten points. C. Miles, with first in the 880 and second in the 440, and F. Miles, with second in the 880 and first in the mile were high scorers for Duke.

Due to a soggy track and the cold, none of the times were good with the exception of the mile which F. Miles of Duke won in four minutes and forty-four seconds. Bonner, Goodwin, and Glenn locked hands to take all three places in the low hurdles, while Groover and Sullivan did the same thing to win first place in the two mile run.

LeGore of Carolina made the best mark of the day when he tossed the javelin 178 feet eight inches to take first place by a wide margin in that event.

Summary:

100 yard dash: First, Ashkenas, NC; Higby, NC; Weisker, NC. Time 10.6 seconds.

220 yard dash: First, Higby, NC; Fritz, Duke; McGlenn, NC. Time 25.6 seconds.

440 yard run: First, Ashkenas, NC; C. Miles, Duke; Hardy, Duke. Time 55 seconds.

880 yard run: First, C. Miles, Duke; F. Miles, Duke; Meade, NC. Time 2:09.

One mile run: First, F. Miles, Duke; Meade, NC; Hinson, NC. Time 4:44.

Two mile run: First, Groover, NC; and Sullivan NC tied; Hulse, Duke. Time 11:20.

High hurdles: First, Glenn, NC; Goodwin, NC; Bonner, NC. Time 16.8

Low hurdles: First, Bonner, Goodwin, and Glenn all of NC tied. Time 28 seconds.

High jump: First, Dockery and Phipps both of NC tied; Atkinson, Duke. Height 5 feet six inches.

Pole vault: First, James, Duke; Gold, NC; Blount, NC. Height 10 feet 9 inches.

Shot put: Means, Duke; Horney, NC; Mullis, NC. Distance 39 feet 3 3-4 inches.

Discus: First, Mullis, NC; Crawford, Duke; Horney, NC. Distance 113 feet 11 inches.

Javelin: First, Legore, NC; Brandt, NC; James, Duke. Distance 178 feet 8 inches.

Broad jump: First, Higby, NC; Weisker, NC; Phipps, NC. Distance 20 feet 4 inches.

Final score: Carolina, 90; Duke 36.

Dashiell Connected With Book Company

J. F. Dashiell, of the psychology department, has accepted a position as consulting editor with the McGraw-Hill Book Company, to edit a new series of psychological books to be published by them soon. Their publications deal with engineering sciences, chemistry, zoology, mathematics, and commercial subjects. It is their plan to publish a series of technical works in the psychological line some time in the near future.

Winter Football

Coach R. A. Fetzer requests that all winter football men get light equipment from Emerson stadium today. Shoes will be issued from Kenan stadium between three and five o'clock. There will be a meeting of all men expecting to participate, at Emerson field at five o'clock.

RULING PROHIBITS COACHES TO SIT NEXT TO PLAYERS

Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League Puts Captain In Charge of Team.

Play in the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League this year will be directed by the undergraduate captains. The coaches will be barred from the bench in all league games.

Under the text of a resolution passed by the league's executive committee yesterday, the bench, during all games, will be cleared of all save players and undergraduate managers.

The idea of "coachless baseball" or its practice is not new in the league, for a number of games were played under this system last year. These games however, were played under separate agreements reached by the colleges concerned.

In reference to this ruling, Coach Hooper of Princeton declared that although the regulation was "perfectly fair," it placed the coach "in a less favorable position to teach the game.

"I was in hopes that the rule would be reversed," added Mr. Hooper, "but of course we shall make the best of the situation. It is certainly true that it gives every coach a 50-50 break."

Princeton played many of her league games last year under the system whereby the coach was absent from the bench and therefore the Princeton athletic officials are in no great way inconvenienced by the new ruling. Coaches Walter L. Cariss and Andrew Coakley of the University of Pennsylvania and Columbia, respectively, declared themselves opposed to the action of the league.

TIGER MYSTERY FOREIGN TALKIE FOR THIS WEEK

The foreign language production for this week is "The Tiger Murder Mystery," an all German talkie with a foreign cast. The feature will be shown tonight at 11:00, after the showing of the regular attraction.

The language departments, Teutonic and Romance, of the University urge a better attendance at these productions on the part of the students. The weekly program of such attractions is a unique thing, and since its introduction in Chapel Hill has occasioned a great deal of comment from newspapers all over North America. Other theatres applaud the idea and have signified their intention of following the lead now taken.

The crowds hitherto in attendance at these showings have been small, and there has never been an audience large enough to really justify a single production. Even such audiences as there are have been composed of exceedingly few students, and it is for these that the innovation was primarily started. Faculty members and townspeople with a sprinkling of Duke students and instructors, have composed the slim audiences viewing the features

PENNSYLVANIANS MEET TAR HEELS THIS AFTERNOON

Red and Blue Team Carries Six Moundsmen.

With the two game series with Cornell concluded, giving both teams valuable seasoning under fire, the Carolina nine is set today for the invasion of another big Northern team—Pennsylvania's Red and Blue, whom the Tar Heels will play here this afternoon and Thursday at 4 o'clock.

Coach Walter Carriss is to lead a squad of 17 batsmen from the University of Pennsylvania into town from Raleigh today, and this afternoon on Emerson Field at four o'clock the Carolina nine will be hosts at a party at which they will raise the season curtain for their Northern guests.

Pennsylvania had a previous game carded with Haverford rained out. The Red and Blue are to meet Carolina again Thursday afternoon. Carriss' squad is on a Southern tour and after leaving Chapel Hill will play at Wake Forest Friday, at Duke Saturday and Monday, at the Quantico Marines' next Tuesday and at Navy Wednesday.

The invaders brought only one extra man at catcher, in the infield and in the outfield, but they brought six moundsmen, and from all reports the Tar Heel batters are going to look on some fast, jumpy slants. There are three tried and proved veterans in Jim Patterson, Walter Masters and Al Ushka, and three youngster prospects in Powhida, Kelly and Jackson. Coach Carriss said this morning that one of the veterans would probably work today's first game with Carolina.

The Tar Heels' new infield, some say, should be better for its seasoning against Cornell, the whole team should be steadier at bat, and Coach Jim Ashmore is expecting a better showing all round, although he was neither immensely pleased nor immensely displeased with the showing against Cornell. One of the trio of Griffith, Merritt or Scarboro, all sophomore right-handers, will probably get the mound call, with Piggy Potter to work behind the bat.

Elected Captain

W. H. "Piggy" Potter, veteran catcher and outfielder, was elected captain of the varsity baseball team yesterday to fill the vacancy made by the ineligibility of Captain-elect Burgess Whitehead, who signed an agreement with the Rochester club of the International League. Potter is a native of Beaufort, N. C., and is serving his third year on the varsity.

Lawrence Miller, Charlotte youth, was named manager of the 1932 Tar Heel basketball team yesterday afternoon.

RAIN HALTS GAME WITH CORNELL

Tar Heels Trounce Northerners In First Game, 11-5.

A continuous downpour yesterday afternoon caused the postponement of the last game of the two game series between Carolina and Cornell.

Carolina won the opening game, 11-5, by blasting two Cornell pitchers for six runs in the sixth inning. Cloyd Blythe's home run with the bags crowded climaxed a rally started by Billy Powell's safe drive, which scored two runs.

There will be no replay as the northerners are journeying over to Durham today for a two game series with Duke's Blue Devils.

Today, weather permitting, the Tar Heels will try to extend their winning streak over the University of Pennsylvania's nine.

Advance press notices say that Penn has one of the finest teams in the East. In Walter Masters, football ace, the Quakers have one of the best collegiate hurlers. In addition to a strong pitching staff, the visitors have plenty of power stored in their bats, with their big gun in Captain Rolf Carlstein. Carlstein, originally an outfielder, has been shifted all over the club, but today will probably find the Quaker star at the hot corner.

The remainder of this week's schedule is:

April 1 and 2. Pennsylvania.
April 3. Washington and Lee.
April 4. Penn State.

RINGMEN ANSWER ROWE'S CALL FOR SPRING PRACTICE

Levinson Only Letter Man Out For Training.

Spring boxing practice began Monday afternoon in the Tin Can when about twenty-five newcomers and holdovers reported for instructions. Coach Allen put the newcomers through light exercises while Coach Rowe began work on the varsity prospects.

Marty Levinson was the only letter man, who has not finished his career, to report for work. Levinson took a light workout on the heavy bags and called it a day. John Warren was another veteran on hand, but John has fought three years and will not be eligible for competition next winter.

Paul Hudson, freshman welter weight, who fought in the first freshman meet of the year and then broke his hand, was another one of the early comers. Coach Rowe, without a letterman in the 149 pound class for next year, began working with Hudson immediately and hopes to groom him to be a contender for that division next year. Hudson looked good in his only bout this year, in which he won a three round decision from V. M. I. by a wide margin.

Billy Stallings and Speedy Boring, intramural stars for the past two years, were also on hand, and have signed up for the intramural tournament which will be run off the first part of May.

Still another of this year's freshman stars to start early work was Bruce Langdon, who fought in the lightweight division for the Tar Babies during the season just closed. The light weight class will be another one without a letter man next year, and it is expected that a large number will compete for the privilege of trying to fill Captain Noah Goodridge's shoes.

Practice will be held every day in the Tin Can with varsity aspirants and entrants for the intramural tournament working out together under the guidance of Coaches Rowe and Allen.

Infirmary List

Those on the sick list yesterday were: W. D. Croom, C. L. Balding, Sybille Berwanger, Donald Cooke, Abbot N. Sawyer, C. A. Jensen, John Goode, Blair Rankin, R. M. Avery, M. P. Park, T. L. Cordle, J. R. Riley, B. C. Proctor, C. S. Dickie, and Peter Brown Ruffin.

Plessow Appointed As Visiting Scholar

Dr. Gustav L. Plessow, of the University of Tubingen, has been given an appointment as a visiting scholar by the graduate school of the University. At his own university, Dr. Plessow is a professor of Americana, a subject which deals with American culture, life, and education. Here at the University he plans to carry on his study of American social and university life. Dr. Plessow, who was a classmate of Dr. E. W. Zimmerman of the school of commerce, when both were undergraduates at the University of Berlin, is very much interested in the organization and life of the University.

Y Trip Postponed

The deputation trip, sponsored by the Y, to Greenville has been postponed two weeks due to spring recess in the high school at Greenville. The trip will be made April 10 to 14, and a trip will be made to Beaufort on the 14th.

Knute Rockne Is Killed As Passenger Air Liner Crashes On Kansas Farm

Knute Rockne, famous football coach of Notre Dame University, and seven others were killed when a Transcontinental and Western air passenger and air mail plane crashed in flames yesterday in a pasture several miles southwest of Bazar, Kansas.

Rockne boarded the plane in Kansas City, Missouri, en route to California at 9:15 a. m., and about 11 a. m., the ship, identified by its department of commerce license number crashed and burned as it fought a fog and storm en route to Wichita, Kansas.

The body of Rockne and the other victims had not been definitely identified at the scene but it was certain the noted coach was a passenger on the wrecked air liner and that all those aboard had been killed.

The passenger list announced here:

Knute Rockne.
H. J. Christensen, Chicago.
J. H. Hooper, Chicago.
W. B. Miller, Hartford, Conn.
F. Goldthwaite, New York.
C. A. Loberech, Chicago.

The pilots were Robert Fry and Jesse Mathias.

The plane exploded in mid-air and fell to earth in flames, witnesses said.

Edward Baker witnessed the explosion and saw the plane plunge as he was feeding cattle in the pasture, a short distance away on the farm of his father, Seward Baker.

Chapel Hill Grieved

Chapel Hillians were very much grieved last night upon hearing of the tragic death of the famous mentor. He was noted, not only for the consistently good teams which he turned out at Notre Dame, but also for the capable coaches which he has sent over the country to teach the Notre Dame system. Coach Chuck Collins was out of the village yesterday when the death of his former mentor was learned.

Coaches Smith and Reese, of State were informed of Rockne's death yesterday afternoon and at first couldn't believe the report. They were shocked to learn of the untimely passing of their former teacher.

Only a few days ago it is said that Rockne remarked, "What's the use of wasting time on trains and automobiles. This is a fast day and age. I've got to get around to do things and reach places."

Traveler Takes to Air to Save Time, Finds Everybody Doing It, Now

Photograph by Alvin C. Krupnick Co., Tulsa, Okla.

Air travelers have the same nonchalance as those of the longer established modes of transportation. Brick hangars, restaurants and waiting rooms provide comfort for the traveler in most large cities as this one at Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Radio Apparatus, Timetables and Routines Put Flying on Dependable Basis

"An adventure in the air turned out to be just a bit of commonplace travel," says Will Whitmore in Western Electric News, in chronicling a trip two-thirds of the way across the continent. He had looked forward to it as just about the most exciting thing he had ever done. His inquiries into the intricacies of the trip were greeted on all sides in a most casual and matter-of-fact manner. It irked him considerably. He says, in describing what he felt was to be almost a foolhardy air stunt:

"I took the Airway Express from the Pennsylvania station, New York, at 6:05 p. m. to Columbus, Ohio, on business. When the conductor took my ticket, he asked me a question in such a commonplace tone that I missed the meaning.

"'Are you taking the plane at Port Columbus?' he repeated. Taken aback just a bit, I stuttered a 'no.'

"And as he passed on down the aisle that question began to rankle just a bit. For some reason I had not liked the conductor's casual manner, yet obviously it had not been affected. It was routine for him. Just as routine as 'Are you getting off at North Philadelphia?'

"No, I did not like it—the thought that aviation had slipped up on me unaware, that flying was as commonplace as taking the tube to Jersey City. Of course, I knew planes were flying every day. I knew that people flew in those planes, but just the same . . .

Arrives at Airport

"At 7:41 the next morning the train stopped a few miles out of Columbus at Port Columbus. Brick hangars, a waiting room and station, everything provided for the comfort of the air traveler.

"Eighteen people got off the train to ride out into the sky in those three tri-motored all metal Ford planes warming up on the runways. They walked to the station, porters carrying their bags, with the nonchalance that we take the subway.

"The week in Columbus for me was a busy one, but in the back of my head was the thought of those planes warming up ready to take me on a new adventure. Business completed, I decided to take the plane to Dallas, Texas, for a vacation at home. I tried to be casual as I bought my ticket at the downtown ticket office in Columbus. The ticket agent reached into a ticket rack, scribbled on a ticket with a pen in the customary fashion, and said, 'Route 3, Seat 1, eight-thirty a.m. tomorrow.'

From Taxi to Plane

"The next morning out I go to the airport in a taxi. My bag is taken by a porter. It is weighed and I don't see it again until I get off at Dallas. At the airport there is a fine restaurant. I enjoy the breakfast tremendously.

"Soon the planes begin to take off. Route 1 and Route 2 planes taxi up to the station. Passengers get on, and in a moment the two planes are in the air. Then Route 3 plane rolls up. A telescopic awning is pushed out from the station to the door of the plane. Leisurely we walk under this and into the plane. The twelve seats are filled with passengers. We taxi down the runway. The plane swings round into the wind. The pilot races the motors, one at a time. A final test to see that each is functioning perfectly.

"Then he gives the motors the gun. We are off! One woman is calmly adjusting a flower in the button-hole of her jacket. A man is scanning his morning paper, and the wheels of the plane have not yet taken to the air! Fifteen minutes after we are up five of the passengers are sleeping. Several are reading and the remainder are perfectly relaxed. Such is air transportation today. Accepted, commonplace!

"The wheels touch ground at Indianapolis at 9:28. St. Louis at 12:18. Tulsa at 4 p.m. We'll be in Dallas at 6:20. Off from Tulsa into beautiful clouds that drift between the plane and the earth. Below hundreds of oil wells. On the ground it's scorching hot. Up here, 6,500 feet above, it's cool and comfortable.

Crosses Red River in Flash

"Before long, off in the distance is the Old Red River. A few years before I had ferried across it in an automobile trip from Chicago to Dallas. It took us an hour waiting for the ferry and crossing over. Now in this flying conveyance we are over it in a flash. In a few more minutes we land at Love Field in Dallas.

"Vacation over, I reserved a seat on the Southern Air Transport lines from Dallas to Cleveland and from there to New York by train. This is simplicity itself. I went to the porter's desk at the Baker Hotel in Dallas and asked for air passage to New York. Your one ticket includes plane to Cleveland, and a lower berth on a New York Central train from Cleveland to New York.

"Sunday morning a bus called for me at the Baker at seven-thirty. A short ride to Love Field. A few minutes later we were aboard and among the passengers were a young mother and father with their 2-year-old boy.

"Stopping at Tulsa, St. Louis, Chicago and finally ending the air passage at Cleveland in the late afternoon was as comfortable and pleasant as reading in an easy chair. Flying over the southern tip of Lake Michigan and along the sand-duned shores of Indiana, writing on my portable typewriter all the way from Chicago to Cleveland. That ride was the poem of a greater transportation.

Rushes to Train From Plane

"At Cleveland we were loaded in taxis, and rushed to the train. The next morning I was at work at the office in New York. Mere time tables of the air do not adequately tell how you cheat time by airplane. You have to travel in them to fully comprehend.

"The day before I took the plane in Dallas, I saw a rodeo in a little Texas cattle town. Wild horses, even a Long Horn Texas steer, cowboys in chaps, goat and calf roping. Then Monday night on Broadway. It is the going from such extremes in such short order that makes you realize the significance of this new transportation.

"I doubt if we in the East have any realization of the real progress in aviation. It is in the West and Southwest where aviation is writing its most glowing records. The same generation of Westerner has climbed out of the saddle into the automobile and is now contentedly stepping into airplanes."

Bell System Aids

"And in this new transportation as in almost every other new development where modern progress is pressing on the heels of the future, you will find the Bell System playing its part. Already 13 airlines in this country are equipped with Western Electric radio communication systems.

"Literally scores of planes winging their way over the countryside are talking, talking, talking from the clouds and getting their answers from the ground. Unheard, crisp, business-like conversations are going on up in front, conversations that spell out the welfare and security of that precious human cargo.

"The pilot has his ear-phones on, transmitter hangs before his mouth. Every minute there is something for him to hear.

"'Des Moines calling ship 252—Pilot Clark—please come in.'

"'O. K., Clark.'

"'Des Moines—wind south by southwest, 20 miles—visibility 4 miles—ceiling 4,000 feet.'

Pilot Knows Meaning

"That means something to Pilot Clark. Though they might not understand it, it means something to the passengers. It means that their pilot knows just what he is doing, that 'flying into the unknown' is a thing of the past. This talk has been flashing between plane and ground station over Western Electric short wave transmitting and receiving sets.

"Elsewhere a pilot listening to a steady 'daw-w-w' from his ear-phones has heard that break faintly into a 'daw-dit . . . daw-dit . . . daw-dit . . .' He moves his stick slightly and when the steady 'daw-w-w' comes to his ears again straightens out. The radio beacon told him he was getting off to the side of his course, told him that over his long wave receiving set.

"Today the aerial communication apparatus of the Western Electric Company is helping to put airplane travel on the same basis of dependability as railroad and steamship travel. Weather, position, direction, these essentials of sound navigation are whispered right into the pilot's ear as his ship goes roaring 100 miles an hour through the air."

president of the "Y"; John Manning, secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; and Frank Hawley as treasurer of the "Y." Charlie Rose is to be Junior representative on the Publications Union Board and Don Shoemaker is at-large representative of the P. U. Board. E. Hazelwood's nomination, too, was unopposed for chief cheer-leader.

The total votes cast would have been greater had there not been over 100 ballots stricken out from the tabulation because of the fact that many voters in their desire to rush votes through failed to sign their names to the ballots.

But nevertheless, considering that there are considerably fewer students in school this quarter than in the corresponding quarter of the last year, and that election day was unfortunately one of rain and cold, the total votes cast, well over 1400 in total, compare favorably with the 1800 cast last year.

Among the interesting sidelights on the election was that Bailey, running for a minor position on the Non-Fraternity line-up received the greatest amount of votes cast for any one member of what the All-Campus party termed the "opposition." Frank Fallon, of local fame, was brought up to the polls to give his opinion on the contending parties; but he was forestalled by "Boss" Hill who had already expressed the desires of the townspeople. Many fights were threatened, but none, fortunately went beyond the dirty look, and semi-vocal aspersions. The use of co-eds as agitators for the winning party added a most needed not of color and festivity to the stampeding and milling mob that congregated in the lobby of the Y during the day; an extraordinary amount of co-eds came out to vote, and it is the unofficial opinion that a record number of female votes were deposited in the ballot boxes. Many prospective voters found it difficult to reach the boxes because of the crowds and mobs, and it is the aim of the incoming campus administration, it has been said, to devise a new method in order to ease the cramped conditions of the polling places. All in all, the amount of amusing material that results from this particular election and campaign will be inexhaustible for some time. To those who were busy transporting voters in motor cars, to those who worked, on both sides in the dormitories, to those who were busy in front of the polling place during the day—to all of these, as well as the general voting body this election will long remain an exciting and amusing memory. And to John Lang, chairman of the All-Campus party, this election signifies the realization of a dream that has long been current among the progressive and patriotic students—A United University.

The Campus Calendar

Exhibition Match

Johnny Farrell and Gene Sarazen will play an exhibition golf match with Marshall Creighton and Allan Smith of the University over the Hope Valley Country Club course, Thursday afternoon. Admission will be one dollar.

Ben Greet Ushers

Any students wishing to act as ushers at the performance of the Ben Greet Players, April 14, should see Robert Novins this morning at ten-thirty in the office of the Playmakers theatre. Twelve ushers will be needed, and only students having dress suits need apply.

Boxing Managers

All freshmen interested in trying out for boxing managerships report at the Tin Can at four o'clock today.

PLAYMAKERS TO PRESENT STUDIO PLAYS PROGRAM

The next regular studio production of the Carolina Playmakers will be on April 9, 10, 11, at eight-thirty, in the Playmakers theatre. Four plays will be presented during the program.

The plays are: Ever' Snitch, by Irene Fussler; Blue Remembered Hills, by Theodore Herman; A Very Pale Pink Angel, by Helen Stewart; and Always a Bettin' Man, by Tom Loy.

In the cast of Ever'-Snitch are: Marion Tatum, Muriel Wolfe, Donald Wood, Evans Vaughn, and Bobby Koch. Professor Frederick H. Koch is the director of this play. Blue Remembered Hills has a cast of: Bob Lankford, James Queen, William Harris, Sam Peace, Robert Reid, and is directed by Sam Selden. A Very Pale Pink Angel is also directed by Sam Selden. In its cast are: Helen Stewart, Charles Keener, and Ralph Westerman. Always a Bettin' Man has a cast composed of Tom Loy, and Charles Ellege. Pendleton Harris is directing this play.

This bill of plays is the most unusual and varied one that the Playmakers have presented this year since comedy, tragedy, and satire are presented in the group of plays.

They will be covered by the Playmakers season ticket.

EXTENSIVE PLANS MADE FOR HUMAN RELATIONS BODY

national and interracial relations.

In 1927 there were twenty public meetings of the Human Relations Institute and sixty-one class room seminars at which there was a total attendance of 21,000. Some of the prominent speakers at the last meeting of the Institute were: W. W. Alexander, executive secretary of the Southern Interracial Commission; Cameron Beck, personnel manager of the New York Stock Exchange; J. J. Cornelius, former professor of philosphy at Lucknow University, India; Herbert Adams Gibbons, of Princeton, N. J., author and lecturer; Egbert M. Hayes, field secretary for the National Committee on friendly relations among foreign students; W. C. Jackson, state chairman of North Carolina Interracial Commission and Vice-President of North Carolina College for Women; J. W. Johnson, executive secretary of National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Thomas E. Jones, president of Fisk University; James Myers, secretary Industrial Research Federal Council of Churches; N. C. Newbold, head of Division on Negro Education, North Carolina State board of education; Kirby Page, editor of World Tomorrow; Ernest M. Patterson, professor Wharton School of Finance of the University of Pennsylvania; W. L. Poteat, ex-president of Wake Forest College; Fred Rinde, industrial secretary of National Council of Y. M. C. A.; Arthur Hugh, foreign department of the Y. M. C. A. in China; Alva W. Taylor, secretary Board of Temperance and Social Research, Church of Christ; and E. G. Wilson, industrial secretary for the National Council of the Y. M. C. A.

Many of the speakers who are to address the Institute this year are writers of note and the officials in charge of the programs have arranged to have all the works of all the speakers exhibited in the lobby of Memorial Hall during the week of the Institute.

votes against 181 for Dave McCachren. Pendelton Gray is to be vice-president with 292 votes against 193 for Peyton Brown, while Bob Waldo is expected to fill the duties of secretary, as he received 317 votes, while Dan Jones received but 155 votes. Webb Collett is treasurer of the Sophomore class, as he should be for he received 343 votes, while Wilbur Moore had 115 votes, and Jerry Woulke had the total of 20 votes. The Sophomore representative on the Student Council is Nat Townsend who received 313 votes, while his opponents, J. B. Horney and Thomas Whitley received 90 and 57 votes respectively.

It would be well to comment here that the rather unique situation of having two brothers class officers is one that will be with us next year; Jimmy and Haywood Moore are officers of their classes, Jimmy being secretary of the Senior class, while Haywood is to be vice-president of the Junior class. Indeed, with these two gentlemen from Wilmington, the Wilmington contingent now on the executive boards of the student body is greater than that of any other town or city in the state; not only did the All-Campus party cheer Chapel Hill yesterday, but its ramifications extended to all corners of the Old North State

Appointments To Fellowships Announced By Graduate School

INCREASE SHOWN IN APPLICATIONS

More Than Three Hundred Apply for Appointments, Compared With Two Hundred Last Year.

The graduate school of the University announces appointments to fellowships. Appointments of University scholars, assistants, and research assistants will be announced later. Dr. Pierson, dean of the graduate school, said:

"The University this year received an unprecedented number of applications for each class of graduate appointments. As an example, for the twenty-six fellowships, there were 314 applicants, an increase of 113. The tabulation of the applications for other appointments is not yet complete, but office files show receipt of more than 300 of them. Altogether, therefore, there are more than 600 applications from men and women who desire to undertake graduate work."

The full list follows:

DEPUTATION TEAM TO MAKE TRIP TO GREENVILLE, N. C.

The first deputation team of the year will make a trip to Greenville, North Carolina, on the week-end of April 10-12, under the aspices of the local Y association. The five men who are to make the tour are Ed Hamer, Ed Lanier, Bim Ferguson, John Miller and Bob Barnett.

Leaving the campus early Thursday afternoon, the team will arrive at their destination in time for a supper meeting with the members of the Senior Hi-Y club. Friday morning will be taken up with visits to the five white schools and one colored school in the city. The parent-teachers association is to be visited in the afternoon, and the night will be given over to a joint meeting of the Junior and Senior Hi-Y groups.

The team will lecture Saturday morning to a group of children between the ages of eight and fourteen, and at two o'clock in the afternoon the members of the group are to take a hike with the Boy Scouts of the city, finishing their day's program with a social given in their honor that night.

On Sunday morning each of the five members of the team will attend one of the five Sunday Schools in the city and teach the classes of the younger boys. The men will then motor back to the campus arriving here in time for supper.

This plan of sending out deputation teams to the several cities throughout the state has been in existence for many years, and according to letters sent into the local Y office it has proven quite successful.

DEBATE CONTEST WILL DEAL WITH THE UNEMPLOYED

McBride Fleming-Jones and J. W. Slaughter, of the University debate squad, are scheduled to debate members of the debate squad of Western Reserve University tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Gerrard hall on the subject of "Compulsory Employment Insurance."

The Reserve debaters began their annual debate and speaking tour this year with a trip South, which started Sunday, March 29.

Debates this year and last in which the Reserve squad participated included those between Boston, Rutgers, Notre Dame, Leland Stanford, Southern California, Harvard, Princeton, Detroit universities and others.

Professor George McKee stated that this debate will take the place of the debating squad meeting so far as attendance is concerned.

Dashiell Attends Psychology Meets

J. F. Dashiell is this week attending three kinds of psychological programs. On Wednesday he is to address the Psychology Association of New York University. On Thursday and Friday he is to participate in a symposium at the annual meeting of the Society of Experimental Psychologists, to be held at Vassar College. On Saturday he will read a paper before the Southern Society of Philosophy and Psychology, meeting at the University of Virginia.

CLAUDE BOWERS WILL SPEAK AT COMMENCEMENT

Noted Author and Editor, of the New York World, to Deliver Graduation Address.

A second illustrious newspaper man, Claude G. Bowers, will deliver the annual commencement address this year, Tuesday, June 9. At the graduating exercises in 1930, Dr. John B. Finley, an editor of the New York Times, was the principal speaker.

Claude Bowers is known as an author and editor of eminence. Until its recent purchase by the Scripps-Howard chain, the New York World had Bowers as one of its guiding editorial geniuses. Since beginning his newspaper career in Indiana, he has served as editor and editorial writer on a number of papers, coming finally to the World.

The national Democratic party has had in Bowers one of its strongest supporters. In 1928, it will be remembered, he delivered the famous "to your tents, O! Israel," keystone address before the convention that nominated Al Smith for the presidency. In the same year, he was the principal speaker at the annual Jackson Day Dinner in Washington.

His interest in the Democratic party may be due in part to his interest in the founder of the party, Thomas Jefferson, of whose life he has made a thorough study. Among his better known books is Jefferson and Hamilton, in which he makes an analytical comparison of the two which presents Jefferson in a more favorable light than his political enemy. For his work on Jefferson, he was awarded the Jefferson medal, July 4, 1926, on the occasion of the donation of Monticello, Jefferson's historic home, to the nation.

AGNA ENTERS IN DANCE RECITAL IS BOOKED APRIL 7

Famous Interpreter of Modern Dance Form Is on Entertainment Series.

Agna Enters will be seen here in her "Episodes and Compositions in Dance Form," April 7, in Memorial hall as the next student entertainment program.

A little over five years ago she gave her first concert in New York and the people were held spellbound. Since then she has achieved wonderful success with more appearances in New York and a trip to London.

And so now she is back in this country for a coast to coast tour covering fifty of the largest cities.

The life of this performer is a fairy tale like mystery. Born in this country, she was taken to France at an early age. Her name seems to be of Flemish origin, although she is half French, which may well account for the quality of her intelectual conceptions. There is also a mystery surrounding the dancer. One self appointed biographer says she never had any training in the dance, except a casual attendance at ballet school in Milwaukee. However the fact remains that when still young, Miss Enters had to shift for herself. She started, not as a dancer but as a devotee of the graphic arts. "I wanted to be a painter, really," she says, and the folder distributed by her manager shows that this art was one in which she was especially talented. This accounts for the beauty of her costumes. All of whom were designer by herself, and each is peculiarly fitted to the period and subject she portrays.

It was while a student at the Art Students in New York that she became interested in her episodes. "I felt," she explains, "that if I could work up things in movement, I could find material for my painting."

Post-Election Siaelights Show Interesting Aspects

(By McKee and Silverstein)

The 1931 election is now history, but it will take more than two days to erase from the minds of those who took part in it, the avalanche of interesting sidelights which accompanied the All-Campus landslide.

The holy sanctuary of the Y M. C. A. witnessed a terrific battle of arguments, yells, circulars, tags, and cigars. The cold damp weather forced all the politicians, who were not running around in cars, into the small lobby of the building. The milling crowd howled and stampeded from nine in the morning to five.

Each elector was forced to run a gauntlet of frantic and persistent politicians before he could exercise his right to vote. Supporters of the two parties waged a vigorous battle for the most favorable positions in this line. The strategy of Al Olmstead, Harry Hodges, and Tom Broughton was exhibited in enticing the opposition from advantageous poinfs.

The red circulars of the Gil Pearson supporters were easy targets of rubber shooters, professional snatchers, and strong wind blowers. However, one Pearsonite must be admired for his courage and effort in continuing to replace the posters above the entrance to the ballot room.

Chief of the Motor Fleet, Kerr Craige Ramsay, had a busy day directing the traffic of his cohorts. Continuous relays of cars were sent to the "Co-ed Shack" to prevent the fair damsels from getting wet feet (but we noticed that more than one walked back). Jay walkers and pedestrians were continually accosted by drivers and taken to the polls in classy style.

Fred Patterson and Red Allsbrook led cheers towards the end of the day from the desk of the self help bureau for any of their candidates whose victory was in doubt. Cries of "Albright" were answered by cries for "Speight."

Jack Dungan for the third successive year was the first man to cast a ballot.

The anti-spit crusade became an issue of the campaign when some of the statesmen passed out Cremo cigars.

One energetic worker for the All-Campus group lost some votes for his side by rising early Tuesday morning and stealing copies of the "Spokesman" from

Over Three Hundred Students On Winter Quarter Honor Roll

COMMITTEES FOR HUMAN RELATIONS INSTITUTE NAMED

Meeting in the first regular meeting of the quarter, the members of the three Y cabinets Monday night discussed some of the plans regarding the Second Quadrennial Institute on Human Relations, which is to be sponsored by the local Y association May 3 through 9.

In the Junior-Senior meeting seven important committees were formed which are to aid in presenting the institute program. The committees include a program committee, whose duty it will be to get the speakers, schedule the meetings, and publish the printed programs. The committee on seminars was chosen to take charge of selecting the classes whose subject matter might be such that they would be interested in entertaining some of the leaders of the institute. Others include the entertainment, publication, exhibit, house, and conservation committees.

The time of the sophomore cabinet was taken up with discussing plans for arranging a bibliography which would be divided according to the different heads of the departments of the institute. Bob Barnett was appointed to have charge of the formation of this bibliography. Plans for the management of the visitors here during high school week were taken up by the freshman group, and committees were appointed to hold the several debates in the different buildings on the campus.

SENATE APPROVES TWO RESOLUTIONS

Due to the excitement of the campus election little interest was manifested in the Di Senate Tuesday night at its regular session. The first bill, Resolved, that official sanction be given party politics on the campus by printing together on the official ballot the names of the candidates of the respective parties, was passed by a vote of eleven to three. Senator Fleming-Jones spoke in favor of the bill.

The second bill, Resolved, that Governor O. Max Gardner should be censured for his stand on the sales tax, was passed after considerable discussion. Senators Howell, Rutledge, Ramasy, and Little spoke against the bill. Senators Fleming-Jones and Reynolds supported it. The vote was nine to six in favor of the resolution.

Senator Fleming-Jones made his report on the ways and means committee. The third bill on the calendar was not discussed and will receive consideration at the next session.

PHI ASSEMBLY VOTES TO PENSION PROFESSORS

Due, perhaps, to the interest in the campus election, the meeting of the Phi Assembly was very small Tuesday night; however the assembly considered one resolution.

The resolution, Resolved, that the Phi go on record as favoring the resolution that the state establish a system of retirement funds for University professors, was passed after much discussion. Representatives Hobgood, Brown, Kornegay, Carmichael and Campen favored the resolution while Simons, McDuffie and Sisk opposed it.

TWENTY-FIVE GET ALL "A" AVERAGE

Liberal Arts College Leads Undegraduate Schools With a Hundred and Forty-five.

Final statistics from the registrar's office show that 303 students in the undergraduate school made sufficient grades to be placed on the honor roll for the winter quarter, 1931, as compared with 305 for the fall quarter, 1930.

The school of Liberal Arts led all others, having 145 of its members making a "B" average. The School of Education had 50; the school of Commerce, 49; the school of Applied Science, 29; and the school of Engineering, 30. The total number of seniors to take the honor roll was 72; juniors, 71; sophomores, 60; and freshmen, 100.

In the fall quarter, 1930, the school of Liberal Arts had 152 of its members on the honor roll; the school of Education had 40; the school of Commerce, 51; the school of Applied Science, 28; the school of Engineering, 34. The total number of seniors to make the required "B" average was 64; juniors, 74; sophomores, 72; and freshmen, 95.

There were 25 students who made all "A's" during the winter quarter. They are: F. J. Allred, M. V. Barnhill, J. S. Bivens, H. L. Brooks, E. D. Carland, C. J. Dietz, J. C. Eagles, A. S. Engstrum, L. J. Felton, R. B. Freeman, M. P. Gilmour, G. M. Koehl, D. M. Lacy, J. H. Lassiter, Miss G. P. McColl, O. R. D. Massey, J. T. O'Neil, Miss J. P. Parker, R. H. Schnell, E. N. Shaffner, O. T. Slate, Miss M. C. Tatum, Miss V. R. Turner, Miss Ruth Underwood, C. L. Woole, Jr.

Of these, seventeen were students in the school of Liberal Arts, five in the school of Education, three in the school of Commerce, and none in either the school of Applied Science or Engineering. The number in the various classes were very evenly divided, six being seniors, seven juniors, six sophomores, and six freshmen.

Those students who made a "B" average or above are:

A. E. Akers, Roanoke Rapids; A. L. Alexander, Statesville; J. F. Alexander, New York, N. Y.; W. H. Alexander, Parkersburg, W. Va.; F. J. Allred, Liberty; A. B. Andrews, Raleigh; J. W. Armfield, Concord; Mrs. L. C. Bailey, Chapel Hill; S. A. Barham, Madison; T. H. Barker, Leakesville; J. D. Barnes, Wilmington; J. H. Barnes, Greensboro; M. V. Barnhill, Rocky Mount; Aaron Barr, Brooklyn, N. Y.; J. K. Barrow, Jr., Zebulon; D. P. Beam, Bessemer City; W. M. Bell, Rockingham; C. W. Bendigo, Greensboro; Abe Benjamin, Elizabeth, N. J.; Miss S. K. Berwanger, Raleigh.

Jack Bessen, New Rochelle, N. Y.; W. N. Bissell, New York, N. Y.; J. S. Bivens, Monroe; B. B. Blackwelder, Hickory; T. W. Blackwell, Winston-Salem; W. M. Bliss, Orlando, Fla.; W. F. Blount, Pensacola, Fla.; W. W. Bonner, Concord; B. I. Boyle, Charlotte; W. L. Boynton, Highland Park, Ill.; W. T. Braswell, Whitakers; B. B. Bray, Jr., Siler City; Edward Brenner, Hendersonville; A. L. Brooks, Greensboro; J. A. Brooks, Peachland; T. H. Brooks, Greensboro; J. M. Brown, Winston-Salem; M. J. Brown, Ja-

Rockne Is Gone

The passing of Knute Rockne will be felt for years to come in football. With his death the game lost its apostle of brains in football. He died with the same suddenness that characterized a Rockne-coached team. No man will be more eulogized than the great Notre Dame mentor. The press from coast to coast and from Great Lakes to Gulf will note his passing.

There was no other coach quite like Rockne. He believed in speed, but speed directed straight ahead. He believed in power, but power directed ever forward. He believed in deception, but deception based on agility of mind. And he had drilled into the American game of football the use of science as an opponent of power. It was Rockne who first gave the little man a chance in football. And it was Rockne who taught the public to love the game for its suddenness, its speed and its fascination. A Rockne-coached team had at least one thrill for the spectators in every game and it was the thrill of watching youth match wits and speed against power and force that packed hundreds of thousands into stadia all over the United States.

Rockne-inspired teams will play again this fall. Teams coached by his disciples will make themselves felt on the gridiron again this fall. But the fascination of watching a team drilled by the great teacher will be missing. The game may not suffer, for he has impressed it too strongly with his name, his personality and his teachings for his passing to change the game. But Rockne is gone.

Aftermath

It is not so striking a thing that a political landslide occurred Monday. Such a phenomenon has been witnessed before, even in our own generation as students. Last year the elections resulted in an overwhelming victory for one party, a party which was so strong that it lost only a single office. This year the victory was even more sweeping, the triumphant side winning every office.

We shall not dwell on the issues presented to the voters in the recent balloting, the implications involved in the results. It is enough to know that one faction, representing approximately two-thirds of student opinion, has — superficially, at least— reaped the fruits. The minority has failed to place its representatives in the high offices; the immediate honors do not fall into its share.

But there are greater honors which groups of students may work toward. The men who are elected to office are of secondary concern; the essential thing is what the group accomplishes. Monday's vanquished may find that their principles may come to fuller fruition through co-operation than through opposition and indifference. All campus parties, after all, are founded on the common base of the predominant interest of Carolina as a whole, as an institution, as a student body. The party which won stood on a cosmopolitan platform, and there is much which the student body has a right to expect from men elected on such a platform. Both winner and loser, both majority and minority, must co-operate if the ideal of the greater student body, with a finer spirit of fraternalism, with a more intelligent student opinion, is ever to be realized.—B. With Contemporaries

Without Lectures

America, land of wealth and the loose purse-string! Asiatic mystics come to her shores and stick pins through themselves while we pay our $3.00 admission. And authors — authors from England, France, Italy, Germany, in short from every civilized, barbaric, and savage country of the globe—hordes of authors make periodic invasions to insult us while we pay. In fact, we were rather fed up with the whole business when, with refreshing surprise, a headline in a New York newspaper caught the editorial eye: "Russian Author Arrives Without Lectures to Give."

While the American public appears to relish criticism aimed at it, here, nevertheless, was something different. At last a celebrity had arrived on a purely friendly visit and without the intention of capitalizing our disdain of ourselves. This man, at least, would not tell us from a lecture platform what he thinks of the American girl, what feelings of cosmic brutality the first view of the New York skyline evokes, or how, underneath our materialism, we are but a simple, romantic people. At worst, he could spend two weeks in Flaming Gulch, Arizona, and then return to Moscow to write the first Russian cowboy story.

The next step naturally was to inquire why the newly-arrived author should possess this rare consideration for our eardrums and for our national reputation. Seeking an explanation of his usually good taste, we read on. The dreamcastle came in potshreds about our ears: "Boris Pilnyak, who wrote 'A Naked Year,' cannot speak English, it is said."—The Daily Princetonian.

Carolina-Pennsylvania Baseball Game Rained Out; Will Play Today

Penn Team Takes Work-Out at Tin Can Yesterday.

COACH OPPOSES PLAN

Dr. Carliss Says Pennsylvania Athletic System Best Suited To Prep Schools.

Old Jupe Pluvius ruined a pleasant afternoon for Carolina baseball fans, a continuous drizzle causing the postponement of the first of the scheduled two game series between the University of Pennsylvania and Carolina. The two teams will meet today in the second game of the series, weather permitting.

The Cornell-Duke game at Durham was also rained out.

Dr. Walter Carliss, veteran coach of the visitors, had his squad working out in the Tin Can, and after a little warming up had the pitchers work out outside.

Dr. Carliss, who is one of Philadelphia's leading specialists and who coaches only as a hobby, when questioned as to his opinion of the new system worked out by the authorities of that institution whereby each coach carries the title of professor and receives the same salary as any other member of the faculty, remarked that he thought that this was not necessary in college athletics although he thought it could be used successfully in high schools or prep schools.

The Carolina squad did not have any work-out, spending their time on a skull drill.

The probable line-up for today's game is as follows:

Pennsylvania: Dennison, ss; Cressman, lf; Carlsten, 2b; Graupner, cf; Hendler, 3b; Ford, rf; Ushka, 1b; Perrina, c; Masters, p; Peterson, p; Jackson, p.

Carolina: Ferebee, ss; Wyrick, 2b; Powell, 3b; Peacock 3b; Dunlap, 1b; Blythe, cf; Potter, c; Davis, rf; House, lf; Edwards, p; Shields, p.

Hockey Team Chosen By College Humor

The following players were chosen on College Humor's All-American hockey team for 1931:

First Team

Goal—Tompkins (Michigan)
Defense—Batchelder (Harvard)
Defense—Muhlfeld (Yale)
Wing—Morton (Dartmouth)
Wing—Prelesnik (St. Mary's)
Center—Luce (Yale)
Spare—Cunningham (Harvard)

"Hockey, by the very nature of the game, is localized in a strip of Northern border states and in the Northeastern section of the United States," says Gage. "The stronghold of intercollegiate hockey is concentrated in New England, New York, New Jersey, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan, for the sport, in its amateur form, has not become sufficiently popular to encourage the erection of indoor arenas. And so the task of naming an All-American hockey team is much less futile than the selection of mythical teams in the other college sports for there is a scant handful of sextets to consider as compared to the hundreds of football elevens and basketball squads. The 1931 season offered nothing to relieve the monotony of the customary Harvard-Yale supremacy."

Reporters

All of the following reporters not reporting to the office of the paper this afternoon between one-thirty and two will be in danger of suspension from the staff: F. W. Ashley, W. E. Davis, L. L. Pegram, and Alex Andrews.

To Manage Frosh

Coach Bob Fetzer, director of athletics, appointed Sam Silverstein manager of freshman baseball yesterday afternoon. Silverstein held that position last year, and was reappointed when Bert Haywood resigned.

AVIATION SCHOOL GIVES VALUABLE CONTEST AWARDS

Several students of the University are showing interest in the nation-wide competition for aeronautical scholarships sponsored by the Boeing School of Aeronautics, for college men who intend to specialize in aviation.

The prizes are: first, a Boeing master pilot course, with 204 hours of flying, 924 hours ground school, and a value of $5,250; second and third, Boeing master mechanic courses, 1224 hours ground school, valued at $675. The fourth prize is a Boeing private pilot course, with twenty-two hours of flying, forty-five hours ground school and a value of $500.

Known as "the university of the air" and located at the Oakland Airport in Oakland, California, the Boeing School is approved by the United States Department of Commerce. It is affiliated with the Boeing Airplane company and the Boeing system, which flies 4,000,000 miles a year with mail and passengers on the San Francisco-Oakland-Chicago, and Seattle-San Diego routes.

Students desiring to compete are to write essays not exceeding 2,000 words on one of the five aeronautical subjects. Details of the scholarship may be obtained from the Boeing School of Aeronautics, Oakland, California.

STUDENTS PREFER CLUBS TO OPERAS

A recent survey by the Spectator, Columbia College publication, showed that speakeasies and night clubs are better attended by Columbia college men than are museums, concerts, operas, and even the finer theatres.

Out of the 308 men questioned, 245 have visited a speakeasy during their stay on Morningside Heights, and 124 have made use of one or more of the city's numerous night clubs in seeking entertainment. Harlem was well represented in the list, as was Greenwich Village, but the greatest number of clubs had addresses in the midtown district. Comparatively few of the answers showed knowledge of any places of this sort on or near the Columbia College campus.

Girls Outnumber Boys In Debates

Girl contestants will outnumber the boys, 456 to 388, in the state-wide debating contest of the N. C. High School Debating Union on April 3, announced Secretary E. R. Rankin today. Two hundred and twenty-eight schools will participate in these triangular debates, the topic for which is immediate independence for the Philippines.

Twenty-nine high schools will each be represented by four girls; fifty-one schools, by three girls and one boy; seventy-five, by two girls and two boys; thirty five, by three boys and one girl; and twenty high schools will be represented by teams composed of four boys each.

HEEL TRACKMEN TO MEET STATE HERE TOMORROW

Farmer, Jensen, Stafford, Out With Injuries as Carolina Enters Second Meet of Year.

Following their 88-38 victory over Presbyterian College here last Saturday, the Carolina track team began work Monday for their second dual meet of the year, with N. C. State here tomorrow. The freshmen track stars will meet the State freshmen in their third meet of the year. The freshmen defeated Charlotte and Raleigh High Schools in a triangular meet here Saturday and then scored a 90-36 win over the Duke freshmen in Durham Tuesday afternoon.

Tomorrow's meet will be the first of the year for the Wolfpack cindermen who's meet with Davidson last week was called off on account of inclement weather. Last year the Tar Heels opened their season by swamping the Wolfpack tracksters 82 1-2 to 43 1-2 in an exhibition affair. Sam Gurneau, the Indian star who was ineligible last year as a freshman, furnished the best piece of work in that meet when he hurled the discus 137 feet 10 1-2 inches to take first place in that event. Gurneau is a Sophomore this year and is out gunning for the Southern Conference record.

Carolina will likely use the same group of men that appeared against Presbyterian last week, with a possibility that Stafford, high jumper, and Jensen, half miler, may also see action. Both of these boys were kept out of the first meet of the season with injuries and will be making their first outdoor appearance if they are able to enter against State. Charlie Farmer, brilliant dash man, will again be unable to run. Farmer is out with a bad leg and probably won't get a chance to do any running for several weeks yet.

In spite of Farmer's absence, however, the Tar Heels will have plenty of strength in the dashes with Marland, Smith, Slusser, and Drane entered. Ritchie of Presbyterian won the 220 Saturday, but that was the only first place Carolina failed to get in the two dash events. The Tar Heels swept the 100 with Marland capturing first place in 10.2 seconds, and Drane took second in the 220 with Marland third.

Rain this week has tended to interfere with practice sessions, but the Tar Heels are expected to turn in much better times in the running events Friday if they have anything like a dry track.

Rockefeller Plans City Within A City

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has definite plans for a glittering city within a city, a titanic development covering three square blocks, the work on it starting in June on a mid-town site bounded by Fifth avenue, Sixth avenue, Forty-eighth street, and Fifty-first street.

The first units will be ready for occupancy in the fall of 1932, and the completed product is scheduled for 1934. S. L. Rothafel (Roxy) will be the first "mayor."

There will be nine separate buildings, demanding 125,000 tons of structural steel and 28,000 windows. There will be a central plaza dotted with splashing fountains and bristling shrubbery, and shops ministering to every human need.

Though not as tall as the Empire State building, the sixty-eight stories of these structures will contain 150,000 more feet of floor space.

Penn Track Star Works Out Here; Hopes To Be Selected For Place On Olympic Team

(By Thomas H. Broughton)

Barney Berlanger, Pennsylvania track captain and National Intercollegiate Septathlon and Pentathlon champion, worked out in the Tin Can yesterday afternoon. Berlanger is making the trip south with the Penn baseball team to get in shape for the Penn relays, April 24.

Berlanger is planning to try to set a new record for the decathlon in the relays and hopes to be selected for the 1932 Olympic games to be held in Los Angeles. Right now it looks as if his hope is a certainty as he is recognized as the leading track star in the east and one of the best in the country at large, holding the national record in the shot put, with a throw of 48 feet 6 1-2 inches, and in the pole vault he tied with Collier, of Cornell, at 13 feet 8 1-4 inches. Recently at Illinois he won the septathlon for the third year in succession, the first time in history that an athlete has won this honor three times in succession.

The Drake relays are scheduled for the same time as the Penn relays, therefore Berlanger will be unable to enter the former, but he is planning to enter the trials at Chicago in the summer of 1932.

This coming summer he is planning to take a trip to South Africa with a squad of American track stars to get in shape for the Olympic Games.

This is Berlanger's first trip south, never having been south of Washington, D. C. before. When asked as to his opinion of the famed "sunny south" he said that so far it had not lived up to its name but he had not given it a fair trial as he only left Philadelphia Tuesday night.

Along with his honors gained in track Berlanger is qnite a scholar, missing Phi Beta Kappa by only one point. In comparing the scholastic requirements of this university with those of his own university, Berlanger stated that the requirements of Pennsylvania were much stricter than those of the southern schools. An average of eighty is required on all work at Pennsylvania to be eligible to participate in athletics.

While comparing the northern schools, or eastern as he called them, with the schools of the south, Berlanger was asked to compare southern track with that of the north. He stated that in the north indoor track was more popular, especially in New York City, where Madison Square Garden is the leading indoor track promoter, while in the south indoor track is just getting its start. He said that New York track fans receive a "big thrill" from the "Garden" meets, at which the leading track stars of the country gather. He greatly admired the Tin Can, home of the University's winter sports, regretting that the University of Pennsylvania has no such facilities for indoor sports, saying that in the field events there is not a great deal of difference between the hard floor of the indoor track and the outdoor track, although more spring is gained on the latter.

Harvard Lampoon Is Forced To Cease Publication Indefinitely

Falling like a bombshell on the membership of the undergraduate board in the midst of the annual dinner party Saturday night the announcement by the chairman of trustees of the Harvard Lampoon, comic magazine of America's oldest university, was the latest and possibly final development in the stormy history of the publication.

Other than this no other word could be obtained except that the trustees had decided to suspend publication due to the notorious publicity resulting from cartoons and articles announced The Crimson, Harvard daily. It is possible that publication will be resumed next September when the magazine can be reorganized under the supervision of the trustees.

Various numbers of the magazine during the past few years have attracted national publicity because they were called obscene, "yellow," and cowardly due to extensive satirization of persons. Last year, statements about Mayor Curley and other prominent Boston officials resulted in a suit for libel which was dropped when members of the board publically apologized. Action was taken some time ago whereby the magazine was censored by graduate authorities, this was displeasing to the Lampoon which had beforehand enjoyed inviolable freedom in company with the other undergraduate publications of the campus.

"Look for girls with common sense," is a writer's advice to the modern young man. Common sense, however, is one of the few things which the modern girl doesn't wear where it can be seen and identified.

All-American Cage Team Is Announced

The 1931 All-American basketball teams have been named by Les Gage, sports editor of College Humor.

First Team
Reiff (Northwestern)	Forward
Posnack (St. John's)	Forward
Hood (Alabama)	Center
Collings (Missouri)	Guard
Wooden (Purdue)	Guard
Second Team
Krieger (Providence)	Forward
Stecker (Army)	Forward
Gregory (Columbia)	Center
Caldwell (So. California)	Guard
Fesler (Ohio State)	Guard
Third Team
Romney (Brig'm Y'ng)	Forward
Hayman (Syracuse)	Forward
McClay (Nebraska)	Center
Ario (Montana State)	Guard
Sexton (Arkansas)	Guard

"Basketball coaching has become so highly specialized," writes Gage, "that there are increasingly large numbers of fine players developed in the smaller schools each year. College Humor's All-American basketball selections are presented after a comprehensive examination of every atheltic conference and all universities and colleges. Recommendations have been received and studied with care and precision. Advice has been tendered by a group of the country's most eminent teachers of the game."

"Machines," says Henry Ford, can never oust men." So the night clubs will have to cling to the old-fashioned bouncer.

SPRING FESTIVAL WILL OPEN WITH NEW MOON BALL

Opening Friday night, April 10, with the New Moon Ball, the Spring Festival, will continue Saturday afternoon with a sunset Dance from four until seven o'clock, concluding with the Dance of the Shadows Saturday evening. This dance series, which was just inaugurated this year by the Pi Kappa Phi, Phi Gamma Delta, Phi Delta Theta, Pi Kappa Alpha, and Alpha Tau Omega fraternities, will be an annual affair.

"Maestro Mike" Speciale and his Crusaders, who are engaged for the dances, are not, as has been previously announced, playing at the Hotel Gibson in Cincinnati. They are, instead, remaining in New York where they are at work making electrical transcriptions for radio broadcasting.

The Crusaders, who have not been South in several years, are extremely popular in the Mid-West. On his recent return from the East to St. Louis, Mike was met by the mayor at the city hall where he presented the keys to the city.

Prominent among the chaperones for the Festival will be President Frank Graham and his sister and hostess, Miss Kate Graham.

BEGGAR'S OPERA TO APPEAR HERE

In a meeting of the student entertainment committee Tuesday afternoon, the Beggar's Opera was definitely signed for an engagement here, October 30, 1931. Other attractions under consideration are the Don Cossack Russian Male Chorus, the Barrere Little Symphony, the Theatre Guild, Albert Spalding, Ted Shawn, and several others.

It is the desire of the committee that the students of the school of commerce join in these programs; if this is done, by means of the additional fund the committee will be able to put on a program next year that should be of great interest to every one.

Patterson Medal To Be On Display

The Patterson Medal, established in 1924, which is offered annually by Lieutenant-Commander D. F. Patterson, U. S. N., Mr. Albert F. Patterson, and Dr. Joseph F. Patterson, of Newbern, to commemorate the memory of their brother, John Durand Patterson, will be placed on display in the student supply store within the next few days.

Dr. Joseph F. Patterson, one of the donors of the medal, was a student in the University 1901-1904; J. D. Patterson, in whose memory it is given, was in school here 1904-1906, and was a prominent member of the basketball team.

The committee which picks the man for this award makes its selection upon athletic ability, sportsmanship, leadership, morale, and general conduct. Those who have won this medal in the past are: "Monk" McDonald, 1924; "Rabbit" Bonner, 1925; "Red" Whisnant, 1926; "Ad" Warren, 1927; Galen Elliott, 1928; Henry "Sat" Satterfield, 1929; Ray Farris, 1930.
